OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promotors and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

Jeopardy of Life, the Great Danger of Delay.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY. Jan. 25, 1889.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

Caution.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked Eno's "Fruit Salt." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of Weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. "The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to April 22; Madras, April 23; Bombay, April 25.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on May 8:—I am able to give an unqualified contradiction to the report, published in several English and Indian newspapers, that the Viceroy has intimated to the Home Government his intention of resigning at an early date. The statement is absolutely devoid of foundation. His Excellency has never even hinted at such an intention.

The Russian Grand Dukes Alexander and Sergius and the Hon. Mr. Justice Scott were among the mail passengers to Brindisi on April 18, also Prince and Princess Schiroatoff.

Lord Wenlock is, we (Madras Times) understand, recovering from the accident he met with at cricket, and we hope he will soon be quite well again. Lady Wenlock is still suffering from a severe cold, which has hung about her for several days.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab leaves Lahore for Simla on Saturday, May 16.

Sir Auckland Colvin will shortly visit the Rampore State in connection with the new arrangements rendered necessary by the murder of the late Regent, General Azim-ud-din.

The Governor of Ceylon, in the course of a speech in Uva the other day, said that before going out to Ceylon he went to see Sir Samuel Baker, who said that tea was a plant indigenous to Ceylon, and who produced a book and proved it to be so; and he asked him (Sir Arthur Havelock) to put that fact before a body of planters in Ceylon on the first opportunity, as the fact, he knew, would be welcomed.

The Central News states that Oday Pertab Singh, Raja of Bhinga, in Oude, has been appointed a Member of the Legislative Council of India.

A Bangalore paper is informed on good authority that Colonel Sir Oliver St. John, the British Resident in Mysore, has, under telegraphic orders, proceeded to Rangoon. Nothing has transpired as to the object of his being sent there. It is not, however, unlikely that he has been selected for some special duty, owing to his past experience among the hill tribes in the north of India.

The Madras Bradlaugh Memorial Fund appears to have benefited somewhat by the publication of Mr. Eardley Norton's recent remarks. The subscriptions have now reached about 600 rs. Some boys of the Presidency College have contributed 37 rs. This, says the Bombay Gazette, is only as it should be, seeing that Indian schoolboys are the most clamorous of the Congress politicians.

A rumour has recently obtained currency that the Government of India intend at an early date to increase materially the income tax, even to the extent of doubling it. We (Pioneer) are able to state on excellent authority that there is no truth whatever in the statement.

A contemporary hears that Sir Lepel Griffin's Cashmere Railway scheme, which is backed by the Rothschilds, is not likely to meet with warm support from the Government of India. The promoters ask for a gold guarantee of 3½ per cent., plus a share of the surplus profits.

There is of course, says the Bombay Gazette, no truth whatever in a statement, which has gained some currency, that the Commander-in-Chief will open the Khojak Tunnel in June. The idea that Sir Frederick Roberts would undertake a journey across the fiery plain of the Put and over the scorching plateau of Quetta in the hottest of the hot weather to perform a purely formal ceremony might have been left to contradict itself, thinks a contemporary.

Moreover, there are other reasons in the way. Some months ago it was expected that the tunnel would be finished in June, and possibly by that time it may be feasible to get an engine through; but the work will not, it is expected, be completed till later in the autumn, and no final arrangements have been made in regard to the opening ceremony.

The Bengal Government have appointed a Commission to inquire into the subject of destitution among Europeans and Eurasians in Calcutta.

According to a Madras telegram, says the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, Travancore seems to be justifying its claim to be regarded as the most advanced native State in India. A number of natives have petitioned the Maharaja to recognise their claims to have a proper share in the government of the country. The Maharaja gave a reply, which is regarded as favourable, though not quite satisfactory. The Dewan is to meet a deputation and discuss their proposals.

Emigration from Madras to North Borneo is now practically an accomplished fact, the North Borneo Government having agreed to the conditions desired by the Madras Government.

Mr. Caine, says the Times of India, expresses surprise that his charges made no stir in the Anglo-Indian Press. Surely he has studied the Anglo-Indian Press sufficiently by this time to understand the estimate that has been formed of him here. If we regard him as nothing more than a political mountebank yearning for notoriety at any cost, he has no one but himself to thank for it; and if we believe him to be incapable of speaking of Anglo-Indian affairs without misrepresenting them, the justification of that attitude is to be found in every letter he has written and every speech that he has made on the subject.

The survey of the Mogulserai-Daltongunge Railway has been brought to a successful conclusion, and the alignment obtained is said to be very favourable.

A correspondent states that no work is being executed on the Ganjam section of the East Coast Railway for want of funds.

Cholera seems to have broken out all along the line between Barak and Fenchuganj, but it is believed not to be of a severe type.

A scene of great excitement occurred at the Lahore railway station on April 13, when a Pathan attempted to murder a sepoy, with whom he had a quarrel about money, with a sword. Although the platform was crowded at the time, the assailant managed to inflict a number of severe wounds upon his victim before he was seized and disarmed.

THE feeling which has been aroused in the British community of Shanghai by the recent incomprehensible resolution of our Foreign Office to unite the judicial and consular offices in one functionary will perhaps not be readily understood by those who are accustomed to see such an amalgamation of offices at work in other parts of the world. But the position at Shanghai is a peculiar one, the interests to be protected being large and the relations to the Chinese authorities differing in many important particulars from those of any other country. The case is very well put in a protest which the British community has forwarded to our Minister at Pekin for transmission to LORD SALISBURY. The memorialists say :—"We view with alarm any change which may hamper the influential and independent position which her Majesty's Consul-General has hitherto held in advocating and protecting our rights by the means of representations to the Chinese authorities," and they urge that the most able Chief Justice cannot possibly do his duty as a judge and at the same time fill the Consular position with efficiency. If the posts are to be combined for economical or other reasons, it is admitted that no better selection for the office could be made than that of the gentleman who now fills it. But how can the Chief Justice Consul-General give effective help to British subjects in his Consular capacity on matters out of which law-suits with natives may possibly arise? The protest deserves LORD SALISBURY's careful consideration, and if it fails to produce an effect, the matter should be made the subject of Parliamentary action. The Premier, however, is a man who needs no jogging from the House of Commons to help him to perceive the merits of a case when it is clearly put, and it is to be hoped that the representations made by the Shanghai merchants, backed by our own Chambers of Commerce, will convince him of the wisdom of revoking an inconsiderate decision.

ON May 7, during her visit to the Naval Exhibition, Her Majesty the QUEEN-EMPRESS honoured the Peninsular and Oriental Company by paying a visit to their handsome kiosk, of which we publish a description elsewhere, and spent some time in examining with great interest the photographs of Indian scenes and other objects which are there displayed. SIR THOMAS SUTHERLAND did the honour of the reception. The Court Circular records the visit in these terms :—

Her Majesty proceeded thence to the Peninsular and Oriental Company's kiosk, where her Majesty was joined by their Royal Highnesses the Princess of Wales and the Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, and received by Sir Thomas Sutherland, chairman of the company.

It is curious that while the Times and Daily News reports mention this visit, no notice is taken of it by the reporters of the Standard and Daily Telegraph.

At the opening of the Naval Exhibition, the Guard of Honour was formed by about one hundred and fifty men of the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers, who marched from their headquarters on board H.M.S. Frolic, off Somerset House, to the Exhibition, attracting much admiration by their smart appearance. The London journals—owing probably to the incompetency of the Secretariat to recognise its duties to the Press—took no notice of this rather unique body of men. They were mistaken by many for genuine jack-tars, but most of them are in reality gentlemen engaged in City offices who give up a good deal of time and energy to artillery naval and boating drill. It seemed rather odd that just at the moment when this useful corps of volunteers was demonstrating its efficiency before the Prince of Wales, the Lords of the Admiralty should have issued the following memorandum :—

"My Lords desire that, pending further orders, new Enrolments shall be stopped, and that it may be intimated that the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers will not be embarked in Gunboats this year."

The First Lord on May 7 explained in the House of Commons that there was no intention of disbanding this fine body of men, but it was not intended to give them the sea-training they have hitherto had. The result will, we fear, be that one of the inducements to recruit will be taken away. Rumour attributes jealousy of the R. N. Volunteers on the part of the Royal Naval Reserve. We are not inclined to give much credence to these rumours for it is difficult to see wherein the Artillery men can come into any harmful competition with the sea-going corps. In case of a threatened invasion it is obvious that it would be an immense advantage to have all round our coasts a body of young men who have been trained to handle artillery on board ship and have seen something of sea-life. The Admiralty will make a great mistake in checking the development of this corps, which was beginning to attract a number of energetic and muscular young fellows to its ranks. Their appearance in such good form at the opening of the Exhibition might have been used advantageously to increase the number of recruits.

The Queen has been pleased, by Letters Patent dated April 20, 1891, to grant to Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, K.C.S.I., late one of the Justices of the High Court of Justice, an annuity of 3,500*l.*

I am informed, says the London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, that there is no truth in a report which has been circulated that the negotiations between the Chinese and Indian officials in regard to Thibet are not proceeding satisfactorily. The latest information, received in London, shows that the reverse is the case, and that the broad outlines of a settlement of the terms on which trade should be carried on, and the people on each side of the frontier be permitted in the various seasons to pasture their cattle on the other side, have been arranged for some time past. It is equally incorrect to say that any difficulty may be apprehended by the refusal of the Thibetans to observe an arrangement made by the Chinese, for the Indian Government, before negotiating, had satisfactory assurances on that point.

A telegram from Lloyd's agents at Port Said, dated May 9, states :—"The British steamer Harrow, Singapore for New York, and her Majesty's troopship Tamar, China for Plymouth, have been in collision. The former vessel is badly damaged ; she has plates bent, and must be repaired to enable her to proceed. Her Majesty's ship Tamar has sustained slight damage."

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

MAY 5.—A Miranzai telegram, dated Mastaon last night, states that many men with standards were seen coming down from Tilah to Khanki, and 2,000 Shekhans and Mishties are reported as being collected at Kangarbur ready to oppose the advance of the troops. The enemy is said to be preparing to commence active hostilities again on the Eed Festival, which takes place on the 9th inst.

Sir W. Lockhart arrived at Mastaon yesterday.

With regard to the Black Mountain expedition, the Government has sanctioned the construction of temporary shelters for the troops near Seri, and the question of the necessity of keeping European troops on the spot after the cessation of hostilities is now being considered in consultation with General Elles and the Punjab Government.

MAY 9.—The last reports from the Miranzai Valley state that deputations from the Samil clans came again to the camp at Gulistan on Thursday, bringing back the Government property which had been taken by them. This shows that the severe losses they have suffered have proved to them the uselessness of further resistance. By the submission of these tribes the backbone of the opposition may be considered to be broken. A few other sections still remain to be dealt with, for which purpose a movable column is assembled at Gulistan, consisting of a wing of the 60th Rifles, a wing of the Manchester Regiment, the Peshawur Mountain Battery, the 5th Company of Sappers, the 2nd, 6th, and 29th Punjab Infantry, and the 3rd Sikhs. Sir W. Lockhart commands in person.

The Commissioner of Peshawur has arrived in the camp to advise in the matter of dealing with the tribes, and to reassure the Afreedis, who are showing signs of suspicion, although they were distinctly told that there was no intention of interfering with their country.

The troops are suffering great discomfort from the heavy rain, as the tents were left behind, but all are cheerful and eager to advance.

In the Black Mountain district two battalions and one battery will remain at Seri pending the compliance with the terms imposed on them of the three tribes subject to Hashim Ali. This chief is a fugitive whose surrender has been demanded. The Akazais have not yet submitted. Their country is deserted and active opposition has ceased, but pending the settlement our force will be maintained at its present strength.

MAY 10.—The incessant rain in the Miranzai Valley has delayed the restitution of the stolen property by the tribes, and Sir W. Lockhart's further advance has been postponed until to-day. The excitement among the Afreedis is believed to be subsiding.

The inquest on the bodies of the two Parsee girls who were killed by falling from the University clock tower in Bombay is not yet completed. The medical evidence given yesterday seems to point to foul play, or, at least, to their having been assaulted. Great excitement prevails among the Parsee community. They appear to be convinced that it was a case of murder, and they have subscribed a large sum of money to be devoted to the detection of the culprit. The small size of the tower windows tells against the theory that the fall was an accident, but suicide is still a possible explanation.

The trial of the Benares rioters has begun. Owing to the number of prisoners and witnesses it is likely to last some time. The city remains quiet.

GUP.

MANY who said good-bye to Mr. Justice Scott, says the Times of India, must have regretted that Mrs. Scott was not present to see the esteem and regard with which he is held by all sections of our Bombay community. Her own friends, especially among the native ladies whose cause she had so closely at heart, will be interested in a few brief extracts from a letter received from Mrs. Scott this mail. "Though," writes Mrs. Scott, "we care for Egypt, though the old saying is come true for us—that 'Who drinks the Nile water once will come back and drink it again'—still it is to us both a great wrench to leave India. Bombay has been our home—our happy home—the people there, the natives as much as the English, are our fellow-countrymen—our own. They are not so in Egypt: that is the great difference. . . . We have been seven years in Bombay, and people have been so kind to us, no wonder it has got tight hold of our hearts. . . . I wish I could see my dear Indian ladies again and the children in the schools and all our kind friends. I feel as if we were deserters, yet we cannot help it."

Mrs. Sheldon, says the Englishman, is scarcely lost to view in the mazes of the Central African jungle, when another intrepid lady explorer emerges into the broad light of day after a long tramp through the forests of Southern Asia. Starting from Moulmein in February, Mrs. Barstow, the lady in question, made her way to Raheng, crossing the intervening mountains on elephants. From Raheng she continued her journey down the Mei Phing to Packham-po, where she was warmly welcomed by the Native Governor. Engaging boats at this place, she travelled eastward by slow stages, making exhaustive notes by the way, and eventually arrived in Bangkok at the close of last month. At Bangkok she has been interviewed by the ubiquitous reporter, who is impressed with the matter of fact manner in which she refers to unruly elephants, night alarms, the visits of alligators, and the thousand and one inconveniences inseparable from a journey of this kind. Mrs. Barstow speaks in high terms of the courtesy of Siamese officials, who did all in their power to oblige her, providing guards in dangerous parts of the road, and assisting her with elephants when her own broke down. There is much, no doubt, to be said for Mrs. Sheldon's contention that in dealing with savage or semi-savage races, women can do more by persuasion than the sterner sex by force of arms. Her example, together with that of Mrs. Barstow, will in all probability find a host of imitators in the course of the next few years. The sequel of those adventures cannot, however, be for a moment doubtful. In wandering from the beaten path of travel, the lady explorer will one day place herself in the power of a chief on whom all her blandishments will be thrown away. Not until then, probably, will she and her adventurous sisters recognise at what a heavy price the fame of the explorer may be bought.

The mention of Captain Bower's name reminds a contemporary that his famous exploit was worthily recognised by his admission to the Intelligence Department. As he does not act or play upon the penny whistle, or otherwise seem up to the standard of Simla accomplishments, his presence in the Intelligence Department caused some good-humoured surprise to his friends; but it is rumoured that a change is shortly to come over the system of recruitment for the Department, and that the selection of men like Bower will in the future be the rule rather than the exception.

Some coolies, while excavating a cutting on the Hindoopore Railway line, near Subadars' Chuttrum, came across a brass pot containing about 163 very ancient silver coins, just two feet below the surface of the ground. Messrs. Maile and Beveridge, of the Hindoopore Railway, who were on the spot at the time, took charge of and made over the treasure to the police. The coins were each about as large as an eight-anna piece, and as far as Messrs. Maile and Beveridge could decipher them, the characters seemed to be Greek. The devices on some of the coins were peacocks, fishes, &c., and on others something bearing a resemblance to a woman's head more than anything else.

The Pope has paid a compliment to the Maharaja of Vizianagram by sending for his acceptance a beautiful Roman mosaic, a work of art which his Highness's cultivated taste is well able to appreciate. The gift is a token of appreciation by his Holiness of the liberal-mindedness of the Maharaja who has not been lacking in generosity towards the Roman Catholic institutions in his State and elsewhere.

The King of Siam has prescribed a rigorous test for those of his subjects who claim to be endowed with the mantle of prophecy. An enactment has now been made providing that no prophet shall be entitled to public confidence unless he has the gifts of sitting unharmed in the midst of a fire for the space of at least half an hour. Few, remarks an Indian paper, will care to qualify for prophetic honours on these terms.

PERSONAL.

CAPTAIN M. WOODHOUSE has been appointed President, and Mr. A. H. Macmillan, Secretary, of the recently established Vizagapatam Harbour Board.

Colonel G. R. Goodfellow, C.I.E., Political Superintendent, Pahlanpore, has been granted special leave on urgent private affairs for six months.

Colonel Pemberton, R.E., Public Works Member, after visiting the Bolan Pass, was to visit the Salt Mines at Khewra.

Nothing definite has been settled, but, says the Times of India, it is very probable that Dr. John Pollen, of the Bombay Civil Service, will succeed Mr. Ward as Judicial Commissioner of Burma.

Mr. A. H. Hildebrand, C.I.E., has assumed charge of his duties as Superintendent of the Shan States, and Mr. J. G. Scott, Officiating Superintendent, has reverted to his substantive appointment.

It is probable that when Mr. Halliday retires, six months hence, his place on the Bengal Board of Revenue will be filled by the appointment of Mr. Stevens, Commissioner of Patna. Mr. A. Smith, Commissioner of the Presidency Division, completes his service about the same time as Mr. Halliday.

Mr. H. L. Monk, Personal Assistant to the Engineer-in-Chief, Burma, who is now at Sagaing, has been appointed to officiate as Engineer-in-Chief temporarily till the arrival of another officer from India.

April 17 being the last day of the sitting as District Judge, Coimbatore, of Mr. G. D. Irvine, who retires from the service from June next, the members of the local bar took the opportunity of addressing a few words of farewell to the District Judge. Mr. Irvine has acquired a reputation for honesty and for impartiality in administering justice between man and man, though, says the Madras Times, he has been held by some to have been too strict with the members of the bar.

A rumour is rife in Mysore that Colonel Ludlow, C.I.E., Inspector-General of the Nizam's Police, will be appointed Deputy Commissioner of that district. He originally belonged to the Mysore Commission, and was for a long time in the district as an Assistant Commissioner, as well as in Bangalore; he was also the Deputy Commissioner of the Tumkur District during the most critical period of the late famine in the Province, and rendered exceptional service to the Mysore country before he retired.

It is with much satisfaction, says Indian Engineering, the Simla public hear that Mr. Rowe, who was for many years Judge of the District Court, is likely to be appointed the President of the Municipality. Having been for a long time connected with the Delhi Municipality, he has had considerable experience in matters under the control of such Corporations. The future President will be paid by Government, and will hold magisterial powers. Mr. Rowe will probably enter on his municipal duties in June, when he retires from Government service.

The Pioneer says:—The public service is about to lose an old and valued servant in Raja Jai Kishan Das, Bahadur, C.S.I., who during his forty-five years of official life has rendered invaluable service to the Government of the North-West Provinces. Commencing his career in March 1846 as treasurer in the collector's office, Moradabad, Jai Kishan Das gradually worked his way up the ladder, and was permanently appointed a deputy collector in 1865. For services rendered both by himself and his brother during the Mutiny, Jai Kishan Das obtained his present title, a khilat of 5,000 rs., and lands assessed at 10,000 rs., with partial remissions of revenue for his own life and that of his immediate successor. He received the C.S.I. on July 25, 1890, and now stands third in the highest grade of deputy collectors. He is an officer of the old school, kind and benevolent, and his retirement will be a loss alike to the Government he has served so faithfully as well as to his numerous friends.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

A very sad accident occurred at Simla on April 9. Miss Watson, of Calcutta, was going down to Annandale for a picnic with her friends, when her pony stumbled and she was thrown upon her head. This was about noon, and she died at four o'clock of a fractured skull. Miss Watson had no relatives in Simla, but she leaves a widowed mother and a brother in Calcutta. Her age was nineteen.

We (Madras Times) regret to record the death, from sunstroke, on April 15, of Captain Norman Alton Bray, of the 2nd battalion Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, and Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, Intelligence Branch, Mandalay. The sad intelligence only reached the military authorities on the 20th idem. He entered the Army as second lieutenant in the above regiment on Nov. 12, 1873, and was promoted captain on Aug. 10, 1884. He was a passed Staff College officer, and on that account was selected for the important post which he held in Burma at the time of his death, in which position he was doing excellent work. He was out with General Wolseley's column during the Wuntho Expedition, as intelligence officer.

Colonel Herbert George Deedes, assistant secretary to the War Office, died on May 6, the primary cause being an attack of influenza. He formerly belonged to the 60th Rifles, and he served with the 1st battalion of that regiment in the campaign of 1857-58 against the mutineers in India, including the actions on the Hindun, the battle of Budlee ke Serai, and the taking of the heights before Delhi, the subsequent siege operations, and the assault and capture of the city, with the final attack on and occupation of the palace. He served as aide-de-camp to Brigadier-General Jones during the campaign in Rohilkund, including the actions of Bungawalla and Nugena, the relief of Moradabad, the action on the Dojura, the assault and capture of Bareilly, the attack and bombardment of Shahjehanpore, the defeat of the rebels and the relief of the garrison, the capture of the Fort of Bunnai, the pursuit of the enemy to the left bank of the Goomtee, and the destruction of the Fort of Mahomdee. He served as extra aide-de-camp to Sir A. Wilson at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and as orderly officer to Brigadier Barker in the operations in Oude from Dec. 3, 1858, to Feb. 1, 1859. He retired in 1877.

Major Mackay.—The death is announced of Major Mackay, Governor of her Majesty's Prison, Lincoln. The deceased, who was sixty-four years of age, was appointed Governor of the then Lindsey Prison in December 1871, and he continued the appointment when the gaol became the county prison and the use of the other prisons in Lincolnshire was discontinued. He was born in Ireland, and prior to taking the appointment he had a distinguished military career. He joined the 49th Regiment (Royal Berkshire) on Nov. 11, 1845, as private; was promoted corporal on Aug. 1, 1847; sergeant Dec. 1, 1848; and sergeant-major on Dec. 1, 1851. On Nov. 5, 1854, for distinguished service at Inkerman, he was commissioned as ensign, and was promoted lieutenant March 2, 1855. Major Mackay was present at the battles of Alma and Inkerman, the repulse of the sortie from Sebastopol on Oct. 26, 1854, and he was recommended for the Victoria Cross for gallantry and conspicuous bravery in the field. From 1871 he has held the appointment of Governor of Lincoln Prison.

The death on May 9 is announced of the Hon. Kenelm St. Lawrence, 5th Dragoon Guards, of typhoid fever, at Ardmore, Booterstown, near Dublin.

Madame Blavatsky, the head and foundress of the Theosophical Society, died on May 8 at 19 Avenue Road, Regent's Park, in her sixtieth year. She had been ill for about three weeks. In accordance with the wish of the deceased, the body will be cremated. Helena Petrovna Blavatsky was born at Ekaterinoslav, in the south of Russia, in 1831. At the age of seventeen she married, but soon left her husband. For some years she travelled extensively over the American Continent and Asia, and when barely twenty-five years old succeeded in penetrating into Thibet. After numerous adventures and travels, she founded, in New York, in 1875, in conjunction with Colonel Olcott, the present "Theosophical Society." She wrote a number of books and pamphlets in support of her peculiar theories.

Sir James Caird on Indian Agriculture.—The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—Sir James Caird has not reiterated a day too soon his opinions on the best means of diminishing the pressure of the population on the soil. It will be in the recollection of many of our readers that this great agricultural authority had given to the Government of India precisely the same advice nearly eleven years ago in that admirable monograph on the "Condition of India," specially written at the express wish of Lord Salisbury. We have always attached great value to Sir James Caird's suggestions. His cardinal proposal is to increase cultivation by better manuring the exhausted soil. India has no reserve of food-stores to speak of. At the best it has enough to last ten days. It is not known whether there is an improvement in this respect during the last ten years. Cultivation has extended no doubt; but it is cultivation of poorer soil which yields barely good crops. So that we are sceptic as to India being better off to-day in point of reserve food stores than what it was in 1880. The second proposal is of course the redemption of the land tax. This would no doubt revolutionise the fiscal system of the empire. But the remedy has frightened the powers that be. That is not to be wondered at. The economic evils from which India is suffering for half a century and over is owing in a great measure to want of financial statesmanship. India wants badly an English financier of the first magnitude to overhaul her entire fiscal system.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue :—

MANIPORE (via KOHIMA), May 1.—There is no foundation for the recently reported death of Surgeon Styles, of the 18th Bengal Infantry. Twenty-six of the elephants which belonged to the Raja have been captured up to the present.—Reuter.

May 2.—One native officer of the Raja's army, a man of importance, was arrested to-day. Cholera is still prevalent. All the troops composing the Burma column have now returned to Tammoo.—Ibid.

MANIPORE (via KOHIMA), May 3.—It is expected that the Maharaja will be captured or that he will surrender within the next few days. The Kukis, who destroyed some bridges, have been heavily punished. The cholera is declining.—Ibid.

May 5.—Mya Mynzarrow, the man who is said to have been the actual murderer of Mr. Quinton, was brought in yesterday under a guard sent from Thobal by General Graham. He was carried on a litter, as he had been wounded when fighting against the British troops.

The 4th Goorkhas left this morning for India via Kohima, which will be a great relief, as the question of supplies is very serious owing to the limited amount of transport accompanying the expedition.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA, May 5.—The Mounted Infantry have returned to Manipore without capturing the Princes; but further efforts with that object are being made by means of the military police. Twenty-five thousand rounds of smooth-bore ammunition and a quantity of caps have been found and have been all destroyed. It is understood that the Indian Government are opposed to annexation, and would prefer to establish in Manipore a new rule under British influence.—Correspondent of the Times.

LATER.—A despatch from Manipore, dated May 2, states that the Regent and his youngest brother have separated from the Senaputty. One hundred men of the 43rd Goorkhas have gone, under Lieutenant Clay, with Captain Dun and Mr. Mitchell, interpreter, to endeavour to capture the Regent, who, it is thought, may be returning to surrender. A Manipori has been captured near Tammoo, whom the villagers declare to be the actual murderer of Mr. Quinton. He was found to be severely wounded by three bullets, but it is uncertain when the wounds were inflicted. The instructions given to Mr. Quinton were to expel the Senaputty, and the method was left to his own discretion, no orders being given to effect the arrest at the Durbar.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA, May 10.—There is still no news of the fugitive Manipori Princes, but, as the pursuing party took only eight days' rations with them, they ought to return, and the result of their search should be known by Tuesday. The only important arrest during the last few days, besides that of the alleged murderer of Mr. Quinton, is that of an aged Tongal general, the extent of whose connection with the outrage is still somewhat uncertain.

Two skeletons, believed to be those of Mr. Neville and Mr. O'Brien, were found at Myanghan, and were buried near the ruins of the rest-house where they were dining on the evening of March 24, when a number of Maniporis and Nagas attacked and murdered them.

The Manipore field force has now ceased to exist, but the State will be held for the present by a garrison consisting of 50 British officers, six guns, and about 1,800 native troops.

Lieutenant Grant, who is now recovering from the effects of his wound, has given an interesting account of the doings of his little force, from which I send you some extracts. He left Tammoo on March 28 with 50 Punjabee Sepoys of the 12th Burma regiment, and 40 men of the 43rd Goorkhas. The former were armed with Sniders and carried 150 rounds each, but the latter had Martinis and only 50 rounds each. Fighting began within a few miles of Tammoo and continued till the force reached Thobal on the 30th. There Lieutenant Grant entrenched himself in some deserted compounds—not in a fort as stated—and held out against the entire Manipori army till April 7, when a peremptory order of recall reached him.

The Maniporis opened negotiations several times, and tried to induce him to withdraw, Mr. Williams, their only European prisoner, being employed as a messenger on one occasion. Lieutenant Grant made a point of receiving the emissaries at some distance from the position, in order to conceal the smallness of the force, and he represented himself as Colonel Howlett, borrowing two stars from a Jemadar's shoulder-strap to carry out the ruse. It deceived Mr. Williams as well as the Maniporis, and effectually prevented the only danger which Lieutenant Grant feared—namely, an attempt to rush the camp by an overwhelming force. To all messages he replied that he would not withdraw unless all the prisoners were released, and an officer of high rank was sent as a hostage.

He describes the Maniporis as arrant cowards. Even when they brought guns and began to shell him, they soon retreated on finding the gunners picked off by the fire from the Martinis. His loss only amounted to one killed and two sepoys and one muleteer wounded. Lieutenant Grant attributed his success to the magnificent courage and coolness of the men, both Punjabees and Goorkhas. The men on their part are no less willing to do justice to the gallantry and readiness of resource of their young commander, and they are reported to have said when asked about their doings, "How could we be beaten under Grant Sahib. He is a tiger in fight."—Ibid.

LATER.—News has just arrived that the Regent of Manipore has been given up by the Maniporis. It is believed that Captain Davis's party have taken him prisoner.—Ibid.

RANGOON, May 10.—No trustworthy news has been received so far as to the whereabouts of the Senaputty, although the Regent has been captured by the Maniporis. The mounted infantry and military police are scouring the Manipore frontier in search of the Senaputty.—Ibid.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office for publication :—

"From Viceroy, Simla, May 10. Maxwell telegraphs, 7th :—'Tongal general surrendered himself to-day and is now in custody.'"

"Collett telegraphs, 8th :—'The Regent was arrested this morning by some Maniporis sent out by Major Maxwell, and is now a prisoner under a military guard.' Efforts are being made to capture other Princes."

Much of the news in the Indian papers by this mail has been anticipated by the voluminous telegrams which we have reproduced from the Times and other papers; but we have selected some of the more interesting communications and details which have appeared in India.

THE SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE PIONEER ON THE DISASTER.

The Kohima correspondent of the Pioneer writes on April 19 :—

When the Government of India decided to recognise the Regent as Raja, but to deport the Senaputty as the cause of constant mischief in the State, it was determined that Mr. Quinton should carry out the orders in person, and that an escort, 400 strong, should accompany him under an experienced officer. It was not contemplated that any resistance would be offered, and in fact Mr. Quinton some weeks before had expressed a desire, in case of going to Manipore, to take only 200 military police with him. The Government of India, however, held that a regular military escort was necessary, and General Collett was asked to provide this forthwith. Accordingly, 200 of the 42nd Goorkhas and 200 of the 44th Goorkhas were told off for this duty, Colonel Skene being placed in command. At the same time Colonel Evans, who was returning from Lushailand with 300 men of his regiment, the 43rd Goorkhas, was ordered by General Collett to detach Captain Cowley with 200 rifles to proceed to Manipore direct by way of Cachar. This order was received at Aijal on March 7. There were thus 600 men assigned as an escort to Mr. Quinton, though only 400 took the Kohima route. It must further be remembered that at Manipore itself were 100 of the 43rd Goorkhas, the permanent escort of the Resident, Mr. Grimwood. It may be as well here to clear up which has attracted so much criticism. When orders were first issued it was decided that the 400 men under Colonel Skene should take 40 rounds in their pouches and 30 rounds per rifle should be carried in boxes. It was recognised that there might be difficulty in proceeding with transport, and inquiries were made as to what supply of ammunition there was in the Residency at Manipore. In reply to a telegram, Mr. Grimwood stated that there were 13,000 Snider cartridges. The 100 men of his escort were armed with Martinis and had 140 rounds per rifle. On this being made known it was ordered that the 400 men accompanying Mr. Quinton should start with only 40 rounds, carried in their pouches. Some little time after this General Collett thinking over the matter, and in order to provide against contingencies, instructed Colonel Skene to take on from Kohima on arrival there such amount of ammunition as he might think necessary. There was an ample supply of Snider cartridges at Kohima, 60,000 rounds having been left in reserve there, with the intention of being made over from time to time to the military police, instead of being returned to the store in India. Colonel Skene, it appears, did not think there was any occasion to add to the forty rounds which each of his sepoys carried, particularly as there were 13,000 rounds awaiting him at the Manipore Residency, which would give him another thirty-two cartridges per rifle. The troops were not proceeding on an expedition, there was no idea of fighting, and, as has been said, the difficulties of transport in these hills are always great.

THE QUESTION OF AMMUNITION

THE ATTEMPT TO ARREST THE SENAPUTTY.

In narrating what then occurred I must guard against possible misstatements by saying that the report called for by the military authorities from the senior officer surviving has not yet reached here, but evidence has been taken of native officers and sepoys who escaped, and the story is much as follows :—The palace enclosure was entered between four and five in the morning, and Lieutenant Brackenbury reached the Senaputty's house without meeting any resistance. There he found a sentry, or, as some state, a subadar on guard, who asked him whether he came to make war. Some parleying followed, and then a shot was fired at Lieutenant Brackenbury, striking him in the ankle. He fell, and more shots were fired at him. Then began a sharp fight between the Ghoorkas and the Maniporis. The Senaputty's house was eventually stormed and held possession of all the day, the 100 Ghoorkas being reinforced by another 100 sent from the Residency when firing was heard; but the Senaputty had escaped to the Regent's palace, and though a hot fire was kept up upon this it could not be taken, as it was filled with armed men, and guns were in position to sweep the approaches to it. To show what the nature of the fighting was I will quote evidence given by a jemadar of the 42nd Goorkhas, who is now here, having been released by the Maniporis. He says :—"About 5 A.M. on March 24 we went with a party under Captain Butcher into the fort. We managed to get on the top of the Senaputty's palace, from which we fired volleys. Lieutenant Brackenbury was lying about 150 yards across a plain, just under a wall. Several efforts were made to get in, but each time anyone rushed across a heavy fire was turned on him. At last a jemadar, Thapa, took a rope, ran across and fastened it round Lieutenant Brackenbury, and then others pulled and dragged him away. Captain Butcher was with our party all day long. We were joined by Colonel Skene about 10 A.M. About 6 P.M. the Colonel said :—'It is useless stopping here. We must retire.' The retire sounded, and we all went to the Residency."

To quote another eyewitness, a naik who was with Lieutenant Brackenbury's party :—"The Senaputty came out, but soon after went in again, and a tremendous firing took place. We arranged to invest the Jobraj's and Senaputty's palaces. In the latter I found a lot of cartridges—about four boxes; we filled our pouches. We could not advance further. About 5 P.M. the retire sounded. We went to the Residency. As the ammunition was running short Colonel Skene ga e orders not to fire unless the Maniporis advanced close to us." You may by this time be in possession of the account given by the officers who were actually engaged in this fight within the palace enclosure, and the story I am now telling may be open to correction by them, but it seems clear that during the whole of the 24th there was heavy interchange of fire between the Goorkhas and the Maniporis, and small loss was suffered by the former, which was no doubt due to their being within the Senaputty's house, which they captured comparatively early in the day. Then the expenditure of ammunition must have been heavy, considering they had to retire with almost empty pouches. Meanwhile during the day the Senaputty, finding the Regent's palace safe enough, sent out large numbers of men to attack the Residency. It was about noon that these suddenly opened musketry fire, and to this the garrison had of course to answer to the best of their ability, though the Residency was not at all calculated to serve as a good defensive position. It would, as a survivor remarks, have taken a couple of thousand men to hold it properly, but fortunately the Maniporis did not attempt to storm it, contenting themselves with keeping up an incessant fire at the walls.

The Parley and Massacre.

Some little time before sunset the "cease fire" was sounded on both sides, though the relaters here vary as to which party sounded it first of all. In any case there was a cessation of the fighting. Then it was that Mr. Quinton sent a letter to the Regent—and here again I am open to correction, as I have not personally met any of the surviving officers—but it is certain that communications were interchanged, and that as a result of those Mr. Quinton, with Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, Mr. Cossins, and Lieutenant Simpson, went out, taking no guard with them, but only a bugler. They were seen to enter the palace enclosure, and then the bugler came out again. He had slipped back on seeing the little party suddenly surrounded by armed men. We have only native reports as to what occurred within the walls, and to piece these together is a difficult task. It may, I think, be taken that the Regent or the Senaputty, or both, met Mr. Quinton, and that a conference took place, lasting, it may be, two or three hours. What proposals were made or what arrangements were discussed cannot even be surmised. The little knot of British officers were from the first surrounded by an excited crowd of men, no doubt devoted to their Senaputty, and ready to carry out his orders. Their passions were still excited by the day's fighting, which had only just come to an end, when at last it was seen that no conclusion could be come to. It is said that Mr. Quinton was seized and dragged towards the Regent's palace. He was cut down almost at once, and he and his companions butchered on the spot. It is impossible yet to say when this actually took place. The only message that the anxious waiters in the Residency received was that suddenly between eight and nine o'clock that night a Manipori called out some unintelligible words on the wall.

THE ENGLISHMAN'S NARRATIVE.

The Englishman of April 22 says:—A narrative of the Manipore outrage has reached us which supplies many fresh points of interest, and brings the tragedy home to us with realistic force. We are told that on the night of the 24th, some time between 7 and 8 P.M., when the shelling of the Residency had gone on a good while, our troops were ordered to cease fire, and a few moments afterwards a large gong was sounded within the walls of the Palace which caused the firing on the part of the Maniporis to stop. It was now that Mr. Quinton sent a written message to the Regent, from whom, after an interval of about half an hour, he got a reply in the Bengali character. Soon after this, and on the heels of the Regent's reply, came another messenger from the Palace, and it was then that the Chief Commissioner and his ill-fated party left the Residency and made for the Palace. They were accompanied as far as the gate of the Residency by some of the other officers, who sat on the parapet wall of the culvert at the gate and watched Mr. Quinton go down the road and freely enter the Palace gate. Had they seen any attempt of foul play, we are told, they would have made an effort to rescue the party, but it is not made plain that they were suspicious of anything of the sort happening.

From all that has transpired, indeed, it would seem that fears were not entertained for the safety of the party till a late hour. The assurance given by the Manipori officer to the Chief Commissioner had the effect of lulling any feeling of anxiety that might have existed in the minds of those in the Residency. "Are you not our god?" said the Regent's emissary, and the phrase is one that carries a special meaning among Maniporis, who are themselves accustomed to pose as the gods of the Kukis. But as hour after hour passed and the officers did not return from the Palace, those who were waiting at the Residency began to grow anxious, and it was Mrs. Grimwood who first put the haunting sense of dread into words. When midnight struck she exclaimed, "What can they be doing at the Palace all this time?" Shortly afterwards the enemy's guns suddenly opened fire again on the Residency, and the long line of the Palace wall burst out in a sheet of fire, as the swarm of soldierly at the loop-holes poured in a tremendous volley, evidently on a preconcerted signal. The service of the two guns was very poor, and the firing generally was far from being effective. This was shown to have been the case even during the day by the small percentage of casualties.

Our informant is desirous of correcting the supposition that Mr. Grimwood was kept uninformed of the true nature of the Chief Commissioner's visit to Manipore. It is only fair, he says, to the memory of Mr. Quinton to state that, far from keeping the object of his mission a secret from Mr. Grimwood, he took considerable pains to have the orders of Government conveyed to that officer on as early a date as possible. The undoubted facts are now revealed for the first time. Fearing, it seems, a possible leakage in the Telegraph Office, on his arrival at Golaghat, Mr. Quinton selected Mr. Gurdon, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Subdivisional Officer at Golaghat, to be the means of personal communication between himself and the Political Agent, and despatched that officer to Manipore to convey to Mr. Grimwood the decision of the Government of India in the Manipore case, and the manner in which the orders were to be carried out. Mr. Gurdon, who was told to make all possible speed to reach Manipore, left Golaghat on the 7th, and arrived at Manipore on the 15th, having covered nearly 200 miles in eight days. He made a halt on the 16th, and on his return journey to Kohima met the Chief Commissioner on the 18th at Kerong, whence he retraced his steps to Manipore. It is thus placed beyond all possibility of doubt that Mr. Grimwood knew in advance both the object of Mr. Quinton's visit to Manipore, and the manner in which it was proposed to attain that object. Moreover, it has been shown that the Resident also knew on the night preceding that of the massacre that the Manipori soldiers were being drawn into the Palace, and that mischief was afoot.

According to one statement, it was reported to the party in the Residency that the place was literally swarming with soldiers. This was the state of things on the evening when Mr. Grimwood had his second interview with the Jobraj in order to induce him to appear at the Durbar, which had already been twice postponed because of his non-attendance. When, therefore, the inevitable inquiry comes to be made, it will naturally be asked whether, knowing what was going on around him in the Palace, and also knowing the weakness of the force at the Residency, Mr. Grimwood told the Jobraj that he would be taken by force if he did not surrender. Mr. Grimwood, we believe, was not accompanied at this interview by any English officer, and therefore it is possible that we may never learn exactly what transpired. But doubtless Mr. Grimwood gave some account of the interview to the officers at the Residency on his return, and it will be important to ascertain the fact, even although it can be shown that the news of Mr. Quinton's mission had reached Manipore long before the arrival of the Chief Commissioner. It may be worth mentioning in connection with this phase of the matter that a report is current of an enigmatic telegram having been despatched from Calcutta to Manipore some time ago. The message ran:—"A big tiger will soon be killed at Manipore," and this is supposed to refer to the instructions which were just then issued regarding the punishment of the Senaputty. Whether or not there is any truth in this report, it is to be regretted that the final letter of Government to the ex-Raja, disposing of his case, contains a direct reference to the punishment that awaited the authors of the late disturbance. By showing its hand in this manner, Government was placing it within the power of any intriguer in Calcutta to warn the Senaputty and his friends of the treatment they might expect, in spite of the formal recognition to be extended to the new ruler whom they had placed on the throne. At the same time, it should be borne in mind that the Manipore ruler is always in a position to summon a large body of troops at short notice. Within twenty-four hours it would probably have been possible for the Senaputty to fill the Palace with troops, and to make all the preparations necessary for the contemplated resistance.

A BRUSH WITH THE MANIPORIS.

Advices from Tammoo, an Allahabad correspondent says on April 17, state that Captain Presgrave and Lieutenant Grant have had another brush with the Maniporis. They sallied out with two hundred men towards Aimol, where a strong party of Maniporis had been seen. On our troops approaching Aimol the enemy fled, leaving four killed and two prisoners. On returning to Palel three hundred of the enemy were seen making for Manipore. The Mounted Infantry under Lieutenant Grant pursued and killed fifty, among whom is reported to be Thulja Minza. The Infantry followed at the double, but could not overtake the enemy. Our casualties were nil. Lieutenant Grant's charger was shot under him. The Maniporis, it appears, have been sent out to induce the Chins to block the road, but the prompt action of Captain Presgrave took them by surprise and prevented them from holding the road between Tammoo and Palel. Ah Nub, a Manipori Chin tribe, have sent in the head-men from ten villages, and they state that they desire friendship with the British Government and are willing to supply Chin coolies. The Maniporis are endeavouring to tamper with the Chins, but we are informed that the Zati tribe will remain neutral.

CAPTAIN PRESGRAVE'S REPORT.

A telegram from Tammoo, dated Palel, April 14, sent by Captain Presgrave, has been received, and runs:—With 50 rifles of the 2-4 Goorkhas, 29 rifles of the 43rd Goorkhas, and 8 of the Burma Regiment and 33 rifles of the Mounted Infantry, I returned to Palel on the 13th. Nearing Aimol village I saw Manipori picket, 50 strong, who fled with a loss of 4 killed and 2 prisoners. A mile from Palel I was fired at, and 300 of the enemy were seen in full flight towards Manipore. The Mounted Infantry pursued and killed 50, among whom is supposed to be the Thulja Minza. The infantry followed up at the double, but the enemy had too much start. Our casualties were nil. Grant's charger was shot under him. A picket had been sent on to induce the Chins to block the road, but our sudden return entirely surprised them, and has, I think, prevented the road from being held between Tammoo and here.

Rangoon, April 11, 1891.

An Allahabad correspondent writes on April 20:—

Everything was arranged at Kohima for an advance yesterday. The force, consisting of 1,200 men, were arranged in three divisions as follows:—First—Colonel Evans commanding, 440 of the 3rd Bengal Infantry; second—Major Ridgeway commanding, 340 of the 4th Bengal Infantry; and 100 of the 13th Bengal Infantry, under Lieutenant Giles; third—Captain McIntyre commanding, 240 of the 2nd Bengal Infantry, and 200 military police. The 44th have taken their two 7-pounders with them. Captain Birch, with three guns of No. 8 Mountain Battery, accompanies the column. Colonel Elison, 42nd Goorkhas, remains in command at Kohima with 400 Goorkhas and six companies of the 13th Bengal Infantry, under Major Bingham; Lieuts. Camelleri and MacBarnett, of the 13th Bengal Infantry, are attached to the 42nd B.I., and proceed with the column. Ten days' rations and 200 rounds of ammunition per man accompany the column. The staff consists of General Collett, commanding; Major Gwatkin, A.A.G. to the Manipore Field Force when concentrated at Manipore; Captain Kitson, D.A.A.G.; Captain C. W. Fitzgerald, chief commissariat officer; Captain, J. Wilcocks, chief transport officer; Mr. Eales, signaller; Surgeon Hudson, principal medical officer; Mr. Davis, deputy commissioner; Mr. Pinhey, telegraph department; and Mr. Hall, postal department.

There were as prisoners at Manipore 1 jemadar, 12 sepoys, and 14 followers of the 42nd Goorkhas, 14 sepoys and 2 followers of the 43rd Goorkhas, 21 rank and file and 5 followers of the 44th Goorkhas, 17 Chief Commissioner's servants, 32 post and telegraph servants, 14 Political Agents' servants, and 40 syces.

The Kohima column bivouacked on the night of the 20th at Kigwema. No tents, telegraphs the Pioneer's special correspondent, have been taken by the column, and as a storm of wind and rain came on for some little while every one was uncomfortable. On the 21st the column marched to Khuzama, and to-day they were to cross the frontier, which is only half a mile distant from their present camp, and make a march of sixteen or seventeen miles. There are seemingly no troops between Mao and Sengmai, and the report of two guns being on the frontier at Kaithamalabi proves to be untrue, as the spies declare there is nothing there. The Naga villagers in Manipore territory are offering themselves as coolies, and the Regent's officers are seeking for orders from the officer commanding the column. It is stated that the senaputty killed by Lieutenant Grant was Anjoia Sing. General Collett is to have supreme military and political control at Manipore. The Maniporis are said to have strongly fortified the capital.

THE GOVERNMENT'S INTENTIONS.

A well-informed correspondent writes to the Bombay Gazette from Simla as follows, in regard to the results of the outbreak in Manipore:—"Nothing is yet known of the intentions of the Government in regard to Manipore. Nor is it likely that any declaration will be made until the last moment. It will be time enough when General Collett has occupied Imphal and quelled all resistance, and the announcement of the decision may even then be deferred. Annexation is generally regarded as unavoidable. What guarantee can we have against a repetition of revolutions and attacks upon our officers? The only solid guarantee would be the maintenance of an efficient military force in the city and the disarming of the ruling caste. If we are to go so far as that, we ought reasonably to go further. The civil administration would not involve any heavy expenditure. It would doubtless be conducted in the same manner as the administration of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and of British Nagaland. The people are nearly all savage. Some tribes wear only the garments in use in Eden before the fall. All that would be necessary would be to convert the Resident into a Deputy Commissioner and give him a body of armed police sufficient to keep the peace. A military road from Silchar to Imphal, and thence to Tammoo and to Kohima, would be the chief expense. The inhabitants of the country do not much exceed 200,000 all told; and they would not object to a change of masters. The great body of them consist of various aboriginal tribes, whose only bond of union is hatred of the Maniporis, an invading race like the Goorkhas in Nepaul. As I have said, everyone here is in favour of annexation, and though I am fully aware of the grave reasons which have discredited the annexationist policy generally, in the present case, I think, the annexation would be fully justified, and is the best course. However, before that step be taken, justice must be meted out to the guilty. It is difficult to understand the fatuity of the officials when negotiating for terms with such people. But from some recent information it was seen that it was not Mr. Quinton who initiated the negotiations, but that he was invited by the Jobraj to treat under a flag of truce. The military men are the severest in their condemnation of the military proceedings. I hear that Sir George Chesney warned Mr. Quinton before the mission set out that if he employed force he should take a much larger number of men than he proposed to take." With regard to this latter point, we mentioned some days since that Mr. Quinton, anticipating no difficulty or any organised resistance, considered that a force of two hundred men would be a sufficient escort. The Government of India, acting apparently on Sir George Chesney's opinion, gave instructions that the strength of the proposed escort should be more than doubled.

It is proved from Mr. Grimwood's diary, says a Pioneer correspondent, that some days before the arrival of Mr. Quinton considerable excitement was caused in the minds of the Manipori leaders by the receipt of a telegram from Calcutta to the following effect:—"The Big Tiger will shortly be caught in Manipore." Mr. Grimwood evidently knew of this telegram, as he mentioned it in his daily report to the Chief Commissioner. The Regent and the Senaputty evidently thought Mr. Quinton was coming to arrest one of them, and was bringing the ex-Raja with him in order that he might be replaced on the throne. They were determined that this should not be done, and gathered all the available troops into Manipore. When they discovered that the ex-Raja was not with Mr. Quinton their suspicions were allayed for the time being, until they discovered in some way what the exact position of the Government of India was. How they discovered this is a mystery, as the greatest secrecy was maintained by Mr. Quinton regarding his mission.

Much confusion, says the Englishman, has arisen from the vague use of the Manipori titles Jobraj and Senaputty. At present there are two claimants to the title of Raja, and therefore two persons to whom the title Jobraj, or heir-apparent, is applied. Sura Chandra Singh, the old Raja, is now in Calcutta, and his heir, Kula Chundra Singh, is now ruler de facto. But Kula is still frequently called by his former title, which is also given at times to his full brother, Tikendrajit Singh, the heir-apparent since the usurpation. Tikendrajit Singh, as Jobraj, retained his old post of Senaputty, or Commander-in-Chief, but he is most easily distinguished either as Tikendrajit, or by his nickname of "Koireng," the wanderer. The Government of India has not simplified matters by addressing Kula Chandra as Regent, a title which incorrectly designates the usurper.

As there are two Rajas and two Jobrajs of Manipore, so there are two palaces. The "Pat," strictly speaking, is the Raja's enclosure, and is upwards of half a mile square. In the centre is the Raja', palace, and some little distance to the north-west is the Jobraj's palaces a building of modest dimensions. It was against the latter building that the first military move was made the other day, and not against the palace enclosure as a whole. It ought to be apparent from the size of the party—159 men, including a flanking support—that the intention was not to surround the outer wall of the Palace enclosure (!) Besides, there is the distinct statement of Captain Boileau that the party was told off to "surround the Jobraj's Palace and to seize the Jobraj." Captain Butcher's party of seventy-nine men, which made the direct attack on the Jobraj's Palace, was too weak for the purpose, but to have sent eighty men to surround a walled enclosure half a mile square would certainly have been an act of madness. The very suggestion that Colonel Skene or anyone in the Residency could have dreamt of such a thing is incredibly absurd.

COLONEL JOHNSTONE'S OPINION.

The opinion of Colonel Johnstone, says the Pioneer, is of course one that deserves to be heard with all respect on any question of Manipori politics. He was agent in the State from 1877 until four years ago: his rule, for so it might be called, at the Residency at Imphal, was conspicuously successful, and that he established a hold on the regard of the people and gave them his in return is sufficiently indicated by the tone of his letters. But Colonel Johnstone's success with the Maniporis does not alter their treatment of his successor. A more brutal and insolent crime was never committed in the annals of our history than that with which the Maniporis have just stained themselves, and the conditions of the British Empire forbid that it can tolerate to be defied and opposed in arms, and have its officers murdered by the people of a protected State, however insignificant, without exacting a heavy and conspicuous penalty. The rosewater treatment which Colonel Johnstone apparently recommends of sending an officer likely to be sympathetic and acceptable to the people into the country, with sole discretion as to what he shall do, and a strong hint to do nothing at all, seems to us to be absolutely misplaced under the circumstances. It would probably not even in the long run be humane: for if anything can hereafter be certain, it is that the Maniporis, like semi-civilised people, would mistake clemency for fear, inspired as they would suppose by the murder of the British officers, and would be tenfold more disposed to give trouble until this idea had been forcibly uprooted. No reasonable man, of course, wishes, any more than Colonel Johnstone, to see even the late murders requited by a commission of indiscriminate vengeance, but every means must be used to bring all who were concerned in the deed to the gallows. Moreover, some public manifestation there should be of the sense in which the British Government regards the doings of that very considerable section of the populace which was under arms that night, and the way in which they terminated. If the town of Imphal were razed to the ground and the site declared to be barren for ever, the Maniporis would have in their midst such a public memorial of the occasion as the circumstances require.

But the main question that will present itself in connection with these events for the decision of Government is, whether after what has happened, the State of Manipore can be permitted to maintain a separate existence. Colonel Johnstone, of course, deprecates annexation; and such a course would no doubt to a certain extent extinguish the individuality of his interesting favourites; but if this is a loss, it has several counterbalancing advantages. Previous to the annexation of Upper Burma the State served as a buffer which prevented our frontier from coming into contact with such troublesome neighbours as the Burmese. It was this consideration which induced the Government in the first place to enter into political relations with the Maniporis at all; to lend them an officer to train the State troops, who were being put to it to hold their own with the Burmans in the Kubo Valley; and eventually to guarantee the stability of the reigning house. It must be acknowledged that up to the time of the recent catastrophe, during the Mutiny and on other occasions, the Manipore State has always shown itself loyal and grateful for the support thus accorded; but this does not cancel the present atrocity, and does not affect the question of expediency. The State is now an isolated patch in the midst of surrounding British territory, and its acquisition would be a convenience in many ways, particularly as enabling us to get in on the rear of the northern and north-eastern Lushais, and establishing a position over these tribes that would prevent the repetition of risings such as that of last summer. Moreover, as a correspondent has pointed out, its annexation would prevent it from continuing to be an Alsatia for Nagas, Chins, and Burman dacoits who find it convenient to put themselves out of reach of the British Administration. It may be said that expediency is not a motive which policy should own in these cases. But the Maniporis having forfeited all claims to consideration, it is in truth the only one which should be allowed any standing in the matter.

ITEMS.

At a public meeting held at Fyzabad, general regret was expressed for the brutal murder of Mr. Quinton, whose former connection with the district had endeared him to the people. It was unanimously resolved that a letter of condolence should be sent to Mrs. Quinton.

A meeting was held at Allahabad on April 16, at which it was resolved to place a bust of Mr. Quinton in the Convocation Hall of the Allahabad University, to perpetuate his memory, and to express the deep and affectionate memory of his loss. A memorial tablet is also to be placed in Christ Church, Lucknow. The Hon. J. R. Reid, C.S., has kindly consented to receive communications from those desirous of contributing.

A Kohima correspondent of the Englishman writes on April 14:—One fact which all seem agreed in asserting is worthy of notice, namely, that the troops which went to arrest the Jobraj in his Palace, killed in the fighting that followed, probably by mistake, some women and children, relatives of the Jobraj. This may partially account for the ferocity which the Jobraj displayed towards the captives.

A Balipara correspondent writes on April 15:—Spies who have returned from the frontier report that the rumoured gathering of Akas at Ballukpong is unfounded. The report of the gathering was heightened by the knowledge that some of the Aka chiefs with their followers were in Tezpore when the news of the Manipore disaster reached the station, and that they hurried back via the Hazara Kuas country. The Deputy Commissioner has wired his thanks to the Commandant of the Durrang Mounted Rifles for his vigorous and prompt action and the almost immediate response of twenty-six out of a total of twenty-eight district members of the corps, some of whom came in from a distance of sixteen miles. It reflects much credit on the spirit and usefulness of the Volunteers, especially in a frontier district where they are left in cases of emergency to their own resources.

DINNER TO SIR GEORGE CHESNEY.

ON the occasion of the departure of General the Hon. Sir George Chesney, K.C.B., Military Member of Council, from India, he was entertained at the United Service Club, Simla, by the members of the Club, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, Sir Frederick Roberts, being in the chair. Sir George Chesney has been President of the Club for some years, and the opportunity was taken to unveil a full length portrait of General Chesney, painted by Mr. Swynnerton. A large number of officers of the Government of India and of the Army Headquarters were gathered to render honour to Sir George Chesney. Among those present were General Collen, Military Secretary to the Government of India; General Galbraith, Adjutant-General in India; General Sir James Browne, Quartermaster-General; Surgeon-General Thomson; Mr. Finlay, Secretary in the Finance Department; Mr. Harry James, Secretary in the Legislative Department; Colonel Lord William Beresford, V.C., Military Secretary to the Viceroy; Brigadier-General Badcock, Commissary-General-in-Chief; Colonel Dalrymple, Deputy Quartermaster-General; Colonel Ware, Deputy Director-General of Ordnance; Colonel Cooke, Assistant Adjutant-General; Colonel Nicholson, Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief; Major Bowyer, Assistant Adjutant-General, R.E.; Dr. Taylor; Major Rind, Commissary-General for Transport; Captain Gordon; Captain Day, R.E.; Colonel Woodthorpe, Deputy Quartermaster-General; Colonel Sanderson, Judge Advocate-General; Colonel Maitland, Assistant Secretary, Military Department; Major Wilson, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Principal Veterinary Surgeon Russell, and many others. The entertainment was a most successful one, and the Commander-in-Chief proposed his friend and colleague Sir George Chesney's health, in an excellent speech, to which Sir George Chesney responded in eloquent terms. Subsequently Sir James Browne proposed the Commander-in-Chief's health, which was drunk with acclamation.

Sir George Chesney said: Your Excellency and Gentlemen,—It is difficult for me to express adequately the deep sense I feel of the honour you have done me this evening in this meeting, as well as in the flattering acknowledgment of my connection with this Club afforded by this memento of me which has just been unveiled. It is a source of great satisfaction to feel that my tenure of the office which you have done me the honour to confer on me—of the President of this Club—has been signalised by the reconstruction of the Club buildings, which has now been brought to a completion. His Excellency has referred in flattering terms to my services in India. It has always been a matter of regret that circumstances should have taken me away so early in life from active military duty. I have, however, watched with deep interest and sympathy the progress in his distinguished career of Sir Frederick Roberts. As he has just said, he is the oldest friend I have left in India, and it has been a great satisfaction to me during my present tenure of office to have been associated with him in the administration of the Indian Army. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, the last five years, apart from what was involved in the conquest of Burma, has been a busy time with those who have been occupied in this way. For during that time they have been engaged incessantly in the work of preparing the army for the greater efforts which it may be called upon to undertake in the future. I am happy to feel that, while associated in this great work with Sir Frederick Roberts, our relations throughout have been of the most cordial and harmonious kind. We have both been animated by the same purpose—to bring up the Indian Army and its equipment to a state of readiness for service, and if our labours have not been attended with the full measure of completeness aimed at, it is because the last word does not rest with us. Gentlemen, those of us who were present at the last of the many charming entertainments given during the last cold season at Government House, Calcutta, will remember that it concluded with a topical popular song. (Laughter.) While listening to that song, I could not help thinking that if I were asked to add a verse to it I could have composed an appropriate one, for in the calm and thoughtful brow of my honourable friend the Financial Member, whose countenance, if bland, is certainly not childlike, may be seen the veritable

BOGIE MAN

—(great laughter)—of the Military Department, the man who works such havoc among the little innocents of that department, the little items for military improvements of all kinds, the little bantlings, which are so carefully nursed during the year and wrapped in the dry sheets of the military estimate, too often only to be ruthlessly sacrificed on the altar of the financial Moloch. Still, if from these and other causes we have not accomplished all that could be desired, I think we may claim that some solid progress has been made; the good work will, I am sure, be taken up by the distinguished officer who is about to succeed me in the Military Department, and it will be a source of high satisfaction to me in my retirement to feel that to the great benefit of his country, and, I hope, to his own eventual renown, Sir Frederick Roberts remains in command of the army of which he is such a distinguished ornament—(enthusiastic cheers)—continuing to devote his unexampled and unique experience and indomitable energy to the great work of getting ready that army for the day of trial. Gentlemen, when speaking of the future, the mind turns also to what we are all thinking of—the events which are happening around us, the catastrophe which has filled the hearts of all of us with horror and indignation, which leaves almost every one of us to lament the loss of personal friends, the able and trusted high official, the gallant officers done to death by treacherous murder. This and the events now occurring at the other extremity of the Empire come at this moment to point a significant moral. For in the piping times of peace, when all is quiet, the advocates of military forethought and military efficiency work under difficulties. What they deem prudence is dubbed military extravagance; they find themselves set down as alarmists—financial considerations and the bogie man get the upper hand. (Laughter.) Well, gentlemen, events such as these, lamentable though they be, will not be without their use if the warning they contain is taken to heart, if they remind us what in peace times is apt to be forgotten—that in India nothing is to be looked for but the unexpected, that, disguise the truth under what platitudes we may,

WE HOLD INDIA BY THE SWORD,

and that the peace and safety of the Empire are to be found only in being always prepared for war. And what constitutes the proper standard of preparation is the problem, the right solution of which is the constant subject of debate. Now, the officers at Army Headquarters and of the Military Department could tell you how the army is strained to meet the demands made on it at this moment; how, to provide the columns now marching towards the east and towards the west, troops have to be set in motion throughout the length and breadth of the country, to replace the garrisons at all the obligatory points which must be held. Yet what are these demands on the army compared with those which will be made on it when the great day comes of whose advent we have the warning, as the deep shadow already cast upon the frontier grows even broader? I need not point the moral further; let us hope that it will be taken to heart by all concerned. I have felt it a great honour and a great pleasure to be associated with Lord Lansdowne in the Government of India, and I shall carry away with me a feeling of respectful admiration for the manner in which he discharges the onerous duties of his high office. (Great cheers.) It would not be becoming in me to dwell on the merits of the staff at Army Headquarters, although I am very sensible of them; but as regards the adminstrative departments with which I have been more immediately concerned, I would ask to be allowed to say that the army and the Government are fortunate in having at the head of the Ordnance Department a man of such sound judgment and great scientific acquirements as General Walker—(cheers)—and that so able a man as General Badcock is at the head of the great department of Supply and Transport. (Applause.) I must be allowed to add my grateful acknowledgments to the staff of the Military Department for their hearty and loyal co-operation, and especially to my friend General Collen—(cheers)—to whose power of work, clear head, and intimate knowledge of the business of military administration it is due that the department is able to keep pace with the ever-increasing business with which it has to deal. Gentlemen, I will trouble you with only one more observation. Perhaps the most striking thing about the soldier's profession is the rapid transitions it presents. In other professions monotony is the rule; with the soldier, especially in these days, his life is one of constant change and contrast—the contrast, for example, between this scene of luxury and comfort and what our officers and their gallant men are going through at this moment at the extreme ends of this country, hurrying by forced marches across sultry deserts, or toiling through pestilential swamps. But happily either form of life is equally welcome. An officer does not mind being ordered to Simla—(laughter)—but he is still better pleased to be sent away from it on active service. In this respect the British officer is very much the same as he has always been; but I think the senior officers of the army must recognise that, while the juniors have all the qualities they believe themselves to possess, they have also a good deal besides, because they have the advantage of a much better education in the first instance, and a much better training after they enter the army. The change in this respect has been very great. A few days ago, when at a Calcutta dinner table, I observed a fine-looking young fellow at the end of the room, who from his likeness was evidently a son of the hostess. Asking her how he came to be there, the lady said that he had just come out to India to seek his fortune. "He was not clever enough for the army"—(great laughter)—she said, "and so they were going to make a lawyer of him." (Renewed laughter.) Such is the change which has come over the army. Great is the change wrought by education. Now, gentlemen, I present myself before you as an awful example of a man who has never passed an examination of any sort since he obtained his first commission—(laughter)—not even the Lower Standard. But if I belong to the uneducated classes myself, I can appreciate the advantage of education in others. I am old enough to remember the first introduction of the system of competitive examination and the predictions then made, that it would bring about a physical deterioration in the army, and that the fine fellows of our generation would be succeeded by a race of effeminate bookworms. We know now that this prediction has been completely falsified, and seniors as well as juniors must recognise with satisfaction that the head is not cultivated at the cost of the heart, especially at a moment like this, when Clive's celebrated defence of Arcot is recalled to recollection by the heroism of Lieutenant Grant and the handful of gallant men with him in the defence of Thobal. (Prolonged cheers.) So, gentlemen, I am no laudator temporis acti; I have the greatest belief in the young officers of the present day. In one respect only do I perceive a change for the worse: the young officers—I am speaking of the Indian Army—seem to be deficient in their knowledge of the native language, and so far to be on less familiar terms with their men. The reason is plain. The young officer is taken away from his regiment for this and that course of instruction—a garrison course, a signalling class, even a transport class—just at the time when the faculties are most receptive, and while so detailed he has no opportunity of making progress in the language of the country. Even when with his regiment he is so busy that he naturally makes the most of his leisure moments in amusements, where English is only spoken. "Thus from their very virtue faults do rise." One may perceive the defect without seeing the way to a remedy, although I think it calls for one. But bating this, the change, so far as there has been change, is, I believe, all for the good. And it must be a source of high satisfaction to everyone who, like myself, is taking leave of India, to do so with the conviction that her Majesty's army in India possesses a body of officers equal, to say the least, to any in the world, and who, in whatever circumstances they may be placed, will be found to meet the expectations and to win the approbation of their Queen and country. (Great cheers.)

THE "BOGIE MAN" AND MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—Sir George Chesney, in the speech at Simla in which he took leave of his friends the other day, made an excursion somewhat beyond the genialities of after-dinner oratory. The secular rivalry between the Financial and the spending Departments may be treated from more points of view than one. The late Military Member of Council preferred for once to deal with it as a matter for not too serious consideration. To him, and for the moment, Sir David Barbour was the Bogie Man, "the man who works such havoc among the little innocents of the Military Department, the little items for improvements of all kinds, the little bantlings which are so carefully nursed during the year, and wrapped in the dry sheets of the military estimates, too often only to be ruthlessly sacrificed on the altar of the Financial Moloch." This is the playful periphrase in which Sir George Chesney illustrated the general observation that though he and Sir Frederick Roberts had done their best to bring the army up to a state of readiness for service, their work had fallen short of completeness because the last word did not rest with them. Later on in the same speech, and in the same vein, he observed that "in the piping times of peace, when all is quiet, the advocates of military forethought and military efficiency work under difficulties. What they deem prudence is dubbed military extravagance. They find themselves set down as alarmists; financial considerations and the Bogie Man get the upper hand." There is a perceptible sediment of seriousness in all this, quite enough to give an after-dinner speech something more than personal importance. For it illustrates, with a distinctness that will not escape notice, the frame of mind in which the heads of the military administration habitually survey the field of Indian policy. They resent the fact that they cannot get the last word, that the play of opinion and interest by which the policy of Government is ordinarily determined should operate in the case of proposals emanating from the Military Department. That this view of things has occasionally met with encouragement outside professional circles does not give it reasonableness. The unofficial member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council who a year or two ago argued that the military expenditure of India ought, from the nature of things, to be excluded from criticism, did no other service to this unconstitutional and impolitic opinion than to get it most effectually denounced from one end of the country to the other. We do not know that Sir George Chesney, even when he conceals the idea under the appropriate banter of an after-dinner speech, has done it any more effectual service than to call attention to the extravagance of the pretensions put forward. His complaint really comes to this, that the army ought alone amongst the great spending departments to have a free hand in its expenditure, uncontrolled by any considerations as to the claims of the other departments, or by any thought for the general well-being of the Empire. There is something Napoleonic in the idea, but then, though Sir George Chesney reminds us that India is held by the sword, we have not yet deliberately elected to govern the country on the principles upon which Napoleon sought to hold France in his keeping. The army is like every other department in the State inasmuch as it would be the first to suffer from any drying up of the sources of the country's prosperity, so that it is itself dependent upon the vigilance with which "Bogie Men," whether they appear in the persons of Viceroys or Financial Members of Council, see to it that even the military expenditure undergo the same scrutiny as other expenditure. For it is not only Financial Members of Council who have had to play the part of "Bogie Man" in India. Lord Mayo had to do it in 1869, and if he had not done it effectually Sir Frederick Roberts and General Chesney would have found it difficult to procure the magnificent sums which have been laid out upon the defences of India and upon the increase of the army during the time that they have held leading places in the military administration. Lord Mayo discounted such opposition to economy in military expenditure as has again found expression of late, taking it for granted, in fact, when he saved the Empire from financial ruin that his measures would be opposed from the military side. The view which he took was this. Every shilling, he held, that was taken for unnecessary military expenditure was so much withdrawn from what we ought to spend for the moral and material improvement of the people. If our condition was financially most prosperous—and Sir William Hunter has given the public lately a new opportunity of learning what the financial condition of India was when Lord Mayo came here—we should not be justified in spending one shilling more upon the army than could be shown to be imperatively necessary. "We cannot think," the Viceroy wrote to the Secretary of State in 1871, "that it is right to compel the people of this country to contribute one farthing more to military expenditure than the safety and defence of the country absolutely demand." There was a good deal of the "Bogie Man" in this, and if Sir David Barbour has earned the name from his colleague by acting as often as occasion required upon the principles enshrined here he has no reason to complain. Happily the significance of Sir George Chesney's complaint is not likely to be misunderstood, though if the public memory were not strong and fresh there might be a danger lest people should take seriously the complaint that the army is not in a state of readiness for service because the Finance Minister wants to put a word in when increases of military expenditure are asked for. The record since 1885 at all events stands in direct contradiction of any complaint of this kind. Money has been laid out with a free hand upon frontier roads, frontier railways, and frontier fortifications. Special defences have been constructed in accordance with a programme under which an outlay of five crores has been sanctioned. The European army is stronger by 10,000 men than it was six years ago; the native army by nearly 30,000 men. Sums have been voted for new artillery and rifles more quickly than they could be spent. Not a year has passed without showing an increase in the ordinary expenditure on the army. In the present year additions have been made which permanently add 132,000 rx. a year to the Military Budget, and Sir David Barbour told us last month that, according to the best conclusion he could come to, the permanent cost of the army is likely to increase. This does not look like a starved department, or one whose leaders are crippled for want of resources. The truth is that if an appeal to public opinion upon this matter was necessary it should have been made not by Sir George Chesney, but by Sir David Barbour, who is much more in need of support against the inconsiderate demands of his military colleagues than they are of support against the parsimony of the Financial Department. The Military Budget for the current year has already been altered for the worse by two unforeseen events—the expedition to Manipore and the disappointing aspect of exchange. A decrease of 200,000 rx. was estimated for in the army expenditure in India, owing to the better rate of exchange for British troops. Exchange, which was taken a month ago at 1*s.* 5-25*d.*, is already more than a farthing worse than that, and we fear Sir David Barbour is more likely to lose than to gain in that direction this year. The conditions are not such therefore as to warrant any cessation of financial control over military expenditure, and we hope that the first result of Sir George Chesney's complaints will be to awaken the public here, and the governing authorities at home, to the necessity of strengthening those members of the Government of India who are acting in the spirit of a memorable declaration of Lord Derby's that "our best defences in India are a full treasury and a contented people."

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

MUSKETRY INSTRUCTION, 1891.

MUSKETRY SCHOOLS will be opened in the Madras Presidency this year, one from June 8 to Aug. 6, and the other from Aug. 23 to Oct. 22; the permanent establishment of each school to consist of one sergeant-major and one armourer-sergeant and a temporary establishment.

The number to be under instruction at each class is:—10 officers of British regiments, 10 officers of native regiments, 20 warrant officers and sergeants, 10 native officers, 10 havildars; total, 60.

Each British officer and non-commissioned officer will take with him a copy of the British Musketry Regulations, 1887, and is recommended to be in possession of "The Treatise on Military Small Arms and Ammunition, 1888," "Maque's Fire-Tactics," and sufficient stationery to last the course. Stationery for non-commissioned officers only will be provided by the State.

All officers and non-commissioned officers must have previously gone through a recruit's course of musketry, and the British non-commissioned officers must be in possession of a second-class certificate of education. Every non-commissioned officer must be medically inspected and reported fit on the day he leaves his corps; his rifle or carbine must be carefully examined by an armourer, and any defect remedied, and he must arrive fully armed and equipped.

In the selection of officers and non-commissioned officers preference is to be given to—

British Service.—(1) Adjutants, and those commanding troops or companies, who are not in possession of a school of musketry certificate. (2) Lieutenants at or near the top of the list for promotion to captain. (3) Non-commissioned officers, sergeant-majors, and colour-sergeants not in possession of a school of musketry certificate. Commanding officers are requested only to nominate those who are likely to remain in India for some time to come.

Indian Service.—To adjutants of native corps not already in possession of an "extra" certificate of musketry.

Native Officer.—Candidates for the appointment of native adjutant.

Native officers and non-commissioned officers who are near the end of their service should not be detailed.

Gunnery Instructors.—We have on more than one occasion, writes a military contemporary, pointed out the necessity for having specially-trained Artillery officers appointed to the principal seaports of India as gunnery instructors, and to supervise the machinery in connection with the new guns, range-finders, position-finders, &c. We are, therefore, now glad to hear that two such officers have been so appointed—one, Capt. S. C. U. Smith, R.A., for Bombay, and the other, Capt. G. E. Bryant, R.A., for Aden. Both these officers have been specially trained in England as gunnery instructors, and also, we believe, in the use of the latest pattern position-finder instruments. The appointments, we understand, are to be for five years, or until promoted to the rank of major, with a staff salary of 250 rs. a month, and a horse allowance of 30 rs. for one horse, in addition to regimental pay and allowances of rank. Captain Smith has just arrived at Bombay, and will commence his new duties at once; while Captain Bryant is still in England, not having quite completed his special course of studies. We presume that, in due course, both Calcutta and Kurrachee will be given the benefit of specially-trained Gunnery Instructors.

Officers' Messes.—A Bombay contemporary once more directs attention to the vexed question of officers' messes in the Native Army. There is admittedly room for vast improvement in the present arrangements, says the Englishman, under which the average number of dining members is reduced in many cases to three or four—a captain, a doctor, and two subalterns. The distinctive, social, and disciplinary value of the regimental mess in the European corps is indeed almost wholly lost in the Native Army; for numbers in this case are absolutely essential to successful working. It is not only in catering that the weakness of a small membership is felt, but, as has been pointed out, it is impossible for three or four officers to perform the social duties of a dozen or fifteen. Our contemporary advocates the extension, wherever practicable, of the Station Mess, which for some years past has found favour in Poona. By this means expenses might not only be very largely reduced, but the old traditions of the Native Army, its reputation for camaraderie and hospitality, and all the other virtues might be re-established in the land.

The 7th Hussars.—This regiment, stationed at Trimulgherry, have ever since their entry into Secunderabad, been successful in most matters, but, says the Deccan Times their financial transactions appears to be singularly unfortunate. Forgetting the past, they are now landed in another financial embarrassment. The regimental sowcar has declared himself insolvent, and in his bankruptcy the Hussars sustain a loss of something like 26,000 rs. The officers of the Hyderabad Contingent can afford to sympathise with the Hussars, for they too had heavy transactions with the sowcar, but it is evident they prefer to accept their misfortune philosophically; for while the Hussars have preferred a charge of cheating against the sowcar, the Contingent have held aloof from following suit, although their loss is believed to be considerably more than that of the Hussars. At all events, both regiments are to be condoled with. The sowcar, whose name is Thanmull Dhanmull, had dealings with the Contingent and the Hussars for very many years, during which time he was always known to be as firm as a bank. His sudden collapse has placed him in a sadder plight than he expected, for he now stands charged before the cantonment magistrate with cheating in respect of a sum of 6,000 rs., which was accepted by him from the Paymaster of the Hussars on the 4th instant, at the time he was alleged to be insolvent. The money was intended for the payment of the troops, while other sums belonged to regimental funds.

Fatal Accident at Agra.—A sad accident occurred at Agra recently. Two European soldiers belonging to the Garrison Artillery in the fort were returning home from cantonments, when, within one-third of a mile from the fort, they left the metalled road and took a short cut along a ravine. The night being dark, the foremost man fell down the ravine, a depth of some 15 feet. Falling on his head he broke his neck and died almost immediately. His comrade narrowly escaped a similar fate by the timely warning of a dog which they had with them, and which commenced whining at the sudden disappearance of the leading man.

Departure of Troops for England.—The B.I.S.N. Co.'s steamer Roma, which has been chartered by Government to convey home the balance of troops left at Deolali after the departure of the troopship Euphrates, which sailed from Bombay on April 17, sailed on the same date for England with 7 officers, 1 lady, and 2 children, 371 men, 21 women, and 56 children. The following are the names of the saloon passengers:—Surg.-Major H. L. Donovan, Med. Staff; Capt. C. F. Burton, Royal Fusiliers; Lieut. A. K. Stubbs, Worcester; Lieut. S. E. Orr, Lancashire Fusiliers; Capt. H. Sherwood Smith, Manchester Regt.; Lieut. C. H. E. Poole, Welsh Regt.; and Lieut. H. Clowes, Bombay Staff Corps. In addition to the above the following is the list of other passengers proceeding by the s.s. Roma:—For Portsmouth—Miss Harrison, two Misses Waite, Vet.-Surg. Cooper, Rev. Mr. Baillie, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd.

Under instructions from the Government of India, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct that all the band and mess property of the four Bengal Infantry Regiments recently mustered out shall remain the property of the corresponding regiments as reconstituted.

The system of purchasing the remounts for the Native Cavalry through the medium of remount agents has evidently proved better than free competition on the one hand, or the committees by which that was superseded on the other. A notification in General Orders announces that the present method has been made permanent.

An up-country paper is glad to see that the 6th Punjab Infantry have been congratulated by the Commander-in-Chief for their splendid forced march from Bannu to Hangu, doing 105 miles in 100 hours. This was undoubtedly very good; but perhaps it would be only fair to the 15th Sikhs to mention their march of sixty miles in fifty-two hours, while a portion of the regiment accomplished this distance in forty-two hours.

The 8th Madras Inf., which arrived on April 17 from Rangoon by the I.M.S. Dalhousie, after remaining in camp on the Fort glacis, left Madras on the 20th for Bangalore by two special troop trains. The regiment consists of seven British officers (Major Baugh, Captain J. F. Wilson, Lieutenants H. A. P. Lindsay, W. N. M. Cooke, E. H. Payne, W. Y. Campbell, and Surg. F. R. Divecha), 2 officers wives, 5 officers' children, 12 native officers, 623 rank and file, 11 women, 39 children, 27 public and 110 private followers, also 7 horses.

No. 3 Mountain battery, which was stationed at Darjeeling till December last, recently finished a long march to Rawul Pindi. It received its orders one afternoon to join the Miranzai Field Force, and it started early next morning, reaching Kushalghar the same day, and doing a march of thirty-two miles the same night. Not a man fell out, and not a mule was the worse, the Englishman says. The subsequent march—one of twenty-six miles—was to take it to Hungu, on the immediate frontier, whither it was being escorted by three squadrons of the 19th Bengal Lancers, under Col. Briscoe. The battery has done excellent service in recent years. It was in the Zhob Expedition of 1881, and in Burma in 1886-87.

Col. Worsley has given over command of the station at Cawnpore after five years of successful and popular tenure. His name is associated with many great improvements effected in the cantonments, and his departure is regarded with general regret.

Col. G. R. Peart, S.C., Commandant, Bhopal battalion, has been granted six months' privilege leave.

Capt. R. F. M. Johnstone, S.C., has been granted six months' leave on medical certificate.

Capt. J. B. R. Butler, S.C., has been granted a year's leave out of India.

Col. H. J. Kinsman, Royal Artillery, has retired.

Col. T. Davison is granted leave of absence to England for six months.

Major F. S. Gwatkin, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Kohima Column, Manipore Field Force, has been appointed Assistant Adjutant-General of the force under the command of Brigadier-General Collett, C.B., on the junction of the several columns.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to April 22.

Frontier Disturbance.—The Englishman learns that the Bhootias on the borders of the Kamrup district, in the province of Assam, made a raid a few days ago on some tea villages in the plains. The thanas on the frontier have lately been considerably undermanned, constables having been taken away for the work of impressing coolies for the Manipore expedition. This fact no doubt encouraged the hillmen to come down and loot the villages. The tribe contented themselves with plundering, and no lives were lost. Steps are being taken to secure the district from a repetition of the incursion, and it is well that this is being done, for, although the authorities may be right in regarding the raid as of little consequence, we cannot forget that it was precisely such an affair as this that involved us in the last Bhootia war.

The Lieutenant-Governor and the Fakir.—After the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council, on April 17, while the Lieutenant-Governor was proceeding from the Council Chamber to his private room in the Secretariat, he was accosted by an old fakir, who demanded a hearing while he related some grievance. His Honour informed the man that he should submit his case through the usual channel. The man, however, persisting, followed Sir Charles Elliot to the door of his private room, and seemed determined to follow the Lieutenant-Governor there. There was not even a peon about, and Sir Alfred Croft, who was with his honour, restrained the fakir until another Member of Council succeeded in obtaining the services of one of the Secretariat peons.

Outrage on a Young Lady.—A gross outrage, resulting in death, is reported to have been committed on a young European lady travelling down to Calcutta by mail train. The young lady, who was the daughter of a European official, was in the ladies' compartment of a first-class carriage, and was all right when the train reached Mokameh, the dining-station between Dinapore and Calcutta. She dined there, and her servants saw her safely into her carriage. When the train reached the next stopping station, her servants went up to her carriage as usual to inquire if their mistress had any orders for them, but they found her dead. While approaching the carriage, they saw a man jumping out, who alighted on a goods train just leaving the station for Mokameh. Telegrams were promptly despatched to Mokameh by passengers and officials, and on arrival of the goods train at Mokameh the break van was searched, and a ticket collector, who was unaware that his escapade had been discovered, was arrested asleep. It appears that while the train was steaming out of the station, the ticket collector jumped on the footboard on the off side and got into the carriage, and having outraged the girl, the scoundrel smothered her, fearing detection.

Accident to a Professor.—As Babu Brojobullub Datta, M.A., a very experienced and talented Professor of Science and Mathematics, was performing what is well known to be a difficult experiment with ether and sulphuric acid, an explosion occurred. The boiling sulphuric acid was blown into the professor's face. The principal, professors, and librarian at once exerted themselves to relieve the sufferer. The civil surgeon, Dr. Ffrench Mullen, and Dr. Haldar, the College surgeon, were promptly in attendance, and, thanks to their care and skill, it is hoped that the patient's sight will be saved. The accident occurred on the very day on which the college was being congratulated for its unusual success in science in the recent B. A. Examination, that success being largely due to the excellent teaching of the senior lecturer in science, Babu Kumadini Kanta Banerjea, M.A., and to his colleague, the afflicted sufferer in the present case.

The Riot at Benares.—The disturbance at Benares has been quelled, but, says a telegram from Allahabad, the riot appears to have been even more serious than it seemed from first account. The plundering at the Rajghat Railway station and at the Government Telegraph Office was evidently on an extensive scale, and accompanied by much demonstration of violence. Religious sentiments may have been at the bottom of the affair to begin with, but the Hindoo bigots were reinforced by a large throng, whose grievance was the present dearness of provisions. The rioters seized a large sum in the Telegraph Office, and plundered from the Rajghat Railway Station 3,000 rs. in cash, besides two parcels of silver bullion valued from 4,000 rs. to 6,000 rs. Large numbers of ladies and children took refuge at the Osmond Hotel, where the Volunteers assembled for their protection. The police had to fire on the rioters while looting Rai Sita Ram's house, and one man was wounded. The police received several bad lathe blows, and three coolies belonging to the waterworks are said to have been killed. The magistrate and some troops remained in the city all night, but no fresh disturbance took place. Later news is to the effect that at a meeting of the Municipality a resolution was passed that the idol should remain undisturbed in situ, the inner shrine being built for its protection, and that then the outer building, court, &c., be removed. Respectable classes express satisfaction at the result. In proposing the resolution it was stated that the recent disturbances should not be considered due to religious feelings, but to agitation against taxes and high prices. No troops are now in the city; they have been replaced by police guards. Quiet prevails, though complaints against police oppression are numerous.

European and Eurasian Poverty.—The Government of Bengal has appointed a committee to inquire into the subject of European and Eurasian poverty in Calcutta and the proper methods of relief. Sir Henry Harrison will be the president, and the other members are:—Hon. H. Beverly, president, District Charitable Society; Colonel Carey, president of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul; Father La Font; Mr. Lambert, Commissioner of Police; Archdeacon Michell; Rev. Mr. Taylor, president; and Mr. W. H. Ryland, vice-president, Eurasian Association; Rev. Mr. Hook, Baptist Mission; and Rev. Mr. Warne, Methodist Mission. Their report is to be submitted by Nov. 1.

Mr. Baldwin Latham's report condemns the Calcutta sewerage as structurally defective. He has proposed remedies for defects which, he says, will secure the good results to health that have followed in every town sanitarily drained.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to April 23.

Serious Distress.—The Madras Mail in a leading article draws a gloomy picture of the agricultural condition of the Presidency, and strongly urges the immediate formation of a central famine committee for the affected tracts, provided with funds and vested with full executive powers. The Englishman says:—There are grave reasons to fear that the distress in Madras, of which little has been heard during the past few weeks, is again becoming acute. Crops of a kind have been raised in spite of the drought in many districts, and the work of harvesting has alleviated for a brief season the symptoms of want which were apparent about two months ago. But the scanty harvest is now gathered in, work is practically suspended for the moment, and the outlook for the pariah in the region most affected by the prevailing scarcity is undoubtedly discouraging in the extreme. In one district, it is said, the people are beating out and using for food the seeds of grasses that are never used in ordinary times, and ant-hills are being dug up for the sake of the little store of grain accumulated by the tiny workers. The labourers are, moreover, wandering in large numbers from place to place in the hope that the condition of neighbouring districts may be better than that of their own; and this migration necessarily tends in most cases to increase rather than diminish the evil. In many districts drunkenness is alarmingly on the increase, and one observer remarks that the distressed people not only spend in toddy for themselves the pice that should be carefully spent in nourishment, but that the stimulant is also given largely to children, upon whom it exercises for the time a soothing and satisfying influence. Pitiful stories of want are reported from districts within a few miles of Madras City; and although the situation has not yet approached in general that of absolute famine the instances of individual suffering are sadly numerous. The vigorous efforts of the Madras Government to relieve distress where it is most keenly felt are the one ray of light in a very gloomy outlook.

The Distress in North Arcot is increasing. Dr. Hackett Wilkins, district surgeon there, has found a large percentage of the children in some villages he inspected suffering from starvation in various stages. The class of people that appeared to suffer most were the pariahs and coolies. He advocates a grant of immediate relief in these villages. He also inspected 700 of the most distressed people collected at Wandiwash, whom he found to consist first of aged and feeble, depending on relatives for support; several of these were much emaciated from starvation. Secondly, the working classes, of whom the largest number were women deserted by their husbands and trying to support their children by labour, while others were infirm persons unfit to work. Among these were several cases of emaciation from starvation. Thirdly, really emaciated people, of whom the largest number were children varying from the early stages of starvation to extreme emaciation. Despite the distress people seem disinclined to leave their villages to go to the relief works that have been opened, preferring to starve or live on jungle leaves.

The Acting Advocate-General.—We (Madras Times) now learn that Mr. H. G. Wedderburn is to act as Advocate-General during the absence of the Hon. Mr. J. H. Spring Branson. There are several gentlemen senior to Mr. Wedderburn at the local Bar, including Messrs. Gover, Johnstone, Gantz, Powell, and Michell; but the selection is one that will meet with general approval. Mr. Wedderburn has had sixteen years' experience at the Bar, and has served as Official Trustee and Administrator. He is popular and highly respected, and the dignity of his new appointment will lose nothing by being conferred upon him. His promotion leaves the Acting Administrator-Generalship open, and various reports are current as to who is to have this. Mr. Subramanyem is a favourite, but others are mentioned, and it is not yet definitely known who is to be the lucky man.

The Ross Divorce Case.—Judgment in the Ross divorce case was delivered on April 17. His lordship found that Mr. Ross had not been guilty of cruelty to Mrs. Ross, and that on the whole the petitioner, Mrs. Ross, had failed to prove her case. The petition was therefore dismissed, respondent to pay costs. In the suit by Mr. Ross against his wife for adultery, his lordship found that though the case was one of grave suspicion, he was not satisfied with the evidence adduced. Co-respondent was not allowed costs, but was directed to pay those of the petitioner. It is probable, writes the Madras Times, that we have not yet heard the last of the case; Mrs. Ross, we are told, having signified her intention of returning to her husband, in the event of whose refusal to receive her a suit will be filed against him for restitution of conjugal rights. The alimony paid by Mr. Ross to Mrs. Ross pendente lite, of course, ceases from the date of judgment in the consolidated suits. We are also told that it is in contemplation to attach the salary of Mr. Ross in payment of the heavy costs for which he is liable in these proceedings, payment of a portion of the costs in the Morgan-Ross case being still outstanding.

The Coimbatore Convert Case.—The district munsiff of Coimbatore delivered judgment on April 19 in the case in which Mr. Stanley Bird, a missionary belonging to the Plymouth Brethren, was charged with keeping a minor in his possession against the wish of the guardians, and other charges connected with the attempt to convert the Brahmin youth. Mr. Bird was ordered to hand over the custody of the youth and pay costs. He is also restrained from teaching him Christianity till he is of age. An appeal will be made.

The Government of India appears to have changed its mind about the sixth judgeship for the Madras High Court, and has decided not to oppose in the slightest manner the temporary re-appointment of Mr. Justice Handley, which has been so strongly urged by the Madras Government and the High Court.

His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore, G.C.S.I., accompanied by Mr. K. Seshadri Iyer, C.S.I., Dewan, and Mr. Desaraj Urs, has arrived at Ootacamund, from Mysore, and is staying at "Fern Hill." Dr. McGann, his Highness's surgeon, has joined the party. His Highness is expected to make a stay of six weeks.

BOMBAY.

Our latest advices from Bombay are to April 25.

Opening of the Kolhapore State Railway.—The Governor arrived at Miraj from Belgaum on April 20. Shortly before starting for Kolhapore his Excellency screwed on the last bolt in the Kolhapore State Railway with a gold key, and then proceeded in a special train to Kolhapore, where he was received by the Maharaja. The Dewan read an address giving the history of the formation of the line. The Governor then, in the name of the Council, presented Mr. Shannon, the engineer to the State, with a silver goblet as a mark of appreciation of his work. In declaring the line open the Governor referred to the difficulties that are to be contended with in India in getting English capitalists to invest money in railway enterprises. Native States were coming forward and taking the place of private capitalists. It was a further encouragement to those who had the administration of the country's affairs upon their shoulders, because it meant not only confidence in the success of the enterprise, but confidence in the stability and justice of British rule. He thanked those who had pressed on the construction of the railway for the assistance they had rendered the Government. He was aware that not only to the Council of State thanks were due, but to the chief of Miraj for the grant of land and the right of jurisdiction. Having wished success to the enterprise, the Governor left for the Residency, where, in the afternoon, he held a reception of chiefs. A return visit was paid to the Raja at the palace in the evening.

The Strychnia Poisoning Case.—After five days the trial of Bachoo Hajee Abdulla, who was charged with the murder of five persons in Kambekar Street on Jan. 22 last by the administration of strychnia, was concluded on April 24, before the Chief Justice and a special jury. After the summing-up, which occupied an hour and a half, the jury retired for consultation, and in about three-quarters of an hour they returned a verdict of "Guilty" by a majority of seven to two. His lordship, agreeing with the verdict, sentenced the prisoner to be hanged. The prisoner emphatically protested his innocence, and was removed in a fainting condition. It is rumoured, says a Bombay paper, that, despite the lengthened trial in the above case, several fresh points have since come to light, and the prisoner's relatives and friends are about to make strenuous efforts to obtain the clemency of the Crown on his behalf, and if the additional points raised can be substantiated it may possibly lead to a commutation of the capital sentence.

Railway Communication between Kurrachee and Delhi.—On the occasion of the visit to Kurrachee of Colonel Pemberton, a deputation from the Chamber of Commerce waited on him, and laid before him the views of the mercantile community regarding the necessity of having direct railway communication between that port and Delhi. The line advocated was that recently surveyed and reported on by Mr. Croudace. Colonel Pemberton said, in reply, that the Government of India were committed to the line they had just been advocating; that the concession had been granted for its construction; and that Government would not entertain any proposals for the construction of any other railway leading to Delhi.

Shooting in East Africa.—Parties wishing to proceed to British East Africa on shooting expeditions will require before doing so to make application at the head office of the Imperial British East Africa Company, at 2 Pall Mall East, London, as permission for such expeditions will be accorded only under certain conditions.

BURMA.

A telegram from Allahabad (April 20) says:—The frontier villages have to pay 156 rs. for message expenses for conveying the news to the Wuntho Tsawbwa, which shows that the results of the Manipore expedition are keenly looked for by the Burmese and Chins. It is stated from Serai that Captain Carter, D.A.A.G., Captain Hamilton, and Lieutenant Wilberforce, with an escort of the 25th Seaforth Highlanders, under Lieutenant Featherstone-Haugh, ascended Machai peak, nine thousand and eight hundred feet high, on the 18th, occupying six hours from the Camp. A good mule road has been opened from Hogi to Habelgah, where two companies of the 28th Punjab Infantry are stationed. Captain Maclaugan, R.E., is making a road from Hogi to Rainigali. On the 18th General Elles inspected the Khyber Rifles at Kungar, and on the following day they marched for Peshawar.

It is notified that all the western and southern portions of Wuntho have been formed into a Public Works division, designated the Wuntho division, and that this division will be under the Third Circle of Superintendence. The boundary between the Wuntho division and the Katha division will be roughly a line drawn from Singon to the Mainthoung Hill, continuing thence to the watershed of the range northward. Mr. W. G. Bligh has been appointed to the executive charge of the Wuntho division.

The Chief of East Karenni, Sawlawi, has been reinstated in the territory which he claims east of the Salween. It was awarded to him by the Siam Boundary Commission last year, and an officer of the Burma Commission has been sent with the chief to be present and countenance his taking over possession from the Siamese. It is understood that the Siamese have vanished from the territory. There are other Shan Chiefs on the far side of the Salween whose lands the Commission found to be unlawfully annexed by the Siamese, and it is to be hoped that Government will pass orders regarding them identical with those in the case of Sawlawi.

A telegram to the Englishman from Rangoon (April 20) says:—Mr. Ward, Judicial Commissioner of Lower Burma, and Chief Commissioner elect for Assam, sat to-day as Commissioner, appointed by the Viceroy in Council, to hear the charges against Mr. Duke, late Deputy Commissioner of Pegu, arising out of what is now known as the Pegu Bribery Case. The charges framed by order of the Governor-General in Council are two. First:—That Mr. Duke, while District Judge at Pegu, from an improper motive, failed to prosecute Oung Bah for an offence under section 162 of the Penal Code, and took part in an agreement with Oung Bah and Taroke Pyu in compounding that offence; secondly, that he gave false evidence when a witness for Oung Bah in the case where the latter was convicted recently. Mr. Duke pleaded not guilty, and was defended by Mr. Vansomeren and Mr. Fagan, the prosecuting counsel being Mr. Fox, the Government Advocate. Mr. Fox went through the history of the case, which was reported by telegram some months ago, and said that Mr. Duke's letters to Mr. Moylan, the counsel for Taroke Pyu, showed that Mr. Duke was trying to hush the matter up. One letter to Mr. Moylan, read by Mr. Fox, contained the following passage:—"I trust that as Taroke Pyu has agreed to this (that is the compromise) you will let the matter end. To prevent a repetition of this I have ordered Oung Bah to leave the district. The prosecution does not say that the money reached Mr. Duke, but according to Oung Bah's story to Taroke Pyu it was given to Mr. Duke's mistress." Mr. Duke's defence, as given by him to the local Government, runs thus:—"My reasons for not prosecuting Oung Bah were, that when I examined him in the presence of Taroke Pyu he stated that the money was made over to him to engage a pleader; and as Taroke Pyu did not deny this, and as he refused to prosecute, I, considering the matter a purely civil one, allowed them to settle it between themselves." He then goes on to admit that the letter to Mr. Moylan was carelessly worded and was written in great haste:—"My reason for ordering Oung Bah to leave the district was to prevent a repetition of these charges." Taroke Pyu was then examined, and detailed the circumstances under which Oung Bah induced him to give the latter 1,140 rs. on the representation that he could bribe Mr. Duke to acquit the relative of Taroke Pyu accused of dacoity.

Rangoon, April 21.—The hearing of the charges against Mr. Duke was resumed to-day. Evidence was adduced to show that Oung Bah was a follower of Mr. Duke, and had been appointed head constable of police by him; but it was also shown that he had been dismissed from that post by Mr. Duke when suspected of receiving illegal gratification. The evidence to-day did not shed much fresh light on the case. The hearing was adjourned till to-morrow.

April 22.—Mr. Duke's case was resumed to-day. Mr. Vansomeren, counsel for Mr. Duke, handed in a long written statement of defence. Witnesses were then called, who deposed to the pecuniary relations of Oung Bah and Taroke Pyu. All contradicted the latter's version of what took place; that Mr. Duke asked him to prosecute Oung Bah and he would not. They also deposed that Taroke said he had advanced money to Oung Bah to procure the services of a pleader and not for purposes of bribery.

To-morrow counsel will address his honour and the case will close. It was mentioned to-day by counsel for defence that at the time Mr. Duke is alleged to have imperilled his position for 1,140 rs., he was officiating as first grade Deputy Commissioner, and was first on the list for the pucca appointment. Mr. Duke was suspended on Jan. 16, and during the interval several junior men have been put above him.

It is stated that the Ruby Mines prospects are improving considerably under the able management of Major H. G. Kunhardt, Royal Engineers. The Maingthas are now coming in by hundreds, and are a very active, hardy race, very different from the Burmese, who appear to prefer indulging in illicit work to steady mining. This has been in a great measure put a stop to by the company, who have allowed them to take small pieces of land for which they have to pay rent, and any good stones found by them are bought by the company at a fair price. But the old practice is still continued in many cases of sending them down to the merchants in Mandalay.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE recent meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, at which Colonel Tanner read a paper on the Himalayas, would have been still more interesting had something like a general discussion followed the lecture. These things need a little arrangement beforehand. General T. E. Gordon, now military secretary to the British Embassy at Teheran, volunteered a few remarks, but the chairman, Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff, omitted to mention his name to the audience, and did not even invite him to stand where he could be heard. And yet General Gordon is one of our best authorities on Himalayan geography, and his book "The Roof of the World," in which he describes a journey across the Pamir when he was attached to the Forsyth Mission, is one of the best books of Asiatic travel that have been writtten since the days of Hadji Barnes. General Gordon returns shortly to Teheran. He has been greatly impressed, we believe, by the rapid growth of Russian influence in Persia, but is also convinced that the English Government need only pursue a more resolute policy to turn the table on our rivals.

Something further should have been heard by this time of the mission undertaken by Lieutenant Kobzoff, described as a retired officer of the Russian Marine. M. Kobzoff passed through Askhabad a few weeks ago, on his way to the Afghan frontier, being deputed to study the course of the Tejend and Heri Rud rivers—much the same duty as was undertaken some few years ago by M. Paul Lessar. M. Kobzoff will also endeavour to organise a transport service for merchandise between the Tejend station, on the Trans-Caspian Railway, and Serrakhs, Pul-i-Khatun, and Zulfikar.

The annual exercises of the Russian army are to begin on Wednesday, the 13th instant, and will last, according to the programme, till the middle of September. Manœuvres will take place both in Turkestan and the Trans-Caspian district, as well as in European Russia.

The Russian Government have paid particular attention for some time past to various proposals for establishing colonies in Russian Central Asia. A year ago a special Commission was appointed to study the question. According to a telegram from Askhabad, a party of colonists from Erivan in Asia Minor is about to settle in the neighbourhood of Pul-i-Khatun, near the Russo-Afghan frontier.

At the Ameer's Naoroz (Eastern New Year) Durbar, the State workmen of Cabul presented the manufactures of their workshops for the Ameer's acceptance. Prominent among the articles were a number of guns and rifles, and a few thousand loaded Martini-Henry cartridges. These were the work of the European mechanics in the Ameer's employ; but besides these were a few dozens of helmets, also boots, shoes, and saddles made in imitation of articles of European manufacture. They did not, however, come up to the Ameer's ideas, for the workmen's pay was promptly ordered to be cut.

A distinguished traveller from Arabia, named Sayad Ali, Sharif of Medina the Holy, lately reached Peshawur from Arabia with a train of followers and relations, intending to continue his journey to Asia Minor, viâ Afghanistan, Turkistan, Farghana, Persia, &c. He applied to the Ameer for permission to visit Afghanistan, and thence to go to Persia, stating that he had brought some presents for the Ameer which he would like to personally present to his Highness. The Ameer, however, replied that he preferred that the Sayad should not enter Afghanistan. The reason for this curt reply from the Ameer appears to be that the Arabian traveller on his way to India passed some days with Ayub Khan at Pindi, and the Ameer's officials informed him of it. It is probable that he will return back to Arabia much disappointed.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE Shanghai correspondent of the Standard (dating on "Sunday") writes:—There is every reason to hope that the discouragement given to railway enterprise in China some years ago by the destruction of the solitary line that existed was only temporary. A commencement has at length been seriously made at the Kaping end with the construction of the projected line, and vigorous steps are being taken to push it on to Shan Ki Kwan. Success, however, has been so far achieved in the teeth of sustained opposition. So menacing has been the attitude of the Cantonese, and so violent their attacks, that fully one half of the English employés have been forced to retire. In connection with this subject it may be worth while to refer to a recent announcement, to the effect that the Chinese Government has signed a contract for three thousand tons of rails. The report may be absolutely without foundation; but even if it be accurate, as far as it goes, it must not be understood to have any reference to the scheme of commercial railways. The probability is that the commission, if given, has relation to the strategic system of lines which it is proposed to construct towards the frontier on the north-east of Pekin. The advisers of the Throne cannot be blamed if they think of precautionary measures of this kind, as a response to the Russian preparations for connecting Vladivostock by a great Trans-Siberian line with the Russian base in Europe. The visit of the Czarevitch to the port and arsenal, which lies in such suggestive proximity to the Celestial Empire, may well attract the attention of the Pekin War Office to the contingencies of a campaign on the Amoor.

A communication from Hong Kong to the N.C. Herald (April 1) says:—To-day, April 1, Mr. Robert Anderson Mowat assumes the positions of Acting Chief Justice of H.B.M.'s Supreme Court for China and Japan, and Acting Consul-General at this port; Mr. Robert William Mansfield assumes the positions of Acting Assistant Judge of the Court and Acting Consul; and Mr. Michie Forbes Anderson Fraser the positions of Acting Senior Vice-Consul and Assessor at the Mixed Court. The Foreign Office is lucky in having two such capable men at hand as Messrs. Mowat and Mansfield to prepare the way for the permanent occupants of the new posts, and they may be trusted to lighten as much as is possible any difficulties that the change of system is expected to produce.

One result of the cutting-down of the Budget submitted to the Japan Diet by the Government has been the dismissal of several well-known foreign gentlemen from posts they have held with admitted credit for many years. Three leave the Department of Communications—viz., Captain Mountjoy Squire, R.N., and Messrs. W. L. Merriman and W. B. Mason. Mr. Merriman's disappearance from the Yokohama Post Office will be considerably felt. He has been the only foreign employé in the Post Office Bureau for many years, and it is the simple truth, says a correspondent, that his presence there has been regarded as a guarantee for the accuracy and promptitude absolutely essential in a Post Office.

RAILWAYS IN SIAM.

Railway development in Siam, says the local Mercantile Gazette, is the burning question at the present moment. Already the public have been invited by the Finance Department to take up shares in the line to Korat, and very probably the specifications will be in the hands of the contractors during the ensuing week. The Railway Department has been straining every nerve to send the work forward, and ere long we may expect to see the work in the hands of the contractors and the work of construction in active operation. The contemplated line to Korat is one of the most important that Siam could undertake, and will contribute more towards opening up the country than a number of small isolated lines near the coast. Korat, as we have before pointed out, lies in the centre of one of the most fertile tracts of Siam. Situated in the midst of a magnificent plain, stretching towards the east to the banks of the Mekong, and watered by the numerous tributaries of that fine river, there is not a more fruitful district in the East. At the present moment the teeming fertility of this district is entirely lost to Siam for want of efficient and cheap means of communication. It has been calculated that the rich rice-fields of the immense plains around Korat are capable, alone, of supplying sufficient rice for the population of Siam; but as there are no facilities of transport this fine district remains undeveloped and useless, the inhabitants only growing sufficient for their own consumption. . . . Nor is this all. The districts to the east and north of Korat stretching away to the Mekong, are known to be rich in deposits of copper and coal, not to speak of the immense forests that cover these vast regions, all of which rich stores of mineral and forest wealth are certain to be developed by the proposed line. That the terminus of the Korat railway cannot remain at Korat, but will be extended to the banks of the upper Mekong, is inevitable. The French have long discussed a line from the left bank of the upper Mekong to Vindh, which, if ever completed, would naturally take the wealth of eastern Siam through Tonkin. In the race for the carrying trade of the valley of the Mekong Siam ought to strain every muscle to be first, and to remember that for every sacrifice which she now makes to open up this fertile region, she will be repaid a hundredfold in the not far distant future.

The East Coast Railway.—We (Bombay Gazette) referred some weeks since to the slow rate at which the East Coast Railway is progressing, mainly in consequence of the low rates at which the contracts were being let. From all we hear there has been no improvement in that respect meanwhile, and the Englishman now calls attention to another obstacle to the progress of the undertaking which is greatly to be regretted. The cause of delay is a change in alignment between Bezwada and Rajamundry, and between Rajamundry and Tooni. The change can scarcely be called, as our contemporary calls it, a sudden one, for at the inauguration of the work by Lord Connemara last October, the late Governor of Madras more than hinted at the considerable revision that the alignment would require. It was admitted that the survey had been very rapidly made, and that enough consideration had not been paid to the wants of the various populous towns which it was intended to serve. The failures of the survey in this respect have, it is understood, been remedied by systematically taking the opinion of the collectors and district officers along the East Coast as to the suitability of the route projected. Lord Connemara rightly drew a warning from the mistakes which had been made in these respects in the laying out of other lines, which have often been made with too exclusive a regard for engineering considerations. But the warning came too late, for the mistake had been made before Lord Connemara spoke, and much valuable time has since been lost in correcting it, so that practically nothing, we understand, has been done towards the construction of the Bezwada and Rajamundry section. The credit of the Madras Government is to a very large extent involved in the energetic prosecution of the work, but thus far the accounts that have reached us have not been satisfactory. and unless matters mend greatly and promptly the record of the East Coast Line will tell against the construction of railways by the State, and will give reason for regret that the era of construction by guaranteed companies is at an end.

WOUNDED BEAR CHARGING UP A TREE.

By J. D. INVERARITY.

[The following short paper is the most interesting feature of a very good new number of the Journal of the Bombay Natural History Society. It is accompanied by an excellent lithograph of a photograph taken under circumstances which Mr. Inverarity describes in the text.]

IT is well known that bears are good climbers, and that they are in the habit of ascending trees after bees' nests and jungle fruits. That they charge readily enough if encountered on foot is familiar to all sportsmen. The incident I am about to relate of a bear charging up a tree at its adversary is, I think, uncommon, although I remember on a previous occasion seeing a wounded bear charge to the foot of the tree from which it was fired at, and rear itself up against a ladder on the top rung of which was seated Colonel Bowie, now Inspector-General of Police, Central Provinces.

On May 17, 1890, I was beating a rocky hill in the Central Provinces, and was posted in a Saj tree (the Black Eque), when a she-bear galloped by at a few yards' distance. I shot her, and she rolled about on the ground after the manner of bears, complaining bitterly. I fired the second barrel at her as she lay on her back, which appeared to act like a tonic, as she jumped up, charged straight at the tree, and at once began to climb it. So quickly did she come, that although I never reloaded quicker in my life, she reached my legs just as I got one barrel re-loaded. She was on the point of seizing my leg with her teeth when I fired and dropped her. My hat fell off in the scrimmage, and on reaching the ground she tore the inside cut. She then made off at a slow walk; I re-loaded and hit her with both barrels, knocking her down once, and, though all the shots but one she had received were well forward, she was still able to walk, and was finished by a shot from my companion, Captain Burton, Royal Fusiliers, who was posted about 100 yards from me. This was a case which one occasionally meets with in sporting prints, appropriately headed "Extraordinary Tenacity of Life in a Bear." The shot in the tree I found had hit her inside the head of the humerus, breaking the scapula, and so close was she that the hair on her face and chest was singed with the flash, and the wads were driven into the wound. I found them resting against the head of the humerus. The express bullet had split up on the scapula, and only a small fragment had entered the cavity of the chest. My mala was tied on the lowest branch of the tree, and I was sitting 13 feet from the ground. The stem of the tree was 3 feet 6 inches in circumference, 2 feet from the ground, or about 14 inches in diameter. The bole of the tree was perpendicular, with only one small shoot at a distance of 5 feet from the ground. My legs hung down alongside the tree, so that my feet were at a height of 11 feet 6 inches. The highest claw marks of the bear were 11 feet 6 inches high, alongside my right foot. The above details are given from actual measurement.

In order to carry away with me an accurate record of the incident, I tied the defunct bear to the tree, and with the able assistance of Captain Burton took a photograph, with the result depicted opposite. Although, of course, the bear was dead, the picture gives a correct representation of the tree. The bear, however, is too low, as her highest claw marks were at the point my right foot touches.

As I had other things to think of, I am not sure if I observed accurately the manner of climbing; but she appeared to me to swarm up with her belly close to the tree and her legs well round the bole.

A man I had as a stop in a tree 100 yards off was loud in his lamentations, and was with difficulty convinced I was unhurt. He then somewhat inconsequently remarked that I was his father and his mother.

The Homeward Mail.

INCORPORATION OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL WITH THE HOMEWARD MAIL.

WE announced last week the merging of an old East Indian agency in the business of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co. To-day we have to intimate that a journal which has been familiar to the Anglo-Indian and British public for a large part of this century has been absorbed in a similar manner. The last number of Allen's Indian Mail appeared on Wednesday, May 6, and henceforward it will be incorporated with its larger and of late more energetically conducted rival the Homeward Mail. In taking leave of his readers the editor, whose name has been so long and pleasantly connected with the highest type of Anglo-Indian journalism, makes the following graceful reference to the transfer :—

As will be seen from the notice at the head of opposite page, Allen's Indian Mail ends its existence to-day as a separate entity. Newspapers are as subject to the laws of mortality as their proprietors and editors, and the Mail shuffles off its mortal coil at a grand old age. The causes which have brought about that end now, sad as they are, need not be referred to here. But the old paper does not die utterly. Its soul is only transmigrated. Henceforth it will be incorporated with Messrs. Henry S. King and Co.'s Homeward Mail and Official Gazette, which for many years has been, not its unfriendly but stronger rival, to which our subscribers and advertisers should now transfer that support which they gave to Allen's Indian Mail in former and more fortunate days.

The proprietor and editor of the Homeward Mail can hardly be expected to share the melancholy which afflicts the writer of the above paragraph, but they must express their cordial appreciation of the dignity and felicity of the manner in which he has executed the happy despatch, and at the same time record their sense of the good feeling which has at all times characterised the relations between the two journals, for so many years friendly rivals in the supply of information from India and the East to the Home public. Allen's Indian Mail came into existence early in the century, and for many years held its own as an able and successful exponent of the best opinion on Indian affairs. The Homeward Mail, established some years later, soon became a formidable rival of the older journal, and no doubt had an advantage in being associated with the Overland Mail, which is now recognised as the most complete and comprehensive summary of contemporary news which is issued from the English Press. Three years ago, however, the proprietors, alive to the necessity of keeping pace with the general march of journalistic improvement, enlarged the Homeward Mail by eight pages, altered the paper and the type, arranged to publish the furlough lists which had previously been a distinctive feature of Allen's Indian Mail, and besides increasing the amount of matter converted their paper into an efficient organ for the discussion and ventilation of questions affecting India and the East. The result was a gratifying increase in the circulation, at the expense partly of its old rival.

To-day the Homeward Mail appears as the sole tenant of a unique and influential field in British journalism. It is hardly necessary to say that every effort will be made to justify the position which, as the editor of the late journal frankly implies, has been gained by virtue of an honourable and well-directed enterprise. It will be much if the Homeward Mail can add the prestige of the journal which it now absorbs to the influence it has already acquired as a recorder and critic in Great Britain of the politics, life, commerce and interests of our vast Empire in the East.

THE INDIAN CIVIL ENGINEERS AND THE HIGHER POSTS.

THE Civil Engineers of the Public Works Department have not yet been able to win attention from the Indian Government to their plea for justice in the distribution of the higher posts in their service. It is unquestionable that the ablest and best part of the work of the Department is done by Civil Engineers, while the cream—indeed almost the whole—of the chief honours and rewards fall to their Military colleagues. Secretaries of State have recognised this fact and have expressed to the Indian Government their desire that the higher posts should be more equitably distributed between the Military and Civil officers. Beyond that a Secretary of State can hardly go. He cannot order the Government of India to appoint this or that man to a post. The distribution of this patronage is practically in the hands of a small clique of the Indian bureaucracy, and on that clique the Military element is able, through family or other connections, to bring an overwhelming influence to bear. It would be wise were these nepotists not to press their advantage too greedily, and were they now and then to recognise that even an Uncovenanted black-beetle has his rights—or, if refused them, may make himself unpleasant. It is tiresome enough to be forced to worry the Secretary of State or the House of Commons on questions which, were the Indian Government to conduct its affairs with ordinary tact, and on anything like an approach to equity, need never be ventilated, but the continued failure to do justice to the Civil Engineers is a scandal, which must seriously diminish confidence in the integrity of the Government of India. The proper course for the Secretary of State to take is to order that the higher posts shall be proportionately allocated between the Military and Civil officers. MR. TALBOT, the Member for Oxford University, has given notice of the following question for next Thursday :—

To ask the Under-Secretary of State for India what has been done by the Indian Government to carry into effect the 26th paragraph of the despatch of Lord Kimberley, No. 18, of March 22, 1883, with regard to the grievances of the civil engineers of the Indian Public Works Department in relation to their occupation of the higher posts in that Department; whether, in point of fact, the civil engineers have for a long period of years composed about four-fifths of the entire strength of the Department, the military engineers constituting the other fifth; whether the latter have the monopoly of all the higher administrative posts; whether this has been recognised by more than one Secretary of State as an injustice to the civil engineers; and whether it is not possible to give more practical effect to the policy laid down in the above-mentioned despatch by the appointment of competent civil engineers to fill the highest departmental administrative posts either alternately with military officers or in any other way.

MR. TALBOT having been asked to put a question on the subject, communicated with MR. KING, as the recognised advocate in the House of the interests of the European Civil Servants, and with his collaboration the question was drawn up in the above form which is both clear and comprehensive. We hope the Secretary of State will see his way to give a satisfactory answer.

A BURMA AND CHINA RAILWAY.

THE alternative scheme propounded by MR. HOLT HALLETT before the Blackburn Chamber of Commerce for the railway connection of Burma with China by a line passing solely through territory under British rule or protection, deserves the close attention and earnest consideration of the Government of India. It ought to meet with approbation from the Home Government, and from British commercial and industrial classes, since it is apparently the most promising and feasible route that has as yet been suggested for the connection of the two countries. The direction of the main line may be briefly described as CAPTAIN SPRYE'S route, with deviations—deviations which have been proved advisable and necessary by subsequent explorations and studies of the country. It turns many of the ranges of hills crossed by SPRYE'S route by passing round their southern extremities and proceeding northwards up the valleys of the Beeling and Yonzaleen rivers; and it avoids the precipitous ranges of hills between the Tacaw Ferry and Kiang Hung by crossing the main range some sixty or seventy miles to the south, and proceeding via Kiang Hsen instead of via Kiang Tung to Kiang Hung and Esmok or Ssumao.

The project divides itself naturally into two divisions. The first treats with the base line connecting Martaban with the Rangoon and Mandalay Railway and the portion of the main China line and its branches which lies to the west of the Salween River; the second, with the portion of the main line to the east of the river, which would connect with the terminus of the Siamese main line (now being surveyed) near Kiang Hsen, and have its terminus in the neighbourhood of the Chinese frontier-post of Ssumao. The second division we propose to deal with in another article. The base line stretching in a north-westerly direction from Martaban, a village on the west bank of the Salween opposite the seaport of Maulmain, to a point on the Rangoon-Mandalay Railway, has been explored, levelled and surveyed, as well as the portion of the main line from its point of leaving the base line near Beeling to the junction of the Poon and Salween River in Karennee; and the proposed routes for the branch lines through Karennee and the Shan States, lying to the west of the Salween, have been fully explored and found to be practicable. The most serious engineering difficulty met with on the base line is the passage of the Sittang River near the town of the same name. Here the river is 1,520 feet broad, but of no great depth. The cost of construction of the bridge would, therefore, not be unwarrantably large. This line would be about 100 miles in length. It would pass through an immense and fertile plain which is bounded on the south and west by the Gulf of Martaban, renowned for its great tidal waves and the tremendous bores, which, rushing up the rivers and streams emptying into it, render navigation risky and dangerous in the extreme. Land carriage to the seaports through a great part of the plain is therefore compulsory, and renders the transit of goods and produce most costly. A great portion of this vast plain is still uncultivated, partly owing to the expense of carriage and partly to faulty drainage, which could easily and cheaply be remedied by the construction of a few artificial channels. From the town of Beeling, where the main line would leave the base line, to Menga Sakan, the point where the line would commence the ascent of the hill-range which separates the Yonzaleen from the Salween, no river has to be crossed over 290 feet in breadth. The summit of the pass over the range separating the Beeling and Yonzaleen Valleys is only 580 feet above mean sea-level, and but 200 feet above the valley of the Yonzaleen; and the summit of the pass over the limestone range of hills which divides the Yonzaleen from the Salween, according to Captains Williams and Luard, who carried out the survey for the Government, is only 2,686 feet above sea-level, and but 2,146 feet above the bank of the Yonzaleen. From the surveyors' report we learn that the ascent for a railway "may probably be reduced 400 or 500 feet by a tunnel of moderate length." The character of the hills may be judged from their statements that "any moderate gradient consistent with economy might be obtained," and "it is evident that at a very moderate cost an excellent bullock-road might be carried from the Yonzaleen over the watershed to the Myintabyee River, which enters the Salween. A sum of 400 rs. per mile would probably be sufficient to construct that road, with no gradient in excess of 1 in 33. The same expenditure incurred on the banks of the Salween would give a level road to the Pah Choung (8¼ miles to the north)." From the Pah Choung to the Kamaphyoo, our boundary with our protected state of Karennee, a distance of twenty miles, the bank of the Salween is of a similar character, and, according to the natives, might still be followed. Slight side-cutting is required in limestone rock at the crossing of the hill-range and at places where spurs jut on the river, and would render these portions of the line slightly more expensive than the other sections. The explorations of WATSON, SCONCE, and O'RILEY in 1863-64 proved that from the Kamaphyoo a line (the main branch line proposed by MR. HALLETT) could be carried for some 130 miles up a gently sloping and fertile, and generally well-inhabited valley, threading Karennee and some of the other Shan States; and subsequent explorations have proved that branch lines might be carried from this line to Moné and other important centres of population and trade at an ordinary expense. One of these branches might be continued to the Kunlon Ferry, to tap the trade of the Southern Chinese Shan States and of the Lawa States, which latter will eventually be brought under British protection.

MR. HALLETT has pointed out that one of the chief advantages of the projected lines to the west of the Salween would be that the trade of Karennee and many of the Shan States would be conveyed direct to the seaports, instead of by the great detour via Mandalay, which in many cases would necessitate carriage for an extra distance of over 400 miles. Nearly the whole of the country through which the main line and branches would pass, we learn from Government reports, is highly fertile and possessed of a very rich soil. It is noted that the hills skirting the Beeling Valley "would probably produce anything, from rice to tea and coffee. . . . On the whole the Beeling Valley is rich, . . . almost any cultivation would succeed in it. Rice, tobacco, and betel palms luxuriate, every village is a mango grove, and every clearing produces, spontaneously, fine pasture." The railway would increase the wealth of the people, render them more peacefully inclined, cheapen the cost of carriage, extend trade, expand the Government revenue, reduce the cost of moving police, troops, and supplies, and facilitate their transit. It would place an efficient check upon all chance of rebellion, and add greatly to our control over the country. Railway construction in Burma has, up to now, in every case proved remunerative beyond expectation, and even beyond all hopes. It remains with the Indian Government to show a reason why the railways now proposed by MR. HOLT HALLETT to the west of the Salween River should not be promptly undertaken.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Tuesday, May 5.

Manipore.—Mr. Cremer asked the Under-Secretary for India if he could now state whether an attempt was made, or intended to be made, by the Chief Commissioner to capture the Jobraj at Manipore in case he attended the durbar to which he had been invited; and whether such attempt was the cause of the massacre which followed; whether the Chief Commissioner ordered the attempt on his own authority, or if he received his authority from the Indian Government; whether any record had been kept of the exact orders which the Chief Commissioner received; and when the Government would lay before Parliament a complete copy of such orders.

Sir J. Gorst: I am directed by my noble friend the Secretary of State to answer this question as follows:—The best answer I can give to the question is to say that I have just laid upon the table of the House all the despatches relating to Manipore, and that they will be printed and circulated as speedily as possible. The despatch by last mail, which we have been expecting, arrived this afternoon.

Mr. Cremer: Do I understand the right hon. gentleman to suggest that he is not in a position to express any opinion or to give any answer to the question upon the paper?

Sir J. Gorst: I can only answer questions in this House as directed by my noble friend the Secretary of State—(laughter)—and I have given the answer I am directed by him to give.

Mr. Cremer: I beg to give notice that I will repeat the question to-morrow and every day until I get a definite answer. (Laughter.)

The Value of the Rupee.—Mr. Labouchere asked the Under-Secretary for India why the rate of exchange for the rupee was paid on April 1 for the ensuing five months in respect to payments to those belonging to the Home Establishments in India at 1*s.* 6½*d.*, when the market value was not more than 1*s.* 5½*d.*

Sir J. Gorst: The Secretary of State, notwithstanding the assistance of his financial advisers, has been unable to understand the meaning of the hon. member's question—(laughter)—but he thinks it may possibly be answered by reminding the hon. member that an official rate is fixed beforehand for all the transactions of the ensuing year, irrespective of the fluctuation of the market rate, and that the fixed rate for 1891-92 is 1*s.* 6*d.*

Mr. Labouchere: The right hon. gentleman has not done justice to the Secretary of State, who seems to have perfectly well understood my question. (Laughter.)

Thursday, May 7.

Troops for Bechuanaland.—In answer to Sir G. Campbell, Mr. E. Stanhope said: Preparations are being made to replace the police with troops at certain posts within the colony of British Bechuanaland, because it may possibly become necessary to move the police now at those posts into the Bechuanaland Protectorate in order to defend it against raiding trekkers. The interchange of troops between Natal and Cape Town has been postponed until after to-day. If troops should ultimately be sent into British Bechuanaland the expense, which would not be great, would fall on Imperial funds, as the colony is not self-supporting.

The Manipore Disaster.—Sir H. Havelock-Allan asked the Under-Secretary of State for India, with reference to the recent reports on the Manipore disaster, whether he could inform the House how it came to happen that a very small military expedition, consisting of less than 500 native soldiers, was sent on an enterprise having for its object the dethronement of the ruler of the neighbouring State without apparently any proper military supervision or any responsible estimate being formed as to the resistance to be expected and the hostile force to be encountered, the adequacy or otherwise of the very small military force sent, and the provision of a proper reserve of ammunition for the two different descriptions of rifles employed; whether the district and station from which this military force started was under the immediate military supervision of any superior military officer, and if so, of whom; and what steps the Government of India proposed to take for insuring proper military control in military matters, so as, if possible, to avert similar disaster to our arms in future.

Sir J. Gorst: In answer to the several paragraphs of the hon. member's question I have to say—(1) Full reports on the subject have not yet been received; (2) the station is in the Assam district, under the command of Brigadier-General Collett; (3) the Secretary of State has not heard of any special steps being taken by the Government of India.

To-day Mr. Paulton will ask the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether her Majesty's Government will consider the advisability of substituting for the present paddy tax in Ceylon a light land tax or other impost which, while yielding an equal revenue, would press less severely on the poorest class of cultivators.

THE MIRANZAI FIELD-FORCE.

SIMLA, April 18.—The first engagement of the Miranzai Field-Force took place yesterday morning. No. 1 Column reached Lucka at 8.30 without opposition. Then it advanced to Shalia, No. 3 Mountain Battery shelling the heights. In taking Shalia the following casualties occurred :—Colonel Cramer, King's Royal Rifles, severely wounded in the hand ; Major Egerton, Assistant Adjutant-General, severely wounded in the wrist ; Colour-Sergeant Wire, slightly ; Private Forrest, severely ; and Private Gardiner, slightly. All of these men belong to the King's Royal Rifles. One sepoy is reported killed and two wounded. Gogra and Sangar were next carried without further loss. No. 2 Column advanced from Derband and met No. 1 Column at Derband Kotal, and arrived at Gwada, where they bivouac. No. 3 Column advanced by Pat-Derband road, and reached Sungar at two o'clock in the afternoon. It was opposed during the ascent. Probably the Samana Range will be cleared to-day. The sun is reported to be extremely hot. The troops behaved admirably.

SIMLA, April 19.—On Saturday General Lockhart, with Nos. 1 and 3 Columns, advanced at seven in the morning along the crest and carried Surtope. At eight this village was cleared of the enemy by the 1st and 6th Punjabis, under cover of the guns posted on the hill tracts to the west of Sungar. The 1st Punjab lost one killed, one dangerously and some slightly wounded ; besides these one officer of No. 3 Mountain Battery, severely wounded ; one military police, slightly hurt. A halt was made at a spring near Surtope to enable the troops to get water, some having been twenty-four hours without it, and they were dead beat. At eleven in the morning an advance along the crest was witnessed, and the villages of Mastaon and Savagatti occupied, the third column being left there, the first returning to Sangar. A halt will be made on Sunday. Colonel Turner, commanding second column, reports the enemy posted in difficult ground on Khanki. His losses have been three wounded on Friday in addition to the casualties already reported, and one badly, and five wounded in his camp. This morning the cavalry advanced up the Khanki as far as Gwada, and were fired on. There were no casualties. A few dead bodies of the enemy were found, but it is impossible to estimate the losses.

SIMLA, April 18.—A telegram has been received with the news that general fighting has taken place on the Samana Ranges. The British troops drove the enemy back, and so far the operations are successful. The fighting was to continue to-day. Colonel Cramer, 60th Rifles, was wounded in the wrist, and Major Egerton severely in the hand. The only other casualties were five or six Sepoys wounded.

SIMLA, April 21.—A telegram from the Miranzai Field-Force states that on the 19th instant one column was at Mastaon and the other two at Sangar. The former is much troubled by constant fighting during the night, three men being killed and four wounded. On account of this the 60th Rifles, the 2nd Punjab and the 5th Goorkhas were sent up immediately. Colonel Brownlow moved out on the 20th, with orders to destroy all the villages whose inhabitants were firing on the troops. The force completely dispersed the enemy and burnt their villages. The main attack was made on the stronghold of Saragarhi by the 60th Rifles and the Goorkhas, the latter coming to close quarters. Then the 6th and 19th Punjab attacked Gustang under cover of two guns. The enemy made no stand, and fled down the Kanki Valley. The towers of Gustang and Saragarhi were blown up. The enemy's loss is estimated at 150 killed, 60 being actually counted. Our loss is one man of the 60th Rifles killed, and four wounded. The health of the troops continues good. The officer of the Mountain Battery who was wounded the other day is named in the dispatch.

SIMLA, April 22.—From Miranzai the news is that the troops going to Akel are composed of the 2nd column, strengthened by the 1st and 17th Punjab Infantry. Colonel Sym, with the 60th Rifles, 5th Goorkhas, and No. 3 Mountain Battery, holds Sangar. The 3rd column remains on the Mastaon plateau.

SIMLA, April 23.—Intelligence from the Miranzai Field-Force, dated the 22nd instant, states that one of Major Leigh's spies, who was with the enemy during the fight of the 21st, reports that the enemy sustained a heavy loss, over 300 being killed and wounded. During the engagement on the 20th, he further states the enemy could be seen dispersing, and that the reinforcements of the King's Rifles and the 5th Goorkhas which came up during the fight were unnoticed until they actually surprised the enemy. All the Urakzai sections were engaged, but the Arisserga and Massogai, who prudently waited to see how affairs would turn out, retreated when defeat was apparent. That the enemy are completely demoralised is confirmed by the fact that their dead have been left on the ground. Captain McLeod, 29th Punjab, was slightly wounded in the leg. The force is still advancing, and has reached Gulistan unopposed.

SIMLA, April 24.—General Lockhart left Gulistan at seven o'clock on the morning of the 22nd inst., where Colonel Farrer's column was. On reaching the top of a high hill towards the west, the whole of the Akel settlements in Chagri Darru were seen. The General being informed that the tribe was sending in a message, the force halted, the Akels being informed that they would be fired on if they attempted to leave their villages. The stipulated time having elapsed, the force moved on. The Peshawur Mountain Battery and 27th Punjab stayed on the crest, the 1st Punjab moved along the south face of the Samana, and then worked down into the Changur valley. The 2nd Punjab, with the 3rd Sikhs, descended straight into the valley, with the object of cutting off the enemy, who might fly northwards. The enemy first attacked the 1st Punjab, but that regiment, assisted by the Mountain Battery guns, soon cleared the villages and burnt them. The 2nd Punjab reached the bed of the Chagru Valley under cover of a spur, and surprised the enemy and inflicted some loss. They then moved up a nullah covered by the 3rd Sikhs on the right bank. Nine villages were burnt. The enemy were prevented by the guns from following the troops up the valley. Large bodies of the enemy were seen on the hills, but were quite nonplussed by the fire of the guns. The enemy suffered heavily from the shrapnel fire. To-morrow the chastisement of the tribes continues. Colonel Brownlow has destroyed the three Ibrahim Kel hamlets of Ralia Kel, with their towers, without opposition. Colonel Reid, 29th Punjab, went with nine hundred men and two guns to destroy Burazai. Firing has been heard, but no report has yet been received.

The above telegrams are to the Times of India. The following is from the Pioneer :—

ALLAHABAD, April 20.—Important news from the Miranzai Expedition has been received, dated Camp Sangar, yesterday :—On the morning of April 17 the 1st Column moved from Hangu and advanced up the hill, meeting with no opposition. The cavalry moved round the eastern end of the Samana range and along the watercourse to the north, returning in the evening to Hangu. At the same time Nos. 2 and 3 Columns moved into the hills from Derband. No. 1 Column found the enclosed stone village of Tasalla strongly held by the enemy, who wounded Major Egerton and his orderly while they were reconnoitring the position. No. 3 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, hastened up and opened fire at 800 yards with common shell, silencing the enemy. The 60th Rifles then advanced and took the village, losing one man killed, and Colonel Cramer and four men wounded. The battery then came into action among houses of the village and shelled the sungars, towers, and surrounding hill-tops occupied by the enemy. Meanwhile No. 3 Column had advanced in support, and three guns of the Derajat Mountain Battery opened fire, and the sangar was occupied by our infantry without opposition, but the firing of the 60th with gun and rifle continued till late in the evening. No. 2 Column, under Colonel Turner, worked round the lower northern slopes of the range, and had a great deal of desultory fighting, losing two men killed, and eight wounded. All the men suffered much from want of water, as all that was available was what they had brought up themselves. On the 18th, in the morning, six guns of No. 3 Mountain Battery and three guns of the Derajat Mountain Battery took up their position on the hill under the enemy's fire, and came into action at 1,000 yards against the village of Sartope, which was strongly held, as well as the woods and enclosures surrounding. While coming into action Lieutenant Patch and Gunner Rogers, both of No. 3 Mountain Battery, were wounded, the former very slightly, the latter severely. Most excellent practice was made by the guns, and the position was secured by the 1st and 19th P.I., with a loss of one killed and three wounded. The force then pushed on to the eastern edge of the Mastaon Plateau, and occupied the villages, supported by guns that shelled the village of Gustang. Lieutenant-Colonel de Lautour has joined the force, and assumed command of the Artillery in place of Major Cunningham. Captain Hickman, 23rd P. I., is appointed A.A.G. pro tem, vice Egerton, wounded.

THE FORCE.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

ALLAHABAD, April 17.—The only news from the Black Mountain is that the transfer of the base from Darband to Oghi is being rapidly carried out. It is expected that Darband will be evacuated by the 20th.

April 18.—All is quiet. The Akazai Jirga have again presented themselves, but were not fully representative.

April 21.—A telegram, dated Darbandrai yesterday, says that an officer met some Chigarzais on the road between that place and Seri. To-day they volunteered information that their tribes had no intention of sending in a jirga. They did not wish to fight, having no quarrel with the British Government, and they intended to abide by the terms arranged with Mian Gul.

April 23.—All is quiet, but there is no sign of the remaining sections of the Akazais coming in.

THE OPIUM RESOLUTION.

HEAVEN only knows, says the Times of India, what some future Radical Government may have in store for India, and to be forewarned is to be forearmed. The opium trade means in round numbers 600 lacs of rupees, and supposing it were ever abolished, as Sir Joseph thought he had abolished it the other day, the Government of India would have to find this sum of 600 lacs of rupees in some other direction. It is difficult to see how the deficiency could be made up, except in the following way :—

	Lacs.
Double the Income Tax	150
Impose 8 annas more on Salt.....	140
Impose Import Duties.....	110
Absorb Famine Grant	100
Economies and grants from Local Governments ...	100
Total Lacs.....	600

The readjustment of the Indian revenue in this way—and we fail to see how else it could be accomplished—would upset every class in the country, and, what is more to our purpose, would carry dismay into every manufacturing town in Lancashire. To double the income-tax would lead to something very like a White Mutiny. To impose another eight annas on salt would raise a howl of distress throughout the length and breadth of the Empire, while to threaten to re-impose the import duties, which ought never to have been abolished, would make every Lancashire member change his views completely as to the lawfulness of abolishing the Indian opium trade. Now that a body of ignorant and hare-brained fanatics are permitted to tinker with Indian finance whenever they can find the House of Commons asleep, it is as well that the gravity of the question should be properly realised both in this country and at home, and the little table we print above should do something towards the formation of a strong opinion against irresponsible and meddlesome interference. Other side-issues, too, have to be considered. How, for instance, about the lacs of rupees the Indian cultivator now makes out of opium? How can our Government prevent the Native States from growing opium? What are they to do for their opium-eating races? To stop the Indian opium traffic would be just as easy or just as difficult as to stop the consumption of all wine, beer, spirits, &c., in England. However, the main point to be realised is this: the opium revenue yields 600 lacs of rupees, and if it should ever be abolished as a sop to philanthropic Radicalism, these 600 lacs of rupees will have to be raised in other directions.

The native papers are almost unanimous in disapproving Sir Joseph Pease's proposal for the suppression of the Indian opium trade. The Bombay Samachar says :—The meeting held at the Framjee Cowasjee Institute to protest against the opium trade consisted of Christian clergymen, Salvationists, and schoolboys. Prominent natives held themselves aloof from it. It is satisfactory that the Times of India has considered it necessary to raise its voice against the character and composition of the meeting. In view of the fact that medical opinion is divided as to the effects of opium on the human system, the argument put forward on a purely ethical basis has no value at all. The abuse of opium, like the abuse of anything else, does harm, no doubt; but if the Chinese are intemperate in its use, it is the duty of the Chinese Government to make suitable arrangements regulating and restricting the sale within proper bounds. It would be folly to attempt to meet the evil by prohibiting the growth of opium in India, and thus depriving the country, poor as it is, of a large source of its revenue.

The Rast Goftar says :—Sir Joseph Pease must himself have been surprised at the success of his motion for the suppression of the opium traffic in India. The House of Commons was caught napping. The victory does not represent the true sense of the House, and it is out of the question that any action would be taken on it. It would be monstrous to throw away Indian revenue to the tune of some six millions at the bidding of a few faddists. The country cannot recoup the loss without inflicting severe hardship upon the heavily weighted taxpayer. It would be a cruel wrong and injustice. We are glad to see that many of our contemporaries have taken a sensible view of the question, in spite of the so-called "mass meeting" presided over by the Lord Bishop of Bombay. A telegram of sympathy with Sir Joseph Pease's motion was sent to England, and we dare say it was made use of by the mover and his friends as a message conveying the Voice of India. The hollowness of the meeting and its pretensions to pass off as a representative gathering were exposed and turned into ridicule by the Times of India. But while he was indulging in this banter our contemporary could never have dreamt that the British House of Commons would take the good-intentioned, but most mischievous, proposal of Sir Joseph Pease any more seriously on the present occasion than it did in previous years.

THE AGE OF CONSENT ACT.

THE following Note regarding applying of the Age of Consent Act has been circulated by the Home Department of the Government of India to district officers in Bengal :—

The Governor-General in Council has no doubt that the Lieutenant-Governor will give such instructions to magistrates of districts in Bengal as will insure that the provisions of the Act are applied with due care and caution. The Government of India have full confidence in the discretion with which the experienced officers to whom alone jurisdiction to inquire and commit for trial is left by the law will carry out its provisions, and are convinced that no action will be taken except on really trustworthy information brought by responsible persons who may reasonably be presumed to have a knowledge of the facts they assert to have occurred, and that no mere suspicion will be held sufficient to set the law in motion. I am to invite attention to the provisions of section 202 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which allows a magistrate, when he sees reason to distrust the truth of a complaint made before him, to postpone the issue of process, and either inquire into the case himself or order a local investigation by some officer subordinate to him. The Act allows such an investigation to be made by a police-officer not lower in rank than an inspector. But the Government of India think it would be preferable, when an investigation has to be made in a case to which the Act applies, that it should be entrusted to some experienced native magistrate. The Governor-General in Council believes that this course would be more agreeable to the feelings of the people than that in so delicate a matter as this the inquiry should be conducted either by the magistrate of the district himself, if European, or by any officer of police. I am to suggest that commissioners of divisions should be specially instructed to watch the working of the Act, and to impress upon the district officers subordinate to them the necessity—while giving full effect to the intentions of the Government of India in enacting the law—of applying it with the utmost care and discrimination. It would be convenient if these officers were to submit a report after the Act has been in operation for a year, for the information of the local Government, showing whether any difficulties have attended its working, with the summary of the reports so submitted, and any remarks which his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor may think it necessary to make upon them.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, April 21.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on April 16, made no change in the rate of interest; the official minimum remaining unchanged at 4 per cent.

The Bank's statement for the week ending April 14 shows the following changes in figures :—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 32,77,075	Decrease
Do. at Branches	22,70,938	Increase
Other Deposits	22,67,539	Increase
Post Bills	47,957	Decrease
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	Rs. 10,51,443	Increase
Loans	6,15,313	Decrease
Accounts of Credits	10,39,532	Increase
Mercantile Bills	25,625	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	1,60,867	Decrease
Do. at Branches	3,54,622	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a falling-off of over 18⅛ lacs in the ordinary trade demand for money on the bank, represented by an increase of over 22⅜ lacs in "Other Deposits," together with a decrease of over 6⅛ lacs in "Loans" and ¼ of a lac in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of nearly ½ a lac in "Post Bills," coupled with an increase of over 10⅜ lacs in "Accounts of Credits." The Treasury Balance at head office stands reduced by 32¼ lacs, while there is an increase of nearly 22¾ lacs at the branches. The bank's investments were increased by over 10½ lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of about 1⅝ lacs in the cash at head office, while at the branches it is increased by over 3½ lacs, making the exact total 4,17,17,188 rs., equal to 51·5 per cent., against a proportion of 52·1 per cent. of last week.

JUTE.—The market has been utterly devoid of interest, only a few odd lots changing hands. For old jute the season is practically over, many balers having ceased working; the supplies of loose jute are dwindling, and are insufficient for the current demand, small though this is at present. Nothing fresh has transpired in new crop; it is said, however, that some of the recent sellers at 23 rs. are already repenting of their hardihood, and trying to buy back.

GUNNIES.—E Bags have been in demand for the country trade, and rates for early delivery show an advance of about 1/. C's also show some life for early. Other sorts are quiet, but prices remain steady. For export a small line of flour bags were taken for June, and there are further inquiries for forward.

HESSIANS are steady with a fair business doing in cotton packs and bran bags for July-September and cloth forward. Frisco wheat bags are inquired for forward, but no sales reported.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—The business of the week shows a falling-off, and a tone of quiet has pervaded the share market almost amounting to depression.

India generals continue steady at 92 rs. and 72 rs. for preference and ordinary shares respectively, but the actual amount of business done in this stock does not compare favourably with that reported during the week previous. Jute mill scrip is quiet, and rates are the turn easier. For investment some small lots of landing and shipping have changed hands at 93 rs. to 95 rs., but are still difficult to find. Damuda coals and Bengal paper mills, owing to the comparatively low prices at which they are quoted, are creeping into favour as affording the prospect of a fair return for the superabundant capital available.

In tea a small business only has been reported, principally in Longviews and Singells, both of which have advanced in price.

In gold, the largest transactions have been in Bengal gold and silver. The demand for this stock has been occasioned by rumours of a very favourable report about to be issued, which, it is said, will place this concern on a level with the two leading companies, Sonapet and Pat-Pat. Time will show, but the effect so far on quotations has not been very marked, the market having hardened only to the extent of about 1 a. Pat-Pats and Sonapets show unmistakable signs of easing. This is only from want of a sustained demand, and there is no doubt that a good buying order would immediately tend to recover lost ground.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 4 per cent.

BOMBAY, April 24.

There has been an active week, on the whole, in export business, for, though cotton remained dull for some days, a much better demand from the mills and exporters was afterwards felt, while in wheat and seeds, which have been coming to market very freely, large transactions have taken place at a material advance in rates. Exchange, following the downward movement in the governing metal, has been weak and declining, and though there has been some rally, in a firm market, from the lowest point touched, rates are still 3-16 to ¼d. lower than they were. Money is so abundant that the Bank of Bombay has reduced its rates by 1 per cent. Government paper has fluctuated, but closes 7-16 per cent. higher in Fours. Freights have been firm at higher rates, but the market is now weaker with relets offering at a decline from recent quotations. There has been a fair demand for imports on their leading lines, and a lower exchange has caused an upward tendency in rates.

MONEY.—An increase of under a lac in the cash balance against a decrease of 3 lacs at the close of the previous week, and making the balance stand at 267½ lacs, disclosed by the statement of affairs of the Bank of Bombay on April 18, left the position of money in the Presidency Bank virtually unchanged, as it was also in the open market, where accommodation was still obtainable on terms which are rather current in the slack period of trade than at the busiest export season of the year. The figures given in the return, however, showed more movement in the items which go to indicate the position of the trade demand than has been the case of late; and although there had been a sensible falling off in Bills Discounted, there had, on the other hand, been a considerable diminution in Private Deposits, say of some 26 lacs, and there was nearly 7 lacs more out in Loans, the net expansion of trade requirements having been represented by over 26 lacs, which, however, had been nearly counterbalanced by an increase in Government Deposits. The continued unusual ease in the market was further emphasised by the retention of the Presidency Bank's rates by 1 per cent. at the board meeting, so that the minimum stands at only 4 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Light weights of grey shirtings, mulls, and jaconets have been in moderately fair demand, and rates, under the influence of a falling Exchange, have shown an upward tendency. Wholesale buyers have evinced a disposition to operate more freely on the basis of current rates, but their offers have been declined by dealers. Supplies of grey goods are becoming reduced. In bleached goods short widths of nainsooks, mulls, jaconets, and shirtings are in good demand, and rates are steady. Dyed, printed, and Turkey-red goods seem to be in better inquiry at fully current rates. In local goods Zanzibar cloths are moving very freely; but other descriptions are neglected. The week's clearances from the bazaar have been some 4,000 packages of imported goods, and about 1,500 bales of local.

YARNS.—Only a small business has been passing again in imported twist in a quiet market, with prices quite unchanged.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done both in copper and yellow metal, and prices have advanced 4 annas per cwt., the tone of the market being steady. Iron has also been taken to a moderate extent on the basis of previous prices, and with a steady feeling.

COAL has been steady, not to say firm, and with every probability of a rise in prices on account of higher freights at home. Sales have been effected of a cargo of Davison's West Hartley on the way at 14 rs, and a cargo of Powell's Daffryn for May-June shipment at 15¼ rs. per ton, and some ready Powell's has changed hands at 16 rs. per ton. There are sellers of Powell's and Davison's for May-June shipment at 16 rs. and 15 rs. per ton respectively.

Exports.—Cotton closed dull last week, with hardly anythingdoing in either direction, and reopened on April 20 with the same feeling and no improvement in demand, while prices gave way to the extent of 1 r. to 3 rs. per candy. The market continued in the same state at the following day, but with rates unaltered, excepting for Bhownugger, which was 1 r. to 2 rs. lower; but on the following day, a much better inquiry was felt both from exporters and local spinners, which afterwards continued, and a considerable business was done on the basis of previous rates. The week's purchases for export have been about 5,500 bales, consisting chiefly of Dharwar, Bengals, Bhownugger, and Oomra descriptions; while the mills have taken some 8,000 bales, made up mainly of Oomra varieties, Dharwar, Dhollera kinds, and Broach. The market closes with rates, on the whole, 1 r. to 4 rs. below those which ruled a week ago.

The receipts of cotton of the present season's crop during the week have been 61,600 bales, compared with 75,400 bales arrived in the previous week, and with 93,800 bales to hand in the corresponding week last year, and the falling off in the figures, as against those for last season, has now increased to nearly 150,000 bales.

Wheat remained firm in tone to the close of last week, with a large business doing for export; and on April 20 the market became strong in presence of an active demand, while prices advanced 2 to 3 annas per cwt. A large business continued to be done thereafter, and prices moved up further daily, partially or all round, until the 23rd, when there was less doing, and rates gave way to the extent of half an anna per cwt., though the tone of the market was still firm. Arrivals of wheat since Jan. 1 are over 1½ million cwt. more than during the same time last year.

Seeds continued in moderate request on last mail day; but with the opening of the new week the feeling became strong, and a large business was done, while prices of rapeseed moved up 2 annas per cwt. Inquiry fell off on the following day; but linseed advanced a little, and thereafter transactions on a considerable scale were renewed, and both linseed and rapeseed advanced 2 annas per cwt., gingelly, however, being 8 annas per candy lower. On the 23rd a further rise of 2 annas per cwt., both in linseed and rapeseed, took place on a strong market.

Arrivals of linseed since the beginning of the year are over 1½ million cwt. in excess of the receipts last year for the same period.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. — Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. — Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. —See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

GENERAL NEWS.

BY the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to April 29; Madras, April 30; Bombay, May 2.

It is gratifying to learn that both the Surma Valley Light Horse and the Calcutta Pioneers are earning golden opinions with the Cachar column. That they would do well was certain, but it is something to hear that their services are appreciated.

General Henry Brackenbury arrived at Simla on April 30 and took his seat in the Viceroy's Council under the usual salute.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Mr. D. D. Shroff, the assistant manager of the Oriental Life Assurance Company, who is charged with embezzling and misappropriating about three lacs of rupees belonging to the association.

The forty-fourth meeting of the Executive Committee of the Bengal Branch of the Countess of Dufferin's Fund was held at Belvedere on the 21st ult., Lady Elliott presiding. There was a full attendance of members, and his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor was also present.

The report which we reproduced last week from an Indian paper regarding an outrage on a European young lady between Mokamah and Luckeserai by a subordinate official of the East Indian Railway is now stated to be wholly untrue.

During the month of February 160,867 bales, weighing 63,136,908 lbs. of cotton, valued at 1,49,11,446 rs., were shipped from the port of Bombay.

The passenger traffic on the North-Western Railway last week was much heavier than during the corresponding week of last year, and though the goods traffic, on the other hand, was somewhat less, the week's earnings of the two departments together show an improvement over last year of 37,000 rs.

We hear from Simla that Lieutenant Grant, 12th Burma Regiment, "the hero of Thobal," has been recommended by Sir Frederick Roberts for the Victoria Cross.

News from Kohat of warnings of an attack on that station on April 30 having been received, all troops there remained under arms, and the English ladies and children took refuge in the fort, where they remained till morning. Happily the alarm proved groundless, and confidence is now established.

A wing of the 4th Goorkhas, from Rawul Pindi and the Headquarters, and wing of the Manchester Regiment, from Sealkote, were ordered to Kohat to replenish the garrison.

Mr. Caine sends us, says the Englishman, a copy of his letter regarding the Dum Dum murder case which the Times declined to publish, and we can only say that it will not raise the writer's reputation. He now writes :—"There can be no doubt whatever (would to God there could be) on the part of anyone who knows as much of native opinion as I do that the impression is well-nigh universal that this miscarriage of justice was in some way or other procured by Government." Let Mr. Caine mention a single one of the Congress leaders who upholds this monstrous statement. All the rest of his long rigmarole is beside the question; what is wanted is an authority, and this Mr. Caine will find it extremely difficult to furnish.

The Rev. A. W. Hyde, writing from Kyelang early in April, reports that the winter has been unusually early and very severe. The snow has never melted, and is still lying on the ground to a depth of 4 feet, as much as that having fallen since the middle of March. According to the theory never yet controverted by the late meteorological reporter, Mr. Blanford, this condition of things does not look very promising for this year's monsoon up country, which is likely to be exceedingly late, as the character of the monsoon depends considerably on the amount of snow that falls in the inner and trans-Himalayan regions.

The squabble over the question of the sixth judgeship in the Madras High Court has, we (Pioneer) understand, ended in a victory for the Local Government, which has from the first—as was indeed natural considering the state of the Court's arrears—strongly urged the temporary reappointment of Mr. Justice Handley. With that regard for the appearance of economy without the reality which sometimes influences their decisions, the Secretary of State and the Government of India opposed this proposal; but the latter have now withdrawn their opposition—not before it had produced something like a revolt on the Madras Bench—and it is expected that the Secretary of State will now sanction the appointment.

WE understand that the Secretary of State for India in Council, taking into consideration the condition of the health of MR. ARTHUR CRAWFORD, C.M.G., late of the Bombay Civil Service, has granted that gentleman a compassionate allowance of 150*l.* per annum.

A DESPATCH has been received from the VICEROY nominating thirteen gentlemen to officially represent the various provinces of India at the forthcoming International Congress of Hygiene and Demography. The Bengal

Chamber of Commerce have appointed two and the Calcutta Trades Association three delegates. There is a general desire here that the Government of India, and, if possible, the Native Princes, should send home some native experts to take part in the deliberations of the Congress. Mr. G. W. Allen, C.I.E., has joined the Indian Committee. The authorities in Ceylon are being invited to nominate delegates.

Amongst the presentations to the Duke of Connaught at the last Levée were the following :—

Mr. St. Leger B. Aldworth, Burma Police, by the Earl of Bandon.

Mr. Thomas Lowndes Bullock, H.M. Consul Kewkiang, by H.M. Secretary of State.

Mr. Howard E. Bentley, Chief Magistrate, Johore, by the Secretary of State.

The Kumar Schri Chattra Sinpji of Rajpipla, by Secretary of State.

Mohamad Ahmad, by the Political A.D.C. to Secretary of State.

Mohammed Zahoor, by the Political A.D.C. to Secretary of State.

Abdul Majeed Khan, by the Political A.D.C. to Secretary of State.

Sultan Sayyid Saadat Hosain, by the Political A.D.C. to Secretary of State.

Sirdar Gurcharn Singh, barrister-at-law, son of Sirdar Basant Singh Sandhanwalia of Punjab, by Political A.D.C. to Secretary of State.

Mahmood Hasan, by Political A.D.C. to Secretary of State.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

The following telegrams are from the Times Calcutta correspondent :—

May 12.—A meeting of delegates from all the representative bodies in Calcutta was held to-day, and the following resolution, proposed by Mr. Mackay, president of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, and seconded by Raja Doorga Churnlaw, was passed unanimously :—"That a memorial addressed to his Excellency the Viceroy be drawn up, setting forth the dangers involved in any attempt to abandon the revenue now derived from the taxes levied on opium ; showing fully the unsustainable character of the agitation of which the motion of Sir J. W. Pease in the House of Commons is the latest outcome ; and deprecating interference by irresponsible English politicians with the fiscal policy of the internal administration of this country."

May 17.—The northern or native quarter of Calcutta was yesterday the scene of a riot which for the time threatened to be as serious as the recent disturbances at Benares. It appears to have originated thus :—A Hindoo gentleman named Dey lately purchased a piece of land near a new road which the municipality is now making. On taking possession he found on it a mud hut used as a mosque and erected without sanction. As the moulvie in charge refused to remove it, Mr. Dey obtained an order from the Civil Court directing its demolition within fifteen days. The time expired yesterday, and a large crowd of Mahomedans of low position, with a number of bad characters, assembled, armed with clubs. The Bengal police superintendent and a Mahomedan inspector went to the spot with thirty constables. They were attacked, and the former was severely, and the latterly dangerously wounded. The Commissioner of Police arrived soon after with some European constables, and tried to quiet the mob, assuring them that no attempt would be made to demolish the building. About 2,000 people were then collected, and all available police had to be called out, while a message was sent to Fort William asking for the aid of the military. Two companies of the Buffs were despatched at once, but before they reached the scene the police had succeeded in dispersing the rioters. Order was restored by the afternoon, and since then all has been quiet. Nearly a hundred men were arrested. Thirty rioters were injured, two dangerously. Of the police, an inspector and two constables were dangerously, and two superintendents severely, wounded, all by club wounds on the head. Several others were more or less hurt, including the Commissioner, who was struck with a brick. No injury was done to property. The police, who showed great pluck, eventually obtained the upper hand by sending a detachment to take the rioters in the rear.

Later.—One native constable and one rioter have died of injuries received in yesterday's disturbances. Several other men are in a critical state. There has been no recurrence of disorder. The Commissioner of Police deserves great credit for the admirable way in which he handled his men against disproportionate numbers, and restored order before the military arrived.

The Indian Government have lent the services of Captain Maguire, of the Hyderabad Contingent, for two years to organise the police force in British East Africa. He is now selecting fifty Sikhs from the Pioneer regiments, and thirty men of the Hyderabad Contingent to take with him.

A Reuter telegram from Benares (May 10) says :—"Fears are entertained that there may be disturbance here on the occasion of the Mahomedan Id, or Festival. The East Lancashire Regiment is confined to barracks, and the native guard and police have been reinforced. To-day has passed quietly, but the authorities have given orders that the precautions are to be in no way relaxed.

A Dalziel despatch of May 13 states that there has of late been an extraordinary revival in the Indian wheat trade. The arrivals from the interior to Calcutta amount to about 12,000 tons daily, while the arrivals at Bombay amount to 8,000 tons. Forty thousand tons of wheat are now waiting at the Calcutta Railway terminus for chartered steamers.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office for publication :—

"From Governor, Madras, May 15.

GUP.

SIMLA, which has as good a record in amateur dramatic work as any station in India, will in the autumn of this year try the experiment of playing "Midsummer Night's Dream" under the deodars. The enterprise is on behalf of Lady Roberts's Nursing Homes, and we already hear of careful preparation and sumptuous mounting. The intertwined love story of Hermia and Helena will, by judicious cutting, be relegated to the background, and the fairies and Athenian clowns, with their quips and cranks, songs and dances, will be the main attraction. The dresses are being designed by an artist of note, and the light effects, in which electricity will play an important part, are to be a special feature. Independently of the benefit to be reaped by a worthy charity, the experiment, says an Indian paper, will be watched with interest by the rest of India, and should it prove the success that its promoters anticipate, we may expect to see pastoral plays taking a permanent position among our amusements.

The first Gymkhana of the season was held at Simla on April 25. Notwithstanding the paucity of military sportsmen and the dulness of the station, the Gymkhana was a decided success. Great credit is due to Captain Pakenham, honorary secretary. The course at Annandale is now in splendid order, and there were good fields, which is most promising for future Gymkhanas. There was a large attendance, mainly due to the fact that the Viceregal Staff with their usual hospitality gave a large picnic in the "Glen," which was honoured by the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne.

The first Gymkhana of what promises to be a gay, though rather short, season, was held on the racecourse at Mahableshwur on April 27. We cannot, says the correspondent of the Times of India, enumerate those who assembled as spectators, as all Mahableshwur was there. The part of the ground set apart as a Grand Stand is now a great success—the tank has been terraced, and everyone can see the races, while at the back the refreshment tents are pitched under the trees; the only fault in the management, which was very noticeable, was the amount of dust that rose from the course. Water is scarce, but next time we hope to see this rectified. The events, though few, were very amusing, and were got through with great punctuality. Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris arrived before the appointed time, and a start was made punctually at 5 P.M. In the Tent-Pegging Competition his Excellency and Colonel Rhodes were decidedly the best, and they showed better style than the others. In one or two cases the style was spoiled by competitors trying to combine a horse and a pony in the same half-section. The Record Stakes fell rather flat on account of the scarcity of competitors. It is one of the hardest events, and certainly deserves a more valuable prize than most events. Captains Minchin and Jervis made it as near "a Record" as possible. A large field turned out for the Thread-Needle Race. Being unruly while under the starter's flag, they got away to a very straggling start. The ladies apparently were all adepts at the art of threading their needles. Miss Prendergast and Miss Croft sent their nominations away slightly in advance of the others. Unfortunately, Miss Croft's nomination (Dr. Croly) went the wrong side of a flag, and though first past the post was disqualified, Miss Prendergast's (Captain Cox) getting the race. The Skittle Lloyd-Lindsay Competition produced five teams. The winners showed good style. Captains Jervis and Fowle thought they had too much time in hand, and lost the event by going too slow at the last fence. The Saturday to Monday Stakes was certainly the most amusing. The nightshirts and caps were all works of art, and as the operation of clothing took place at the Grand Stand, the spectators had the full benefit of seeing the difficulty of the operation. Getting into a fine silk nightshirt, and holding a pony at the same time which objects to the operation, is no easy matter. Roars of laughter testified to the popularity of this event.

With regard to the interesting controversy about Assyrian relics in Bombay, begun by the timely paper read by Mr. Karkaria before the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society on April 13, we (Bombay Gazette) hear that this gentleman has succeeded in the main object of ascertaining how the Society came to possess this valuable archæological treasure. It will be remembered that Mr. Karkaria started two hypotheses. He was not certain at first whether these relics belonged to the Layard collection, exhibited in Bombay while on its way to Europe, and part of which was found to have been missing, or were the gifts of Major (now Sir Henry) Rawlinson to Governor Clerk. By further researches he has, however, succeeded in substantiating his second hypothesis. The Assyrian relics now in the possession of the society are, he maintains, the present of Major Rawlinson to Governor Clerk. With one or two doubtful exceptions all the slabs are proved to be perfectly identical in every way with these. Mr. Karkaria has addressed a letter to the Hon. Mr. Javerilal U. Yajnik, secretary of the society, in which he has elaborately identified the society's slabs with the Rawlinson-Clerk present. Copies of all the cuneiform inscriptions on the slabs are to be sent to Dr. Strassmaier, of the Order of Jesus, who is one of the very few Assyriologists of European reputation.

Referring to Lord Harris's bag, "H. W. W." writes to the Bombay Gazette :—

"In your yesterday's issue, in discussing the excellent bag made last week by H.E. Lord Harris and party in the South Mahratta country, you express a desire to know whether the record of six tigers in one day has ever been broken or equalled. Having accompanied the shooting party of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in the Kumaon and Nepaul Terai in the early part of 1875 as a correspondent, and personally witnessed each day's sport, I am in a position to state that on the first day, after crossing the river Sarda, into Nepaulese territory, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in a big beat that was arranged, brought down six tigers to his own rifle. When you consider that this shooting was made from a howdah, and that the elephants had to work through the densest of jungle grass, in which it was impossible to see the tiger till he was almost breaking through the line, I think the exploit I have narrated above is one of which his Royal Highness might well be proud as a top score among s hikaris."

The biggest bag to date for the season, and probably the bag of the year, has, we are informed, been made by Major Durand, our Resident in Nepaul, who has had a party out in the Nepaul Terai to the north of Goruckpore. During the shoot which concluded recently, no less than twenty-two tigers were padded, the return just falling short of the record of twenty-three made by the Orleans Princes, the Duke of Montrose, and Mr. Gwatkin Williams in the Nepaul jungles to the north of Purneah three years back, the previous record of twenty-one having been obtained by the ill-fated Lord Mayo's party when out with the late Mr. Joe Shillingford and one of his brothers in the same line of country.

Seeing that Lieutenant Grant's men were mostly Punjabis, the Lahore paper would like to see a public meeting held at the capital of the province, at which all classes could be represented, to devise some means for recognising the credit which, under the leading of a Madras officer, this handful of brave fellows have brought to their country. We hope that the leaders of native society will not let the opportunity slip.

According to the Madras Times, visitors to the General Market in the early morning may see the carcases of six sheep carried at one time by a woman. Men content themselves with one or two, as a rule, but the loads of the women tell a tale about the kind of sheep that are slain to provide "mutton" for consumption by the residents of this city.

The news has, of course, been discounted, but, says the Times of India, we are glad nevertheless to see in a formal Gazette the appointment of Surgeon-Major Arnott as physician of the European General Hospital, vice Brigade-Surgeon Hojel, retired. The appointment is certain to be popular.

Mr. A. W. Crawley-Boevey, C.S., collector of Dharwar, has been allowed privilege leave of absence for three months.

Colonel W. H. Wilton, Superintendent of Police, Nellore, arrived in Madras on the 25th ult., and took up his duties on Saturday last as Assistant Inspector-General of Police from Mr. J. Meredith, who proceeds shortly on furlough.

A correspondent writes to an Indian paper:—A better selection could not have been made by the Government of India than the appointment of Mr. James Craig, M.I.C.E., executive engineer, first grade, to officiate as superintending engineer and Public Works Department Secretary to the Governor-General's Agent in Central India, in the room of Col. G. F. L. Marshall, R.E. The Hyderabad local administration has lost a most valuable and energetic official. Central India is to be congratulated on getting an engineer of rare abilities. His connection with the Hyderabad Public Works Department since July 1866, and the many reforms established during that period have received commendation, especially in connection with the scheme of the cavalry barrack at North Trimulgherry, and other important works. As Executive Engineer of the East Berar Division (Amraoti), he was known for the strict and impartial discharge of his multifarious duties. Mr. Craig is never happy unless he has lots to do. The Central Indian Agency, having eight P. W. D. divisions to work, will find the new Superintending Engineer here, there, and everywhere. The work is not new to Mr. Craig, as he officiated as Superintending Engineer and Secretary to the Resident in the P. W. D. some time ago.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The death has been reported of General Sir Edward Green, K.C.B., formerly of the Bombay Staff Corps, who was put on the Retired List in 1880, having been last actually employed in 1854. The gallant general joined the Army in 1827, and took part in the Afghan war of 1841-42, and in 1843, was in the Sind campaign, acting as assistant adjutant-general of the forces at the defence of the Hyderabad Residency and the battle of Hyderabad. Having served against the hill tribes in Cutchee in 1844 and 1845, in 1848 he was again on the staff in the Punjaub war, being at the storming and capture of Mooltan and the battle of Goojerat. Sir Edward Green died at Cowley, Middlesex, on May 9, in his eighty-first year.

The death has just occurred at Ardmore, county Dublin, of Captain the Hon. Kenelm St. Lawrence, son of the third earl of Howth, by his second wife, Countess Henrietta Digby, and heir presumptive to the earldom. Captain St. Lawrence formerly held a commission in the 5th Dragoon Guards, and served in the Egyptian campaign of 1882, for which he held a medal, with clasp, and the bronze star. Death resulted from typhoid fever.

A correspondent writes as follows:—"Colonel J. G. C. Fraser, late of the Madras Fusiliers, who died at Edinburgh on the 4th inst., as announced in the Scotsman last week, was one of that heroic force which, under Havelock, fought its way from Cawnpore to Lucknow to relieve the beleaguered garrison of the Residency. Those who can recall the events, or those who have since read the history of the Indian Mutiny, may probably remember that, as soon as Colonel Neill with his regiment, the Madras Fusiliers, reached Cawnpore, Havelock determined to attempt the relief of Lucknow, leaving Neill with about 200 men, mostly sick and wounded, to hold Cawnpore. Havelock's first advance was made with an inadequate force, consisting of the 78th Highlanders, the Madras Fusiliers, and some detachments from other British regiments. After fighting two battles, he found himself unable to place in line more than 859 men, and he had to return to Cawnpore with his sick and wounded. Being reinforced to a total of 1,400 men and a number of guns, he, a week afterwards, renewed his advance into Oude. After another battle with the mutineers, his force was reduced by cholera and fever to less than 900. With this number he saw that it would be impossible to force his way through the host of mutineers to his front, and he reluctantly decided to return to Cawnpore, fighting another successful battle before he did so. At last a force of 3,179 men, including artillery and volunteer horse, was collected at Cawnpore and advanced on Lucknow. Till its arrival there, about ten days afterwards, there was almost incessant fighting. In all Havelock's advances and in the actions fought under that general, Fraser, then a captain, was present and bore an active and distinguished part. In those days of hard fighting there were no "specials" present to blazon the deeds of individuals, and Fraser was the last man to blazon his own; but, in truth, every officer and man in Havelock's brigade was a hero. Colonel Malleson, the latest historian of the Indian Mutiny, thus alludes to that force:—"There remained to Outram, to Havelock, and to their gallant comrades the inspiring conviction that by great daring they had accomplished a feat unsurpassed in the history of war." At Lucknow, Fraser was dangerously wounded by a bullet through the neck. His life was despaired of, and he lay in the temporary camp hospital of the Residency until the relief of the garrison by Lord Clyde, when, with no little difficulty, the wounded were removed to Calcutta. Neill wrote of him:—"Captain Fraser is an officer in whom I have the utmost confidence in any emergency." After the relief of Lucknow he received a brevet majority and a pension for his wound, but there can be little doubt that, had either Neill or Havelock survived, Fraser would have received further recognition for the gallantry he had displayed on many occasions, on some of them when he held detached command. He was a modest, unassuming man, a gallant soldier, and a steadfast friend."

The Rana of Koti, who has been in weak health for a year past, died on April 30.

Captain Bragg, D.A.Q.M.G., who was with General Wolseley's force in Wuntho, has died of sunstoke at Endawgyi.

Lieutenant Nicholson, of the Cornwall Infantry, has died of sunstroke between Endawgyi and Mansi, and also Private Miller of the same regiment.

Mr. George Henry Barnard, assistant commissioner in Burma, says the Times of India, died on April 25 at Katha.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Raghunath N. Khote, C.I.E., which took place on April 25. Prominent among his fellow-citizens the deceased gentleman was well known in Bombay for his mild and temperate conduct in public affairs. He was successively appointed to the office of Sheriff and Chairman of the Municipality in 1883, and filled both of those offices with great credit. Mr. Khote was the builder of his own fortunes, having risen by dint of perseverance and study from an obscure position in life. He was a warm advocate of Life Assurance among the native community, and was a director of the Oriental Life Association for many years, only recently resigning on account of failing health. His circle of friends, both European and native, was very large, in which he was greatly respected. He had attained the age of seventy years, a great portion of which was spent in the hurry-scurry of active public life. He was, nevertheless, unremitting in his attention to his duties until sickness compelled him to relinquish them, and his death is regretted as the loss of a clear-headed public man who devoted much time and energy to the interests of the city of Bombay.

The Baptist Zenana Mission, Calcutta, has just sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. Sanders, its eldest missionary, who died at the advanced age of seventy-six. She was the first lady engaged in that mission, when it was started by Mrs. C. B. Lewis nearly a quarter of a century ago.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

The following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

Calcutta, May 11.—The Regent of Manipore was captured on the 8th by Major Maxwell. He had been hard pressed by Lieutenant Clay's party. Anja Parel, one of the Regent's Ministers, has also been captured.

Messengers have been sent to the Upper Chindwin Valley to inform the people of the rewards which have been offered, and it is hoped that this may procure the arrest of more of the fugitives. The pursuers found evidence of the haste of the flight of the Manipori chiefs in the quantity of arms abandoned in the jungle.

Cholera among the troops is decreasing. The people are said to be returning to their homes, and carrying on their occupations as if nothing had occurred.

Lieutenant Grant has recovered from his wound. Lieutenant Cox is doing well.—Times Correspondent.

Kairong, May 13.—The Tekema Nagas to-day gave up the heads of Messrs. Melville and O'Brien, the telegraph officials who were murdered by the Maniporis on March 25. Mr. Melville, who at first was only wounded, succeeded in escaping to Nullah, where he was discovered at noon on the following day in a state of great exhaustion. He was then savagely murdered, his head and hands being cut off. Mr. O'Brien received a shot through the chest during the first attack, and died in his bungalow shortly afterwards.—Reuter.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office:—

"From Viceroy, May 14, 1891.

"Manipore.—A later telegram from Gurdon, dated 11th inst., is to the following effect:—Grimwood, when consulted by Gurdon at Manipore on the 15th, was against removal of Senaputty. At this stage nothing was said about arrest in durbar. Gurdon reported Grimwood's view to Quinton on rejoining him, and Quinton was, therefore, fully aware of Grimwood's opinion when he sent his telegram of 18th to Government of India. Decision to effect arrest in durbar seems to have been formed on 21st, on which day a council was held between Quinton, Skene, and Grimwood at Sengmai. Gurdon knew nothing of this intention until after council. He says:—'From Grimwood's manner it appeared that Grimwood was against arrest of Senaputty at durbar.' Gurdon also says:—'Grimwood was entirely against policy and method of carrying it out. Grimwood never told us extent of opposition likely, or we would never have attacked.' With regard to this point I would observe that Grimwood foretold certainty of personal resistance on part of Sena-putty, and further that Captain Butcher and Lieutenant Lugard both report having seen a large number of Maniporis entering the palace enclosure on afternoon of 23rd. Butcher's words are:—'At 1 P.M. a continuous stream of able-bodied Maniporis was observed pouring into the palace enclosure by all the roads from the country round, and none came out, save a few carrying boxes, and women and children. Gates were closed and men were seen manning the walls.' Lugard's words are:—'Grimwood and Simpson visited the palace in the afternoon of the 23rd, returning to the Residency at 4.30 P.M. Simpson told me he saw in the palace ammunition being served out to Manipori sepoys. I saw Maniporis in large numbers passing into the palace enclosure.'"

CALCUTTA, May 15.—The trial of the men charged with complicity in the murder of Mr. Quinton and his companions is proceeding. The evidence so far indicates that Mr. Quinton, Colonel Skene, Lieutenant Simpson, and Mr. Cossins were beheaded by the public executioner acting under orders. Mr. Grimwood was speared by a soldier.

The political officer has convicted Miranjan Subahdar, a Hindostanee ex-Sepoy of the 34th Native Infantry, and one Mir, a Manipori major, of being leaders in the revolt.

A quantity of property plundered from the Residency has been brought in.—Times Correspondent.

CALCUTTA, May 17.—The papers on the Manipore affair were published in yesterday's Gazette. The salient points appear to be these—first, that the Government and Mr. Quinton did not accept Mr. Grimwood's view of the situation, but considered the deportation of the Senaputty essential; secondly, that no one, from the Government downwards, seems to have anticipated serious resistance; and thirdly, that the plan of effecting the arrest at the durbar appears to have originated with Mr. Quinton. A sharp controversy as to whether an arrest under such circumstances was justifiable has been going on in the local press, and there are not wanting advocates of the opinion, apparently held by the Government, that the course proposed was in accordance with Indian customs and precedents. A durbar, they maintain, is a State function altogether different in nature from a private entertainment, and there is no impropriety in summoning State officers to attend to hear sentence passed and have it carried into effect. But the great majority of the public are not disposed to accept these arguments. Such a step is looked upon as inconsistent with British policy and character, and the general verdict will probably be that it was a most lamentable mistake.

A military Court of Inquiry is now sitting at Manipore, and will make a confidential report in due course to the Commander-in-Chief. The report will probably throw light on several points which are still mysterious. For instance, it is now stated that at 5 o'clock Colonel Skene informed Mr. Quinton that the Residency was no longer tenable, and the troops must withdraw; but no explanation has yet been given why this was not done, and it is still far from clear who suggested the fatal mistake of opening negotiations, and why all the senior officers left the Residency with Mr. Quinton.—Times Correspondent.

CALCUTTA, May 17.—Cholera continues at Manipore. Lieutenant E. A. Stevenson, of the 18th Bengal Infantry, and Sergeant Laidlaw have died of the disease.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, May 18.—A detachment of pioneers of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles has returned from Manipore, being received with much enthusiasm. The men have undergone an unusual amount of fatigue and hardship.

We select the following fuller details from the Indian papers of news partly anticipated by telegraph:—

THE PIONEER NARRATIVE.

In continuation of his account of events (given last week) the Pioneer correspondent writes from Kohima:—The idea now is that the Regent and Senaputty thought Mr. Quinton was coming to arrest one or other of them, and was bringing the ex-Raja with him in order that he might be replaced on the throne. They were determined not to allow of this being done, and therefore gathered all the available troops in Manipore and called up the reserves. Also the day before Mr. Quinton reached Sengmai the bridge near that place was burned. The Senaputty is credited with having ordered this to be done. He may either have intended offering opposition at this point, or have laid plans for hampering the retirement of our troops in case of fighting about the palace.

When it became known that the ex-Raja was not with Mr. Quinton, the suspicion in the mind of the Regent and Senaputty must have passed away for the time being, though it seems only too probable that they learned in some way what the exact decision of the Government of India was. How they came by this knowledge is a mystery, as the greatest secrecy was maintained by Mr. Quinton regarding his mission. Another point which deserves further notice is that no one in the party, from the Chief Commissioner downwards, seems to have realised even up to the night of March 23 the danger that threatened in case force was resorted to for the arrest of the Senaputty. This is the more extraordinary as that night picquets were placed about the Residency, a military precaution which Colonel Skene would not have taken had he not had some cause for so unusual a step. It was patent to all that the palace was swarming with armed men, and on the 22nd the strength of the Manipori army had been seen, as the streets were lined with troops; but, as I had before said, the idea of opposition did not apparently occur to any one in the Residency. The very fact that the Regent's band played during dinner on the night of the 23rd must have seemed to point to friendly relations being still maintained, even though the Senaputty had persistently refused to attend the durbar when summoned thereto. Moreover, had there been any reason to suppose then that the struggle for mastery would take place on the morrow, an experienced officer like Colonel Skene would have made his preparations for really serious fighting beforehand. If the offensive had to be assumed, he would have planned the storming of the palace. If defensive measures had to be taken he would assuredly not have elected to hold the Residency, which is quite an untenable position, considering that artillery could be brought to bear upon it and that its walls and compound were too extensive to be held by a few hundred men. Whatever Colonel Skene may have thought when he ordered picquets to be posted on the night of the 23rd, he certainly did not anticipate anything more than a passing scuffle early next morning, when Captain Butcher and Lieutenant Brackenbury should go with a hundred sepoys to arrest the Senaputty in his own house within the palace enclosure. Mr. Quinton intended, once the man was in his hands, to march straight away to Sengmai and on to Kohima, leaving the Regent installed as Raja, but without his half brother, who had really placed him on the throne. The coup failed, owing to the Senaputty having taken steps to defend himself, and the Regent having probably neither power nor inclination to coerce him into submitting to the sentence of deportation.

As to the after-events, speaking to one who knows Manipore and its intrigues thoroughly, I have been told that it is most improbable that any personal violence was intended at first towards Mr. Quinton and the officers with him, but that when the Maniporis saw the Goorkhas retire, after fighting all day, from the palace to the Residency, they may have, in their excitement, come to the conclusion that the destruction of the whole party was possible. It may be urged, on behalf of the Manipori leaders, that the mob of Kuki mercenaries and ordinary State Sepoys got out of hand and slaughtered the five officers when negotiations in the palace came to nought; but if this frenzy prevailed, how can the action of these same men be accounted for a few hours later, when they spared such Goorkhas as they found remaining in the Residency?

THE FIGHT NEAR PULLEL.

The Times of India correspondent, writing from Manipore (April 27), gives this account of the smart little action sixteen miles out from the capital:—The Kohima, Cachar, and Tammoo columns all arrived here to-day. Colonel Rennick's advance guard came in at 7 A.M. The fort and palace were found deserted, and had evidently been gutted by the Maniporis after the Maharaja's flight. Everything lay about as if the departure had been very hurried. The Maharaja left Manipore about 6 P.M. on the 26th instant with the Senaputty and his two brothers, and is reported to have fled north-eastwards.

The Kohima and Cachar columns met with no resistance after entering the valley, but General Graham's Tammoo column had a smart fight on the 25th inst., sixteen miles from here. General Graham received news on the 24th that the enemy held a position barring his progress, and ordered a reconnaisance from Pullel. Captain Drury, 4th Goorkhas, who commanded the reconnaisance, sent word to say he had hemmed in a large number of Maniporis, and waited orders. General Graham then ordered up two guns of No. 2 Mountain Battery, and 200 rifles of the 4th Goorkhas as reinforcements. The battery opened fire at 1,000 yards, while Captain Drury and Captain Carnegy advanced from both north and south, and finally rushed the position, and a hand-to-hand fight ensued. Nearly all the enemy were killed, those escaping being killed by the Mounted Infantry. One hundred and twenty-eight bodies were counted, besides those killed by the Mounted Infantry. Both the enemy's leaders were killed.

Our casualties were as follows:—Severely wounded:—Captain Drury in the hand and Captain Carnegy in the leg, and Lieutenant Cox in the shoulder with a Martini-Henry bullet, while in pursuit with the Mounted Infantry, and Lieutenant Grant, of Thobal fame, in the neck. All are doing well. Jemedar Kiruram and one sepoy of the 4th Goorkhas were killed, and Subedar-Major Kulputty Gurang, 4th Goorkhas, Jemedar Birtial Nagarkaty, 43rd Goorkhas, one of the late Manipori escort, only a havildar and one naik and two sepoys of the 4th Goorkhas were wounded, and two sepoys of the 12th Burma Regiment were also wounded. During the fight Captain Drury was attacked by five men and wounded; Captain Carnegy went to his assistance, and was himself wounded, when the old Subedar-Major of the 4th Goorkhas rushed in and was in his turn disabled. Lieutenant Grant was wounded while leading his 12th Burma Regiment in the attack.

The country immediately round Imphal is temporarily deserted. General Collett's headquarters are in the Maharaja's palace, and the other columns are also quartered in the fort, which has ample space. All surplus troops begin returning almost immediately to India.

The heads of the murdered officers and others were found in the enclosure outside the Raja's palace, and will be properly interred at once. Fourteen guns were found in the arsenal, and many loose elephants are being captured by us.

THROUGH THE LANNATOL DEFILE.

Colonel Rennick, commanding the Cachar column, telegraphs that he occupied the village of Naraingaon on the 23rd, after forcing his way through the Lannatol defile with 270 of the 43rd Goorkhas, 19 of the 18th Bengal Infantry, 90 of the 42nd Goorkhas, 100 of the 44th Goorkhas, 120 of the Surma Valley Police, and two guns No. 8 Mountain Battery. The guns were brought into action at 9 A.M., when the enemy opened fire from their first stockade, which they abandoned. The moment Captain Cowley with the 43rd Goorkhas crowned the heights, the column was engaged from this point up to 3 P.M., turning positions and clearing away barricades formed of felled trees, extending for over half a mile. Meanwhile Captain Butcher and Lieutenants Williams and Cole, with their Goorkhas, executed a turning movement by the left of Hangai, a precipitous and rocky stronghold thoroughly commanding the road, and held by the enemy, who were 200 strong. The movement was so successfully carried out that the enemy precipitately evacuated their position for fear of having their retreat cut off. A few volleys were fired at them, and their commander was wounded and made prisoner. Captain Boileau and Captain Dun were in actual command of the operations. Colonel Rennick occupied Bishenpore on the 24th, and marched into Manipore on the 27th, a little more than an hour before General Collett entered the town, the advance guard of the Tammoo column approaching the town from the south. At the same time the palace and magazine were found to have been destroyed. The Regent and the Senaputty had fled, and the town was deserted. The Silchar column is already under orders to return to India.

THE OCCUPATION OF THE CAPITAL.

The Pioneer correspondent writes:—As the Kohima column was ascending the hill and only five miles distant from Manipore, General Collett received a letter from the Regent which stated that as he saw troops were advancing from Kohima, Cachar, and Tammoo in greater strength than he could think of resisting he had left his capital, fearing to remain and surrender there; but he would be glad to come to terms about himself. He was sorry that the friendship with the British Government which had lasted for so many years, had been broken; and he would be glad to see it restored He had released the prisoners, and sent them towards Cachar, but they had chosen to return, and he had given orders that they should go to Kohima. After reading the letter General Collett continued his advance amid heavy rain, which lasted for some hours. Two miles from the capital the General was met by Col. Mitchell, who reported that Col. Rennick's force had occupied Manipore without opposition at 7 A.M. At 10 A.M. all the three columns had united in the palace enclosure, and the troops forthwith went into quarters.

It appears that on the 26th the Regent, the Senaputty, Angaon Senba, and Jelangumba, master of the elephants, determined to take to flight, choosing Chassard, six marches eastward, as their place of refuge. They left at 9·30 P.M., having fired the magazine and the Raja's palace. Before starting they placed the four mountain guns and six other pieces of artillery in the magazine along with shells, cartridges, boxes of percussion caps, small arms, and munitions of war generally. These were destroyed, and the Raja's palace adjoining the magazine was reduced to ashes. The four chief offenders, with about two hundred followers, ponies, and a few elephants, then left Manipore. The Tongal General, who was a member of the durbar and a very old man, is said to be in a village only a few miles from Manipore. The State sepoys have gone to their villages, taking their arms with them; while the townspeople have fled to the neighbouring bustees. Search parties will be sent out to collect arms and make such arrests as are possible. On the information obtained immediately after the occupation, it was ascertained that the heads of a number of officers had been buried in the Nungoiti, a small walled enclosure at the entrance to the Raja's palace. The ground was examined, and four heads were exhumed; one of these is supposed to be that of Mr. Quinton, as the shikar hat which he used to wear was with it. The bodies are reported to have all been thrown into one grave, about half a mile outside the palace ground.

MANIPORI ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER.

The Maniporis give the following account of the murder of Mr. Quinton and his companions. They say that on the night of March 24, when the Chief Commissioner and those with him entered the palace enclosure, they were, after some time spent in negotiations, taken to the durbar-hall near the magazine. There was a dense crowd of armed men blocking the roads within the palace enclosure and swarming in and about the durbar hall. They were, it would seem, bent on killing the officers from the first; but it is difficult to say when their excitement and thirst for blood reached its climax. The negotiations in any case came to naught, and the party left the durbar hall, Mr. Grimwood being the last to leave, and as he was descending the steps he was stabbed with a spear in the back. He fell forward and was then dragged for some fifty yards, and thrown down in front of two masonry dragons, where he was beheaded. This was a signal for the general attack upon the other officers. The Senaputty is said to have indicated by a nod of his head to his immediate followers that the massacre might take place, and then retired with the Regent. Lieutenant Simpson, Mr. Cossins, and a bugler were killed close to the durbar hall. Mr. Quinton and Colonel Skene were dragged to the spot where Mr. Grimwood had already been killed, and were then decapitated.

THE RESIDENCY

has been levelled to the ground; and the very trees at the foot of the steps having been rooted up, the mud walls which guarded the compound have been thrown down, and Major Trotter's grave has been desecrated and bodies cast into it. The Residency could not have possibly been in a worse place for offensive or defensive purposes. The palace, surrounded by a moat filled with water and with bastions for artillery, was only a hundred and fifty yards distant. Guns were placed so as to sweep the approaches to the palace, and render any attack thereon unsuccessful.

Major Maxwell has assumed the political charge, under General Collett, who is invested with full powers.

The following troops remain in garrison at Manipore until further orders:—1st batt. 2nd Goorkhas, 42nd, 43rd, and 44th Goorkhas, and No. 8 Mountain Battery. The Surma Valley Light Horse left for Cachar on the 28th; the 18th Bengal Inf. and the military police, under Lieutenant Cole, with the Calcutta Volunteers, left for Silchar the next day. One hundred and seventy-five of the military police, under Captain Macintyre, and one hundred of the 13th Punjab Inf. returned to Kohima. Five posts between Manipore and Kohima will be garrisoned by a hundred and seventeen men of the 42nd Goorkhas.

PURSUIT OF THE FUGITIVES.

A later telegram to the Pioneer says:—A detachment of ninety mounted infantry of the King's Royal Rifles and the 12th Burma Infantry, under Lieuts. Dewar and Eustace, have started in pursuit of the Regent and his followers, who, it is believed, are making for the Naga country to the north-east of Manipore. They will push on with all speed into Tankhili, through which the fugitives must pass en route to Chassad.

THE REMAINS AND THE FUNERAL.

A committee, consisting of Colonel Mitchell, Major Maxwell, Captain Boileau, and Dr. Calvert, examined the spot in the Residency compound, where the bodies of Mr. Quinton and the five officers were reported to be buried. Nine bodies were exhumed, two being in the Residency compound and seven just outside, near the north-west corner of the polo ground. Four Goorkhas had been buried with the British officers. On Thursday the funeral service was read by General Collett over the grave which holds the remains of the officers murdered at Manipore. The ceremony was attended by all the officers of the force who were able to be present. The King's Royal Rifles furnished the firing party, and fired three volleys over the graves. Eleven minute guns were fired by No. 2 Mountain Battery, while the cortège was proceeding to the graves. The following was the order of the cortège:—Firing party and band of the King's Royal Rifles; chief mourners—Major Grimwood, General Collett and staff; General Graham and staff, and officers 42nd, 43rd, and 44th Goorkhas, other British officers in the force in fours. The streets from the gate of the inner palace enclosure to the site of the Residency quarter guard was lined by troops of the 42nd, 43rd, and 44th Goorkhas.

Lieutenant Grant is progressing rapidly, though the wound in his neck was a severe one. The Tammoo column will leave for Burma in three detachments on April 30 and May 1 and 2. A committee, consisting of Colonel Evans, Major Travers, and Captain Birch has been appointed to inquire into the circumstances connected with the recent events in Manipore. A proclamation enforcing disarmament will shortly be issued, a detachment of troops being sent out to seize arms. Every effort is being made by General Collett to restore confidence among the townspeople and villagers near in order to induce them to return to their homes, but they are at present terror-stricken. It is now stated that the rabble from the town burst into the palace after the Regent and Senaputty had fled and looted the whole place. It was these plunderers who fired the Arsenal, and the flames spread to the Raja's state apartments.

ANTIQUARIAN RESEARCHES!

Strict instructions were issued by the Government of India that every effort should be made by the troops to preserve anything of literary or antiquarian value that might be found in Manipore, for it was supposed that in the "city of jewels" there existed a valuable ancient literature. In this connection a temple within the palace walls, which has escaped the conflagration that followed the flight of the Regent, has been found to contain apparently a large library, which will be opened hereafter.

THE MILITARY TRANSPORTS.

The Manipore Expedition, says the Allahabad paper, discloses the wretchedness of our military transport, as mules had to be brought all the way from Madras and Poona before the Kohima column could move, and wheel transport had to be obtained from wherever possible. The planters were largely indented upon and are now feeling the want of the carts they supplied. Had the rain lasted for a week instead of three days and extended inland, the road from Shikarighat to Kohima would have been in many places not better than a swamp. From Nichuguard to Kohima the transport is by cooly labour, to which the Nagas are much averse. The influence of Mr. Davis, the deputy commissioner of Kohima, stimulated by the liberal payment of two annas per maund per mile, has obtained for the transport many coolies. It is considered the column is a sufficient number, for it is just possible that not a shot may be fired, which will be disappointing to the Goorkhas who are burning to wipe off the disgrace which attaches to their defeat by the Maniporis at the attack on the Residency.

MAHOMEDAN SYMPATHY.

Nawab Abdool Lateef Bahadore, on behalf of the Mahomedan Literary Society, has addressed a letter to the private secretary to the Viceroy, expressing the horror and indignation of the Mahomedans at the disastrous catastrophe which has taken place at Manipore. They consider that the authors of this inhuman and treacherous act deserve the most condign punishment. Although a number of most valuable lives have been lost, the Committee trust that good will come out of evil, and that the Government of India will adopt measures for controlling the barbarous tribes, and for permanently completing the defence of the frontier. The private secretary, in acknowledging this letter, writes:—I am desired by the Viceroy to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th inst., conveying to his Excellency the sentiments of the Committee of the Mahomedan Literary Society of Calcutta on the recent events in Manipore, and to say that Lord Lansdowne has perused it with satisfaction.

SUGGESTED TREACHERY AT THE RESIDENCY.

"Video" writes to the Englishman:—There seems to be a pretty widely-spread impression abroad, based, no doubt, on some supporting rumour or rumours, that Bengali clerks or Bengali officials of some kind have been the cowardly "ball-makers" in this treacherous affair at Manipore; and the impression is very much strengthened by Mr. Williams' statement that "the Bengali Baboos and clerical staff of the Residency and Chief Commissioner and Government Offices were not in gaol, but were well treated and allowed every comfort." Would it not be as well for the Government to go into this affair when things are again settled, and see how much ground there is for the impression?

LORD RIPON ON MANIPORE.

In a speech at Eccles on May 14 Lord Ripon made reference to the Manipore disaster in these terms:—

He wanted to say a word about certain occurrences which had been taking place in India, a country in which he must always have a very deep interest. They had heard of the sad events which had taken place in Manipore, a native State inhabited by tribes much less advanced than many portions of the Indian people, but which had been preserved as a native State under our protection. He was not going to enter into the rights or wrong of that story, for he had not got all the facts before him, but what he wanted to do was to lift up his voice against any proposal for the annexation of Manipore. He believed that that would be unacceptable to the people of Manipore, and on that account he disliked it, but he knew very well that it would be most distasteful to all the native princes in India. Those princes watched these things very carefully, and the people of this country had no idea with what care those princes watched these proceedings and the language used in Parliament, and how thoroughly they were informed of the language used in English newspapers and of the contents of our Blue Books. They were greatly alarmed when they saw any return to the policy which was abandoned after the Mutiny, a policy which was so distasteful to themselves, and which created such widespread discontent among them. He earnestly hoped that the Government of India had no intention of annexing Manipore, but there was a strong party among the Europeans in India who desired annexation, who had a love for annexation, and who were advocating the annexation of Manipore. Therefore he did ask them, as a portion of the English people, to lift up their voices so far as they might against a policy which would be unjust to the particular State with which it would deal, and which would be dangerous and threatening to the confidence of the Native Princes of India in the government of that country.

THE MIRANZAI EXPEDITION.

THE Times correspondent telegraphed on May 12:—

The last despatches from the Miranzai Valley state that Sir W. Lockhart's movable column left Gulistan on Sunday and descended through the Akhel country, the scene of the fighting on the 22nd and 23rd ult., to Khanki Valley at Rarapana. There was no opposition.

Sir W. Lockhart pushed on five miles further to Khandi Mishti. This village, owing to its inaccessible position, has long been the resort of bad characters and enemies of the British Government. The tribes are now so cowed that not a shot was fired while the towers were being blown up as a lasting mark that the village can be visited if necessary.

Deputations from the remaining tribes have now come in to make their submission and all opposition has collapsed. The troops were under arms for more than 14 hours on Sunday, and were wet through by the incessant hail and rain, but they returned to bivouac at Karappa in good spirits.

It is probable that the force, having now completed all the objects of the expedition, will shortly be broken up.

On May 15, the same correspondent reported:—

The latest reports from the Miranzai Valley state that Sir W. Lockhart marched on the 13th inst. from Sadanai to Khanka Bazaar, the headquarters of the Mamazais, passing through the head village of the Alisherzais, and that he met with no opposition.

A complete survey has been made of the Mirjindaru district, and a good view obtained of the Kumaradaru Valley, which has hitherto not been fixed geographically.

All the tribes who resisted have been now visited and punished or have submitted. It only remains to reduce the Samani garrison and to construct posts.

A further telegram from the same correspondent (May 17) says:—The Miranzai force, after a short but brilliant campaign, which reflects the highest credit on Sir W. Lockhart and the troops, has now accomplished its objects. The tribes which were a few weeks ago in arms against us now appear most anxious to obtain our good will. During the last few days much valuable geographical information has been obtained about places which, although within a few miles of the frontier, have been hitherto unvisited by Europeans. The surveys effected by the Kuram field force during the Afghan war have been carried on to the Kurmana valley. The British troops are ordered to return to India. Owing to the heat, they will march only by night. Three native infantry regiments and a mountain battery will remain on the Samana ridge all the summer to cover working parties constructing roads and posts. It may be hoped that the severe punishment inflicted on the Orakzais and the neighbouring tribes will permanently secure peace in the Miranzai valley.

ALLAHABAD, April 25.—Owing to the delay in establishing telegraphic communication with Sangar, details of the fighting in and around Gulistan on Monday last have arrived only to-day. The enemy, it appears, were strongly placed in Gulistan and two adjoining stone-walled villages, from which they were subsequently dislodged with heavy loss, upwards of 200 men, it is estimated, having been killed. The force consisted of the 60th Rifles, the Peshawur Mountain Battery, 1st and 2nd Punjab Infantry, 5th Goorkhas, and 27th Punjab Infantry. The battery opened fire and shelled the villages. The 60th Rifles and 5th Goorkhas then advanced and closed with the enemy, driving them back. Over forty of the enemy were cut down or bayoneted. Our casualties were, one man, 60th Rifles, killed; and one native gunner, Peshawur Mountain Battery, and two Goorkhas and one man, Sappers and Miners, wounded. Since Monday there has been further fighting, in which also the enemy seem to have suffered severely. The effect on the tribesmen has been salutary. A Jirga has now been sent in by the Orakzais, and hostilities are for the time suspended, pending negotiations. The troops throughout have behaved excellently, and Sir Frederick Roberts has telegraphed his congratulations on the result of the operations to General Lockhart.

ALLAHABAD, April 28.—News dated Cape Hangu yesterday, says that two important sections of the tribes, the Akhels and the Alikhels, have been induced by the prompt and decisive action of General Lockhart to send in a jirgha and submit to our terms. They promise to no longer resist our building posts on their portion of the Samana range, and our occupation of them by troops. This morning a strong column marched under the command of Colonel Sym, 5th Goorkhas. The force will traverse the country of the Sheikhan tribe, and will move vid Hangu and Masarkhan Mela. It comprises four guns of No. 3 Mountain Battery, half of the 1st Battalion 60th Rifles, 5th Company of Sappers and Miners, 1st and 29th Punjab Infantry, and the 5th Goorkhas. Seven days' rations are to be carried, and each man takes his great-coat and blanket. The country is reported to be exceptionally mountainous and difficult. Their advance may be opposed by the tribesmen, who are believed to muster some thousands.

SIMLA, April 25.—It is reported that the enemy's loss on the 22nd was between fifty and sixty men. Colonel Reid succeeded in his task at Bazal, and destroyed three towers and two hamlets without any loss to our side. On the 23rd, General Lockhart saw about 1000 of the enemy with three standards appearing on a high hill to the west of Gulistan. The whole force went out to disperse them. All the troops, with the exception of one wing left on the hill-top moved down under Colonel Turner, the 15th Sikhs leading. The enemy had built sangars beyond the village of Margharn, whence they opened fire on our troops for about half an hour. The Sikhs charged down and carried the position, driving the enemy pell-mell before them down the hill, the artillery pouring a heavy fire amongst them, while the infantry fired volley after volley. The day's operations concluded with the destruction of the village of Talliout. The casualties on our side were:—15th Sikhs, one native officer killed, three sepoys wounded; also one 1st Punjab and one 2nd Punjab wounded. The defeat is complete. It is believed that 1,300 Afridis aided the enemy. These with the Akhel and Alikhel asked to be permitted to send in jirgas, for which sanction was accorded. The troops halted on the 24th, being exhausted by the severe work. The post at Chillibagh was attacked on the 21st. Two camels were killed. One squadron of the 5th Punjab Cavalry and one from Darband go to Narink.

MIRANZAI, GULISTAN, 25th.—The troops halted on the 24th. The enemy is now completely cleared from the front of the neighbourhood, but it is reported that there is a large gathering at Karappa. The principal Akhel Villas' Jirgas, whom I have already mentioned as desiring to come in, have arrived, but do not seem to be representative. They include delegates from four sections of the Afridis, also of the Akhel, Alitchel, and Marmazai. Two more Akhel villages and towers have been destroyed. With reference to the raid on the convoy a force will be sent to punish the offenders. Two Afridi sepoys have gone over to the enemy, taking their rifles and ammunition, seventy rounds. Rustam Rabakhel Malik, chiefly concerned in killing the prisoners belonging to the 20th Punjab, and also the son of the late Mulla Wali, Khan of Supri, are reported to have been killed in the fight of the 20th.

SIMLA, April 29.—The Alisherzai and Mamajai tribal Jirgas have been interviewed by Major Leigh at Gulistan on the 28th with satisfactory results. They have now gone back to their homes. They will pay the balance of fines. If a Jirga from the Tammul clans and others come it will be received. To-day (29th) General Lockhart advances towards the Shekkan country. Colonel Cramer, who was wounded the other day, has left for Murree.

SIMLA, May 1.—General Lock hart occupied Dran yesterday (30th). The advanced guard was fired on near the village of Laghardana, but the enemy was cleared out by the 1st Punjab. Only one man was wounded. Both villages were destroyed. Laghardana is about thirty miles from Hangu, and eight miles due north as the crow flies.

Speaking of our troubles in the Miranzai country, the Lahore paper writes that the political officers appear, indeed, to have, so far, held back the Afridis generally; but the fact that the possession of the Samana Range gives us the key of Tirah, which has always been the asylum for all the outlaws and budmashes of the Indian and Afghan frontiers, has brought a strange gathering together against us. We have already noted that the Orakzais had engaged the services of the noted outlaw Chikai by foregoing a blood-feud of long standing; and we now learn that the still more notorious outlaw, Nur Mahomed, has been brought by the Rabia Khels from Mamuzai in Tirah, with an Orakzai force, to the vicinity of Samana, where it was expected that he would take the command-in-chief of the forces opposed to us. It must be borne in mind, however, that this intelligence comes by hand to India, and is therefore some days older than the telegraphic news which shows that our troops are still having entirely their own way. Nur Mahomed, it will be remembered, is the son of the late Wali Mahomed Khan, a refugee in British territory, and he obtained great fame a year or two ago by a dashing descent upon Khost, where he temporarily overthrew the Ameer's authority. Since then he has been a wanderer, and has vainly sought pardon from the British Government. That this was rightly refused, there can be no doubt; but at the same time it leaves upon the frontier a desperate character, who has a considerable military reputation, ready to take command in any disturbance which is going. One thing which we should like to see cleared up is the part which is being taken in the disturbances on the Miranzai border by the outlaw "Chikai." This man was, rightly or wrongly, stated to have entered the Ameer's service a few months ago, and to have displayed considerable activity in the Ameer's behalf, receiving a regular salary in return. We now hear, rightly or wrongly, that he has undertaken to assist the Orakzais against us. So long as the Ameer remains "our ally," it is obviously incongruous that one of his paid servants should engage in hostilities against our troops. Another notorious person concerning whose relations with the Ameer we would like further information is Mir Bashir, who in the Afghan War of 1878-79 was chosen as chief of the Afridi fanatics of Tirah. On that occasion he appeared to have lost his head and immediately began apportioning British India away to his followers, promising Delhi to one, Lahore to another, and so on. This was more than even the Afridis could quite swallow, so he was deprived of his brief authority. In 1885 he had, however, an interview with the Ameer, who granted him a maintenance allowance; and we would like to know whether he still receives this, because he has now been selected by the Orakzais, our present enemies in Tirah, as Assistant to their recently-elected Governor, son of the notorious Mulla Sipari, an indefatigable enemy to British influence. According to the latest rumours from the front, the new Governor was, however, killed in the fighting on the 20th.

Punjab Frontier Force.—No transfers are announced.

Shooting of the Native Army.—The Commander-in-Chief's prize for native infantry has been won by the 26th Punjab Infantry, with 836 points; the second by the 30th Punjab with 833 points; third by the 4th Sikhs with 830 points; the fourth by the 1-2nd Gurkhas with 818 points; and the fifth by the 5th Bengal Light Infantry with 814 points. The highest possible score was 1,050. The shooting was excellent, and has improved much since last year. The Magdala gold medal has been won by a sepoy of the 26th Punjab with 92 points out of a possible 105. The following is the further result of the regimental competition for the Commander-in-Chief's prize:—

British Cavalry and Artillery.—First, 7th Dragoon Guards, 674 points; second, 5th Lancers, 671 points; and third, 2nd Dragoon Guards, 669 points.

British Infantry.—First, 2nd batt. Royal Sussex, 809 points; second, 2nd batt. Royal Warwickshire, 808 points; and third, 2nd batt. South Wales Borderers, 801 points.

Native Cavalry—First, Guides, 793 points; second, 9th Bengal Lancers, 764 points; and third, 3rd Bengal Cavalry, 755 points.

Madras Sepoys.—It is simple absurdity and waste of money, writes an Englishman correspondent from the Kachin country, to send Madrássis up here. They are worse than useless; the Kachins not only do not fear them, but utterly despise them. They are about the most miserable stamp of men I have ever come across during the whole of my long residence in India. There is not a single police officer in Burma who does not object to go out in pursuit of the dacoits with detachments of these Madrassi sepoys. Heaven forgive me for calling them sepoys! In one detachment I know of, when in pursuit they had marched only five miles (the enemy only numbered twenty-five to thirty men), five of these Madrassis said they felt giddy and fell out. The English soldier is not much good in this hilly country, densely covered as it is with almost impervious jungle—a jungle composed in a great measure of an undergrowth of canes and thorny bushes; and, again, an European soldier's life is too valuable to the State to risk against these savages. In again alluding to the Madrassis, I cannot say a single word in their praise. They are a dirty, cheeky, syce-and-grasscut stamp of men. All they can do, and all that they are really fit for, is to waylay the Kachin caravans that bring in supplies of provisions to Bhamo, and buy up fowls, ducks, and other such commodities and resell them at an enormous profit to the European residents. In fact, some of these Madrassi sepoys must be making little fortunes by this trade.

Native Submarine Miners.—The Secretary of State has sanctioned the formation of a corps of native submarine miners for India, consisting of 140 men, and divided into four sections, for location at Kurrachee, Calcutta, Bombay, and Rangoon, respectively, 30 men being stationed at each of the two former stations, and 40 at each of the two latter. The men are to be enlisted, and to take the place of the 118 native sappers and miners now employed, but who have been found unsuited for such service. There should be no difficulty in getting good men from the boatmen in the harbour. The enlistment of the men for each section will be carried out as far as possible at each port by the local officer in charge of the submarine mining defences. Recruits are not to be under sixteen years of age at the time of enlistment. They are to be engaged to serve either at Kurrachee, Bombay, Calcutta, Rangoon, or Moulmein. This condition is, however, subject to modification at the discretion of the Commander-in-Chief in India. They are to be enlisted for a period of five years, after which time they may claim their discharge, or may continue to re-engage for periods of one year. They will be armed with cutlasses, and exercised merely in marching formations and cutlass drill. Their uniforms will be similar to that of the Indian Marine, but with a red and blue band round the cap as a distinguishing mark.

Owing to Col. Dalrymple's appointment as deputy quartermaster-general, Col. E. R. Elles, who has been officiating for some time, has reverted to his appointment as commanding at Jutogh.

Col. R. F. Crawford, Staff Corps, has been appointed to the command of the 5nd Volunteer Rifle Corps, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Capt. H. Streatfield, Grenadier Guards, has vacated his appointment as aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Viceroy, and returned to England to rejoin his regiment.

Major W. J. Morse has been promoted Lieutenant-Colonel on completion of twenty-six years' service.

Major H. Hayes, 1st Lancers, has been appointed to act as Cantonment Magistrate at Deesa during the absence of Capt. A. Wapshare on leave and pending further orders.

Brigade-Surg. Hughes, M.D., has been appointed Deputy Surgeon-General, with temporary rank, during the absence of Deputy Surgeon-General Turnbull.

Brigade-Surg. A. N. Hojel, I.M.S., has been permitted to retire from the service with a pension of 700*l.* per annum and an extra pension of 100*l.* per annum.

The undermentioned have passed the examinations noted:—Lieut. T. W. Haig, 12th Bengal Infantry, high proficiency in Urdu; Lieutenants G. C. Lister, King's Royal Rifle Corps, C. McL. Porteous, 9th Bengal Infantry, and W. C. Black, 12th Bengal Infantry, higher standard in Hindustani; Capt. H. G. Burrowes, Royal Artillery, higher standard in Arabic.

The prompt way in which the reserve troops, field hospitals, &c., were pushed on from Rawul Pindi to the Black Mountain and Miranzai, says the Pioneer, deserves great praise, and Sir Frederick Roberts evidently thought the same, for he conveyed his thanks to Col. Palmer, commanding; Col. Patch, Commissary General; Brigade-Surg. Churchill, principal medical officer, and others (not forgetting the railway authorities) for the rapid and efficient way in which the reserves were despatched to their respective destinations.

BENGAL.

Our latest advices from Calcutta are to April 29.

Tragedy at Belvedere.—A shocking tragedy was enacted at Belvedere at midnight on April 18. In a fit of jealousy the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal's Madrassee boy shot his wife, an ayah in the establishment, as she lay asleep on her cot in the compound. After the event a note was found on his master's table in the Madrassee's handwriting, stating why he was about to commit the crime. The woman was suspected of carrying on an intrigue with a Mahomedan Khitmutgar, who had been discharged some time previously. Immediately after shooting his wife the Madrassee blew out his own brains with the second barrel. In both instances death was instantaneous. The police were at once informed, and the Commissioner of Police was on the spot within an hour of the occurrence. The Civil surgeon examined the bodies, and the inquest leaves no doubt that the deaths were caused in the manner described.

Chittagong-Assam Railway Scheme.—It is more than likely that one result of the Manipore affair will be to expedite the launching of the Chittagong-Assam Railway scheme, and it is not too soon, says the Englishman, to remind the Government of Bengal that the first thing that will be then called for, will be a railway line to Madareepore. Whether this should be made as an extension of the Bengal Central line from Khulna, or as an extension of the Eastern Bengal line from Rajbari, is the first point to determine. The latter course would seem the best, inasmuch as, although it would give a somewhat longer distance to travel from Calcutta, it would save the heavy cost of again bridging the Gorai, and would place Madareepore in better connection with the districts from which food supplies and coolie labour have to drawn for Assam.

The Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce have addressed the Government of India, Public Works Department, to the effect that recent unfortunate events in Manipore have given prominence to a question which has for a series of years been pressed upon the attention of the Assam administration, namely, the necessity for improved communications. They point out that the military movements rendered necessary by the outbreak show that Cachar is in urgent need of roads, and is to an extent which appears remarkable isolated from its market and the nearest military reserve. It is desired to secure that road-making may be begun in earnest next cold weather, and that labour may be imported for the purpose to avoid the costly inconvenience which would result to tea gardens if the Public Works Department sought for the required labour in the district itself.

Language Examinations.—In response to a representation of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the Government of India will permit assistants in mercantile offices and undertakings to be examined in the vernacular languages by the Board of Examiners, Calcutta, subject to the following conditions:—

1. Candidates will appear for examination before the Board at the Presidency.

2. The examinations will ordinarily be held on the first Monday in every month, and application for permission to appear at an examination must reach the Secretary to the Board of Examiners not later than the 25th of the month previous to that on which the examination is to be held.

3. Each application addressed to the Secretary to the Board must be backed by a certificate from the head of the mercantile firm or undertaking with which the candidate is connected, signifying his desire that the candidate should be allowed to appear for examination. The Board is empowered to refuse any application which in its opinion should not be granted.

4. In submitting his application, each candidate will forward to the Secretary to the Board of Examiners a fee of 16 rs. This fee will be refunded if the application is rejected.

A Case under Sir Andrew Scoble's Bill.—The first case under the Age Bill has just come before the High Court as a reference from the Sessions Judge of Murshidabad. It was feared that the injury that had been caused would result in death, he therefore hanged her to a beam of his house and gave out that she committed suicide. Medical evidence, both as to the outrage and to the fact that the girl was hanged while still alive, was clear; but the native jury which assisted the judge first gave a verdict as follows:—"We find that the accused caused the death of his wife, being inflamed with lust; but as he had no intention of causing her death he is not guilty of murder." The judge, having explained that if accused knew that by his act he was likely to cause death, he would be guilty of culpab'e homicide, and that if his knowledge amounted to a knowledge that his act must in all probability cause death, the culpable homicide would amount to murder, the jury again retired, and after a lengthy consideration again found that the accused did not know that he was likely to cause death when he hanged his wife, because he was beside himself with lust when he committed the deed, and was not able to consider the probability that death would ensue, and that he probably thought she was dead already from the effects of the outrage. The judge refused to accept the verdict of the jury, which, he said, was self-contradictory, and its explanation most unsatisfactory, since the accused, far from being beside himself with the passion which he had gratified, had the forethought to wash the floor and his wife's clothes, and endeavoured to remove all traces of his outrage. The judge deferred his judgment.

Calcutta University Examinations.—There is no appreciable falling off in the enormous number of candidates who annually present themselves at the examinations of the Calcutta University, says the local paper. In 1889 the aggregate of entries was a little more than 10,000, in 1890 it was a little less, but the difference scarcely amounts to 3 per cent. The record of 1890 shows, however, a remarkable increase in the number of successful candidates. Of the 6,000, for instance, who appeared at the entrance examination in 1889, about 25 per cent. passed, while of the 5,300 who attended in 1890 nearly 50 per cent. were successful. It is noteworthy in this connection that the province of Assam contributed in both years the largest percentage of successful candidates in proportion to the number of entries. Of the total number of candidates, on the other hand, Bengal contributed over 80 per cent., and the percentage of successes compares, as a rule, very favourably with that of other districts.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to April 30.

The Proposed School of Music for Madras.—A public meeting of persons interested in the study of music was held on April 24 at the banqueting hall, and it was attended by about sixty people. The Rev. Mr. Lawrence, the provisional secretary, read the notice convening the meeting, and also a short abstract of the proceedings that had led to it. Mr. Justice Handley, the chairman, said Madras had come to the front and set an example which will be followed in other parts of India. The idea for a school of music originated in connection with the reform advanced in educational matters with the Director of Public Instruction, and was due from the act of music for some time being made part of the curriculum under the Grant-in-Aid Code. One great object of the school was that the pupils should obtain tuition which now was only obtainable by those who go to England or attend conservatoires and other musical institutions in Europe. Dr. Miller moved the first resolution, that an association registered under the Indian Companies' Act be formed on the lines indicated, to be called the Madras School of Music. The proposal was carried. Mr. Ranganada Moodelliar moved the second resolution, that a committee be formed to give effect to the foregoing resolution. It was carried. Mr. Grigg, in seconding the proposition for a vote of thanks to the chairman, said the Madras Presidency was the first that moved in the matter of physical education, and was now the first to move in the matter of musical education. He hoped that the latter would commend itself to the Government of India and the Presidency. He felt a humble pride at having been able to take part in this movement.

Accident to a Drag.—Captain Ravenshaw, assistant resident, Bangalore, had a narrow escape the week before the mail left. Returning home from a drive in his drag, and proceeding at a smart trot along the road skirting the Residency grounds between the Government buildings and the high grounds, a runaway pony startled the leaders, who swerved away to the right, and before Captain Ravenshaw could control the frightened animals, his drag fell into the ditch alongside. Fortunately the drag was not altogether upset, and the occupants, consisting of Captain Ravenshaw, Colonel and Mrs. McCullagh, Surgeon-General and Colonel Thuillier, managed to extricate themselves without hurt.

The Madras Lighthouse.—It has been decided that the lighthouse column at Madras shall be demolished as soon as the tower in the new High Court buildings has been fitted with a lantern and a new third-order dioptric flashing light, the old apparatus at present in use at the lighthouse being transferred to some other port. It has not yet been finally decided to what purpose the granite blocks of the old lighthouse shall be put, but it is probable that they will be used for the construction of bastions on which to exhibit lights on the arms of the Madras Harbour. The old lighthouse, whose end is now drawing so near, has served the double purpose of a guiding beacon to mariners and of fitfully illuminating the ill-lighted beach road for a period now of nearly forty-eight years, the light having been first exhibited from it in January 1844. Its erection cost in round numbers 60,000 rs. and the apparatus, &c., 15,000 rs. more, or a total of 75,000 rs.

It is reported from Bangalore that while the Hindoos were celebrating a car festival, some native Protestant mission agents began an open-air preaching about a yard distant from the car. A Hindoo youth, not relishing this, threw a handful of dust on one of the preachers. A row ensued, and several persons on both sides were assaulted. Some arrests were made by the police.

The Madras Hunt dinner on April 25 was an unqualified success. There was some excellent speechifying, and the feast was not unduly prolonged. The circulation of the subscription list resulted in the collection of a sum of 2,050 rs. towards next year's expenses.

CEYLON.

Accident to Lieut.-Gen. Sir E. Fremantle while Elephant Shooting.—The Times of Ceylon on April 20 published the following letter from its Trincomalee correspondent:—Yesterday morning Trincomalee was startled by rumours that his Excellency the Admiral had met with a serious accident during his elephant shooting trip. The Admiral, accompanied by Mr. Millet of the naval yard and the coxswain of the ship Boadicea, with a number of coolies, started last Monday for Kodiliyar Pattu for the last elephant shooting the Admiral is likely to have in the island. The party were taken to Kompanachy, which is over twenty miles from Mutur by the tracker. On Wednesday they came up with a large herd of elephants, and his Excellency succeeded in bagging a big cow elephant, the rest of the herd taking to their heels on the report of his rifle. Just as the party had gathered round the carcass of the elephant that had fallen, its calf, which had at first bolted, turned round and charged the party, taking them by surprise. The Admiral and Mr. Millet—who was standing by his side—fired together at the furious little beast, which was only a few paces off, and it dropped to Mr. Millet's bullet, while the Admiral, who in the hurry of firing had not closed the breech of his rifle properly, got the contents of his cartridge right in his chest, hurting him badly. His Excellency was at once carried by the coolies all the way to Mutur, whence the news was brought to the Boadicea on Thursday night. The surgeon of the ship and the secretary at once hurried to Mutur in the steam-launch and brought the Admiral in yesterday morning. The injury done to his Excellency is not very serious, and he will probably be all right again in a few days.

The Governor of Ceylon has given his decision on the conduct of the police in regard to the prisoner Crawford, who, after being arrested in Colombo on a charge of fraudulent bankruptcy, was remanded to custody, and then allowed such extreme liberty that he managed to escape to Aden, where he was re-arrested. His Excellency holds that the remissness of the police reflects discredit on the whole force, while the names of Captain Hansard, Chief Inspector Travena, and Headquarters-Inspector Nell are specially mentioned in the matter, though no punishment is meted out to them. The constable who took Crawford to the circus, and gave him an easy chance to escape, has been discharged.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to May 2.

The Governor's Tour.—The State ceremonial in connection with his Excellency's visit to Kolhapore on April 20 commenced whilst the Raja's visit to the Governor at 5 P.M. His Highness's arrival at the Residency was announced by a salute of nineteen guns, and a guard of the Kolhapore Infantry, commanded by a European officer, with the regimental band, paid his Highness the usual compliments. At the durbar following, the members of Council and the sirdars and mankaries were presented to His Excellency by the Political Agent, each of the latter offering a nuzar according to his respective rank, which was touched and remitted. Then the principal officers of the several departments of the State, and the native officers of the Kolhapore Infantry and the Red Risala were presented to his Excellency by the Political Agent. At 7 P.M. a return durbar was held at the New Palace by his Highness the Raja to receive the Governor. A deputation consisting of the President of the Council (the Dewan) and the Chief of Bawda (a feudatory of Kolhapore) waited upon his Excellency at the Residency, to escort him to the New Palace, where, on his arrival, he was met by the Raja at the foot of the stairs. After the durbar his Excellency visited the Ranis, who witnessed the proceedings from a purdahed balcony; before his return to the Residency, a salute of seventeen guns being fired and a guard of honour of the Kolhapore Infantry, consisting of one hundred rank and file, with regimental band, commanded by Lieutenant Cox, presenting arms, met on his arrival. After dinner there was a reception at the Residency, at which were severally introduced to the Governor by the political agent the European residents and guests, as well as a large party of chiefs, State officials, and native gentry, who had been specially invited for that purpose. The proceedings continued up to a late hour.

The engagements on April 21, in connection with the gubernatorial visit which commenced so auspiciously the previous day, were very numerous, and afforded very little breathing-time between the events, which, beginning at 6.45, lasted almost continuously until past midnight.

Serious Accident to Sir Henry Morland.—We are grieved to learn that Captain Sir Henry Morland met with a serious accident on Saturday morning. It appears that Sir Henry was mounting his horse—a powerful Australian—in the compound of his bungalow, when one of the stirrups gave way. The consequence was that Sir Henry fell to the ground, and rolling under the animal was kicked and had two of his ribs fractured. On inquiry yesterday we were glad to hear that he was progressing favourably under the treatment of Dr. Langley, and hopes to be about again in the course of a few days.

Great Failure.—After a week spent in futile negotiation, says the Bombay Gazette, a notable Bombay house has finally collapsed. On Saturday last a meeting of bank managers was held to consider the affairs of B. and A. Hormarji and Co., one of the largest business houses in Western India. Owing to heavy losses through speculation in exchange and in Government paper, the firm is in a condition of very serious embarrassment, the liabilities amounting to upwards of a quarter of a million sterling. A suspension of the business would necessarily involve the sacrifice of lucrative agencies, and add heavily to the ultimate loss. The Mill Agency alone yielded an income of 50,000 rs. a year, and other business raised that amount to nearly a lac. A proposal was made on the part of the firm that the business should be continued in consideration of a payment down of 15 per cent. of the liabilities, with a prospective realisation which would bring the dividend to 28 or 30 per cent. The alternative of immediate insolvency would, it was calculated, yield ultimately but 15 per cent., owing to the certain loss of the agencies. The securities for the fulfilment of the terms proposed were said to be tangible and safe. The Bank managers have, however, been unable or unwilling to accept the proposals submitted, and they recommended Messrs. Hormarji to file a petition in insolvency yesterday. Acting on the advice of eminent counsel Messrs. Hormarji did not act at once upon this recommendation, their chief object being the continuance of the lucrative branches of the business for the benefit of the creditors. The insolvency of the firm is now an accomplished fact. The Agra Bank yesterday filed a suit for nearly six lacs and in the course of the afternoon the Oriental and the Chartered Mercantile Banks obtained an adjudication in bankruptcy from the Court just before Messrs. Hormarji's petition—which they vainly strove to keep back until after the mail leaves to-day—was filed. Thus all question of compromise is at an end.

The Greenhalgh-Elliot dispute was concluded before Mr. Justice Farran on April 25, and the plaintiff's suit dismissed with costs. Mr. Justice Farran, in summing up the evidence, was satisfied that Major Elliot was acting on his own behalf when he gave the cheque for 5,000 rs. to Greenhalgh, and considered that it was out of all human probability that the defendant would give the cheque to the plaintiff on the considerations Greenhalgh set forth. The plaintiff, he said, had failed to prove his case.

It has been stated that fresh evidence had come to light in the Kambekar Street murder case, which the friends of the prisoners intend turning to account. We (Times of India) understand that there is no truth in the report, though it is probable that an effort will be made by Buchoo's friends to invoke the clemency of the Crown on his behalf.

BURMA.

The Times correspondent telegraphs from Rangoon (May 17) :—

A small column has just been sent out in Western Karenni to capture an Alompra pretender who was collecting a following to attack the Eastern Karenni. This is the last frontier operation which will be undertaken before the rains.

The following statement of the frontier work done since Sir A. Mackenzie's assumption of office shows how heavy was the task which devolved on him, and how much remains to be done before the pacification of the province is completed. In the Chin Hills, north and south, there have been nine expeditions, requiring in all over 2,000 rifles. In Bhamo five columns, aggregating about 800 rifles, operated in various portions of the district against the Kachyens and Kanklaing's band. In Momeik a force of 310 rifles worked the district, which was in a very unsatisfactory condition. On the Chinese frontier three small columns were sent out. The Wuntho rebellion required about 2,500 rifles to quell it. In addition to the work done in Burma a strong column was despatched to Manipur. The only repulse suffered was in the attack on Thetta. The other columns were all successful. One gratifying feature in the operations of the past season was that they were carried on with a minimum amount of village burning and bloodshed.

The two Wuntho Tsawbwas have quarrelled and separated. It is believed that the younger Tsawbwa is about to surrender. While the elder Tsawbwa remains at large there will always be a danger of renewed disturbances on the Wuntho frontier.

The Moo Valley line of railway will be almost immediately opened as far as Shwebo. A steam ferry will be established across the Irrawaddy, between the Mandalay and Sagaing sides of the river.

Mr. Ward left Rangoon this morning to assume the Chief Commissionership of Assam.

Owing to the intense heat which prevails, numerous outbreaks of cholera have occurred in various portions of the provinces. The 16th Rifles were attacked while returning from Tamoo, and had twelve cases, of which six were fatal. The disease continues to rage with unusual severity amongst the Darjeeling coolies, who are still kept on board flats anchored near Prome. Of 420 coolies, about 150 were attacked, of whom about 90 died.

Mr. Archer, Consul at Zimme, and Captain Fulton, of the 2nd Goorkhas, who were employed on the Commission to delimitate the frontier between Burma and Siam, started on Feb. 24 from Mongphong to descend the Mekong to Saigon. No news has yet been received of them, and some anxiety is felt.

Mr. DUKE's case was concluded on April 23. Mr. Vansomeren, in defence, laid great stress on the fact that the evidence of Mr. Duke, Aung Ba, Sheve Bwen and Maung Dut, though differing in some trifling particulars, agrees in every point of the least importance. The immaterial discrepancies were, he said, strong evidence of the truth of the story told by them. Mr. Duke's story was the only credible one, otherwise he and three others conspired to commit perjury. Mr. Fox, in addressing the Court, dwelt on the evidence of Superintendent Chisholm, who deposed to Mr. Duke having previously suspended Aung Ba for accepting bribes. The prosecution, Mr. Fox said, did not allege that Mr. Duke had received any money himself, but what was alleged against him was that he failed to do his plain duty as an official from personal motives, and that those motives must have been either to prevent disclosures about his keeping a mistress and to prevent his and her name being connected with the taking of bribes. The prosecution also alleged that he aided Aung Ba in getting up a false defence. Mr. Fox admitted that if Taroke Pyu retracted to Mr. Duke the statement made to Mr. Moylan, then there was some justification for Mr. Duke's conduct, but he thought everything pointed against Taroke Pyu having retracted. Mr. Duke and the witnesses who now testified to the retractation never mentioned that in their examination before Colonel Strover. At the conclusion of Mr. Fox's address, Mr. Ward said the report would go to the Viceroy, and would not be published previously.

GENERAL WOLSELEY leaves Captain O'Donnell at the Jade mines with a force of military police and two guns under Lieutenant Baldwin. The country around the Jade mines is perfectly quiet. General Wolseley was to have left for Mogaung with the British troops on the 18th. General Wolseley held a review and durbar at Sanka on the 17th, which was attended by all the influential Tsawbwas and traders. The Kachins and Chinese both expressed pleasure that a post is to be established at the Jade mines. Arrangements have been made with influential Chinamen to capture the Tsawbwa and send him in.

MAJOR SMYTH, Commanding the Hanton column, surprised the Kachin village of Palontong on the 20th. Only slight resistance was offered ; three Katchins were killed. The column also surprised other villages where there was no opposition.

LIEUTENANT FORTH, 30th Punjab Infantry, has reached Chittagong with 1,000 coolies from Lushai. 512 of these are Panthans and Punjabis, 200 of whom he took with him on the punitive expedition to Jacopa's village.

A BURMA correspondent states that two political officers, and a party of the Survey of India, with the usual military escort, has just completed reconnaissances as far as Kiang Hung, on the Cambodia River, and throughout the Salween Shan States, with a view to ascertaining some definite information regarding the work which will shortly be undertaken to finally delimitate the eastern frontier.

MR. G. D. BURGESS, C.S.I., Commissioner, Northern Division, has left Mandalay for Bhamo on special and circuit duty. He will probably be absent for about a fortnight, if not longer. We (Mandalay Herald) have heard it whispered that the special duty which Mr. Burgess has to devote his attention to is in connection with the collection of a large body of Chinese filibusterers on the frontiers of the Mogoung district, and whose movements are looked upon with suspicion. We should be glad to be contradicted in what we have heard.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

A TELEGRAM to the Pioneer from Benares (April 23) says :—Mr. White made over charge of the office of Magistrate to Mr. McLeod to-day, preparatory to proceeding on leave, which he had to defer, owing to the late riots. Rewards for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the leaders range from 100 rs. to 1,000 rs. The trial of those arrested is proceeding daily. Owing to the number of rioters arrested the following arrangements have been made :—Those who attacked the waterworks at Bhadaini and Sita Ram's house are being tried by Mr. Hope ; those concerned in the destruction of the telegraph office by Mr. Greeven, and those who plundered the railway station by Mr. Sanders. The ringleaders appeared before the district magistrate last Saturday.

THE BENARES and Jaunpur indigo planters held a conference connected with the N.-W.P. Planters Association at Mr. A. Nickel's house, where Captain Chapman, of Bharwari, presided, and a resolution was passed condemning the action of the planters who have shipped indigo direct to England, as that kept buyers from going to Calcutta, thus lowering prices and leaving stocks unsold. It was also agreed that all planters should send indigo in future to the brokers in Calcutta for sale.

THE OLD FORT at Mooltan has at last been handed over to the civil authorities, but under conditions in which they cannot very readily acquiesce. The military authorities still wish to retain a lien on the property, no additions or alterations of any kind are to be made, and all income derived—approximately 1,500 rs. annually—from the sale of the right to collect saltpetre from the mound, on part of which the fort stands, and from the value of the bricks excavated therefrom, is to go to them. The original idea was to locate the sadr tahsil and distillery in the fort, and if this is carried out, some additions and alterations will have to be made. Besides, divided authority is sure to lead to constant friction. It has, therefore, been suggested that, if the fort is to be taken over at all permanently, the civil power must have full control and possession over so much of the building, at least, as is enclosed within the outer walls.

A TELEGRAM from Mhow (April 27) says :—Mr. Dhurandhar, Chief Justice of Indore, assisted by his pleader, Mr. Khory, prosecuted Babu Mohendranath Chatterji, editor of the Eastern Herald, for defamation. Accused, who was defended by Mr. Haridass, of Khandwa, tendered an humble and unqualified apology to the complainant and his Highness the Maharaja Holkar, for having published in the Eastern Herald false and defamatory matters about them. The accused has given up the name of the writer of the defamatory articles with his manuscripts. The name is Balwantrao Waman, against whom a warrant is issued by the Residency Magistrate, Prince Wahid-ud-din, on the application of Mr. Dhurandhar. In to-day's issue of the Eastern Herald the manager publishes the above apology, and informs its readers that it will cease to exist from to-day, as its editor and proprietor has suffered heavily for his having reposed implicit confidence in the integrity of his correspondents and writers, and for his not having taken adequate pains to ascertain the truth of the news supplied for publication.

THE OTHER DAY the North-Western Railway line from Jhelum to Domali was again so covered with young locusts that on two or three occasions the trains had to be taken on in sections on the covered line to avoid an accident. This explains the growl of indignant passengers concerning the delay of trains recently.

SOME of our readers, the Lahore paper says, will remember the lamentable accident by which Lieutenant Stoehr, R.E., was accidentally shot below Kaladanda. Tired of hewing out a home for the Goorkhas on the side of the Himalayas, he had come down to the plains with two magnificent greyhounds, and one of them playfully jumped on him while his gun was leaning against his breast. The hound's paw touched the trigger, and the death of his master was instantaneous. The officers of the Royal Engineers have just erected a quiet-looking but costly brass tablet let in on black marble in Rurki Station Church as a small token of their affection for their comrade. The inscription runs thus :—

"Sacred to the memory of

HYDERABAD.

THE HYDERABAD ROBBERY case, in which three nawabs are accused of stealing seven and a-half lacs' worth of jewellery, and which is engaging attention at the magistrate's court in Bombay, is being vigorously pushed in Hyderabad, says a local correspondent. On information laid before the Second Assistant Resident, a warrant was granted for the search of the firm of Sadasheo Jankidas, in the Residency bazaars. When the warrant was executed, jewellery was found to the value of 27,000 rs., which was mortgaged with the firm by one of the accused. The property was identified by four witnesses before the magistrate. The Bombay officials, I hear, have addressed the Resident regarding the transfer of the case to Hyderabad for disposal.

AT A MEETING of the Hyderabad Race Stewards held at the United Service Club, it was unanimously resolved to adopt the West of India Turf Club rules in lieu of the Calcutta Turf Club rules. The proposition was put forward by Major Gough, who argued for the change in a very sensible address. At the previous meeting a proposition made by Captain Kelly to do away with bookmakers found no supporters, but it has been decided to encourage the business of the totalisator officially, and to allow bookmakers to be present at meetings here, making their fee higher than at present. Major Gough's success is hailed with satisfaction by all interested in local racing. He was one of those who joined Mr. Fred. Gordon and Captain Holdsworth and one or two others in strenuously opposing the change from the West of India Turf Club rules to the Calcutta rules two years ago.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM is out in camp in the Warrangal district, where he is having some good shooting. His bag up to date consists of two tigers, and it is expected he will get more sport.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A TIFLIS telegram of May 4 to the Morning Post says :—A telegram from Askhabad, in the Transcaspian territory, says that a retired naval officer, Kobzow, with a party of men from the Tedjen station, has left there to study and explore the courses of the Tedjen and Herirood. The object of the party is to organise for at least seven months of the year means of transport and communication between the Tedjen station of the Transcaspian line and Seraks, Poulikhatoum, and Zulfikar. It is also intended to establish a Russian colony, consisting of emigrants from the government of Erivan in the Transcaucasus, in the south-west of the Turkoman country, in the neighbourhood of Poulikhatoum. These are among the first of the measures which are about being taken by the newly appointed Governor-General of Turkestan, General Kuropatkine, for the development of the territory under his rule. General Kuropatkine is a man of great energy of character, and has the reputation of being one of the ablest generals in the Russian service ; and it was generally anticipated at the time he was nominated to succeed General Komaroff that Central Asian politics would receive a vigorous impulse.

A Russian scientific expedition, under the command of Captain Bartshevsky, has (says a Reuter despatch from Samarcand of May 15) left here for the exploration of Southern Bokhara, the Pamin district, and Kafiristan.

Lieutenant Bower's previous Central Asian travels will have proved of benefit to the world at large in other ways than by ridding it of a murderous villain like Dad Muhammad. He discovered the remains of a buried city in the wilds, and had excavations made on a small scale, resulting in the discovery of some old MSS. These were entrusted to Dr. Hoernle for investigation, and he reports that they compose a medical treatise, or, rather, three medical treatises in different hands and of great antiquity. The oldest is Buddhist, of the fourth or fifth century, so that it must be about 1,400 years old ; and Dr. Hoernle says it is the oldest M.S. yet found in this part of the world, and of great value.

From Badakshan the Punjab paper learns that Abdul Rashid Khan, Chief Assistant to the Governor, had been detected in the embezzlement of large sums passing through his hands, and has been imprisoned, and all his property confiscated by the Ameer.

At the present moment the influence of General Gholam Haidar, Commander-in-Chief, is in the ascendant in Afghanistan. The General is now in the Shinwari country, where by his prompt and thorough execution of the Ameer's orders and his settlement of the Yaghistan frontier to the Ameer's complete satisfaction he has won golden opinions. He appears also to have established the best relations with the independent frontier chiefs, and the impression prevails that the Ameer's position upon the frontier is now remarkably strong and secure.

The present Afghan Commander of Jellalhabad, Shad Muhammad Khan, appears to have been a failure. He is immensely unpopular with the garrison and the inhabitants, and has failed to ingratiate himself with the Commander-in-Chief. The Ameer has, therefore, issued orders for his transfer.

In confirmation of our intelligence from Cabul some weeks ago that the Ameer, acting under the fanatical influence of his son Habibullah, had determined to disband his Shia (Kazilbash regiments) we now learn, says the Civil and Military Gazette, that all the Afghan troops, whether infantry, cavalry, or artillery, which have been recruited from Shia Mahommedans, are to be disbanded and Sunnis enlisted in their stead. The order was, it is said, issued immediately after the Naoroz.

The Civil and Military Gazette is informed from Cabul that the Ameer wrote some time ago to Mr. T. A. Martin, senior member of the firm of Messrs. Walsh, Lovett & Co. in India (the firm to which Mr. Pyne belongs) for the purpose of entering into commercial and pecuniary relations with the firm. The latter at first replied that they must take the opinion of all the partners, and subsequently informed the Ameer that they would prefer to send two representatives of the firm to Cabul to settle the matter by a personal interview. The Ameer has consequently sent instructions to his agent at Calcutta to arrange for their journey, and to show them the greatest possible respect. The Ameer's object is believed to be to obtain facilities for borrowing money whenever his emergencies require it. Anyhow, we hope that the firm will make a better thing out of their connection with the Ameer than the Parsee firm of Messrs. Jehangir and Co. have been able to do.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

A REUTER telegram from Shanghai (May 13) says :—A serious native riot, directed against foreigners, has occurred at the important commercial town of Wuhu, on the left bank of the Yang-tse-Kiang. The mob attacked the Roman Catholic Mission, and set fire to it. Fortunately the inmates were able to make their escape in safety from the burning building, and to take shelter from the violence of the populace, who continued for several hours rioting and burning. No loss of life is, however, reported. The Europeans have taken refuge in the hulks lying in the river. H.M.S. Inconstant has been ordered to go up the Yang-tse-Kiang to Wuhu.

We have received the following from the Foreign Office for publication :—A telegram has been received from her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, dated May 14, stating that on the evening of the 12th inst. a riot had broken out at Wuhu. According to the report received from her Majesty's Consul there, much property belonging to the French Roman Catholic mission had been destroyed, but no mention was made of any loss of life. It appeared from the Consul's telegram, dated on the morning of the 13th, that the disturbance had not at that time been suppressed, but it was hoped at Pekin that order would be restored by the arrival of men-of-war, two of which were Chinese vessels, despatched on that day at noon from Shanghai.

Instructions had also been sent to the Viceroy of the province by telegraph to take immediate action.

The correspondent of the Standard telegraphs from Shanghai (May 14) :—The latest reports received here state that in the riots at Wuhu, directed by natives against foreigners, the British Consulate was demolished and the Consul wounded, only making his escape by adopting the disguise of a Chinaman. The French Cathedral was burned. The foreigners have taken refuge in a steamer in the river. There is no British war ship on the spot, but a French one is now proceeding to the scene of action.

A Reuter despatch from Shanghai (May 14) says :—The destruction wrought by the mob at Wuhu was widespread and serious. Leaving the Catholic Mission a gutted ruin, the Chinese attacked the quarters of the Custom House officers, and set them on fire. The building was soon burned to the ground. Then the people made a rush for the British Consulate, which they reduced to a complete wreck, after looting the house from top to bottom. The Consul and his wife had, fortunately, been forewarned, and were able to make their escape, disguised in Chinese clothes. The Consul is, however, reported to have been afterwards wounded by the rioters. The last advices report that quiet has now been restored at Wuhu.

The Yokohama correspondent of the N.C. Herald wrote on March 30 :—The papers have effectually revived the Treaty Revision question, and if one or two of the leading journals of the capital are to be depended upon, something seems likely to be accomplished during the present year. Exactly what the terms of the proposed treaty are no one knows, though it is recognised that they cannot be as satisfactory from the standpoint of the foreigner as the drafts connected with the names of Count Inouye and Count Okuma. So much of that which has been published has been either denied or discredited that it may be unwise to sketch in the principal features here. The following, however, having now appeared in three of the best of the Tokio dailies merits reproduction. The chief points are, firstly, that the existing Consular courts shall continue to exercise jurisdiction for the term of five years from the date of revision for all cases arising within the settlements, and that the courts of the country shall be accepted as the sole and final arbiter of cases which arise outside of settlement limits. Secondly, that no engagement shall be either demanded or given providing for the employment of foreign judges for a fixed limited term. Thirdly, that the right of possessing real estate, of holding railway shares and shares in mines, and of participating in the coast carrying trade, shall be withheld. Fourthly, that a stipulation or agreement of a binding nature shall be made regarding the codification of the laws. Fifthly, that mixed residence shall be allowed. And lastly, that a somewhat higher tariff based on an ad valorem rate of 10 to 12 per cent. may be enforced. These are, in the main, the general conditions which Mr. Fraser, H.B.M.'s Minister, is reported to view favourably. That two of them at least will undergo material modification may probably be accepted as certain. Negotiations are said to be now in progress.

If the present programme of the Japanese Government is carried into effect (says the Calcutta Englishman), the question of naval supremacy between the two great Powers of Eastern Asia will be shortly decided beyond possibility of doubt. It is estimated that, were war to break out in the immediate future, the Japanese Navy could oppose upwards of 50,000 tons to 35,000 tons of its rival; but the difficulty of assessing the relative values of the warships of the two countries is so great that, the question of personnel apart, it is doubtful on which side the balance of naval power actually lies. In a recent speech in the Japanese House of Representatives, Viscount Kabayama, Minister of the Navy, claimed that a warship tonnage of at least 120,000 was necessary for the adequate defence of the Empire. He put forward at the same time a programme for the reconstitution of the Navy, providing for the construction of two armourclads of 9,500 tons, three cruisers of 6,000 tons, seven varying between 1,500 and 4,500 tons, and seven first class torpedo boats. The total outlay involved amounts to nearly fifty million yen; but in a spirit of far sighted liberality, the House of Representatives seems to have voted the necessary credits without hesitation. The Japanese probably recognise by this time that, in addition to their old rival, they will have to reckon in the future with a new and far more formidable power. The Russian station at Vladivostock is already a source of very considerable uneasiness in Tokio as well as at Pekin, and the threatened construction of the Trans-Siberian Railway, together with the growing power of the Russian Navy in Eastern waters are not in any way calculated to allay this feeling. For Japan, as for Great Britain, the possession of a powerful Navy, is the sole effectual guarantee of safety.

Writing on April 4 the N. C. Herald gives another instance of the dilatoriness of the British Minister at Pekin. By the Chungking Convention that port was to be opened to foreign trade on Jan. 18 last. Two months later the new system could not be worked, though the port was nominally opened on March 1 and 2, because the British Minister still withheld his approval of the necessary regulations. No explanation of any kind is forthcoming. Sir John Walsham appears to simply treat the matter with silent contempt. We do not like to characterise this neglect as it seems to deserve, because Sir John may have some reason for it, of which we have not heard; but it seems to us that the Chamber of Commerce here, which is the one most interested in the extension of foreign trade at Chungking, should ask for some explanation, or make some representation before long.

Mr. W. N. Beauclerk, who succeeds Mr. Howard as Secretary of H.B.M. Legation, arrived by the English mail on Saturday last, and will shortly proceed to Pekin to assume his duties. We trust, says the Herald, that this gentleman's advent may tend to rouse the Legation out of its present lethargic condition.

A Chinese paper states that tribal fighting is now going on in over one hundred villages around Amoy. The funds required to carry on these feuds come, it is said, from the Secret Societies of Penang and Singapur. The Khoo tribe alone has, according to this authority, nearly a million dollars at its command, and in many cases three or four villages have a common fund of over half a million. The result of these feuds is that the whole district is rapidly becoming a wilderness. The authorities are either unable or too apathetic to interfere.

We (N.C. Herald) regret to have to record two more attacks by Chinese on foreigners in the neighbourhood of Shanghai, similar to those which took place during the winter. On Sunday afternoon a party of about thirty-five ladies, gentlemen, and children were tiffining on a piece of ground which had been hired for the purpose near the Pagoda. They were surrounded by a mob of about 200 natives, who gradually closed in upon them, in spite of being repeatedly pushed back. At first content with throwing mud, the Chinese at length began to use stones, and the foreigners, after finishing their meal, thought it prudent to walk away, whereupon all their crockery and the remains of their food were pounced upon. The foreigners returned to the place a short time afterwards and found that the greater part of the mob had dispersed, but, on the advice of the lowdah, who feared the arrival of more villagers, the party proceeded home. About two hours later four mounted foreigners were similarly surrounded and pelted. As we have before pointed out, these outrageous attacks may be expected to continue until some pressure is brought to bear on the Chinese authorities. Perhaps the German Consul, to whose nationality most of the larger party interfered with on Sunday belong, may be able to act with some amount of success.

According to the Times correspondent at Rangoon, difficulties appear likely to arise between France and Siam in connection with the Laos States on the north-eastern frontier of Siam. If the Upper Mekong can be opened to navigation the value of those States will be greatly increased. Considerable uneasiness is felt at Bangkok, owing to the claims which have recently been advanced by the French authorities to this territory.

The death of Mr. C. K. E. Woods, barrister, occurred at the General Hospital on April 16.

Sir Frederick Weld is suffering from jaundice, and his state is such as to cause his medical attendants some anxiety.

The preliminary reports of the Census show that the population of Malacca has decreased; that of Singapore and Penang has largely increased.

OUR BOOK NOTICES.

LIFE OF LORD HARDINGE.*

Sir Henry Hardinge was Governor-General of India from 1844 to 1848. He was raised to the peerage for his services during the first Sikh war of 1845-46. The Punjab had been sinking into anarchy ever since the death of Runjeet Singh in 1839. There was a reign of terror at Lahore. The details of vice and murder are sickening. The Sikh Army of the Khalsa, which had been kept in order by Runjeet, had rebelled against his successors. The Sikh Army threatened to march to Lahore and overturn the existing Government, and the Sikh court saved itself from destruction by sending the army across the Sutlej to plunder Hindoostan. Then followed the forgotten battles of Mudki, Ferozeshah, and Aliwal, the crowning victory at Sobraon, and the short-lived treaty of Lahore.

The settlement of the Punjab by Lord Hardinge was a compromise. He would not annex the Punjab; he was willing to recognise a reputed son of Runjeet, the infant Dhuleep Singh, but he would not protect him with a British force. The Sikhs themselves declared that no Sikh government could possibly exist in the Punjab unless it was protected by a British army against the disbanded soldiers of the Khalsa. Lord Hardinge gave way. The boy Dhuleep Singh was placed on the throne under Sir Henry Lawrence as Resident and a Sikh Council of Regency, and a British force was to remain in the Punjab until the prince attained his majority.

In January 1848 Lord Hardinge left India and was succeeded by Lord Dalhousie. Within a few months there was treachery and rebellion at Multan. Englishmen were murdered, and the Sikh Army of the Khalsa was in open insurrection. Lord Dalhousie declared that as the Sikhs had called for war they should have it with a vengeance. The treaty of Lahore was torn to shreds by the battles of Chilianwalla and Guzerat. The Punjab was annexed and brought under British administration, and for more than forty years has been one of the greatest triumphs of British rule.

We have nothing to say against Lord Hardinge. He was a distinguished soldier and statesman in his generation, but that generation has passed away. Some may doubt whether he ought to be reckoned amongst the "Rulers of India." The "Life" by his son is certainly not worthy of a place in the Series. It is dull and commonplace, and the bulk of it is made up of obsolete details which throw no light whatever on the history of India.

Messrs. Perken, Son, and Rayment's useful Guide to Electricity for Beginners, entitled Intensity Coils: How Made and How Used, is now passing through its sixteenth edition (128th thousand). It describes the construction and method of using Galvanic Batteries, while there are chapters on Electric Lighting, the Telegraph, Telephone, and Phonograph. The chapters are subdivided into paragraphs, which are headed in large type. To the amateur electrician this work is invaluable.

Society for the Encouragement and Preservation of Indian Art.—Sir George Birdwood presided at the first annual meeting of this society, held at the Society of Arts, John Street, Adelphi, on May 12. The report stated that a school of art had recently been opened in Trevandrum by the Maharaja of Travancore, under the guidance of Mr. Havell, and several photographs of ivory carving of good design had been sent from this school for the inspection of the committee, also some photographs of copper répoussé work from Madras, and Sir George Birdwood hoped they might be the means of procuring orders from London tradesmen for a higher class of Indian work than is usually met with in this country. Sir George Stewart Gordon Bayley, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the object of the society was not only to encourage English workmen to copy Indian art, but to promote its circulation in England. Surgeon-Major J. H. Hendley, hon. secretary of the Jeypore Museum, said that what the society was doing was what the Indians were trying for all over the country. Art work in India was done by the hand, but in England it was executed by machinery. They did not want to encourage that sort of machine work which was hard, dry, and utterly inartistic. English people bought all their art fabrics at home, when they could get better value from India. The Indian had peculiar qualities of the eye and hand which the Englishman had not. Mrs. Thomas said that the introduction of Chinese and Japanese art into India had affected the Indian workmen to a considerable degree, and the gold and silver work had suffered very much. The wood carving had gone down simply for the want of patronage. The report was adopted.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Tuesday, May 12.

Manipore.—VISCOUNT CROSS: With reference to an answer I gave to the noble marquess opposite (Lord Ripon) last evening, I wish to state that I telegraphed that answer to the Viceroy, and have this moment received the following reply from him:—"There is no foundation for the report that reward has been offered by us for rebels dead or alive."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Tuesday, May 12.

The Manipore Disaster.—MR. GOURLEY asked the Under Secretary for India whether his attention had been called to a statement in the Press "that, in view of the probable flight to Burma of the Manipori nobles responsible for the recent outrages, the Chief Commissioner has issued a proclamation offering heavy sums for the heads of the Regent, the Senaputty, and those of the councillors and generals who were concerned in the outbreak;" whether this proclamation was issued with the knowledge of the Indian Government and Secretary of State for India; if not, what measures had been adopted for its withdrawal; and would he state the nature of the Court under which the leaders of the rebellion captured were to be tried.

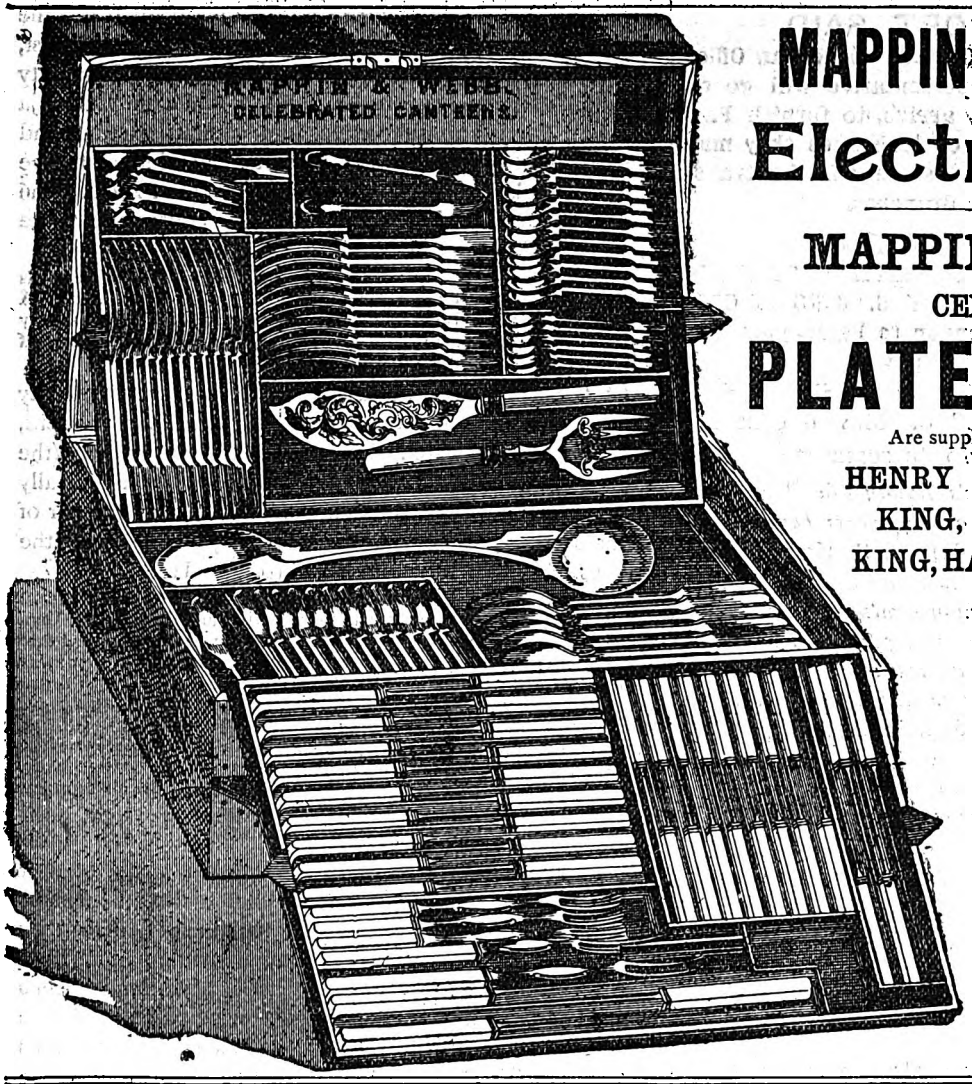
BARON H. DE WORMS (replying for Sir John Gorst) said the Secretary of State had received no official information on the subject, but had seen in the newspapers a copy of the proclamation by the Chief Commissioner for Burma, the material part of which is as follows:—"This is to give notice that any such persons (i.e., the Regent of Manipore and those of his councillors, generals, or followers) concerned in the murder of Mr. Quinton and his companions taking refuge in Burma are to be seized and delivered up to the nearest magistrate or police officer, and that rewards will be granted as stated below for the capture of the persons named." The rewards vary from 1,000 to 5,000 rs. The Secretary of State sees nothing in such a proclamation to require his interference. The nature of the Court will be found described in the Blue Book, which will certainly be distributed before the House rises for the holidays. The leaders of the rebellion are to be tried by a Court consisting of three officers, including at least one political officer, their sentences to be subject to confirmation by the Government of India. (Hear, hear.)

Thursday, May 14.

The Manipore Disaster.—MR. CREMER asked Baron H. de Worms, as representing Sir J. Gorst, whether he was now in a position to give the House any authentic information with regard to the Manipore disaster—(cheers)—and why the despaches upon the matter which on the 5th inst. he said he had laid on the table of the House had not yet been distributed to members of the House, and why it took ten days to print them. (Hear, hear.)

BARON H. DE WORMS: The papers have been presented. They are now in the hands of the printers. There has been no unnecessary delay whatever. The papers have been laid on the table of the House, and when they are printed they will be distributed.

MR. BRYCE said he wished to put a question to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on this subject. Perhaps the House would allow him to state that it had been the intention of certain hon. members to raise a discussion on the matter on the motion for the adjournment of the House. They had, however, been deterred from doing so partly, at all events, by the fact that these papers were not yet in their hands. He wished to ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he would undertake on behalf of the Government that when these papers had been distributed they would, if a demand were made upon them, give an opportunity for discussing them.



THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER: In any case it would have been somewhat difficult to raise a discussion on the motion for the adjournment, seeing that the Minister mainly responsible to answer could not unfortunately be present in the House. I am sure the House will recognise the importance of the matter. There is no desire whatever on the part of the Government to withdraw the subject from discussion. I should not like to pledge myself in the absence of the First Lord of the Treasury to any particular hour, but I may assure hon. members opposite that an opportunity of discussing the subject will be afforded.

Indian Salt Revenue.—From official statements we learn that Indian Salt Revenue continues to increase, and yet it is noticeable that the amount of salt upon which revenue is paid is less now than it was in 1886-87. The following are the figures for the Quinquennium 1886-87 to 1890-91:—

	Maunds.	Rs.
1886-87	33,372,000	6,35,84,000
1887-88	33,118,000	6,37,16,000
1888-89	31,395,000	7,58,82,000
1889-90	33,086,000	7,93,06,000
1890-91	33,320,000	7,99,05,000

The central year marks the turning point when deliveries fell off, while revenue increased; and, although the collections have continued to expand, the old figures of deliveries have not yet been touched. This is not the case in Northern India, Madras, and Sind; but Bengal, Bombay, and Burma all showed better figures of quantity in 1886-87 than they did five years after.

A GOLD STANDARD FOR INDIA.

THE Secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce sends to the press a copy of "Outlines of a Scheme for introducing a Gold Standard into India," and brief notes of a "History of the Monetary Standard in Europe," which Sir David Barbour recently sent to that Chamber. After discussing the history of the monetary standard in Europe, Sir D. Barbour proceeds as follows :—

I have given the above short history of the two metals with the object of making clear the position at which we have now arrived.

What has happened is this :—

The old standard was silver; by a series of changes, originating in an accident, the world has made considerable progress in the direction of altering the standard from silver to gold.

A party, however, has arisen, which says the change is a mistake, and urges us to go back to the old system of using both metals and fixing a ratio between them for purposes of legal tender. This party is strongest in the United States, but is in a minority elsewhere. It is impossible to say what the final result will be.

I believe that the safest and best plan for India and for the world would be to go back to the old system.

But if the decision of the world is that the change from silver to gold should be fully carried out, it will be a terrible evil for India if she is left, as it were, in the cold—nation after nation (Austria, Russia, &c.) will one after another adopt gold as their standard. America will give up her efforts to restore silver. There will be continual fluctuations in Exchange, and it is quite impossible to say to what point the rupee will drop. Therefore, I say, as long as there is a chance of silver being maintained as a monetary standard, do not make any change. But if it is decided by general opinion that silver is to be ejected everywhere, do not let India become the receptacle for all the surplus silver of the world. The action of the United States will show how the battle is going to end. If she adopts free coinage of silver, she will in time carry the whole American Continent with her, and with India, China, and the greater portion of Africa using silver, we shall be independent of the rest of the world, and may even see silver restored to its old position in Europe. On the other hand, if America abandons silver, every other country that can will do the same thing.

I should be glad to see India agree with the United States to continue the free coinage of silver. But if that country abandons silver altogether, the sooner India does the same the better.

Sir D. Barbour then gives his OUTLINES OF A SCHEME FOR INTRODUCING A GOLD STANDARD INTO INDIA.

(1) The first measure would be to stop the free coinage of silver, that is, a man would no longer be entitled to present silver to the mints and receive rupees.

The present right of coining rupees, i.e., on its own account, would be reserved to Government.

(2) The next measure would be to open the mints to the free coinage of gold. Any man bringing gold to the mints would be entitled to have it coined into gold coins—these coins might be a 10 rupee piece and a 20 rupee piece.

The weight and fineness of these gold coins would be such that the par of exchange between them and the sovereign would be the exchange which it was desired to establish, e.g., if we wished a par of 1*s.* 5*d.* per rupee, the 10 rupee coin would contain as much gold as is worth (1*s.* 5*d.*) + 10 = 170 pence.

The quantity of fine gold in the 10 rupee piece would be 170-240 of the quantity contained in the sovereign.

(3) When the above measures had been carried out, it might be found that no gold was brought to the mints, and that exchange fell below 1*s.* 5*d.*

This would be a sign that the currency was redundant, and such a state of things might be brought about by silver rupees coming out of hoards, or coming back from foreign countries. This might occur when the silver rupee become a token coin.

The only remedy would be for Government to reduce the silver rupee currency until Exchange rose to 1*s.* 5*d.*

This might involve considerable expenditure, but there is no other remedy in such a case.

(4) There would then remain a practical difficulty. The 10 r. and 20 r. gold coins would be too valuable for ordinary use in India. A man might have his gold coined into such coins, and then find that they would not serve his purpose.

To remedy this evil the Government must be prepared at every great centre to give silver rupees in exchange for the gold coins to any amount, and there must besides be standing orders that every Treasury will, as far as possible, give silver rupees in exchange for the gold coins.

It is possible that a considerable amount of gold coins might in this way accumulate on the hands of Government, but this would cause no loss, as they could take the place of silver in the Paper Currency Reserve, and in case of need could be shipped to England.

To facilitate the disposal of the gold coins when not required for purposes of currency, it might be best not to charge any seigniorage on them.

(5) The above is a general outline of the system that might be adopted, but it should be recollected that, in my opinion, the operation would be the greatest and most difficult of the nature ever undertaken, would have far-reaching effects, and ought not to be attempted unless under the pressure of necessity.

The 8th Madras Infantry, from Rangoon, arrived in Bangalore on April 28 by train, to supply the place of the 25th Madras Infantry, which left that station about five months ago. The band of the 13th Madras Infantry marched the regiment from the Cantonment Railway Station to their barracks in the Infantry Lines.

LONDON : TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1891.

THE MANIPORE PAPERS—I.

THE papers just issued to Parliament from the India Office on the Manipore disaster are very far from affording all the materials necessary for the formation of a comprehensive judgment on the actions of those concerned. Meantime, in dealing with such information as we have, it will aid us if we begin by discriminating between that part of the action which preceded and led up to the dire events of March 23—that is to say the political action and policy of the Government of India and the Chief Commissioner of Assam—and the proceedings of those entrusted with the execution of the policy decided on at Calcutta who became the victims, either of a mistaken judgment in the devising of that policy, or of their own incompetent efforts to carry it into execution. We hope that this distinction will be carefully observed in the debate which is now inevitable, and may easily become a critical one for the Government. It might be that either the policy or the action decided on by the Government at Calcutta, or both of them, were not the wisest that could have been adopted, and yet had the persons entrusted with the duty of carrying them into execution been men of nerve, experience, and resource, the results would have been satisfactory and the policy thus justified by events. It might be that the policy was essentially a jndicious one, and yet has failed through the unwisdom and incapacity of those charged with its execution. Or, again the policy might have been both bad in itself and foolish in its execution.

As regards the preliminary decision of the policy which MR. QUINTON was ordered to enforce, it is well to note certain rather remarkable facts which appear in the correspondence. The outbreak in September 1890, which resulted in the abdication and departure of the Maharaja, was, as described by MR. QUINTON, of a slight character and quite bloodless. It arose out of quarrels between the Maharaja's seven brothers who were divided into at least two parties, at the head of one of which was the Senaputty the most able and resolute of the lot. When the Maharaja had left, the Jobraj succeeded him without disorder, and the Jobraj was the successor previously nominated by the Chief and acknowledged by the Government of India. The State remained perfectly tranquil. MR. GRIMWOOD wrote on Oct. 9, 1890 :—

I have no doubt that the departure of the Maharaja and three of his brothers will be at any rate for a time beneficial to the country. A Maharaja and seven brothers over whom he had little real authority were too many for a small country like this, and their reduction by half will be a relief in more ways than one.

At the same time adverting to the lead the Senaputty had taken in forcing on his eldest brother's retirement, MR. GRIMWOOD stated that, "while the Pucca Sena (the Maharaja's favourite brother) seems to have been generally disliked by the people, the Senaputty is the most popular of all his brothers, not only with the Maniporis but with the Natives of India who reside here" (p. 7). He added :—

The Jobraj who, I hope, will be allowed to succeed to the Gaddi has the reputation of being much more active and businesslike than the Maharaja. The Senaputty has more than once incurred the censure of the Government, but as I have mentioned above he is popular amongst all classes; he is the only Prince who is said to be poor owing to his generosity. He is also on good terms with the Jobraj; and if the latter is allowed to succeed, the Senaputty as Jobraj would assist in making his rule strong and popular. . . . They have also made every profession of loyalty to the Government, and many promises of being guided by the Political Agent's advice, but at such a juncture I am not inclined to place too much reliance on such promises (p. 8).

The above shows very clearly what MR. GRIMWOOD'S opinion was. He thought the Jobraj would make a better governor than his elder brother; that the Senaputty though not an ideal character—he had been punished by deportation on two occasions for acts of cruelty to natives—would, by his popularity and force, strengthen his brother's rule. He could not accept all their protestations—but he evidently thought the best policy was to let matters stand as they were. On Dec. 4, 1890, MR. GRIMWOOD wrote on the question of restoring the Maharaja, who wished to recall his abdication :—

I would certainly not advise the return of the Maharaja, but, if he does come back, he should be accompanied by a force of our troops sufficient to overcome all opposition: but even then I believe the Jobraj and Senaputty would fight in preference to being sent into exile in India (p. 19).

So far MR. GRIMWOOD, and these views appear to have been shared by MR. QUINTON. The Secretary to the Chief Commissioner wrote to the Government on Dec. 31 last :—

It must, moreover, be remembered that the present occurrences are not the result of a revolution in which the people of the State have any interest, of foreign aggression, or of any ascendancy gained by rival chiefs, but are merely the outcome of a family quarrel between the brothers of a nominal ruler. The Chief Commissioner does not understand that the recognition by the Government of India of Sur Chandra Singh as successor to his father has any bearing upon the present condition of affairs, or that it justifies a claim on the part of the Maharaja for support in attempting to regain a position which he voluntarily gave up. The succession of the Jobraj, who has been recognised as heir by the Government of India, merely anticipates the ordinary course of events, and is generally acquiesced in by the people of the State. Since he assumed office the administration has been successfully and tranquilly conducted, and the Political Agent expects no opposition to it, whereas the restoration and maintenance in the chiefship of Maharaja Sur Chandra Singh, unless effected by a strong British force, would most probably involve repeated insurrections, such as those which have characterised the history of the Manipore State (p. 11).

Therefore MR. QUINTON considered that the Jobraj should be recognised as Maharaja. It was not until Jan. 24 that the Government of India found leisure to express any views on the events of September. It seems to us that if they had meant to take any action at all, it should have been prompt and decisive. Then the officiating secretary wrote to the Chief Commissioner, referring to the Senaputty's unfortunate repute, and concluding as follows :—

The opinion which the Governor-General in Council has formed from a perusal of the papers in this case is, that we should intervene with a sufficient show of strength to make it understood that we intend to be masters of the situation, that the differences between the Maharaja's brothers must be settled on principles of justice, and for the benefit of good government in Manipore, and that whatever arrangement is come to must have our full sanction. The Governor-General in Council thinks that you should visit Manipore for the avowed purpose of making, and if necessary enforcing, a decision upon the merits of the case. You should, in that case, probably have with you a sufficient force to overawe the conspirators. It is probable that a very small body of troops would be enough, and that sufficient numbers could be taken from Cachar or Kohima. In the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, if you find that the Maharaja would receive a reasonable amount of support from the people of Manipore, he might be reinstated, and promised assistance, in consideration of his implicitly following our instructions. The Senaputty should, in this case, be removed from Manipore and placed in surveillance elsewhere. Indeed, it will probably be desirable that the Senaputty should in any case be removed, for even if the Maharaja proves hopelessly incompetent, and the Jobraj is recognised, it would be necessary to remove his disreputable adherents from the State, and to punish the Senaputty for his violent and lawless conduct. I am to request the favour of an early expression of your opinion upon the course which is here suggested (pp. 20, 21).

Mr. QUINTON replied to this letter on Feb. 9, and after combating the idea of reinstating the Maharaja, concluded with the following forcible arguments against the course suggested by the Government:—

The Jobraj is the recognised heir to the throne; the Senaputty is his next brother, and they will not lightly forego their claims in favour of younger brothers. The present Government has now been in existence nearly six months, and is conducted with tranquility. It has shown itself in various matters amenable to the advice of the Political Agent, and has, as already reported, met the views of the Government of India in regard to the Manipore levy. The only manifestation of feeling against it is that described in the annexed extract from the Political Agent's diary of Dec. 20, which was of the most trifling nature, and I was assured by Mr. Grimwood, who met me at Kohima last month, that there was no feeling whatever shown in favour of the return of the Maharaja, and that the present Government was universally accepted. I have inquired further by telegram on this point, and will let you know should things now be otherwise. The punishment of the Senaputty is not in my mind in any way dependent on the Maharaja's restoration. An inquiry into his conduct and his punishment to the satisfaction of the Government of India can be made a condition precedent to the recognition of the Jobraj, and, unless it is intended to exclude him permanently from the succession, his recognition as Jobraj, in the event of the present Jobraj becoming Maharaja, should be made to depend on his obedience and good conduct. I am making arrangements for a visit to Manipore next month in view of the Government of India determining that the question of the return of the Maharaja should be reopened, but, if I am right in supposing that the point is one on which I am asked for an opinion, I would strongly advise against it. The question is one, as I said before, in which the people of the State have little interest, and is after all a mere family dispute; and a visit from the Chief Commissioner, and inquiries such as those suggested must have the effect of unsettling men's minds and disturbing the tranquility which now prevails without affording any better grounds than we now have for coming to a conclusion on the matter to be inquired into (p. 23).

Mr. QUINTON shortly afterwards reached Calcutta, and in a letter dated Feb. 19 (pp. 24, 25) reiterated the views he had expressed, saying that "as to maintaining an effectively dominant position whenever British interests require anything of the State . . . it appears to me that it will be more effectively asserted . . . by recognising the succession of the Jobraj on conditions to be made by ourselves, one of which should be an inquiry into the conduct of the Senaputty and his punishment to the satisfaction of the Government of India." . . . The Government of India did not fall in with these views. It was troubled by the consideration that "the Jobraj owed his present position rather to the successful issue of his brother's insurrection than to the authority of the British Government, and that while the Senaputty remained in Manipore unpunished for his treachery against his elder brother, the real power in the State would be in the Senaputty's hands." To this the Government of India could not consent, and it conveyed its decision in these terms:—

In the opinion of the Government of India, it is advisable that you should visit Manipore and make known on the spot the decision which the Governor-General in Council desires you to enforce. You should take with you a sufficient force even though opposition may not be expected, and you should report for the orders of the Government of India the conditions which you propose to attach to the recognition as Maharaja of Manipore of the present Jobraj.

With these extracts before us we can have no difficulty in fixing the responsibility for the policy decided on—the policy which led up to the journey of the Chief Commissioner. It is quite clear that neither he nor Mr. GRIMWOOD approved the policy, and that he did not consider a visit by himself to announce it and carry it into execution was advisable. The policy was that of the Government of India; and we must point out that it is easier to criticise it from House of Commons benches or editorial chairs than to appreciate all the considerations which were present in the minds of those who decided that it was necessary. It might have been wiser to let sleeping dogs lie; but, on the other hand, remembering the sensitiveness of Indian opinion, and the danger of allowing a successful revolt against an authority established and protected by the British Raj to stand unchallenged and unpunished, it may well have appeared a matter of vital moment to show all the Durbars in India that no such usurpation could be permitted. So much for the preliminary responsibility; we must postpone our examination into the responsibility for the failure to execute the Government orders until our next issue.

THE French Government has not been too friendly towards England of late, but the return of Mr. CUNINGHAME GRAHAM to his native soil is the unkindest cut of all. He was just the man for our excitable and hysterical neighbours, talks their language fluently, and is viewy enough for a French politician, while in this stolid community he is quite out of his element. Far from desiring to make his expulsion the subject of diplomatic remonstrance, we have a just cause of complaint. Had M. CONSTANS interned him in gaol for a year or two, LORD SALISBURY could not have objected, and the French Ministry would have had the thanks of the House of Commons. To Mr. CUNINGHAME GRAHAM the incident is of course a triumph and a joy. His only hope of notoriety is to be the object of attention from the police. The Daily News chronicles the fact that on his reappearance in the House of Commons he "received many congratulations on the unexpected success of his visit to Calais!"

HE has afforded the Parisian La France another opportunity of displaying its imbecile ignorance of outside affairs. "In matters of liberty," it observes, "we have nothing to learn from the English, and if it is the repression of revolted India that they would offer us as a model of liberalism we prefer to leave such glory to our neighbours. Let Mr. CUNINGHAME GRAHAM make his protests at home against the Manipore massacres." More absinthe! The writer of this amusing comment evidently imagines that Mr. QUINTON, COLONEL SKENE and the rest have massacred that mild and childlike native the SENAPUTTY, cut off his hands and feet and smeared his blood on the idols.

MME. BLAVATSKY is dead and has been cremated. Pereunt et imputantur. With her vanish whatever little brains there were in the Theosophic imposture. She was a clever woman, and had she not connected her tricks with religion might have made a fortune at prestigiation.

A HANDSOME Burmese bell from Mandalay has been placed upon the north terrace, in the vicinity of the Winchester Tower, at Windsor Castle. There are native characters upon the upper part of the trophy, which is supported by three cannon-shot, and mounted upon a stone pedestal bearing the inscription, "Mandalay, 1887."

SIR ROBERT and LADY HART and SIR R. GRESLEY, from Malta, the Hon. MISS STONOR, from Ismailia, and EARL BATHURST and his son, from Brindisi, were passengers by the P. and O. steamer Oriental, which arrived at Plymouth on Saturday morning.

The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. J. Fortune as Belgian Consul at Madras, with jurisdiction over the Presidency of Madras, the Province of Mysore, and the District of Kurg.

At the half-yearly meeting of the P. and O. Steamship Company, to be held on Tuesday, June 9, the directors will recommend a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the Preferred Stock, and an interim dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. on the Deferred Stock of the Company.

(i.) As regards the distribution of the Selected Candidates to the several Presidencies and Provinces mentioned in Regulation 1, the Selected Candidates will be divided into four groups, each containing 8 Candidates, according to the order in which they stand on the List resulting from the Open Competition (the first 8 in Order of Merit composing Group No. 1, the next 8 in order of Merit composing Group No. 2, and so on), and the Members of each Group will be allowed in the order in which they stand, each to choose, so long as a choice remains, one of the appointments allotted to that Group, as indicated in the following Table :—

Application for permission to exchange appointments must be made to the Secretary of State within one month after the date of choice made under par. 1, and in no case will an exchange be permitted unless it is, in the opinion of the Secretary of State, desirable, in the public interest, that it should be made.

The stamps payable on these covenants amount to 1*l.*

(x.) Candidates rejected at the Final Examination of 1893 will in no case be allowed to present themselves for re-examination.

THE ATTACK ON THE CZAREVITCH.

THE intelligence of an attack on the Czarevitch at Kioto, by a Japanese fanatic, which reached England on May 12, caused a thrill of excitement throughout Europe, and details were eagerly looked for. At first the general inclination was to credit the outrage to the Nihilists, but the confirmation from many sources of the original report, has reassured public opinion on that score.

The British Foreign Office has received a telegram from Mr. Hugh Fraser, British Minister to Japan, giving information of the attack upon the Czarevitch. The Press Association states that this does not throw any fresh light upon the reason for the attack. It has been considered right to say that the attack was the action of a fanatic or madman, but there is some reason to believe that this man was urged by others to do the deed. While the Czarevitch went through India, the guest of the Queen, great care had to be taken for his safety; and it is known that upon several State occasions there were suspicious characters about wherever his Imperial Highness went, and most vigilant watch had to be kept upon them by those responsible for the safety of his Imperial Highness.

The Paris Matin publishes a version of the outrage, which, after stating that universal alarm prevails at St. Petersburg, proceeds thus:—

It was at Gatschina that the news reached the Czar. The Empress was informed with the greatest precautions, but, in spite of this, she fainted away, and for some time remained unconscious. On regaining her senses her Majesty became greatly excited, constantly repeating that the truth was concealed from her, and that her son was dead. It is reported that the Prince received a somewhat serious wound in the head, and another on the left hand. Our despatch says that the Czarevitch was wounded as he was about to draw his sword. His aide-de-camp, Prince Bariatinsky, was with him at the time; but the attack was so sudden that he had not time to fend off the first sabre cuts, which poured like hail upon the unfortunate Prince. Rumour varies as to the perpetrator of the crime. It is attributed, on the one hand, to a Japanese fanatic; on the other, to a Nihilist convict escaped from Akhalina. Surprise is felt that the entourage of the Prince were not watchful enough to protect him against the possibility of such an attack.

It is a strange coincidence, the Vienna correspondent of the Standard remarks, that the life of the heir to the Russian throne has been seriously endangered by religious fanaticism at the very time when Orthodox fanaticism in Russia is mercilessly driving thousands of Jews from their homes in that Empire.

All the Russian newspapers are loud in their praises of the gallant act of Prince George of Greece in attacking the assailant of the Czarevitch with his stick and knocking him down, thus probably saving the life of the heir to the Imperial throne. The Russian people, it is declared, will never forget this of the Prince.

A Dalziel telegram from St. Petersburg says:—The news of the attack upon the Czarevitch has caused genuine concern in Russia, as the Prince is greatly beloved. The police authorities believe that the Japanese who committed the outrage was in the pay of the Nihilists.

The following official communication from the Japanese Legation appeared in Friday's papers:—

SIR,—I am directed by the Japanese Minister to forward for publication, if you think it desirable, the annexed extracts from a telegram which he has to-day received from his Government, in reference to the lamentable and dastardly assault on his Imperial Highness the Czarevitch by a Japanese fanatic.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

H. SHIMAMURA.

On the Czarevitch's reaching Kioto from Otsu, it was happily ascertained that the wound inflicted on his Imperial Highness was not of a serious character, and the illustrious Prince was able to converse with his usual urbanity.

His Imperial Highness is progressing favourably towards recovery, having enjoyed good sleep, and no fever is apparent.

The Imperial Prince Kitashirakawa, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs and for the Home Department, immediately proceeded to Kioto.

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan also arrived at Kioto at 10 P.M. on Tuesday, and in the forenoon of Wednesday had an interview with his Imperial Highness the Czarevitch.

This most unfortunate and deplorable occurrence has created intense sorrow throughout the whole country.

There is conclusive evidence that the criminal assailant is a fanatic.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Standard sends an account of the outrage. He says that the Czarevitch had gone to enjoy the picturesque delights of Otsu, a famous pleasure resort situated on the Biwa Umi Lake, about six miles from Kioto. The assailant was a native Japanese policeman, named Tsuda Sanzo, and he was able to strike at the head of the Prince with a sword. There is no room for doubt as to the murderous intent with which the blow was delivered; but, thanks no doubt to the toughness and thickness of the sun-helmet which the Czarevitch was wearing, the wound inflicted was, happily, comparatively trivial. It is described as a "sword-cut on the side of the forehead, not serious." It is needless to say (the correspondent adds) that the Emperor of Japan and his Ministers feel most acutely this outrage on a welcome and honoured guest. The occurrence was, of course, as far as the sentiment of the country goes, a deplorable accident. It is believed that the man guilty of the deed is insane.

The following from St. Petersburg (May 17) may give some correct idea of the origin of the outrage:—Contradictory versions are current regarding the place and circumstances in which the attack upon the Czarevitch was made. According to one report current in Court circles, the Czarevitch had entered a Buddhist temple with his boots on, thus wounding Japanese religious feeling. The chief Bonze expostulated with the Prince's guard on that account, whereupon the latter, rushing at the Czarevitch, struck his Imperial Highness with a sword on the head. Both the Bonze and the guard were subsequently arrested and lodged in gaol. Another account reports that the attempt on the Czarevitch was made in a place of public amusement, which his Imperial Highness had been induced to visit by his companions, and where they had given offence by behaving in an unruly manner. An air of probability is given to this recital by an addition to the effect that the Prince has asked that his assailant may be tried by Japanese law, in which case the man will probably be acquitted, as he apparently did not recognise the Czarevitch and his suite, and was simply doing his duty in causing order to be respected in a place of public resort at which he was on guard. It is said that the Czar has telegraphed a severe reprimand to the Czarevitch and the members of his suite for their indiscretion. No details of the occurrence have yet been received from Prince Bariatinsky, the Czarevitch's aide-de-camp.

Hindoo Susceptibilities.—In connection with the recent disturbances at Benares, says the Pioneer, there is a curiously instructive passage in Mr. Talboys Wheeler's "India under British Rule." "For many years," writes Mr. Wheeler, "the Brahmans at Benares utterly refused to have the sacred city lighted and drained. They declared that lighting and drainage were contrary to the Hindoo religion, and the arguments of the British magistrate to the contrary were a sheer waste of words. At last, in 1851, Mr. Frederic Gubbins carried out these municipal reforms in the teeth of a Hindoo mob. Then followed a commotion at Benares precisely similar to that which occurred at Madras in the seventeenth century, when the British rulers endeavoured to reform the sanitary condition of their city. The traders and bazaar dealers shut up their shops, and refused to supply the cantonment with grain. Mr. Gubbins was pelted and fired at, and fled for his life." Finally the ringleaders were arrested and punished, and for thirty years the Hindoos accepted the drains. It was only when it was proposed to perfect the imperfect that they again awoke to the incompatibility of sanitation and religion. Is this one of the passages which, in their eagerness—in this case surely somewhat exaggerated—to avoid offending Hindoo susceptibility, the senate of the Calcutta University have resolved to expunge from Mr. Wheeler's volume?

JUTE.—The past week has been quite featureless. As far as old jute is concerned the season is almost at an end, many balers having ceased working, although it is stated that fully two annas of the crop remains in the country. Nothing has been done in new crop. The clearances this month will be very heavy, and buyers at home do not show any inclination to enter into fresh engagements. As regards the prospects of the new fibre, we have had beneficial rain in some districts, but no reliable estimate of the yield can be formed at present.

GUNNIES.—Country buyers have again been busy in E's, C's and No. 2 twills for early delivery, paying fancy prices. Forward sales are also reported of E's at an advance on previous rates, and all round mills' ideas are higher. There was a considerable inquiry early in the week for U.K. goods, but the rise in prices and exchange seem to have choked off buyers for the present.

HESSIANS.—'Frisco secured a line of wheat bags for the sailers at 10 dols., and mills now hold for higher rates. New York also is in the market for 8 oz. 40-inch cloth forward, but as yet cannot pay mills' prices.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—The week opened very dull, and did not give promise of much, but after the first day a brisk demand set in, principally for jute shares, which has continued throughout the week. Jute mill scrip has claimed most attention. The principal transactions have been in howrahs and Fort Gloster ordinarys, which gradually stiffened in price, till 95 for the former and 82 for the latter was reached.

In Gold Shares business, as usual, has been almost exclusively confined to sonapets, though a few transactions have been reported in Bengal gold and silver and Western Patkooms. The former has been remarkably firm throughout, and has slowly and steadily risen by ½ a. till 1-12-6 rs. with founders was touched. The demand for Bengal gold and silver shares has slackened off considerably, and prices have receded to their former quotation of 8 a.

A trifle more has been done in tea. Singells and Bengal teas have advanced in price.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 4 per cent.

BOMBAY, May 1.

Business in wheat (the arrivals of which have continued to be very heavy) has been upon a much smaller scale, and prices have receded materially; while seeds have been taken for export to a moderate extent only at some reduction in rates. A moderate business has also been done in cotton, almost entirely for local account, in the earlier part of the week, but in which shippers have latterly participated. Exchange has fluctuated but slightly, and our quotations this evening are a shade lower for credits, but unchanged for Bank paper, compared with those ruling a week ago. Money is as abundant as ever. Government paper has shown little movement, and Fours are now 1-16 per cent. higher than they were last Friday. Freights, after being quieter, have become firm again at enhanced rates. There has been a pretty fair demand for imports in the principal lines of manufactures on the basis of previous rates.

MONEY.—The reduction of the Presidency Bank's rates by 1 per cent. at the board meeting last Thursday, making the minimum 4 per cent. at the busiest part of the export season, and with the crop of wheat and linseed coming to market in much larger quantities than was the case at this time last year, marks very strongly the position of quite unusual ease which has characterised the local money market this season. The Bank's statement of affairs, issued on Monday afternoon, showed the situation, as far as trade was concerned, to have remained, meantime, unchanged; for though the figures of the return disclosed an increase of nearly 9 lacs in loans, there had, on the other hand, been an accession of some 8 lacs to Private Deposits, and a falling-off of 2½ lacs in Bills Discounted, making a net diminution of, say, half a lac in trade requirements since the previous Saturday, a decrease of 8¾ lacs in the cash balance, as shown in the return, having been due to Government withdrawals. No further change was made yesterday, and the Bank's minimum remains at 4 per cent.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—A moderate business in staple grey goods has transpired, generally at about the same rates as ruled last week, though holders have in some cases offered better terms. Bleached, dyed, Turkey red, and printed goods are without change. In local goods, Zanzibar cloths are still in good demand, and rates for these are gradually improving, but other descriptions are dull.

YARNS.—There has been but little inquiry for imported twist during the past week, and only a small business has transpired in a quiet market, and with prices quite unchanged.

METALS.—Copper has been taken to a moderate extent in a steady market, and on the basis of previous rates. Yellow metal has advanced 4 annas per cwt., and is steady at the rise. Iron is steady at previous rates for all descriptions.

COAL is steady. Sales have been reported during the week of a cargo of Hasting's Hartley, on the way, at 13½ rs., and a cargo of Powell's Duffryn, for June-July shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton; also 1,000 tons of Nimo's Longrigg, for May-June shipment, at 13¼ rs. to 13½ rs. per ton.

Exports.—COTTON remained quiet to the close of last week, with nothing whatever doing for export, and little for the mills, and prices unchanged, excepting that for Dhollera, which was quoted 2 rs. per candy higher. On Monday there was more inquiry from local spinners, but exporters were still almost out of the market, and the feeling was quiet; but an advance of 1 r. was attained in Westerns, Belatee, and Dharwar. This state of things continued till yesterday, with a further advance of 1 r. per candy in Dhollera, and a decline to the same extent in Belatee, when a much better demand was felt for export, and a considerable business transpired. Exports have taken about 4,500 bales of Oomra varieties, Dharwar, Bengal, and Bhownugger. The market closed quiet, with prices, compared with last week, 3 rs. higher in Bhownugger and Dharwar, and 1 r. to 3 lower in Broach, Oomra, and Khandeish.

The receipts of this season's crops of cotton for the past week have been 60,100 bales, as against 61,600 bales in previous week, and 95,200 bales in corresponding week last year. The decrease in receipts this season compared with last continues to become greater, the falling off now shown being 183,800 bales, against 148,700 bales a week ago.

WHEAT has been in much less demand for export this week, only a small business having been done on most days, the tone of the market having been either quiet or steady. Prices gave way 1 a. per cwt. all round on Monday, and again on the following day there was a decline of 2 to 3 a. per cwt., but the market remained steady at the reduced quotation.

SEEDS have been taken to a moderate extent for export in a generally steady market. Linseed advanced in value ½ a. per cwt. at the beginning of the week, but two days later there was a decline of 1 to 2 a. per cwt., both in linseed and rapeseed. Gingelly is unchanged in value.

Both wheat and linseed continue to come to market in very large quantities, the increase in arrivals of the former, compared with those last year for the same period being now over 2 million cwt., while in linseed it is getting near 1½ million cwt. Rape and Gingelly seed also show an increase, but other descriptions show some falling off.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to May 6; Madras, May 7; Bombay, May 9.

H.E. the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne opened the Simla season on May 2 by giving a picnic at the Glen.

The Times of India says:—A statement recently appeared in an Allahabad paper that it had the highest authority for saying that the Viceroy did not intend staying much longer in India. It is almost unnecessary to refute such an absurd statement, but as some people might be misled, we may once for all say that it is absolutely devoid of any foundation.

The Supreme Council was to commence business at Simla on May 14, by considering the Colonial Admiralty Courts Act.

The mother of King Thebaw, who was deported to Rutnagherry with her son, has been allowed to return to Rangoon.

Lord Wenlock has taken up the subject of popular banks for India.

It is thought that Lieutenant Grant, of Thobal fame, will be rewarded with the Victoria Cross and a brevet majority. There is an excellent precedent for such a step, says an Indian paper, in the recognition of the services of Lieutenants Chard and Bromhead in the defence of Rorke's Drift. Each was promoted captain and brevet major and received the Victoria Cross as the reward of an achievement which has much in common with Lieutenant Grant's courageous action at Thobal.

Dr. Styles, 18th Bengal Infantry, who was reported to have died, is alive and doing well. The report was a mistake.

Mrs. Grimwood, widow of the late Political Agent of Manipore, has been suffering from a serious attack of brain fever, caused by the shock of her husband's death. She is now out of danger, and will sail, as speedily as arrangements can be made, for England.

Several native chiefs recently offered troops to the Government of India, for service anywhere, but especially in Manipore.

It is understood that owing to disagreement of long standing the heir-apparent of Faridkot has left the State, accompanied by two of his wives. He has been disowned by the Raja in consequence.

A Madras paper estimates that the number of persons affected by the present distress in the Southern Presidency amounts to about four millions, distributed over an area of some 18,000 square miles.

Cholera has broken out at Sirsa and Gurgaon. It is said to be caused by the return of pilgrims from Hurdwar.

Swarms of locusts still impede traffic at Jhelum. In the Tallaganj district, nearly 400 tons of locusts have been destroyed without appearing to make much difference. Trains are delayed for hours near Rawal Pindi owing to the plague.

The police recently seized 150,000 percussion caps that were being smuggled across the border. The frontier tribes make their own powder and bullets, but send to India for caps. The police are unable to trace the seller or manufacturer of the caps.

VICE-ADMIRAL THE HON. SIR E. R. FREMANTLE, K.C.B., has arrived at 5 Montpelier Square, from the East Indies Station, on the expiration of his three years' command.

IT is understood, says a political note in the Times, that the front Opposition bench are considering the advisability of bringing forward a resolution challenging the whole policy of the Indian Government with regard to Manipore. Owing to the illness of several prominent Gladstonians and to the fact that SIR W. HARCOURT is detained in Derbyshire, it is improbable that any decision will be come to this week; but there is a strong disposition to take the sense of the House on the matter and to raise the question in as direct a fashion as possible, and it is expected that early next week the Government will be asked to give the necessary facilities for a full debate.

The special committee appointed to promote the interests of the Hygienic Congress in India and our Eastern possessions has received several additions. It now consists of Sir Owen Tudor Burne, Sir A. C. Lyall, Sir C. A. Turner, Sir John Strachey, Sir Joseph Fayrer, Sir Guyer Hunter, M.P., Sir George Birdwood, Sir Edward Bradford, Sir W. Wedderburn, Sir Frank Forbes Adam, Sir W. S. Moore, Surgeon-General Cornish, Mr. H. S. King, M.P., Dr. Cunningham, Dr. Hendley, Mr. G. W. Allen, Mr. George Yule, Mr. Dadabhoy Naoroji, and Mr. Samuel Digby, the honorary secretary for India. Every mail brings most encouraging promises of support, and the whole of India, official and non-official, British and native, is likely to be well represented at the Congress. His Excellency the Viceroy has just submitted to Viscount Cross the names of gentlemen as suitable delegates for the various provinces of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, North-West Provinces and Oude, Punjab, Burma, Central Provinces, Assam, Central India, and Rajpootana. The social arrangements for the Congress are in a forward state, thanks to the energy of Sir Spencer Wells, the chairman, and Mr. Malcolm Morris, the honorary secretary of the reception committee, and a long list of entertainments and pleasant excursions has been provided.

It is reported that Messrs. Krupp are negotiating an important contract with the Chinese Viceroy, Li Hung Chang, for the construction and fitting of a factory for cannon and small arms at Tientsin. The locus of the factory is to be near the Kaiping coal-fields, and Krupps are to undertake the establishment of the factory and the working of it for a certain number of years, after which it will become the property of the Chinese Government, Krupps meantime to have a monopoly of the manufacture of the articles produced by the factory. It is further stated that the negotiations are being carried on by the German Minister in China, and that he has paid for the concession in the shape of diplomatic complaisance, the precise nature of which may appear later on. At present it is said not to be unconnected with certain advantages obtained by the Chinese in the discussions preceding the recent imperial audience to the foreign representatives in Pekin.

The Gazette of May 19 contains a General Order and despatches, received at the India Office from the Government of India, relative to the late operations of the Zhob field forces against the Kidarzais and others.

A propos of a pleasant article in the Globe on old Addiscombe, Major-General Henry Beville writes suggesting that "in these days of regimental dinners it would not be out of place to establish an Addiscombe Dinner, which, I feel sure, would be most popular, and would bring together the 'old boys' who have not forgotten where they received their early training as soldiers." The Editor of the Globe regards the suggestion as a good one, and states that he would be glad to receive the names of any old Addiscombe cadets who desire to join the movement.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams are from the Times Calcutta correspondent :—

With the conclusion of the Manipore and Miranzai expeditions, India is settling down for the usual summer quiet, though it is impossible to say at what moment it may be again interrupted.

There has been no recurrence of the disturbances in Calcutta, an account of which was given a week ago, and as the Hindoo owner of the mosque which was the original cause of the tumult has agreed to sell it to the Mahomedans, any further outbreak of feeling is unlikely. But this riot, following closely on that at Benares, and due in the same manner to a religious cause, serves to show how excitable an Indian mob is, and how constant is the danger of similar disorders which might perhaps be followed by more disastrous consequences.

The monsoon appears to be breaking in Ceylon and in the south-eastern portion of Madras. The prospects in the distressed districts of Chingleput and North Arcot, where the relief works are still open, have been improved by a cyclonic storm bringing rain. The price of food is unusually high in many parts of Northern India, owing to the defective harvest last year and other causes.

The Meteorological Department reports that an abnormally high pressure has been prevailing in the North of India for the last three months, probably due to the excessive snowfall, and that the pressure has been abnormally low in Eastern Bengal and Assam—conditions which lead to an apprehension of a late and light monsoon in the Punjab direction.

A sad accident is reported from Benares. A large Hindoo bridal party had gone on the river, according to custom, to worship the Ganges, when the bottom of the boat gave way, and the occupants were thrown into the river and drowned. Nineteen bodies have been recovered, and it is believed that they do not represent all the victims.

GUP.

AT a representative meeting of sportsmen held at the Town Hall, Simla, on May 4, under the chairmanship of the Hon. Mr. Hutchins, the following gentlemen were elected to represent the various clubs, for the purpose of fixing and arranging a sporting programme for the season :—Representing the Gymkhana Club—Captain S. Gordon and the honorary secretary of the Club ; for the Races—Brigade-Surgeon W. Taylor and Mr. C. Vincent ; for the Polo Club—Captain Cavendish and one officer from the Jutogh Garrison, Simla ; for the Cricket and Football Club—the Hon. Mr. Hutchins and the honorary secretary of the Club. Lord William Beresford was unanimously elected honorary secretary of the general committee for the season.

Racing days, wrote the Pioneer correspondent at Simla on April 24, have already begun. The first of the gymkhanas, which it is proposed to hold every week, came off on Saturday at Annandale. Captain Pakenham, who has taken over the secretariat duties, put forward, with the aid of a strong body of stewards, a programme of six events, all of which filled well. The spectators were numerous, and the sport was excellent. After a race for Goorkhas, in drill order, came the tent-pegging. There were no less than fourteen competitors, but they were gradually weeded out till the contest lay between three. Run after run was made, and neither of the spearmen missed, though the size of the peg was lessened on each occasion. Finally the peg was placed sideways, and Mr. Fasken only touched it ; but Major A. Alexander struck it with extraordinary precision and carried off both the peg and first honours. The pony that Major Alexander rode seemed a perfect glutton for work, as it insisted upon nearly completing the circuit of the course at each run. The needle-and-thread competition had its humorous side. The competitors were so numerous that they overlapped the rather narrow course, and had to be started in two lines. At the grand stand each rider had to find his lady nominator, who was in waiting with the thread for his needle, and it must have been galling to any one of the competitors to find that he had left his needle at the starting-point or dropped it en route. Such things do happen, however. Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, who nominated Lord Valletort's pony, won the bangle, which was the guerdon for this event. The Postillion Race produced a desperate finish between Lord William Beresford and Captain Ford ; the latter at one time led by a street, but was beaten on the post by the popular Military Secretary. The only legitimate race of the day was won by Captain Cavendish's br. c-b. p. Problem, ridden by Captain Gordon. The Ulta Pulta Race, in which some strove to be first and others to be last, no owner riding his own pony, and no other spur than emulation being allowed, resulted in Dr. Taylor on Captain Home's Bogie Man being first, and Captain Hume on Mr. F. Roberts' Polly last. The prospectus for three days' racing at the end of next month has been already published in the papers, so that sport, so far as racing is concerned, has rosy prospects. The regular cricket season has not yet begun ; but there have been one or two matches, though of no particular interest.

"Has leave been stopped?" is a question, says a contemporary, which now exercises Simla minds. Fraught with great consequences is this matter. It means, if leave is stopped, a somewhat slow season. Ladies will be in the majority, dances will flag, theatricals will be difficult to get up. However, the latest has it that leave has not been stopped, and tranquillity once more reigns supreme.

A correspondent of the Deccan Times, in giving an account of a recent sporting expedition made by H.H. the Nizam, relates the following, which occurred on April 27:—"Khubber having come in during the day of a tiger at Poosapully, a village situated some six miles to the west of Manukota, the Nizam and party hurried off immediately to the spot. After a little beat, the tiger showed himself, and was fired at by his Highness, but unfortunately was slightly wounded. Naturally the tiger became furious, and the Nizam's command, that nobody should try to put an end to his life, but added to his rage. Just then a terrible accident happened to Mr. Schœffer, who accompanied the party, and would in all probability have proved fatal, but for the stern courage he mustered up at the moment. While in the act of coming down the rock he was seated on, and shifting to another place, in order to avoid the necessity of violating his Highness's command, Mr. Schœffer unfortunately slipped and fell on the ground. The tiger, whose rage was at its height now, seizing the opportunity, charged at Mr. Schœffer, and would have despatched him; but he, by a clever movement, managed to put the gun he held in the hand, into the tiger's mouth, and shot him dead. The would-be fatal accident was thus averted, and Mr. Schœffer escaped without the least injury to his body. There was a heavy shower of rain that evening, and the enjoyment of the party was, no doubt, marred to a certain extent. His Highness and party arrived late in the evening at camp, and their success elicited loud cheers from the masses. The tiger bagged measures nearly 11 feet.

A well-known shikari and reputed tiger-slayer, who is at present resting at Mahableshwar, sends us, says the Times of India, the following sensational account of sporting there:—Captain Fowle and Captain Peyton have both shot panthers during the last few days, he writes, and Captain Jervis very nearly shot a tiger. The only other shikaring that has been done has been by the son of our most respected citizen. His mother presented him with a new bow and arrows, and his bag up to date has been his little sister, flesh wound in left leg; next-door neighbour's favourite ayah, shot in neck, nasty wound, but doing well; and the padre's cat. This latter was a running shot at twenty yards, and has given "Young Hopeful" great satisfaction and confidence in his powers as a marksman. A cordon of sentries has been drawn round Government House to prevent his shikaring there. I was taken the other day to see the "view" from Bombay and other points; but the trees have grown up and entirely shut out what was a most magnificent panorama. The reason of this is that "Moorites" and the "Shuttleworthites" have issued a law that no tree or bough of a tree shall on any account be cut down, so the trees grow and grow, and the few views that are left are being rapidly shut out, the only consolation being that the "Moorites" and the "Shuttleworthites" aforesaid are enabled to pursue their morning walk unencumbered by the troublesome sunshades.

The Zadkiel of Bengal takes an unusually gloomy view of things in general in his forecast for the year ending April 12, 1892. "Fire, robbery, disease, and physical and other disturbances will rage with much vehemence in every country." There will be inundations in Bengal and famine in Southern India. Lord Lansdowne will resign owing to ill-health, the National Congress will probably come to grief, and the Age of Consent Act will be repealed. We may doubt this more than that the number of criminals will be so large that the gaols will be overcrowded, and that the Ameer will get into trouble through intriguing with Russia. And it was perhaps unnecessary for Zadkiel to predict that "many people will die in India and America owing to physical calamities."

It is satisfactory to note that female education is producing more practical good in East Bengal even than in Calcutta itself. For instance, forty-four Bengali ladies are said to have signed a memorial in favour of the passing of the Age of Consent Bill from Mymensing and sent it to the Viceroy. Of these twenty-five are Hindoos, two Mussulmans, seven Christians, and ten Brahmins.

"Yer Worrship," said a Scotch policeman to Mr. Wise at the Police-court, Hong Kong, the other day, "I charge the defendant with hawking fruit without a license." "What kind of fruit?" queried the Bench. "Turnips, yer Worrship," said the constable. Tableau.

Mr. Ward, Chief Commissioner of Assam, was to start from Rangoon for Calcutta about May 17. He expected to leave Calcutta again about the 25th, so as to take over charge of the province at Dhubri on the 27th.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

We have to announce the death of Mr. Colvin B. Dunlop, partner in the firm of Messrs. Horne, Dunlop & Co., merchants, Calcutta. The deceased, who was only twenty-seven years of age, had been ailing for some time of typhoid fever, but it was hoped till the last that he would recover. Mr. Dunlop only came to India in 1886, but during the few years of his residence in Calcutta he had become a general favourite. He was a good athlete, and excelled as a football player, while he was for some years a member of the Calcutta Naval Volunteers. On returning from a visit to England this year, he joined the Calcutta Light Horse.

The Deccan Times records the sudden death, at Secunderabad, of Mr. George L'Estive, who three years ago was tried, but acquitted, on the charge of having murdered his wife by shooting her in the building then known as the Victoria Hotel. The cause of death is attributed to heat apoplexy. The deceased was formerly a contractor at the Yellandu Colliery, but was recently employed by the Sultan Nawaz Jung, an Arab chief, residing in Hyderabad. He was deputed by the Sultan about a year ago to explore the former's territory in Arabia, where silver, coal, sulphur and linctus were discovered by the deceased. Mr. L'Estive was about to proceed to Arabia and start mining operations there, but his departure was delayed, owing to some hitch in the despatch of the machinery from England. By his death a widow and four children are left unprovided for.

The Lahore paper announces with regret the death at Delhi on May 3 of Mr. Carr Stephen, barrister-at-law. He had served in the Punjab Commission from June 1865 as extra assistant commissioner and Small Cause Court judge until October 1875, when he became extra judicial assistant commissioner, first grade. After ten years' service in that grade he became officiating divisional judge in November 1888 for a few months. Altogether his service in the Punjab Commission had lasted for over thirty years, during which time he had gained the confidence of Government, for his appointment as divisional judge was only vetoed by the Secretary of State. He then retired from Government service, and was enrolled in the Bar of the Punjab Chief Court about twelve months ago. He was a public character in the Punjab, and his goodness of heart was appreciated by all who knew him, especially among the natives. He was archæo-logical and literary in his tastes; and, in addition to his Indian Registration Act, published a "Handbook of Delhi" and an "Archæology of Delhi."

Mr. Joseph Jefferson, of the firm of solicitors, Messrs. Jefferson, Bhaishanker, Dinshaw, and Kangas, died at Coonoor on May 4, after a short illness. Although Mr. Jefferson had reached the allotted span of human life, his accustomed vigour of mind and body had led his friends to believe that some years of healthy energy were still before him, and his death has come upon them as an unexpected shock. He left Bombay for Coonoor with Mrs. Jefferson and his daughter early in April on account of the delicate state of his wife's health, and intended to return to business in Bombay by the end of June, leaving his wife and daughter at Coonoor. About April 10 he was attacked by lumbago, and latterly suffered from jaundice, but his medical advisers were not, up to within a short time of his death, apprehensive of any serious consequences from these attacks. A letter was received on Monday morning by his firm stating that he was making satisfactory progress, and that he expected to be in his usual health in about a week. The only intimation of his death was a telegram received on Monday evening from Miss Jefferson.

Major C. H. Gordon, R.E., died at Grahamstown, Cape of Good Hope, on May 3. Major Gordon joined the Army on Jan. 13, 1869; became captain, June 30, 1881; and major, Oct. 11, 1887. He served in the Egyptian War of 1882 (medal and Khedive's star).

Major M. Laugharne, R.E., died at Jullundur, East Indies, on May 5. He was only son of the late Rev. T. Laugharne, some time Rector of Bredenbury, Herefordshire. Major Laugharne joined the Royal Engineers Jan. 13, 1869; became captain, July 1, 1881; and major, Jan. 8, 1888.

Colonel J. Delves Broughton, R.M.L.I., died on May 5, at the age of fifty-five. He entered the service in June 1854, became regimental lieutenant-colonel in June 1882, and retired with the rank of colonel in November 1885. He served in the Crimea, 1855 (medal); at the capture of Canton and occupation of the city, from 1857 to 1859; and in the North of China, 1860, as acting deputy-assistant commissary-general (medal with clasp for Canton).

Colonel H. F. Pritchard, major, Retired List, Royal (late Madras) Artillery, died at Streatham, Surrey, on May 9. He joined the Madras Artillery Dec. 12, 1857; became captain Aug. 15, 1867; major, Jan. 7, 1875; lieutenant-colonel, Jan. 7, 1882; and retired with the honorary rank of colonel, June 21, 1883.

The memory of the late Bishop French, whose death from sunstroke at Muscat is reported, will long be revered in Northern India. The story of his missionary labours in the East was told not long ago in fitting words by Sir James Lyall, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. Dr. French was a distinguished graduate at Oxford, and, being a man of private means and good connections, the road to an honourable and profitable career at home was open and easy before him. He preferred, however, the hard life of a missionary in India; and, going out to the East in 1850, he established the Church Mission College at Agra. While he was principal of the college the Mutiny of 1857 broke out. When the European community were taking refuge in the fort he refused to join them unless his native Christians were allowed to enter with him. In 1862, with Dr. Robert Bruce, now a missionary in Persia, he founded a mission station at Dera Ismail Khan, on the Punjab frontier. "As a missionary," Sir James Lyall truly said, "he worked with the utmost zeal and self-sacrifice. He became a great scholar in the native languages, and wrote and translated many useful books. He travelled in his missionary journeys long distances in India, Persia, and Afghanistan, and on many occasions was at death's door from the hardships and diseases he endured." In 1878 Dr. French was made first Bishop of Lahore. He resigned this post at the end of 1887.

The death is announced at the age of eighty-four of Dr. Ewen Macdonell, which took place at his residence, 59 Nevern Square, S.W., on May 18. He was the son of Lieutenant-Colonel Archibald Macdonell, who gained considerable distinction in the Walcheren Expedition, in Egypt with Abercromby, and in the Peninsula, and was rewarded with the coveted gold medal for distinguished services, was made commander of Veterans, and appointed lieutenant-governor of Edinburgh Castle. Dr. Macdonell, having studied medicine, went to India in 1835, and received an appointment under the East India Company. During the Mutiny he raised the Sewan levy, and in recognition of his services was decorated with the Mutiny medal, and was accorded the special thanks of the Government of India. He also received a letter conveying her Majesty's approbation of his gallant conduct during that critical period.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

The following telegrams have been received by the Times since our last issue:—

Calcutta, May 19.—The trial of the Tongal General was to commence to-day if the prisoner was well enough. The Regent's trial will probably begin on Friday or Saturday, but it may be postponed.

It now seems certain that Mr. Quinton, Colonel Skene, Mr. Cossins, and Lieutenant Simpson did not fall victims to the excited mob, and that they were not tortured, but were deliberately beheaded by the Senaputty's orders early on the morning of the 25th.

Angao Lena, otherwise called Doloroi Hanjuba, the third brother of the Manipore royal family, has been arrested. He is the man who assumed the title of Senaputty after the Regent assumed that of Maharaja last year, but he must not be confounded with Tekendrajit, the Senaputty who was the moving cause of the massacre.

Calcutta, May 20.—The man who speared Mr. Grimwood, and who was recently captured, has been examined and condemned to death. The sentence is subject to confirmation by the Government. He is an adherent of the Senaputty, and he confessed his guilt.

The State executioner, on being examined before the Political Officer, said he beheaded all the prisoners except Mr. Grimwood, who had been previously killed. He received his orders from the Senaputty and the Tongal General. The execution took place about two o'clock on the morning of the 25th. The prisoners were placed standing, with chains on their legs and their hands tied behind their backs. Their heads were cut off with a dhao, or Burmese knife.

CAPTURE OF THE SENAPUTTY.

Calcutta, May 24.—It is the common experience of the Indian police officers that the most certain way to capture an absconding native criminal is to watch his village, to which he is sure to return sooner or later. The Senaputty seems to be no exception to the general rule, for he has been traced back to Manipore. A subhadar who was travelling with him has been seized, and, according to the latest news, his own arrest is hourly expected. It may, however, be doubted whether a man of so determined character, knowing that he has offended beyond forgiveness, will allow himself to be taken alive, and it will be remembered that he told Mr. Williams, "The British Government may get my corpse, but never me alive." Probably the next few days will settle this matter.

Meanwhile the trials of the other prisoners are proceeding. The last man tried was the one who speared Mr. Grimwood, and who made no attempt to defend himself, but gloried in his crime. The Tongal General's case was postponed to last Thursday. The state of health of the accused may have necessitated a further postponement, but, as direct telegraph communication is not yet open, news takes about three days to come. Orders have been given that all death sentences are to be referred to the Indian Government for confirmation. This precaution seems hardly necessary, as the punishment of a prisoner swiftly following his conviction would convey a more effective lesson.

Questions arising out of Mr. Quinton's action continue to be much discussed. What his exact intentions were will probably never be known. It is quite possible that he meant merely to announce the Government orders to the Regent and the Senaputty at the durbar, and to direct the former to arrest and hand over the latter, promising the support of the British troops if required. Such a course might be imprudent, but it could not be called unfair. The Government, however, and some few newspapers appear disposed to maintain that even if Mr. Quinton's intention was to have the Senaputty's arrest effected by a British officer in the durbar hall of the Residency, the plan would still have been perfectly proper and consistent with Indian practice and customs; but the great bulk of the public takes a different view, holding that, whatever the Oriental practice may be, such a method of proceeding is opposed to British ideas.

That the mission was originally planned and carried out with an extraordinary want of precaution or inquiry about the real state of affairs is a point on which there can be hardly any difference of opinion. Beyond doubt there is much truth in the suggestion made in the leading columns of the Times, when the news of the disaster first reached England, that the Indian Government has its attention so engrossed by the affairs of the north-west frontier that it is apt to overlook those of the north-east.

Later.—News has just been received that the Senaputty was arrested last evening by a subhadar of the Burma Valley police, after a fierce struggle.

Calcutta, May 24.—A despatch received here from Manipore states that the Senaputty, who was the chief cause of the recent massacre, has at length been captured. He was taken by Major Maxwell yesterday in the Chassad Hills.—Reuter.

Later.—The latest despatches received here state that the Senaputty was captured quietly at a village not half a mile from the Arame Palace in Manipore. He was disguised as a Naga coolie. Although crowds of Maniporis were about at the time of his capture, there was no attempt at rescue and no popular demonstration.

Slight cholera still continues among the troops in Manipore.—Reuter.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office for publication:—

"From Viceroy, May 21.

"Collett telegraphs to-day:—'The youngest Prince, Zilla Gunda, was arrested this morning by Major Maxwell's agents, and is now a prisoner in our hands.'"

LIEUTENANT GRANT'S ACHIEVEMENTS.—THRILLING NARRATIVE.

The following is a summary of his own account of his late exploits as given to the special correspondent of the Pioneer:—On the 27th of March he was in command of Tammoo, with eighty men of the 12th Burma Infantry, when he was ordered by General Stewart to move at once on Manipore with his detachment, the idea being that Mr. Quinton and other officers were still alive and he might possibly rescue them. Jemadar Bildar had arrived at Tammoo with thirty-four men of the 43rd Goorkhas from Langthobal, having fought his way past the Manipori thanas, burning such as fired upon him. Lieutenant Grant selected fifty men of his own regiment, and forty of the 43rd, with their brave jemadar. His own sepoys were Punjabi Mussulmans, and a few being Pathans. Twenty were old soldiers, and the others recruits who had been drilled for eight months, but only fired a few rounds of ball cartridge at the musketry practice. There was plenty of Snider ammunition at Tammoo; and 160 rounds per rifle were taken for the fifty men; but the men of the 43rd were armed with Martini-Henry rifles, and had only fifty rounds each, no more being procurable. The transport consisted of three elephants, a few ponies, and some Cossiah coolies. The column started a day after receiving orders from General Stewart, and had only proceeded seven miles when they were fired upon by Kahow Chins in ambuscade. These were quickly dispersed. Then the Manipori soldiers began to be seen at the second stage from Tammoo. One hundred came in view and fired a few shots, but did not venture into close quarters. Lieutenant Grant bivouacked in the afternoon, starting again at 11 o'clock at night. After an hour's march the road was discovered to be blocked by trees, which had been cut down and fenced across the path. A hundred and fifty Maniporis occupied a sheltered trench on a hill, just above the road; but it being a bright moonlight night, the obstacles on the road were soon removed, and the position of the enemy was carried by a rush. In the morning the force arrived at Palel, which was garrisoned by two hundred Maniporis, who took to their heels, and were pursued for three miles, three prisoners being taken. One was the cook of the Aprai Major, an official in charge of the road from Manipore to the Tammoo road, and who had that day been in command of Palel. This prisoner gave an account of the massacre, and said that Aprai Major had been instructed to close the Tammoo road and resist any troops moving towards Manipore. "I did not like the news much," says Lieutenant Grant in telling his story, "but I did not believe it. I considered over the matter, and, arguing that if the military authorities wished me to return, they could easily recall me by a messenger from Tammoo, I decided to push on. I thought I might find a fort of some kind, in which I could entrench myself, leave my baggage and transport under a small guard, and go out with the rest of my men, taking plenty of ammunition. In that way I believed I might afford help to the prisoners." Having arrived at this conclusion, he wrote to Captain Presgrave, who he thought would be the officer sent up to Tammoo, telling him what he had heard and what he intended to do. This letter was given to the cook, who was sworn in Manipori fashion on a drawn sword to faithfully deliver it at Tammoo. His two fellow-prisoners were threatened with death unless he fulfilled his oath, and so terrified were they, and so fully did they believe the threat would be carried out, that they most carefully instructed the old man as to the route he was to take. This done, Lieutenant Grant started on the night of the 30th for Thobal, and by dawn his flanking parties began to drive the Maniporis before them. By daylight he came in view of the open plain extending for miles from side to side across which the road passed on to the right. All was open, but running parallel with the road on the left was a military line of walled compounds, each with two or three houses masked by trees and bamboos. It was in one of these compounds that afterwards a defensive position was finally taken up. A watercourse was close to the compounds, crossed by a bridge which was burning; to save which Lieutenant Grant hurried up his men, galloping forward himself to reconnoitre. As soon as he reached the watercourse, and without the least warning, fire was suddenly opened at a range of fifty yards.

A Bullet through his Coat.

Lieutenant Grant got a bullet through his coat, and was slightly wounded in the back. He thought this was the chance to test his men. They were in fighting formation, twenty being in firing line, ten in support on each flank, and forty with the baggage. The order was given to advance, and, to use Lieutenant Grant's own words, "they behaved beautifully. It was like a page out of the drill book. There was a volley from the right party, and a rush from the left, and vice versâ. We lost only one man in the first rush. He was shot through the head. I thought for a moment he was hanging back, but on reaching him I saw that he was dead. The enemy were firing through loopholes in the walls hidden by hedges. We got to within 100 yards of them, but the watercourse was between us, and I could not tell their number. We laid down and fired for ten minutes, but made no impression. I went back to the supports on each flank, and ordered them to creep up wide of the first firing line, but, like brave fellows as they are, they jumped up, rushing forward right to the edge of the stream, and began firing the fighting line with fixed bayonets. There was a cry from the left that the enemy were running, and then we plunged pell-mell into the watercourse. It was rather deep, and one little Goorkha disappeared altogether for a second. I myself got fast in the weeds, and was ignominiously hauled out by a jamedar, but we got across somehow. The Maniporis were seen in full flight, their white clothing making them excellent targets. On the enemy's left was a lot of rifle-pits, and in these numbers were caught like rats in a trap and bayonetted. On the right were the compound walls giving good shelter, but behind them lay a number of dead, shot through the head." There were 800 men holding this position.

A Strong Position.

The position held by the enemy was strong as they were entrenched behind the walls, and having a fairly deep stream in the front, and while the least hesitation on the part of Lieutenant Grant would have meant the destruction of his party, the forty Punjabis and Goorkhas, for that was really all the attacking party consisted of, have covered themselves with glory. There was no fort to storm or occupy, but Lieutenant Grant made for himself a position that he was able to hold. He occupied three compounds beyond the water-course, destroying most of the houses in them, cutting down the trees so as to form an abatis about the walls. His camp proper, containing his transport and followers, occupied the corner of the compound, nearest to the water-course; to which he afterwards made a covered way so as to secure his water supply, and his rear was protected by the channel. His right was safe as the country was quite open. His front was fairly secured as he had two compounds partially clear beyond his camp proper. Leaving a wall well in advance from behind was some cover on his left, which an enterprising enemy would have taken advantage of. In the houses were found some tons of paddy and fifty pots of liquid goor, both of which were welcome as supplies were running short. For the remainder of the day the enemy did nothing, but early next morning they were seen on the move eight hundred yards away. Two shots were fired at them, and a man dropped each time. They withdrew at three in the afternoon. They advanced in great strength. The wall in advance of the entrenched camp was lined by our sepoys, who waited patiently until the enemy were within six hundred yards, when they poured into them volley after volley. The Maniporis soon retreated, and about an hour afterwards got two seven-pounder rifle guns into position on a hill, exactly one thousand yards from the wall, and opened fire with common shell. They got the range in three shots, and then began using shrapnell. The practice was good, but a few volleys from the Martinis of the Goorkhas killed some of the gunners. The guns were then withdrawn to fifteen hundred yards, one only coming into action at five o'clock. A second attack was made on the left front, the weakest part of the position. This was repulsed, and the Maniporis drew off to their original position. All that night the enemy fired into the camp, but Lieutenant Grant would not allow a shot to be fired in return. At three the following morning every one was awakened to assist in completing the defences of the camp, the entrenchment and abatis were strengthened. Telegraph wires were laid outside as an entanglement, loopholes were cut, and no efforts were spared to make the camp an entrenched one in the full sense of the term. On April 2 as the Maniporis showed no sign of renewing hostilities, further defensive measures were taken; and more trees were cut down for the abatis, but sufficient were left to mass the camp from the artillerymen on the hill.

The Parley with the Raja.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, April 2, Lieutenant Grant was out reconnoitering with a party in the direction of the enemy's lines when he saw a man signalling with a flag. Taking out his own handkerchief and tying it on a stick he replied to the best of his ability. The man then ran forward. He proved to be a Goorkha signaller, belonging to the 44th Regiment, who had been taken prisoner at Manipore. He presented a letter from a number of Babu clerks, &c., who had been taken prisoners in it. They begged Lieutenant Grant to go back, stating that if he continued to advance they would all be killed, and adding that the Regent was in communication with H.E. the Viceroy regarding the recent events in Manipore, and that Mr. Williams was with them. Lieutenant Grant thought this was an officer belonging to one of the Assam regiments, so he sent word back: "Why does not Mr. Williams come? Send him to me to-morrow." The Goorkha returned to Manipore, and was sent back with an offer from the Senaputty to suspend fighting that day, to which Lieutenant Grant assented. Next morning Mr. Williams appeared. Lieutenant Grant met him well outside the camp, and for the first time acted the part of Colonel Howlett. He borrowed two stars from a Jemadar's shoulder straps, and placed them on his own. He was no longer a Subaltern, commanding a small detachment, but a Colonel with a regiment at his back. It was to this ruse that he unquestionably owed much of the respect with which he was afterwards treated by the Maniporis, who had no real idea of the strength of the force with him, or that one solitary young officer was leading. They had a taste of the fighting quality of these bold intruders, who continued to push forward, after learning that five hundred Goorkhas had been beaten at Manipore and officers of high position killed. On meeting Mr. Williams Lieutenant Grant saw that he was not the officer he had expected to meet. Mr. Williams explained he was the telegraph signaller, and stated that the Maniporis had only taken him out of irons on April 1, and sent him to Thobal to negotiate. Mr. Williams then presented Colonel Howlett, whom he took Lieutenant Grant to be, a communication from the Senaputty Tekendrajit, stating that the prisoners would be released if the force would retire. Lieutenant Grant replied in a letter to the following effect:—"You tell me you are going to release the prisoners if I go back to Tammoo. That is all very well. I will go back, but all the prisoners who wish to return with me must come with me." This letter he signed as Colonel Howlett. Mr. Williams went off with the reply, and returned with an answer that all the prisoners wished to go direct to Assam. The Senaputty added that if Colonel Howlett wanted rations to enable him to return to Tammoo they would be given to him. Colonel Howlett sent back word that the Baboos can do as they like, but the sepoys must obey orders, and come with me. If one of the prisoners is harmed the officers here will not be able to restrain the Sikhs and Punjabis from killing every man and burning every house in the country." Lieutenant Grant could not resist the temptation at this critical moment to show his contempt for the cowardly lot of men he had defeated, so added a postscript: "I am going to shoot some ducks; don't be afraid." Lieutenant Grant spent the remainder of the day in strengthening his camp. Panjis, that is, sharp bamboo spikes, were freely placed about, and ladders were made in order that the roofs of houses might be reached in case of fire. There was no thought of withdrawal, the sepoys being in good spirits and confident of holding out against the whole of the Manipori army. On April 4 Tekendrajit sent a letter giving a complete list of the prisoners, and a statement signed by the principal Baboos saying that all wished to return to Assam. He added that the supplies demanded, namely, 500 lbs. of atta, 50 lbs. of dhall, and 50 lbs. of ghee, were being sent at once for Thobal from Manipore, and closed his letter by saying "all the prisoners were released yesterday, and to-day you must go back to Tammoo. You will not be harmed on the way there, as a proclamation has been issued that you are to pass through in safety."

A Treacherous Ruse.

Had Lieutenant Grant closed with this offer and marched away he would probably have found himself treacherously attacked on the road and his party destroyed, but with his brevet rank of Colonel there seems to have come a ripening judgment by which he was able accurately to gauge the danger which enveloped him. He therefore replied to the Regent, as Colonel Howlett, in the following terms:—"Your Highness may be correct in determining to send the prisoners to Assam so as to convince the authorities that it was not your fault that the recent disturbance took place, and that you had taken the first chance in putting yourself right, but that does not do away with my difficulty, which is that I cannot possibly go back empty-handed. I therefore suggest that your Highness should send to me a man of high rank of your court as a hostage. I will release him on parole during my march, and on arrival at Tammoo I will give him up my own horse, and treat him like a gentleman. As soon as I have received a telegram saying the prisoners have reached Cachar in safety I will send him back with an escort as far as he likes. On my arrival at Tammoo, I will at once wire to H.E. the Viceroy that your Highness is doing all you can to restore order. I thank your Highness very much for sending the rations, but I cannot accept them till matters are settled." This letter was given to two Manipori Baboos, who had brought the communication from the Senaputty. They talked in Hindoostani with Lieutenant Grant, as they supposed Colonel Howlett, for about an hour, but were kept at a safe distance from the camp, so that they could learn nothing as to the strength of the force. On the 5th the Goorkha signaller came from Manipori again. This time without any note, and said all the prisoners were gone, and he was going too. Prince Angaon Sanka, commanding the troops in front of Lieutenant Grant's camp, had told him to inform Lieutenant Grant that unless he retired at once upon Tammoo the camp would be attacked. Lieutenant Grant asked if nothing was said about a hostage, and the Goorkha replied a subadar was offered as such. Lieutenant Grant thereupon wrote to the Manipori commander as follows :—"I cannot possibly go back. I should be disgraced if I went away with empty hands. A subadar is nothing like a good enough hostage for 108 British subjects. I suggest the Aprai Major, the gentleman who has charge of the Tammoo road, as a suitable and fitting personage as a hostage. Directly he comes I will get ready to start, but give you to understand that I will not go back empty-handed." This letter closed the negotiations. The Manipori had occupied the village in Lieutenant Grant's rear and another on his right flank, but they were too far off to do any mischief, and dared not advance any firing from these directions, as when an attack was made in the front and on the left their bullets might strike their friends. Meanwhile Lieutenant Grant had heard nothing from Tammoo, though many anxious looks were cast down the road for the help that it was hoped was near at hand.

The Third Action.

On the 6th he had to fight his third action, and the mettle of his men was severely tried. A little before six in the morning the enemy's guns opened fire, and fifteen shells fell in and about the camp, wounding two of the elephants. At seven the guns ceased firing, and the Manipori infantry advanced to the attack. This time Lieutenant Grant contented himself with holding the enclosure, which was his camp proper, on the bank of the watercourse. He did not line the wall in advance, but he had strengthened the abattis there, so that the enemy would not readily remove it. Fire was reserved till they were within 200 yards, when he gave the signal, and then his men began pouring in steady volleys. The Manipori immediately took to the cover offered by walls and trees. At 8 A.M., finding the attack was most pressed against his left front, Lieutenant Grant took ten Goorkhas, crept out along the watercourse, enfiladed the walls on his left, and in a few minutes had cleared that side. The party was fired at by the Manipori holding the village in Lieutenant Grant's rear, but without effect. At 11 A.M. no impression had been made on the camp, the sepoys being so well protected that they could fire accurately through the loopholes without exposing themselves. Lieutenant Grant now determined to try and clear his front a little, taking six Goorkhas of the 43rd with their havildar. He himself was armed with a double-barrelled sixteen-bore breech-loader and a revolver. The party crept up the ditch between the road and the compounds, got to the corner, and enfiladed the wall, behind which there were one hundred of the enemy, who ran at once; but facing the corner, and cut off from it by a deep ditch full of water, was a wall five feet high, from which the Manipori began firing. Luckily it was not loopholed, so they had to expose themselves when aiming for a quarter of an hour. The Goorkhas had some fine snap shots at the heads as they were raised on the wall, while their young commander was using his buckshot cartridges with fine effect. At last the Manipori, finding the exposure was almost certain death, sneaked away from this hot corner, and his immediate front being clear, Lieutenant Grant returned to his entrenchments. The havildar, Gambir Rai, who was with him, had the lower joint of his right thumb smashed by a bullet, but he never let go his rifle or complained of being wounded. After this there was a pause of about an hour in the fighting, during which Lieutenant Grant sorrowfully emptied his last box of ammunition after it had been served out to his sepoys. The sepoys of the 12th Burma, armed with Sniders, had fifty rounds per rifle, while thirty Goorkhas with Martinis had only twenty rounds each. Lieutenant Grant speaks in the highest terms of the way in which all his men husbanded their ammunition throughout. There was no wild firing, and the discipline was admirable.

After the last reserve of ammunition had been served out, he issued orders stopping all firing. The enemy were to be allowed to approach to within 100 yards before being greeted with volleys. The men were ordered to lie down under cover, one in every six being left as a look-out. The Manipori reopened fire, but their aim was as bad as ever. The look-out men showed supreme contempt for their enemy, and not a man winced, though the trees about them were constantly being struck by bullets. As the afternoon wore on Lieutenant Grant told off his best shots at the loopholes to shoot steadily at such Manipori as exposed themselves. In this way a considerable number were accounted for. It was a trying time, but the enemy, after the experience of the morning, never made an organised rush upon the entrenchments. They slowly withdrew at sunset, firing parting shots, and the firing was at an end. Lieutenant Grant then counted up his losses, which were amazingly small. One man killed, two sepoys and one muleteer wounded, two ponies killed, two wounded, and two elephants wounded. For fifteen hours his men had been under arms without a mouthful of food, and they had well earned their reward of a good night's rest. This they had, for the Manipori ceased firing after dark. At dawn patrols went out, but in place of the long line of the enemy they saw very few, probably not more than 200 were left. The rest had gone to Manipore to report their failure to destroy the terrible Colonel Howlett and his party. Lieutenant Grant examined the ground which the Manipori had held in making their attack, and found it carpeted with cartridge paper. Enfields must have been their weapons, with a few Martinis and Sniders; only the cartridges were of Government make, bearing the Dum Dum marks, some as late as 1889. At a rough calculation at least eight thousand rounds must have been fired at the camp during this day's fighting. All April 7 was spent in making the defences stronger, more panjis being packed in position, as the greatest danger would be from a rush in overwhelming numbers. Food was running short, and search was made for rice, but with small success. At noon two men appeared, carrying a white flag; one was a Burman postman, who had been sent with a letter from Tammoo to Manipore, and was carrying back a letter from the Maharaja to H.E. the Viceroy. He reported that only 300 Manipori were left out of an army of between 2,000 and 3,000 strong who had attacked on the previous day. Lieutenant Grant opened the Maharaja's letter without ceremony, and was amused to find his Highness complaining of the doings of one Colonel Howlett, and requesting H.E. the Viceroy to cause him to withdraw. The postman had also in his possession a telegram addressed to Mr. Quinton. This also was opened, and found to be from H.E. the Viceroy.

Captain Presgrave's Arrival.

Lieutenant Grant now saw a chance of communicating with Tammoo. He wrote a letter in French, using Greek characters, to Captain Presgrave, saying what had happened, and where he was, and added as a postscript that Captain Presgrave could go for the Manipori wherever they were, as they were terrible cowards and would run away. He added : "Bring your havresacks full of ammunition, there's lots of food here, but my ammunition is running short. Bring medicine also for mal de ventre." This was all in French, and the illness spoken of was dysentery caused by the Punjabis having to live on rice diet solely. The postman went off with this letter, which no doubt puzzled Captain Presgrave when he got it, for, as Lieutenant Grant now says with a smile, "It was vile French." Lieutenant Grant expected Captain Presgrave's party would reach Palel that night, and come on at once; so at 4 A.M., on April 8, his men fell in. His intention was as soon as the relieving party appeared in sight to rush the Manipore position, and take their two guns. His men were told this, and they were delighted at the prospect of completing the general humiliation of the enemy. Dawn came, but no one was in sight on the Tammoo road, and after waiting for some hours Lieutenant Grant dismissed his men. The day passed without incident. On April 9 a man came out with a white flag, and stuck up a letter in the cleft of a stick, close to the Manipori camp. Lieutenant Grant was out with a patrol, and fearing a trap he drew off the stick; then advanced half way between the two camps, and went forward and took the letter, It proved to be from Captain Presgrave addressed to Lieutenant Grant, and was dated April 3. If Captain Presgrave said his orders were to assist Lieutenant Grant to retire, and that he was on no account to get himself involved, his party was not to be considered as a reinforcement to enable Lieutenant Grant to advance, and that the latter was to retire on Palel on the first convenient opportunity. The history of this letter was that the old cook who, as already stated, had been sent to Tammoo, had on his return to Manipore shown it to the Regent, who had read the letter, and, seeing a good opportunity of ridding himself of Colonel Howlett's force, had sent it out to Thobal with these distinct orders before him. Lieutenant Grant had no option but to seize the first convenient opportunity to retrace his steps. He had beaten the enemy three times, and though they were in the villages in his rear, they were too disorganised to do him much harm. That evening there was a tremendous thunderstorm of the kind which comes when the monsoons break in this part of the country. Getting his men together, he set out in pouring rain at 7 P.M., the night being pitch dark. The movement was of the slowest, as the column had to wait for each flash of lightning to see their way. It took two hours to do the first half mile, but the sepoys toiled on, passing within a few yards of their sleeping enemies, who could not hear them in the storm. Not a shot was fired at them. Lieutenant Grant thought his men would greet the relieving party when they met with loud shouts of welcome, but with all the pride of successful soldiers they took everything as a matter of course. The actual meeting was curious enough in its way. The young soldier was stumbling along through the mud almost dead beat and half asleep from fatigue, when a sepoy immediately in front of him stopped and remarked in quite an ordinary tone of voice, "Guard aya, sahib." Lieutenant Grant asked what guard—that over the baggage or what guard? "From Palel" was the response. Lieutenant Grant looked up, and by a flash of lightning saw Captain Presgrave standing before him. This was about 2 A.M. on the morning of April 10. The parties united and marched on to Palel. Such was the end of the brilliant exploits of Lieutenant Grant and his eighty sepoys.

THE ORIGIN AND CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE MANIPORE TRAGEDY.

We take some extracts from a deeply interesting narrative, obviously embodying information derived from the only survivor who has a knowledge of the occurrences in the Manipore Residency which were the prelude to the catastrophe, from the Calcutta Englishman. In perusing the narrative it is necessary to bear in mind the declaration of Lord Cross, the Secretary of State for India, in the House of Lords, on the 2nd instant, that "he did not believe that the Indian Government ever intended that the Jobraj was to be summoned to a durbar for the purpose of being arrested, and he would be greatly surprised if that was what had been done." Here is the narrative :—

The Resident Kept in the Dark.

On Sunday, March 15, Mr. Gurdon arrived at the Residency at Manipore, having been sent forward by the Chief Commissioner, presumably to make inquiries and to gather information. On Monday, the 16th, he closely questioned Mr. Grimwood with regard to Manipori affairs. Mr. Grimwood was well posted on the subject, and gave all the information sought for; but from first to last he was studiously kept in ignorance of what was the object of the Chief Commissioner's coming, and for what purpose he was being questioned. So marked was this, that (as a blind we must now think), to the astonishment of Mr. Grimwood and of the Manipore Durbar, 500 coolies were requisitioned for the Chief Commissioner on the Tammoo road, and, further, the telegrams, which passed between Mr. Gurdon and the Chief Commissioner were communicated in the Italian language. On Tuesday, the 17th, Mr. Gurdon left to rejoin the Chief Commissioner, and on Friday, the 20th, Mr. Grimwood went out to meet him at Seng mai, returning on Saturday, the 21st, at 7.30 P.M. In the interval between Mr. Gurdon's departure from the Residency and Friday, Mr. Grimwood, and Lieutenant Simpson, of the 43rd Goorkhas, who happened to be a guest at the Residency, went out on a shooting expedition, which had been organised for them by the Jobraj.

THE INTENDED COUP.

When Mr. Grimwood met the Chief Commissioner at Sengmai, he was for the first time, and in strict confidence, told that it had been determined to arrest the Jobraj in open Durbar and deport him from the country, and he was informed to his dismay that his was the hand required to execute that office. On Sunday, the 22nd, the Chief Commissioner arrived at Manipore at 9 A.M., with his escort, having been met some distance on the road outside the town by the Jobraj, the individual whom he had come to arrest, and a Durbar was ordered at noon to be held in the Durbar Hall at the Residency. The military officers were not taken into the Chief Commissioner's confidence. Mrs. Grimwood had been told by her husband on his return from Sengmai of the intended coup, but she had maintained at his request the strictest reserve on the subject. Mrs. Grimwood, however, as the time approached, took advantage of an opportunity to beg of the Chief Commissioner not to force upon her husband the distressing task of arresting the Jobraj, since he had always been on very friendly terms with her husband and herself, and earnestly besought him to impose that disagreeable duty upon someone else. The Chief Commissioner firmly declined to alter his plans, alleging that it lay in the province of Mr. Grimwood's duty to make the arrest, and in reply to Mrs. Grimwood he informed her that the reason of the arrest was that the Government of India could not allow anyone except themselves to make and unmake Maharajas, and since the Jobraj was such a power in the country he must for reasons of State be sent out of Manipore. At the hour appointed, the Maharaja, often referred to as the Regent, the Jobraj and the Senaputty arrived at the Residency, but they were not admitted into the Durbar Hall, because the translation of a certain document from the Government required for the occasion had not been completed.

THE SUSPICIONS OF THE JOBRAJ.

This delay gave the Jobraj the opportunity of noting the unusual disposition of the troops under four British officers on the steps of and surrounding the house on every side. As a matter of fact, though this could not have been known to the Jobraj, the troops were posted as a guard in every room leading out of the Durbar Hall, and at every point of egress from it, four sepoys being located in Mrs. Grimwood's bedroom. After the translation was ready, that is to say at about 1.30 P.M., the Maharaja entered the Durbar Hall; but the Jobraj and the Senaputty could not be found. The Maharaja waited two and a half hours. During this period Mr. and Mrs. Grimwood remained with him, doing the honours of the house. The Chief Commissioner steadily refused to see the Maharaja in the absence of the Jobraj, while the Jobraj on his part persisted in excusing himself on the plea of ill-health. Eventually the Durbar was postponed until the next day, Monday, the 23rd, at 8 A.M. When that hour arrived, word was brought that the Jobraj could not attend, as he continued unwell, and the Durbar was postponed until 12.30 P.M. on the same day. At that hour the Jobraj again refused to come, still alleging the same excuse.

FROM THE ULTIMATUM TO THE TRUCE.

At 4 P.M., the Chief Commissioner, apparently recognising the futility of attempts being made to secure the attendance of the Jobraj before himself, sent Mr. Grimwood to inform him (the Jobraj) of the decision of Government, and to peremptorily require him to leave the country, giving him a stated time for his preparations and to make his adieus to his family. Mr. Grimwood went on this mission to the Jobraj's palace with Lieutenant Simpson, who had volunteered to accompany him. For three hours Mr. Grimwood remained with the Jobraj, striving, but without success, to persuade him to leave the country, holding out the hope in accordance with his instructions that he (the Jobraj) would be allowed to return after three or four years if his conduct during that period was considered satisfactory to the Government; but the Jobraj stolidly refused to leave his country, protesting that he had not done anything to deserve banishment. At daybreak next day the palace was attacked, as already reported. At 7.30 P.M. there was a truce. Mr. Grimwood now suggested abandoning the Residency and retiring to certain heights, about 1½ miles back, arguing that the fact of the telegraph lines having been cut would have given warning to their friends of a disaster. Mr. Grimwood, who again at his own request was accompanied by his friend, Lieutenant Simpson, was sent out to parley. The Jobraj declined to negotiate with anyone other than the Chief Commissioner in person, and the Chief Commissioner at about 8.30 P.M. went forth to sue for terms.

The Times of India publishes the following telegram from Allahabad (May 8): A permanent garrison of about two thousand strong, with six guns, will be left at Manipore. The Field Force will presumably be broken up on arrival of General Graham at Tammoo and Colonel Rennick in Silchar. A messenger has arrived from Captain Dun, commanding the force in pursuit of the fugitive Princes, asking for more rations, and adding that a report has been received, stating that the Raja has not yet reconciled himself to surrender, while the Jobraj is expected to offer resistance. It is thought by those on the spot that Mr. Quinton intended in open Durbar to declare the decision of the Government of India making the Regent Maharaja and ordering the deposition of the Senaputty, and then to call upon the newly-created Maharaja to make over his brother as a prisoner. If the Maharaja declared his inability to do this, then the question would have arisen as to whether force should be instantly employed or the Durbar be broken up, with the intimation that steps would be taken within a few hours to arrest the Senaputty. In the latter case he would have had an opportunity of escaping, but judging by after events he would not have sought safety in flight, as he had collected so large an armed force in and about the capital. An eye-witness has given the following details of the end of Mr. Quinton and his party:—After entering the Palace enclosure, on a truce being sounded, the party proceeded to the durbar-room and sat there for over an hour with the Jobraj, the Maharaja not being present. After trying to come to terms, but failing, the whole party again left the durbar, the Jobraj turning to the right into the palace, and Mr. Quinton's party turning to the left towards the Residency. The party having gone some little way, and seeing a large and threatening crowd in front of them, turned back hastily to the durbar-room, the crowd following. As they were going up the steps a man rushed forward and speared Mr. Grimwood, who was last, in the side, and he fell. The remainder were pushed into the durbar-room by one of the ministers. After about half an hour they were turned out of the room and proceeded through the first gate to the open space by the dragons, where they were rushed upon and killed. The durbar-room is on the upper storey of a star-shaped house; six steep steps lead up to it from the road outside.

Cholera, though of a less virulent type, still continues at Manipore. It is contemplated to evacuate the Palace altogether, blowing up the walls and defences, and withdrawing the troops to the open country to the north and west of the city, where it is intended to erect a temporary shelter as quickly as possible. The insanitary condition of the Palace and villages in the neighbourhood and the bad water supply render further occupation inadvisable.

THE RESIDENCY RUINS.

The Pioneer correspondent writes from Manipore:—I have just paid a hurried visit to the Residency, or rather to its ruins, for it has been levelled to the ground. Four white pillars of masonry stand out in all their grim significance among the piles of broken bricks, which are all that are left of the basement of the building, save the steps leading to the verandah. The very trees at the foot of the steps have been rooted out. The ground in which the Residency stood presents a scene of terrible desolation. Charred timbers and fragments of brickwork alone show where the dispensary, school, and the gateway with the post-office and the quarters of the guard, once stood. The mud walls which guarded the compound, from behind which the Goorkhas replied to the fire of the Maniporis, have been thrown down, and on every hand there is evidence that the work of destruction was thoroughly done. Major Trotter's grave has been desecrated and bodies cast into it. Standing on the ruins of the Residency one can see with what effect the guns were used against it, for 150 yards away is the wall of the Palace enclosure, safely protected by a moat. It has bastions for artillery, but there are no embrasures in these, and the face of one bastion was broken away, as if to give greater freedom for fire. Shells fired at this point at blank range would strike the Residency with terrific force, while the musketry fire in reply could scarcely be effective, as the gunners could load their light pieces protected from shots by the wall and fire them in security. More than ever it is clear, after visiting the Residency, that it was not good as a defensive position.

It was commanded along its front and left flank by the walls of the Palace enclosure, and any sortie from it could be met by continuous musketry fire from a banquette behind this wall. To have crossed the moat would have been impossible, as it was well filled with water. For Colonel Skene to have acted on the offensive it would have been necessary for him to rush the gateway, and his men would have had to expose themselves in the open for 300 or 400 yards to the fire of thousands of men who lined the banquette, and also to that of a gun placed so as to sweep the approach to the gate. The latter had strong wooden doors which would only have yielded to artillery or explosives. The Residency was, in fact, in the worst position which could have been chosen for offence or defence. As to the interior of the Palace enclosures and the Senaputty's house and the temple, which played an important part in the earlier phases of the fighting, I can only say that the general impression one gets is that the whole place was so overgrown with trees and jungle that any attack upon it to be successful would require that the force should be well in hand, and its movements be most carefully directed; otherwise it would run the risk of being destroyed amidst a labyrinth of houses and the compound walls in which it would get involved.

THE MIRANZAI EXPEDITION.

The following telegrams are from the Times:—

CALCUTTA, May 19.—A special Council meeting was held yesterday. It was decided as to the future policy regarding the Miranzai frontier. The troops will remain on the spot pending the decision of the Government.

CALCUTTA, May 23.—The Miranzai expedition is now at an end. The 60th Rifles and the Manchester Regiment started on the return march yesterday. All the native infantry follow shortly, except those regiments which will remain to garrison Samana for the summer. Everything is now perfectly quiet, and the tribes who were lately fighting against us are freely bringing in grass and supplies.

Sir W. Lockhart has received a telegram from the Commander-in-Chief congratulating him on the very successful termination of the operations. This has given much pleasure to the officers and men.

Our total loss has been over one hundred killed and wounded, including five British and three native officers, so our success has not been so cheaply earned as is generally the case in frontier expeditions. It is difficult to determine the enemy's loss, owing to the Pathan practice of carrying off the dead, but they lost 300 killed and wounded in a single engagement at Mastaon, and their total casualties must have been large.

Prince Christian Victor has left camp for England on leave

MAY 24.—It is impossible to speak too highly of the manner in which Sir W. Lockhart has crushed what threatened to be a most serious combination of the tribes by the rapidity with which he followed them into their fastnesses and dealt them blow after blow. The officers and men have well seconded him. In the midst of great difficulties this brilliant little campaign has been a success from first to last, and will, it may be hoped, permanently secure peace in the Miranzai Valley.

The Pioneer publishes the following :—

Simla, April 28.—The wing of the 4th Gurkhas reached Kohat last night. The wing of the Manchester Regiment should arrive to-night. The 24th Punjab Infantry have reached Pindi.

May 4.—General Lockhart telegraphed that he returned to Sangar on the 3rd, leaving the column at Gwada to follow. On the 4th the towers at Daradar were blown up, but the fines on Mamazai, Daradar and the Shekhans were remitted. Portions of two villages belonging to these sections had been burnt, contrary to instructions. Four towers in the village of Mera Khel and one in Ada Garhi were also destroyed, and three in Inzawar belonging to the principal instigators of the recent outbreak. The General intended to push forward the construction of the posts, commencing with Gulistan, so as to make the position on the Samana range secure.

Kharai Kotal, May 1.—Yesterday the defile in which are situated the five villages of Dra was forced and occupied with slight resistance. To-day four of the Samil clans, namely, the Rubia Khels, Momazai Darabar, the Shiekshain and the Mishtis have all sent in their prizes and rendered submission. For answer they have been told that the matter will be considered when they restore the rifles taken from the 29th Punjab Infantry on April 4 and he post bags and mules carried off from the convoy which was recently attacked near Sangar. This they have promised to do to-night. It was against these tribes that the expedition was made in January last. The fortified towers that guarded the defile and village have been blown up, and thus retribution has been meted to them within a month of their treacherous outbreak on April 4. Heavy rain is now falling.

Allahabad, May 7.—News from the Miranzai Expedition says :—The fourteen Martini-Henry Rifles taken from the 29th Punjab Infantry on April 4 have been brought in and handed over by the Firgha from the Sheikhan country.

Our Correspondent with the Miranzai Field Force, says the Englishman, draws attention to the scrupulous care with which General Lockhart has avoided the infliction of unnecessary injury on the tribes whose country is now being overrun. There has been no question hitherto of that form of warfare euphoniously known as "reprisal." The villages have wherever possible been spared, the growing crops left uninjured, and, except where an action has taken place, the returning tribesmen will find their homesteads as they left them when they fled at the approach of the expedition. The fortified towers, however, which form, as once in feudal Europe, the stronghold of petty robber chiefs, have been ruthlessly destroyed, and, more important still for the future welfare of the country, the Engineers with the force are actively engaged in opening up new roadways. With good communications, the question of pacifying the frontier tribes is already half-way towards solution ; and the development of trade may be trusted to complete the work.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

The Times correspondent telegraphs :—The Akazais in the Black Mountain still hold aloof, though there seem to be signs of their approaching submission. Meanwhile the troops remain in position, and their health continues to be good.

The Pioneer publishes the following :—

Seri, April 29.—Two companies of the 11th Bengal Infantry are moving to Chind village in the Shal Nulla. After continuous rain on Monday, a heavy storm broke yesterday over the camp and continued from noon till the evening. The troops kept wonderfully dry, considering they had only waterproof sheets for shelter. The proposed gymkhana here has been postponed for a week.

April 30.—General Elles went to-day to Punjigali, where the 32nd Pioneers are encamped, making a road through from here to Bandi, a village eight miles from Oghi. From Punjigali the general walked on to Pabalgali along the line of the new provincial road, which is to follow the crest of the Black Mountain from Pabalgali on the south-west to the Jal Pass on the north-east. As soon as the road from here to Bandi is opened for convoys the posts at Tilli and Ril will be given up. Lieutenant Waterfield, 11th Bengal Lancers, has left to join his new appointment at Simla. Major Grant, Seaforth Highlanders, has proceeded to Rawul Pindi on duty.

May 2.—The enemy replied to our raid of the other day by creeping past the sentries last night, cutting down one pony of Mr. Burke, photographer, carrying off two ponies belonging to a bunniah, and also stealing some head of sheep and goats. The marauders fired at our pickets of Seaforth Highlanders, who promptly replied, but they escaped under cover of the darkness, aided by heavy rain, which fell in early morning, and by daylight they were no doubt across the Shal Nulla.

To-day, by way of retaliation, the 37th Dogras were sent to burn the village of Najorian while the Guides destroyed the villages of Dare and Lari. No resistance was offered, although Najorian was found to be occupied.

The weather is still very unsettled.

Captain Hamilton, Superintendent of Signalling, proceeds forthwith to Kasauli, and Major Rogers, Dehra Dun Mounted Rifles, who was sent up on special duty as an officer of Volunteers, also quits the force at once.

Darbanrai, May 2.—General Hammond and staff with No. 9 Mountain Battery, R.A., without guns, 300 men of the Welsh Fusiliers, and 150 men of the 2-5th Goorkhas, started from Darbanrai at 5.30 A.M. on April 30 and marched to Maira, where Colonel Stead and two companies of the 11th Bengal Infantry joined the column, which descended the hills to Biliani on the left bank of the Indus. Four men crossed the Indus on mussuks and obtained possession of a raft on the other side. Lieutenant Stewart and twelve men of the 11th Bengal Infantry then crossed and captured some sheep and goats, only a few of which could be got across to our side of the water owing to the raft breaking down. A large amount of khaseel was taken away for forage and much wood was taken out of the village for burning. The troops got back to camp about eight o'clock in the evening after a long and tiring day and under a hot sun.

May 5.—The following movements of troops in the 2nd Brigade are ordered :—The Derajat Mountain Battery from Maira to Darbanrai on the 6th ; No. 9 Mountain Battery, R.A., on the 7th from Darbanrai to Maira, arriving at Panj Galli on the 8th ; the Royal Welsh Fusiliers from Darbanrai to Seri by half battalions, commencing on the 7th, completing the move by the 10th ; the right wing of the 2-5th Goorkhas march from Tilli on the 6th and rejoin the regimental head-quarters at Darbanrai on the 8th. The 2nd Brigade headquarters remain at Darbanrai.

THE INDIAN WHEAT TRADE.

The extraordinary rush in the Indian wheat trade has been notified by telegraph. The Bombay Gazette gives the following interesting particulars of the pressure on the Bombay side :—

It is a curious fact that while Europe has suffered so extensively, India has this year had an unusually large crop, so large, in fact, that had not Europe failed, and had to look eastwards for help, grain-growers in India would have had more supplies than they could have possibly disposed of. This then is the secret of the extraordinary exports of grain, chiefly wheat, which have been going on during this month. Severe as was the winter in Europe, it was a blessing in disguise to some people, as they are finding out now. It has caused a revival in trade, temporary it may be, but still a revival, which is bound to do an immense deal of good. First of all, it has made railways in India busy, necessitating an increase of their labouring staffs, and so bringing work to thousands of the unemployed ; it has caused some excitement and a circulation of money in Europe, even though the price of wheat has risen seven shillings a quarter, and has been standing lately at about forty-two shillings ; and another important feature in connection with the traffic is the benefit it is doing to shipping. For many years past we have had more seaworthy ships than there was employment for ; the result of which was that the rate of freights from Europe in particular has fallen very low, so that the high rates that are being given for the present export of grain from India come as a perfect godsend to those shippers fortunate enough to secure the contracts.

It may be imagined from this, and from the fact that the price of wheat has gone up in Europe, that it means dear bread during the next year ; but that is not so. Speculators have been taking advantage of the scarcity to run up the prices ; but that will not last long. The freights offered for export from India may be high, but the harvest in India has been so unprecedentedly large that the grain can be sold cheaply, as indeed it must if it is to compete with the American grain which will be ready for export to Europe in June.

We will now come to the work in Bombay in connection with this extraordinary export of wheat, the like of which has never hitherto been known ; and a better idea could not be gained of this than by visiting the Wari Bunder Goods Terminus of the G.I.P. Railway and the Prince's and Victoria Docks. Such bustle and such excitement never were witnessed there before. Referring first to Wari Bunder, in ordinary times only four or five of the dozen loading and unloading platforms, which average about 1,000 feet long by 40 feet broad, are in use. On one memorable occasion nine of them were used, but now, and, indeed, since the beginning of the month of April, the whole twelve have been taxed to their utmost capacity. The platforms are closely packed with sacks of grain piled up eight deep, and it may be better imagined han described what a tremendous number of coolies and bullock-carts must necessarily be employed daily to remove those bags of grain to the various godowns in the city or to the docks for shipment. But not only on the platforms are the bags of grain stacked. They are piled all over the goods yard wherever there is room to put them ; and as far as the eye can reach, all round, nothing is to be seen but stacks of grain, trucks waiting to be unloaded, and bullock-carts loading, arriving, and departing. But there is nothing so convincing as figures, and these we will proceed to give in round numbers, so that an idea may be formed of the extent of the work. About 35,000 tons of wheat alone have been exported during this month already, but that is a mere trifle compared with what has yet to go when it is considered how much is arriving in the city by the G. I. P. Railway alone for shipment. From 800 to 1,000 trucks arrive every day, and as one truck represents eleven tons on an average, that means that 8,800 to 11,000 tons are deposited at Wari Bunder each day, which must be removed to godowns or to the Prince's and Victoria Docks. Then, as there are about 10 bags to the ton, that means from 88,000 to 1,11,000 bags. Going still further, as each bullock-cart is supposed to carry eight loaded sacks, sufficient carts must be engaged to do from 11,000 to 14,000 journeys per day to and from Wari Bunder. In fact they usually begin work in the morning on about 2,00,000 bags, reducing them by about half in the course of the day. Such increase of labour has naturally necessitated a large addition to the employés, and at present the Wari Bunder Staff of the G.I.P. Railway Company numbers 1,332 pairs of hands, consisting of 713 clerks and foremen, 110 sweeper-boys, 402 hamals, 305 of whom are extra hands, 22 tarpaulin repairers, and 85 markers, sewers, sealers, carpenters, watermen, &c. The average labour of each hamal or coolie per day is to unload about 25 tons, from which it may be guessed every man has to work hard, as indeed, a mere glance at them in passing suffices to show. By the B. B. & C. I. Railway the returns show arrivals in the city of about 1,000 tons per day, and by steamers and native craft about 300 tons. Taking these together as we have done the above, we find that they amount to 13,000 bags to be conveyed to godown or dock, bringing up the total to from 1,01,000 to 1,24,000 bags each day. These are but round numbers, but they are very near to, and not at all over, the actual amount.

The Times of India adds :—As recently as the year 1876 wheat was simply rotting in the Central Provinces, which is now regarded as the granary of India; but owing to the railway extensions carried out since that time—the through route to Calcutta being one of the most important—the number of growers has increased materially, and it is now well worth their while to produce grain as extensively as they can. The lines have thus far been literally overcrowded with grain, the receipts in Bombay being so vast that the greatest difficulty is experienced in finding godown accommodation for the hundreds of tons which are daily brought in from up-country. Indeed, the competition for godown accommodation is so great that the rentals have gone up to more than 100 per cent. beyond the ordinary charges. The price of labour and the cost of carting have also followed suit, and so all branches are benefiting more or less by the rush caused by the partial failure of the French crop.

For the information of those of our readers who may care to follow the fluctuations in the wheat traffic in greater detail, we append the following table, giving the receipts and exports for the years 1884 to 1890 inclusive, and the four months ended on Thursday last :—

LALITPORE.

THE prevalence of dacoity in the district of Lalitpore is a matter which has greatly troubled the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, who, though almost overwhelmed by its recent increase, is now buoyed up by the belief that he foresees the beginning of the end. Lalitpore is a poor district where there is much forest jungle and stony soil, and which is inhabited largely by Thakurs of, it is said, a turbulent and undisciplined type. Indolence and rapacity appear leading characteristics of the race; they will not endeavour to improve their district by honest toil, and positively refuse to leave it for districts where labour is in demand and the means of obtaining a respectable livelihood present themselves. As indolence begets dishonesty, and lawful possession is apt to fight for its own, petty pilferers develop into armed robbers, rogues and vagabonds into dacoits. Sixteen years ago dacoity was rife in Lalitpore, but was brought to a temporary termination through the energy and tact of Colonel Liston, the deputy-commissioner, who had the good fortune to capture several of the leaders. The name of Colonel Liston had as magical effect in Lalitpore as that of Richard Cœur de Lion is said to have had among the Saracens. While he remained in Lalitpore there was peace, and dacoity had almost become a memory only. But two years ago Colonel Liston retired, and the turbulent spirit of the Thakores was re-awakened. In March last it became evident that a revival of the violent disturbances which marked the pre-Listonian period was at hand, and a reign of violence had again begun. The police force was increased by 200 men, but, says a resolution just issued by the local Government, dacoities of a violent and brutal nature, characterised by murder, but more often by the burning, torturing, and maiming of women, to obtain from them information as to the whereabouts of money or valuables, continued to increase. What Colonel Liston had succeeded in accomplishing, not all the augmented force of police could fully achieve. The dacoit is an interesting study, however, and the special officers deputed to succeed Colonel Liston gathered much information concerning him which has proved of great practical value. There were, it is believed, but three principal gangs of about eighteen members each, but there were numbers of bad characters ready to recruit the bands, and the actual strength when the gangs set forth on any expedition of moment usually grew to twenty-five or thirty. Besides these three gangs "a large jagirdar, a member of the District Board, kept a number of ruffianly retainers, and was more than suspected of not only winking at their outrages, but of actually abetting or organising their raids." But in the raid which has been carried on for years now it is claimed that three gangs are broken up; several of the most prominent have been killed or captured, and the "large jagirdar" was shot whilst being escorted into Lalitpore in October last. The district is thus practically reduced again to a state of tranquillity—permanent tranquillity, it is hoped—though, as we are told, what is bred in the bone is sure to come out in the flesh. The natives, however, have been disarmed, and guns and swords and other weapons have been confiscated. The Indian Midland Railway has been opened through the district, and is expected to render good service. The police, who are to be still further increased, can now be moved more expeditiously from place to place. The district is to be thoroughly opened up, and inquiry is being made into the condition of the Thakurs, as to the extent to which indebtedness, and the action consequent thereon, whether taken by the Revenue or Civil Courts, is the cause of dacoity. So far it is believed that neither pressure of the courts nor the exactions of money-lenders had much to do with these outbreaks. That it is inborn wickedness, which a strict watch alone can keep in subjection, appears to be fully recognised, as is also the value of the reward for the surrender of dacoits, which, according to the deputy commissioner of the district, has led to dissensions among the Thakurs, who at last began treacherously to arrest their own brethren—a fact which renders the prospect of ultimate peace very full of promise.—Bombay Gazette.

SIR CHARLES HOBHOUSE ON THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

SIR CHARLES HOBHOUSE, late a member of the Bengal Civil Service, writes to the Pall Mall Gazette on May 23 as follows :—

The papers upon this subject have now been laid before Parliament, and the comments that have preceded and that are following them have taken a turn that induces me to come forward and ask for an impartial, intelligent, and calm consideration of the matter. The Government in India, and, as the paramount authority, the Government in this country, are of course responsible for the events that have occurred; but I would, in the first instance, earnestly beg that this responsibility may not be viewed simply from the point of party politics, because if we so view it, and the more we do so view it, we shall have rulers in India, who, in dealing with the country, will look more to party feeling at home than to the merits of the case.

With regard to the relations of the Indian Government to Manipore, there are not, that I can discover, any written treaties regulating them in so many terms; but by a series of well-defined Acts and proclamations the Government of India has exercised complete political control over the State, whilst yet, in internal matters, it has left the State to govern itself. Thus, from 1850 to 1866, when repeated attempts were made to upset the authority of the rulers of Manipore, recognised as such by the Government of India, the Government made public avowal of its determination to prevent the disturbance of the peace of the country and the endangerment of British influence, by upholding the rulers recognised by itself and by the punishment of those attempting to dispossess them, and followed up this avowal from time to time by the putting to death, imprisonment or internment of persons making such attempts.

I now come to the facts of the particular incident before us. There was a Maharaja, or ruler of Manipore, recognised by the British Government. Next to him, in the natural succession to the State, was his brother, called officially the Jobraj, or heir-apparent, as we should say, and next to him again was another brother, called the Senaputty, the commander of the State forces. The Senaputty rebelled and ousted the Maharaja. The Maharaja in fear resigned office, but, subsequently, becoming apparently reassured as to his personal safety, withdrew his resignation. The Commissioner of Assam acknowledged the next in succession, the Jobraj, as regent pro tem., and consulted the Government of India as to the steps to be taken next.

The Government of India determined (1) not to restore the Maharaja, a weak, incompetent man, who had deliberately thrown up his office, and was a tool in the hands of others; (2) to recognise the Jobraj, the next in the natural succession, as Maharaja, under conditions to be thereafter settled; (3) to displace, deport, and intern the Senaputty—describing him as a desperate man, who had deposed the recognised Maharaja by force; whose cruelties were notorious, who had, in 1881, been actually banished, and in 1888 been marked for banishment by reason of the brutal ill-treatment of his own countrymen.

To carry out this determination, Mr. Quinton was to proceed to Manipore, taking with him "a sufficient force even though opposition might not be expected." Mr. Quinton went to Manipore. "The number of the escort was fixed, after careful consultation, between Quinton and the general officer commanding in Assam," but "the sepoys of the escort had (only) forty rounds of ammunition in their pouches, and no reserve ammunition." Mr. Quinton met "with great civility and attention from the Manipore officials;" "the Princes of the Royal family and a brother of the Senaputty" went out to him at a place "four miles from Manipore," "he was received by the Senaputty and a guard of honour," described elsewhere as "two regiments," and Mr. Quinton, "dismounting from his horse, had some conversation with the Senaputty in a shamiana," that is, a kind of awning, open on all sides, and used in India for audiences.

Arrived at Manipore Mr. Quinton summoned a durbar. This would have been a Court open to the public, at which Mr. Quinton and the British officers would be present as representing the paramount Power, the Queen-Empress of India, and to which the Maharaja and other authorities in Manipore would be summoned and would be bound in allegiance to attend, to hear and to obey the Queen's orders. The Maharaja attended the first durbar; the Senaputty and other malcontents did not attend. A second durbar was called, but no one attended. The Maharaja was then directed to deliver up the Senaputty. He would not, or dared not. An attempt was made to arrest the Senaputty by force. It failed. Fire was then opened upon the Residency from the loop-hooled walls of the palace and from guns in position—the British ammunition ran short—the Residency was untenable, and parleys were held. Mr. Quinton and his staff were lured into the palace, and were there, in the presence and by the orders of the Maharaja and the Senaputty, brutally murdered. The Residency was subsequenty destroyed utterly, and the escort that remained made its way with difficulty and in diminished number to the British frontier.

In publishing the papers, on Saturday, the Daily News puts it pointedly thus :—"How Mr. Quinton was sent to his fate.—The Indian Government responsible." Is that upon the facts published a fair judgment? Mr. Quinton was directed by the Government to deport the Senaputty, for that is the point, and, to that end, to take with him to Manipore "a force sufficient even though opposition might not be expected." He took with him "a force sufficient" not only in his own eyes, but in the eyes "of the general officer commanding" at the nearest headquarters, Assam. Judging after the event, we can all see that, in the circumstances, that force was not sufficient even when joined to the 100 men of the guard at the Manipore Residency, and especially not so because it was not properly ammunitioned—whose the fault at present we know not.

Judging, even after all the recorded events, it must have been difficult to tell beforehand what British force would have been sufficient, for did not Lieutenant Grant with a handful defy the whole Manipori force until he was recalled? However, the force was not sufficient, and, still worse, was not sufficiently equipped. If those poor fellows who have paid the penalty of these shortcomings, or any one or more of them, were the authors of them, then, in generosity and pity for their fate, let us not say one word more than must be said. If others, surviving and in places ever so high, were the authors, we are entitled to know who they are and to see that they take the consequences. But if Mr. Quinton "was sent to his fate" in this sense, let us know exactly where the responsibility is before we impute it.

I have heard it further argued that there was a purpose of treachery in summoning the Senaputty to the durbar, with the intent, and such intent there seems to have been, of then and there arresting him, and that this treachery begat the counter-treachery of the Senaputty. The answer to this is, I hope, to be found in the historic and other facts that I have stated. The Senaputty knew that he was a man proscribed, marked—that once had he been banished and once threatened for banishment for his cruelties—that he had deliberately rebelled against the power possessed and exercised by the British Government; that such rebellion had ever been punished by expulsion, and sometimes even by death and imprisonment; that the representative of Government was there, not in peaceful guise and unattended, but with an unusual force, and to proclaim and enforce the orders of the Government on his, the Senaputty's, open rebellion; and that these orders were to be at least proclaimed, if not enforced, in the usual way at the open durbar or court of the Power paramount—the Empress of India.

Revised Programme of H.M. Indian Marine Vessels.—The following is a revised programme of H.M.'s Indian Marine vessels after May 1:—The Dalhousie leaves Chittagong on May 1 and arrives at Calcutta on the 3rd; carries coolies, Lushai Coolie Corps, and field hospital establishment from Lushai. The Mayo leaves Rangoon on the 27th, and takes No. 5 company Madras Sappers and Miners to Madras; leaves Madras on the 3rd with 250 mules, for Calcutta; leaves Calcutta on the 9th for Madras, empty; leaves Madras on the 14th with transport criminals for Rangoon; and leaves Rangoon again on the 21st for Calcutta with 600 Darjeeling Hill coolies.

No 3 Mountain Battery, R.A., at present doing such good work with the Miranzai Field Force, has during recent years made a fine record of war service. Transformed from a garrison to a mountain battery in 1879 by its then major, now Brig.-Gen. T. Graham, C.B., it went to Afghanistan and took part in Sir Frederick Roberts's famous march from Cabul to Candahar as "6-8th R.A." For his services Major Graham was awarded a brevet lieutenant-colonelcy, and continued in the command till promoted in 1887. In 1884 the battery formed part of the Zhob Field Force; in 1886 and 1887 it took part in the war in Burma, and in 1888 it formed the artillery of the Sikkim Field Force. The officer at present commanding the battery, Major Dacres Cunningham, was appointed captain of it in 1883; so this will make the fourth campaign through which he has accompanied it and shared its fortunes.

Her Majesty's Indian Marine Steamer "Investigator," 515 tons, under the command of Lieut. Gunn, R.N., has arrived at Bombay from Colombo, via Jaffrabad. Since the Investigator left Bombay in October last, she has been surveying in the neighbourhood of the Cocos Island, Andaman Islands, and the east coast between Bimlipatam to Sacramento Shoal. The successful deep-sea dredging operations were carried out in the Bay of Bengal, and highly scientific results obtained, which are now being worked out by Surg. Alcock, Indian Medical Service, surgeon-naturalist to the Survey. The Investigator having finished her surveying work, left for Colombo, where she arrived on the 25th ult.; and, after remaining there for a few days, she proceeded to Jaffarabad to carry the No. 1 boat survey party, where they had been surveying for the last few months. Commander R. F. Hoskyn, R.N., has taken two months' leave and proceeded to Sydney per P. and O. Company's s.s. Carthage, giving temporary charge to Lieut. Gunn, R.N. The officers will proceed to-day to Poona. The Investigator experienced fine weather throughout the voyage. She will stay in Bombay harbour during the monsoon, leaving in October next.

The "Tamar," troopship, Capt. Hammet, arrived at Plymouth May 22, bringing home the paid-off crews of the Impérieuse, flagship of the China station, and the Porpoise and Firebrand—a total of 730 naval and 29 military details. The damage sustained by the Tamar in the collision in the Suel Canal was trifling, and will cost about 500*l.* to repair. Two deaths occurred during the homeward trip. The Tamar disembarked 150 officers and men at Plymouth, and left in the evening for Portsmouth.

The "Roma," hired transport, arrived at Portsmouth on May 22 from Bombay, and disembarked 276 time-expired men from regiments in India, 37 invalids, and various details, making an aggregate of 370 men, 20 women, and 57 children. Among the officers were Capt. Burton, Royal Fusiliers, Capt. Sherwood-Smith, Manchester Regt., and Surgeon-Major Donovan. The arrivals complete the programme of Indian reliefs. The Roma afterwards left for the Albert Docks.

Col. Arthur Princep, 11th Bengal Lancers, officiates as colonel on the Staff in the command at Cawnpore upon the departure of Col. Wolseley.

Col. Brandreth, Principal of the Thomason College at Roorkee, returns to military service, and Col. Browne, who has been officiating, is confirmed in the appointment.

Col. R. M. Jennings, 6th Bengal Cav., Capt. H. A. Ravenshaw, 26th Punjab Inf., and Lieut. R. Harman, 4th Sikh Inf., have each been granted six months' leave out of India on medical certificate.

Col. W. S. Peat has been permitted to return to duty.

Colonel H. J. Kinsman, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, having applied to retire from the service, is permitted to proceed to England, travelling at the public expense.

Colonel W. B. Butlin, 1st batt. Cheshire Regiment, will be placed on half-pay from May 14 next, and has been permitted to proceed to England on or after that date.

Captain G. P. Pritchard, Staff Corps, D.A.A.G. Belgaum, has been transferred to Myingyan, and Captain C. W. Burton, from Myingyan to Madras.

Captain Pink, who took part in the Siam Boundary Commission of last season, has been appointed temporary attaché in the Quartermaster-General's Department, Burma.

Major Moore, R.E., is transferred from the Bombay to the Rangoon division of the Military Works Department.

Major Barrow, Bengal Staff Corps, has been appointed personal assistant to General Brackenbury, military member of the Viceroy's Council. Major Barrow served in the Egyptian campaigns of 1878 and 1882.

The Indian Nursing Service finds a place, for the first time, in the current issue of the Indian Army List, following immediately after the Army Medical Staff. The list of names comprises three lady superintendents, five acting superintendents, and twenty-five nursing sisters. The lady superintendents are stationed at Rawul Pindi, Bangalore, and Poona.

It has been decided that there is to be an examination for fifteen commissions in the Army Medical Staff in August next.

Rumours are rife that there are several officers in the running for the appointment of military secretary to Government when Brig.-Gen. Kennedy-Herbert vacates the post. Among the names mentioned are Col. Hughes-Hallett, the Deputy Judge Advocate-General, and Lieut.-Col. D. J. S. McLeod, D.S.O., commandant, 3rd Madras Cavalry. Both these officers are well fitted for the appointment.

The success of the 7th Dragoon Guards of carrying off the Commander-in-Chief's musketry prize for British cavalry was particularly acceptable to all ranks, since this makes the third year in succession that the regiment has headed the competition. Such a feat was not likely to escape Sir Frederick Roberts, who promptly telegraphed to the commanding officer his hearty congratulations to officers and men upon their third successive victory.

Under a standing rule of the army in India no officer can leave that country unless he is in possession of three copies of the order authorising his departure, and great inconvenience and unpleasantness have been experienced at the ports of embarkation both by the officers themselves and the authorities in consequence of many officers having to be detained for non-compliance with this rule. The rules on the subject were not too clear, and in the cases of infringement it was often impossible to bring the fault home to the right persons. By a recent G. O. from Simla, however, the rules have been revised and made so clear that in future, it is anticipated, all sources of friction and misunderstanding will be removed.

An uncommonly smart piece of work has been the recruitment of the new 38th Dogra Regiment. It was commenced to be raised from Feb. 13, according to G. O. C. C. (although a few men were taken between the 1st of that month and the 13th), and it is now in full strength. Col. Lorne Campbell arrived at Sialkot on Jan. 19; the adjutant, Lieut. Stainforth, a week later; then came five "transfers" up to Feb. 1; so that from Feb. 1 to date, 912 have been enlisted practically, although 22 vacancies have had to be left open for non-commissioned officers, which could be filled any day. We think that this record takes the lead of the other four regiments being raised.

BENGAL.

Our latest advices from Calcutta are to May 6.

Sir Charles Elliot has arrived at Darjeeling. He was received by a guard of honour of troops and eighty-six Mounted Volunteers. A large crowd had assembled on the railway platform, and the hill-side was crowded with natives. After the usual presentations Sir Charles left for "The Shrubbery," escorted by a detachment of the Mounted Volunteers.

India-rubber Cultivation in Assam.—In 1873 the Government of Assam began to cultivate the india-rubber tree in the humid forests of Chardwar, at the foot of the Himalayas. It was found best to propagate from seedlings, which were planted in the forks of trees, and by 1885 they had reached the ground. The trees were subspquently planted in beds 40 feet wide, amid the surrounding forest, which sheltered them. Last year the plantation comprised 1,105 acres, and contained 16,054 healthy plants, besides 84,000 seedlings. Experimental tappings were made in 1883 and 1884, and 6½ lbs. of rubber drawn from each of the trees selected for the purpose. It will be some years before the experiment begins to pay, but, happily, it is promising well.

The Municipality Sued.—Superintendent Millard, of the Calcutta Police, has filed a suit for 5,200 rs. damages in the High Court against the Calcutta Municipality for injuries sustained in January last, when his carriage fell down an unprotected embankment into the canal, his horse being killed and the carriage smashed.

Munificent Charity.—A Bengalee has made the handsome donation of 2 lacs of rupees to be devoted by the Bengal Government to some charitable object. The generous donor, who was for a long while banian to Messrs. Hoare, Miller and Co., is Baboo Saroda Pershad Ghose.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to May 7.

Lord Connemara's Administration. — In dealing with "Madras Administration under Lord Connemara," the Pioneer observes that there is one merit which can fairly be claimed for the late Governor of Madras, distinct from that of selecting the best men and giving them a fair field to work in, and that is that he prevented mistakes. When a Government blunders, it is generally in some paltry, personal matter which has an infinitesimal effect on the development of the country, but which attracts an altogether disproportionate amount of discussion and public attention. There is nothing which excites the interest of people so much as an apparent hardship inflicted on an individual, and a Governor can often afford to let others make the laws of the land so long as he deals with its petitions. It was a succession of errors in disposing of these minutiæ of administration that wrecked the prospects of Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff's Government. An irritable vanity, which took personal affront at the thoughtless mistakes of an overworked or inexperienced subordinate, and a fixed determination to disregard the warnings of public opinion, were the causes of these errors. From both these causes Lord Connemara was free. He had lived too long in the world to be constantly on the look-out for occasions of offence, and he was distinctly a merciful man, inclined from temperament to let an offender off lightly. Far from condemning the force of public opinion, he was prone, almost too much, to be guided by it. But at any rate he was determined that, whatever else happened, the unfortunate series of scandals which had distracted the Presidency before he arrived should have neither continuation nor parallel, and he succeeded in so thoroughly removing all causes of contention between the Government and the public, that when at the end of the career misfortunes overtook him which would have covered another man with contumely, he was able to depart amid the regrets and with the goodwill of the entire community. The history of his Governorship is neither eventful nor brilliant, but it conveys a good illustration of the success which can be achieved as Governor by a man without remarkable talent, but possessed of caution, good sense, and a determination to keep the peace.

The Ross Case.—The Madras Times is responsible for the following :—The Ross difference, although determined as far as our High Court goes—at any rate, for the present—does not appear of easy solution between the parties themselves. Mr. Ross, who has just been appointed acting collector of Kurnool, would seem to be willing to sink all past differences between himself and his wife, and to receive her back ; indeed, he has already generously invited her to rejoin him in his new station ; but Mrs. Ross appears to be obdurate and to have determined to proceed to England, at all hazards, in which event, we understand, another petition is not unlikely to find a place in the High Court file, at the instance of the husband, praying for divorce on the ground of desertion.

Political Progress in Travancore.—A large number of natives of Travancore recently petitioned the Maharaja for recognition of their claim to have a larger share in the administrative work of the Government of their country. The reply has now been received, which may be regarded as very favourable, though not altogether satisfying. The Maharaja says he will be very happy to give preferment to people of the classes referred to in the memorial, according to the requirements of the public service and the circumstances of the country, and, more than all, according to individual merit as compared with other classes. In regard to admitting into the Travancore service men from outside the country, the Government, though prepared to offer every inducement to duly qualified natives for preferment, think it may sometimes be desirable to bring in men whose training and experience in much larger fields of British services is calculated to improve the local service and the administration. The Dewan will meet a small deputation from the petitioners, and discuss any plans they may have to lay before the Government.

Another Little Railway is to be submitted to the favourable consideration of the Government. For some time past the coffee industry has been languishing in Coorg, owing, it is thought, to the lack of adequate means of transporting the staple produce to the coast. The idea of a railway in this district is not new, but at a recent meeting of the local Planters' Association it was resolved to make a general effort on behalf of the scheme. The proposed line will connect Coorg with Mysore, and, although the distance is short, the hilly nature of the country will render the undertaking a somewhat expensive one.

Ceylon.—Mr. Le Mesurier, assistant government agent at Nuwara Eliya, has instructed Messrs. Julius & Creasy to institute an action for libel against the Times of Ceylon for its criticism of his action in regard to the Sheen inquest, and damages are laid at 20,000 rs.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to May 9.

Horticultural Show at Mahableshwar.—H.E. the Governor opened a Horticultural Show at the Reay Gardens on May 1, at five o'clock. The garden was beautifully decorated, and was well attended by ladies and gentlemen, native chiefs, and many others. Lord Harris was received at the entrance by Mr. Candy, Dr. Dimmock, and the municipal commissioners ; and the party proceeded to the dais, where Mr. Candy read an address. Mr. Candy said that this was the first show of the kind in Mahableshwar. He hoped villagers and cultivators of Mahableshwar and the neighbouring villages would appreciate this kind of show, and that it would stimulate and encourage them. Lord Harris, replying, said it was a very pleasant evening he had been called on to spend, he was pleased with everything. During the greater part of the year Mahableshwar is deserted, and so malees, gardeners, and cultivators had no encouragement. He, however, hoped having similar shows every year, which would be very good. He was very thankful to Mr. Candy, Dr. Dimmock, and the ladies who contributed their pretty flowers, and made the show a perfect success. He certainly would prefer Mahableshwar potatoes to Maltese or other potatoes because he was in the Bombay Presidency. He thanked the exhibitors for their contributions. Lord and Lady Harris then went round, examining the various flowers, fruits, and vegetables. There were some splendid collections of flowers. Among them Lady Harris' table flowers were admitted to be the best. The garden was crowded till the evening.

Indian-made Locomotives.—The Thakor Sahib of Morvi maintains a modest workshop in connection with his steam tramway. Here a new six wheeled couple engine intended for goods and mixed traffic has recently been turned out. The whole of this engine, with the exception of the wheels and cylinders, has been built in the Morvi Workshops, and, considering that 90 per cent. of the workmen are natives of the State, whose training hardly extends over four years, this is very creditable.

The Parsee Tragedy.—Dr. Nadershah, who first examined the Parsee girls after their fall from the tower, declares himself convinced that an outrage had been perpetrated. The relatives offer 1,500 rs. reward for evidence as to the outrage. The idea that the Parsee girls were outraged and then thrown from the tower, seems, however, to be abandoned by the police, who are now divided in opinion as to whether it was an accident or suicide, the nature of the ground on which they fell accounting for all the marks. Several people detained by the police have been liberated. The Bombay Gazette says :—By far the most important evidence yet given before the coroner in the Rajabai Tower case was that given at the resumption of the inquiry on Thursday by two witnesses who both affirm that they saw the young woman, Perozbai, fall from the parapet of the upper gallery of the tower. The first of these witnesses was Vitto Bhoomaya, a gowlee or cow-keeper, who, while driving a buffalo to graze on the Esplanade on the afternoon of April 25, heard the sound of a heavy fall near the porch of the University Library. He walked on ten or twelve steps, and then looked up at the tower. He saw a Parsee woman sitting—or seeming to sit—on her feet on the top of the parapet. Her face was towards the tower, her arms over her head, and she was in the very act of falling. In the descent she struck one of the two telephone wires, which broke, and then she came to the ground. He shouted for the police, and seeing some school-boys (Bunnias) near, he told them to go for a policeman, which two of them did. The youngest of these boys, Harridas Jewraj, was called. He stated that he was about eighty yards from the tower when he heard the fall ; he instantly looked up and saw a Parsee lady with her feet in the interstices of the ornamental stone-work of the upper balcony, while her arms were extended to hold on to the top of the parapet. He had just time to say to his companions, "Look ! Is she trying to do gymnastics ?" when she threw up her arms and fell from the top of the tower to the ground. He saw the gowlee, who told him to run for the police, which he did. Our contemporary adds :—It is not our business to propound theories, but the facts so far suggest this possibility—that one or both the girls may have imprudently sat on the top of the parapet. That Buchoobai lost her balance and fell, and that her companion—in some frenzied hope of getting down to her assistance—put her feet over the coping-stone and into the ornamental fretwork. For an instant she might hold on, but only for an instant. She could not firmly grasp the sloping top of the stone, her feet would have no secure hold of the ornamental work ; her arms would go up, or appear to go up, and the gowlee and the Bunnia schoolboy would have just a glimpse of her as she was in the act of falling sheer down the 150 feet to the ground. From the beginning it seemed to us that the facts pointed to accident rather than to outrage followed by murder or by suicide. The evidence taken on Thursday seems to strengthen this view of the circumstances.

Western India Turf Club.—The undermentioned gentlemen have been elected stewards for the year 1891–92, viz. :—Tom Le Mesurier, Esq. ; Colonel J. F. Willoughby ; Colonel A. M. Rawlins ; Colonel W. Merriman, C.I.E. ; Colonel F. W. Rhodes ; T. M. Filgate, Esq. ; Colonel R. Westmacott, D.S.O. ; Hon. C. B. Pritchard, C.S.I. ; Captain C. A. Anderson, vice A. Keyser, Esq., on leave.

The Oriental Life Assurance Embezzlement Case.—Dorabjee Dhunjeebhoy Shroff, late assistant in the Oriental Government Life Assurance Company, Albert Buildings, Rampart Row, Fort, Bombay, appeared before Mr. C. P. Cooper, Chief Presidency Magistrate, at the Esplanade Police courts, and was surrendered to justice by Mr. Pherozshah Mehta, barrister-at-law, on the charge of criminal breach of trust as a servant, criminal misappropriation of a sum of 2,99,000 rs. in cash and Government Four per Cent. Paper, and fabricating false evidence, preferred against him on April 30 by Mr. Duncan McLaughlen Slater, Manager and Actuary of the Oriental Government Life Assurance Company. Mr. Hormusjee, of Messrs. Ardasir, Hormusjee, and Dinshaw, appeared on behalf of Mr. Slater, the complainant, who, being re-sworn, deposed to the truth of the information filed, and identified the prisoner. Mr. Pherozshah Mehta made an application to the magistrate to admit the prisoner to bail, which his worship refused, as he had no power to grant it on so grave a charge. The learned counsel repeated his application, offering substantial bail. Mr. Cooper refused again to accept bail, and ordered the prisoner to be sent to gaol. The hearing of the case was fixed for May 9.

Greenhalgh v. Elliot.—The second of the suits filed in the High Court by Donald Greenhalgh against Major Edward Locke Elliot to recover 10,000 rs. as damages for the latter bringing a false charge of defamation against the former has been dismissed on the application of the plaintiff. Upon reading the application of Messrs. Roughton and Byrne, attorneys for the plaintiff, and the consent of Messrs. Crawford, Burder, Burkland, and Bayley, on behalf of the defendant, it was ordered that the suit be dismissed, the plaintiff paying the defendant's costs as between party and party.

BURMA.

The Times telegrams from Rangoon are as follows :—

MAY 19.—The Rangoon Gazette states, on what it describes as excellent authority, that China has initiated negotiations for the delimitation of the frontier between Burma and China. The Taping river, which enters the Irrawaddy some 15 miles north of Bhamo, is suggested by the Chinese as the boundary between the two countries. The local Government have no information about these alleged negotiations.

If the Taping river is adopted as the boundary, a tract of country some 150 miles long from south to north and 25 miles wide, which is now under British rule, would be surrendered.

MAY 20.—A telegram has been received from Bangkok announcing that Consul Archer and Captain Fulton have arrived safely there.

With regard to the report recently published that China had initiated negotiations for the delimitation of the frontier, and had suggested a boundary which would involve a cession of British territory, the Government of India have no recent information of the Chinese Government initiating any negotiation for delimiting the frontier.

It is announced to-day that Mr. C. J. A. Duke, Deputy Commissioner of Pegu, one of the senior officers of the Burma Commission, has been removed by the Government of India from the public service under the following circumstances :—A public inquiry was held into Mr. Duke's conduct last month by Mr. Ward, Judicial Commissioner of Lower Burma, and now Chief Commissioner of Assam, under the provisions of section 2, Act 37, 1850. The following charges were then preferred against Mr. Duke :—First, as a district magistrate at Pegu he received information that an offence punishable under the Penal Code had been committed by a man named Moung Oung Bah in obtaining money from another Burman as a motive for inducing Mr. Duke by corrupt and illegal means to show favour to a prisoner than awaiting trial. In breach of his duty as a magistrate, and from improper motives, Mr. Duke failed to proceed against Moung Oung Bah, and took part in an agreement to compound the offence. Secondly, that Mr. Duke, in giving evidence in the Pegu Court in the proceedings connected with the above case, made certain allegations that he knew were false or did not believe were true. The terms of Mr. Ward's report have not been made public.

MAY 24.—Mr. Archer and Captain Fulton during their passage from the frontier of Tonquin were kindly and hospitably received by the French officers.

The application by the Ruby Mines Company for a remission of the rent of the mines is now under the consideration of the Government of India.

For the last five weeks the heat has been unusually fierce. During the past week several persons have died from the heat and apoplexy, including Mr. Walter Huntley, agent of the Bank of Bengal, in Rangoon.

Next dry season the construction of irrigation works in Upper Burma on a large scale will be inaugurated.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

THE ONLY business at the opening meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla, on the 14th instant, will be the consideration of the Colonial Admiralty Courts Act, which was passed in the autumn of last year by the Home Government and published in the Gazette of India of September 6. It is now necessary to extend the provisions of the Act to certain courts in India. The High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay already possess admiralty and vice-admiralty jurisdiction within certain limits, and it is not intended to take these powers away. On the contrary, by the Bill they will be extended, and it is also now proposed to create three other colonial courts of admiralty, these being the Recorder's Court in Rangoon, the Resident's Court at Aden and the District Court at Kurrachee.

A FINE of 1,000 rs. has been imposed upon the Kuki Khel Afridis on account of the shots which were fired at two British officers returning from Lundi Kotal to Jamrud on May 7, as previously reported. The persons who actually fired the shots have not been ascertained, says the Lahore paper, and the fine has therefore been imposed upon the whole clan of Kuki Khels ; but the Maliks have agreed to make the actual offenders pay a fine of 2,000 rs. if they can discover who they were.

A PLAINT has been filed in the Court of Captain G. B. Crawley, the Cantonment Magistrate of Allahabad, by the Rev. J. J. Caleb, of the American Presbyterian Mission, charging one Mitchell with having kidnapped his daughter (a minor). The Magistrate has granted a summons against the accused.

THE WATERWORKS scheme at Cawnpore has come to a deadlock, owing to the Municipality refusing to sanction the necessary funds.

GHASEETA, the notorious dacoit, who escaped from the Meerut gaol, has been recaptured in the Mozuffernagar District.

JULES LE GRANDE, the Eurasian who was sentenced to death for the murder of a native woman at Nowgong, has succeeded in making his escape from the prison at that station.

THE APPEAL in the Warburton Defamation Case has been dismissed by the Punjab Chief Court, and the Court has refused to reduce the amount of damages awarded to Mr. Warburton.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A TELEGRAM to the St. Petersburg papers states that Count Rostovtseff, recently appointed Military Governor of Samarkand, has passed through Askhabad, on his way to his new post. Colonel Klimenko, Military Commandant of Marghilan, in Ferghana, retires from the service with the rank of major-general.

A party of Austrian officers has recently passed through Askhabad, en route for Persia, where the Shah has engaged their services as instructors for his troops.

A Reuter's telegram from Teheran says that some disturbances have occurred at Shiraz in connection with the arrest of a local priest who has been delivering inflammatory speeches against Europeans and endeavouring to stir up the people against them. In pursuance of orders from the Persian Government, the priest was forcibly expelled, from the town last Sunday, but some of his adherents caused a riot. The disturbance was ultimately quelled by the local authorities with the aid of the military, by whom some persons were slightly wounded and a woman and child accidentally shot dead.

The Times correspondent telegraphs from Teheran, May 20 :—During the Ramazan, Hadji Syed Ali Akbar, a fanatic Mollah, preached at Shiraz violently against Europeans. After several warnings from the Government, he was arrested and sent to Kerbela. His family excited the people to have him recalled, and on Sunday the bazaars were closed and the Mollahs assembled in the Great Mosque of Shiraz. The military surrounded the mosque, and there was some rioting. On Monday, the people having fired upon the soldiers, these latter used their arms, killing three persons and wounding several others. Quiet is now perfectly restored, and the ringleaders have asked for pardon. The family of Ali Akbar are to be expelled. Great credit is due to the Government for their prompt and vigorous action.

The English papers, says the Civil and Military Gazette, are still speculating as to the reason why Captain Grombtcheffsky was turned back when he wished to enter Kashmir. It was officially stated in the House of Commons that he was not refused admission into Kashmir for "political" reasons, but nothing further was vouchsafed by way of answer. We can state, however, with some confidence, that the reason was that the Russian explorer was accompanied by an escort of Cossacks in uniform ; and as his party were not in distress or trouble of any kind, it was natural that he should be asked to take his Cossacks somewhere else.

The Ameer shows as much jealousy of news going out of his country towards Russia as towards India. The Haji-bashi, or official appointed to supervise the pilgrim traffic between Bokhara and Cabul, has been summarily dismissed on suspicion of being a news writer in the service of the Government of India, and is now under sentence of deportation. On the other hand, a Samarkandi, a barber by profession, who had been hitherto in receipt of a pension of 1,000 rs. a year, has been arrested at Cabul and imprisoned on a charge of being a news writer in the employ of the Russians. There is impartiality about these proceedings, remarks an Indian paper, which would seem to negative the idea that his Highness is leaning towards a Northern alliance.

The personnel of the Cabul Agency will not suffer, it is stated, any material change under the new British Agent. A few of those officers who have expressed a desire to leave will do so, but the majority will remain in their usual appointments.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE CZAREVITCH.

A YOKOHAMA telegram of May 19 reports the departure of the Czarevitch for Vladivostock. He arrived safely on Saturday and disembarked yesterday.

The people of Tokio are greatly disappointed that his Imperial Highness's visit to the capital has been abandoned.

The Emperor of Japan issued on the 11th inst. the following rescript :—"While we, in common with our Government and our subjects, were making preparations to welcome his Imperial Highness, our beloved and honoured Crown Prince of Russia, with all the honours and hospitality which are the due of the illustrious guest of our country, we received with the deepest grief and the greatest regret the totally unexpected and astounding intelligence that his Imperial Highness had met at Otsu with a deplorable accident while on his journey. It is our desire that just punishment be meted out without delay to the dastardly culprit, in order that, for our own assurance, our friendly and intimate relations with our good neighbour may be rendered secure from any disturbance."

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday :—To-day the Czarevitch lands on Siberian soil at Vladivostock, and will inaugurate the initial section of the Great Trans-Siberian

Railway, 400 versts from the latter port to Grafsky. The occasion is a most important one. This is the first time that such a visit and journey (10,000 versts from the Pacific to the Baltic) has ever been undertaken by a prospective or actual Czar of Russia. To-day's Official Gazette publishes the Emperor's extraordinary recognition of the event. The Imperial rescript addressed to the heir-apparent says :—

"In commanding that the continuous railway right through Siberia be now begun, in order to facilitate communication, I commission you to proclaim this, my will, on re-entering Russia after having visited the foreign lands of the East. At the same time, I charge you to lay the first rail in Vladivostock of the Oussouri section of the Great Siberian Railway which is now decided upon, and is to be constructed at the expense of the Imperial Exchequer and under the direct orders of Government. May your important participation in this truly national enterprise undertaken by me serve as a fresh proof of my efforts to facilitate intercourse between Siberia and the rest of the Empire, and thus make manifest in that region so near to my heart my liveliest interest in its peaceful progress. Invoking the blessing of the Almighty upon the long journey before you across Russia, I remain, your sincerely loving "ALEXANDER."

The Oussouri section mentioned in this letter is the short name for the Vladivostock-Grafsky section. The other small branch of ninety versts begun at the other end in the Urals from Mias to Chalibainsk is not considered part of the Great Siberian line. It is still a matter of dispute who is to construct the line over the intervening space. This is a matter between the Ministers of War and Communications, with the Minister of Finance as an important and indispensable referee. General Annenkoff holds himself in readiness to rush in at the breach with his railway battalions.

Equally important with the above rescript, perhaps more so, is the accompanying Imperial ukase, signalising the event by special acts of Imperial clemency towards Siberian convicts. Hard labour convicts of good behaviour and industrious habits may have their terms of sentence reduced down to two-thirds. Those condemned for life have the term shortened to twenty years. Exiled settlers, youthful prisoners, and in fact most kinds of deported criminals receive corresponding alleviations. Though not specially mentioned, political offenders are presumably included.

We have received the following telegram from the Foreign Office for publication :—

"A further telegram has been received from her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, dated May 16, respecting the riots at Woohoo. He states that the Consul, telegraphing late on the afternoon of the 15th inst., reported that order was being restored, that no lives had been lost, and that the only property destroyed belonged to the French missionaries."

His Excellency the Governor of Hong Kong, on account of ill-health, will, says the China Mail, leave the colony in the beginning of next month, probably never to return. Residents deeply regret the cause of his departure—a cause which has prevented him from doing much good work that he had both the will and the ability to perform.

Another evidence of H.E. Chang Chihtung's readiness to appreciate the advantages of western inventions is given in the Pekin Gazette of April 1. The Viceroy and the Provincial Examiner of Hupeh ask for permission for the latter to proceed by steamer to Chinchow and Ichang to conduct the examinations. They point out the vexatious delay and risk involved in travelling by junk, and that in former trips overland the examiner has often found the roads flooded, and several of his coolies have been drowned by mistaking the paths ; while, the inhabitants having fled before the waters, no accommodation was to be found for man or beast. The advantage to the students, who will not have to wait indefinitely for the examiners, is also dwelt on. The Emperor grants the request. Perhaps before long, says the N. C. Herald, we shall see another high official dilating on the advantage that would be gained if Chungking were opened to steamers.

The effect on the trade of Southern China of the opening of the Red River of Tonquin to trade is referred to in the last Consular report from Pakhoi, the most southern treaty port in China. The Consul mentions that Yunnan tin as an export from Pakhoi has almost wholly vanished from the customs returns ; next year it will probably have disappeared altogether. From 11,529 cwt., valued at 50,843*l*., the export has fallen to 1,291 cwt., valued at 5,700*l*. This alteration in the direction of the export of Yunnan tin has long been foreseen, and is due entirely to the opening of the Red River of Tonquin, by which route it may be prophesied the whole export of 1891 will be transported. It is the first marked effect of the opening of Tonquin and the establishment of the Imperial maritime customs at the inland stations of Mengtsze and Lunchow on the trade of Pakhoi, and the Consul does not doubt that the whole of the transit trade, both import and export, of Western Kwangsi and Yunnan, which has hitherto passed through Pakhoi, will at no distant date reach and leave those districts, via Haiphong, Langson, and Lungchow, for Western Kwangsi, and via Haiphong, the Red River, and Mengtsze for Yunnan. The former route will not, in all probability, compete seriously with the present route via Pakhoi and Nanning until the opening of the Haiphong-Langson Railway ; but once that undertaking is completed the portion of the trade of Pakhoi destined for Western Kwangsi will take that route. Not even a railway to the interior would, in all probability, save the import trade of Pahkoi to these provinces, and such a railway is still below the distant horizon of the future. A small isolated district of Western Kwangtung and the south-eastern portion of Kwangsi, for which Yulin Chou is the depot, will remain to be supplied from Pakhoi; but once the Canton River is opened to steamer traffic, it is probable that nothing can save Pakhoi from decadence.

Singapore Free Press Notes :—The Hon. Sir E. L. O'Malley, the Chief Justice, has gone to Penang.

The condition of Sir Frederick Weld shows no improvement, and he leaves for home by this French mail.

It is proposed to extend the Selangor State Railway from Kwala Lumpor to the mouth of the Klang River, and a trace is being run for that purpose.

The Hon. D. F. A. Hervey, resident councillor of Malacca, shortly proceeds on sick leave. Mr. H. Riccard has been appointed acting inspector-general of police.

Local Self-Government does not seem as yet to have been any more successful in Bombay and Sind than in the rest of the Empire, says the Englishman. There are over 160 municipalities in the Presidency, but, in the officially-expressed opinion of the Commissioner, very few are capable of managing their own affairs without advice and assistance from the Government. In Sind, for instance, Kurrachee is the only municipality which can in any way claim to be autonomous, and even here the Council is divided against itself, to the serious prejudice of municipal business. So far as the smaller municipalities are concerned, local self government can for many years be scarcely more than a name.

Red Tape.—Mr. Labouchere writes the following paragraph in Truth :—"Here is a story of the possibilities of red tape which I venture to think unique. An Indian Civil servant was summoned home by telegraph owing to the serious illness of a near relative. The same cause protracted his stay until it became necessary to apply for an extension of leave. He was informed in reply that this would be granted, but only on the condition that he returned to India for one night. I ask in all seriousness, Can this be true? With the greatest respect to the high authority from whom I have it, I should like to have the facts verified, if only for the satisfaction of future generations." This refers, of course, as everyone who reads it will know, to Mr. Ollivant's hurried visit to Bombay last week. The facts are not quite accurately stated, but they are accurate enough in the main, and it is surely monstrous that Mr. Ollivant should have been compelled to leave the sick bed of his wife at a very critical time, and to spend some five weeks on the double voyage in order to obtain the additional leave so urgently required. Hard-and-fast rules are right enough in their way ; but in a very exceptional case like this, the Indian Office officials might be trusted to make proper inquiries, and on their recommendation an extension of leave should be obtained from India by wire. No member of the Civil Service would dream of attempting to abuse such a privilege, and it should be granted only in the most urgent cases. Mr. Ollivant is an official of influence, position, and interest, and his friends, no doubt, did what they could for him at home. That they failed shows the absurdity of the cast-iron rules now in force. Mr. Labouchere may be left to look after "the satisfaction of future generations," but the present members of the Indian Civil Service will, if they are wise, take steps to have their leave rules adapted to the requirements of contemporary life. The old rules were fixed before the times of steamships and telegraphs, and were never intended to apply to a case like Mr. Ollivant's. The Service gained nothing by his presence in Bombay for the inside of a week, for it was impossible for him to rejoin his appointment in Kattywar if he had to start again last Saturday. It might, perhaps, have been different when the voyage round the Cape occupied three or four months, and younger men were waiting to be relieved. But, as it is, the Secretary of State, in whose name the rules were made a long time ago, could easily make a special case, and the whole matter might have been settled in an hour or so by telegraph instead of involving a cruel and perfectly useless separation of five weeks.—Times of India.

The Benares Riots.—We cut the following noticeable remarks from the Mahomedan Observer :—We quite agree with a contemporary who says that there are some significant points noticeable about this most serious disturbance. This now has proved that the vaunted pax Britannica can be broken suddenly at any time, and anarchy of the worst kind substituted in its place. That mob law can prevail for hours together, that telegraph wires can be cut in the heart of a populous city, that public offices and private residences can be looted in open day—all these reflect a portentous sign which should be a warning to Government for all future time. Of late we have observed a great deal of indifference in the actions of Government, and sometimes utter contempt with certain forces which it thought it could crush into atoms at any moment. This should at once give place to firmness and promptitude. That delay is dangerous is a well-known maxim. At the least sign of dissatisfaction or uneasiness among the people being visible, instead of sleeping over it until it breaks out with violence, the course to follow as suggested by prudent statesmanship is to trace the causes immediately, and apply the remedies with a firm unfaltering hand. The practice of what is called standing on dignity prompted by a false pride must be shunned. If inquiry discloses the fact that Government is to blame, let it then frankly admit its fault and mend it ; and if the fault lies at the door of others, let no considerations prevail in dealing with them otherwise than they deserve. During recent years, who has not seen that the feeling of the population of the country is uninterruptedly attempted to be excited against the Government by a particular class of newspaper writers whose number is by no means small, and whose power of creating mischief must not be underestimated? These men are the real fomenters of discord and discontent, and it is they that fan the dying embers of petty and even forgotten animosities into a fearful conflagration. But, strangely enough, Government in its dealings with this class—if any properly speaking may be said to exist—shows as if it is not aware even of the existence of these spirits of darkness and evil

In the Indian Section of the Society of Arts next Thursday afternoon, a paper on "The Study of Indian History" will be read by Charles Lewis Tupper, B.A., Bengal Civil Service, Chief Secretary to the Punjab Government. The chair will be taken by Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff, G.C.S.I., C.I.E.

Coal.—The Allahabad paper notes with satisfaction that the development of the coal industry has been well maintained through 1890. All the producing provinces show considerable increase, with the one exception of the Central Provinces, where the yield has fallen off. The largest increase relatively is in the Nizam's territory, where the Singareni fields produced 125,000 tons as against 59,000 in the previous year. The total production of 1890 represents an increase of about 11½ per cent. on that of 1889, and now amounts to over two million tons per annum. There is little doubt that this figure might be doubled if the rates of carriage by rail and steamer were less expensive, and that too without taking into account the possibilities that would lie before the cheapened fuel of coming into general use for domestic purposes among the population.

The Monsoon.—The report from the missionaries at Kyelang, published in the daily weather report for April 23, does not look very promising for the 1891 monsoon. The theory first brought forward by the late Meteorological Reporter, Mr. Blandford, and not yet controverted, was that the character of the monsoon depends considerably on the amount of snow that falls in the inner and trans-Himalayan regions. If there is much snow lying over those enormous areas till a late period in the year, no solar radiation is absorbed by the earth. It is all repelled by the snow and reflected into space. The earth has consequently little or no absorbed heat to radiate back into the atmosphere in the early summer months, April to June, and the usual furnace heat which creates the "draw" of vaporous air from the sea is not forthcoming—at any rate with its ordinary strength. The monsoon, therefore, fails to get into Northern India and the vapour-laden winds shift away to China. The Rev. A. W. Heyde, of Kyelang, writing at the end of the first week of April, reports that the winter has been unusually early, very severe and extremely late, that the snow has never melted and is still lying in the ground to a depth of four feet, as much as that having fallen since the middle of March. These conditions are at any rate very like those of 1877, the last occasion on which the monsoon failed to get up-country at anything like the date on which it was due.

The Frontier Garrison.—A serious lesson which, we hope, will be taken to heart as the result of present frontier expeditions, is the weakness of our garrisons, says the Lahore paper. There is a point beyond which the denudation of Rawul Pindi, Peshawur, &c., of troops is not safe; yet, although we have only two little expeditions on hand, that point has practically been reached. Supposing—no impossible contingency, even at the present moment—a new and wider explosion of hostility beyond the frontier necessitated the immediate doubling of the number of troops in the field, where are they to come from? Suppose circumstances necessitated our placing an army corps on the frontier, where is that army corps to come from? A system of mobilisation which, on a small occasion arising, visibly denudes the regions nearest to the area of disturbance of troops is not one calculated to generate confidence in our power of rising to a great occasion. At Rawul Pindi, if anywhere, there should now be rather a concentration of a reserve of armed strength ready for emergencies, for it is in times of disturbance that emergencies are most likely to arise; whereas, as we have said, Rawul Pindi has only enough troops left for its own requirements, and instead of being in a position to strengthen the forces in the field, will require strengthening itself at the first opportunity.

LONDON: MONDAY, MAY 25, 1891.

THE MANIPORE PAPERS—II.

LAST week we discussed the question of the responsibility for the preliminary action and policy which led up to the Manipore disaster, and had no difficulty in showing that it lay entirely on the Indian Government—neither MR. QUINTON nor MR. GRIMWOOD approving of it. MR. GRIMWOOD indeed seems not to have regarded the family quarrel in the palace that led to the withdrawal of the Maharaja as demanding serious intervention. Without bloodshed it cleared the air; and it also cleared the ground, which, with seven brothers who did not pull well together, was rather overcrowded. He seems moreover to have had some esteem for the Senaputty, recognising in him qualities, which, under British restraint, might make of him a good ruler; and, curiously enough—considering what followed—the Political Agent was not in the least afraid of this brutal savage, for, when the Maharaja fled to the Residency, at which there were only 65 rifles besides the escort, we find MR. GRIMWOOD writing very coolly:—

> It was of course hopeless to think of trying to retake the palace, and we confined ourselves to making the Residency as secure as possible, the basement of which was expressly built by Sir James Johnstone in view of a contingency of this sort, though the thatched roof would very likely be soon set fire to. An attack was not very probable, but the presence of the Maharaja and his party here might become a source of danger. . . . Meanwhile I sent two chupprassies to the palace with a letter asking the Senaputty to come and see me. He replied he was afraid to come here whilst the Maharaja was here. I then wrote urging him to reinstate the Maharaja, and promising myself to inquire into his disputes with Pucca Sena. My chupprassies learnt that not a single person had been killed during the firing, and only one man had been wounded with a sword; this was due to the cowardly way, no doubt, in which the Maharaja abandoned everything. If he had made some resistance and held out till the morning, when our troops could have aided him, matters would probably have been very different. . . . In the evening I received a telegram from the Chief Commissioner directing me to try and mediate between the parties, and also saying that 200 rifles from Kohima were ready to march here if wanted. I then sent word to the palace that I would come and see the Senaputty next morning, and decided not to ask for the troops from Kohima till after the interview with the Senaputty.

This proves how lightly MR. GRIMWOOD estimated the possibilities of danger, and how readily he would have undertaken to act with the force at his disposal had he been ordered to do so.

It is due to the memory of MR. GRIMWOOD to quote these passages. We here get a glimpse of the man on the spot, brave, cool, collected, measuring the peril in which he stood with his young wife beside him, prepared to meet it if it came; and we cannot help thinking that had the matter been left to him to settle, he might have done it, with the influence he had over the Senaputty and with the aid of such forces as were available from Kohima. These papers exonerate MR. GRIMWOOD completely, not alone from any responsibility for the policy adopted, but from having contributed by any deficiency in character or resource to the lamentable failure in its execution. He is also exempt from all suspicion of having concealed his own views from the Government, or having failed to notify MR. QUINTON that the new Maharaja and the Senaputty might be expected to fight if interfered with, or to warn the Chief Commissioner that "a force sufficient to overcome all opposition" should be sent if coercive measures were resolved on.

When the Government of India had decided on its policy, it gave the orders for its execution. The questions naturally arising are:—Were the orders addressed to a person who might be expected to carry them out with vigour and decision? Were the orders such as to place in that person's hands a competent force for their execution? We think, after carefully studying the papers, that, having regard to the past history of Manipore, and the reports from the Resident, to which we have above given emphasis, the Government of India had no reason to anticipate that the duty assigned to MR. QUINTON was a desperate and perilous enterprise, or one which could not be carried out by any political officer, of good average judgment, if accompanied by an adequate force under experienced command. The enterprise did not seem to be one of more peril than is and has been repeatedly incurred by small bands under subordinate officers in our Shan and Chin expeditions; and besides that, Manipore was not, like the country of the Wuntho Tswawba, only imperfectly brought under British influence. It was a friendly State, which had settled down completely under our supremacy. The suggestion thrown out in some of the Opposition journals, and by one or two uninstructed critics, that this was a "Frontier Expedition" of sufficient importance to warrant consultation with the Secretary of State before it was undertaken is nonsense. The matter was simply one of Frontier police. Whether the Senaputty should or should not be allowed to remain at Manipore was pre-eminently a question for the Government of India to decide with due regard to the internal quietude of the State itself, and to the effects that might be produced in other quarters of the Empire were it to overlook his conduct. The decision to remove him was not one of great political importance. In any case, had the order to do it been successfully executed, the policy could not have been seriously criticised. The fact that MR. GRIMWOOD did not approve it does not damn it, because the Government of India must necessarily take a broader view of such a question than would be taken by an Agent confining his glance to the narrow limits of his own little sphere of action.

We think then that the policy adopted was defensible; that, with such knowledge as the Government had of the situation, it was justified in entrusting the execution of that policy to MR. QUINTON; and that, by its final order of Feb. 21, 1891—"You should take with you a sufficient force even though opposition may not be expected"—it quite fairly threw upon the Chief Commissioner the entire responsibility for that part of the undertaking. There was nothing in the work to be done or the danger to be anticipated resembling the Black Mountain or Miranzai expeditions, when the Government itself and its military advisers had to assume a large responsibility in view of the desperate and difficult nature of the operations to be undertaken. The result showed that MR. QUINTON unhappily underestimated the peril of the work. In justice to him let us recognise the fact that, by the way in which it had given its orders, the Government at Calcutta placed him in an awkward predicament. Had he taken a large body of troops, and, overawed by the display, had the Senaputty collapsed, the Government would probably have regarded MR. QUINTON'S caution as extreme, and have censured him for incurring unnecessary expenditure. We believe, however, that in fixing upon a force of 400 rifles of the 42nd and 44th Goorkhas, knowing that there were already at Manipore 100 rifles of the 43rd Goorkhas (see Papers, p. 27) the Chief Commissioner not only exercised a reasonable judgment, but had in fact at his disposal a force which, led by a dashing officer, would, if the Commissioner himself had been a man of quick adventurous decision, have sufficed to carry out the project of the Government with success. COLONEL SKENE was an excellent officer—as one who served under him in Burma has written to the Press to testify—but in the first place he had not a free hand, for the Commissioner dominated him; and in the second place he had not the healthy audacity to take supreme command when it became evident that the situation had ceased to be political and had become one supremely and simply military. MR. QUINTON evidently was one of those exasperatingly conscientious men, who, having got his orders and decided on a line of action, will carry it out stolidly without reference to conditions. He had got it in his head that the Senaputty was to be solemnly cited before the Durbar, to be adjudged guilty and reprimanded, and then taken in charge and deported. A military man charged with the mission would have tapped the Senaputty on the shoulder, when he sat with him under the shamiana, have told him that he was under arrest, and have handed him over to a guard. With the only man in Manipore who was capable of leading an attack held in the centre of his 400 Goorkhas as a hostage, MR. QUINTON could safely have entered Manipore and dictated his terms at the Durbar. Such an idea would probably never enter the mind of a man who had spent most of his life in judicial work; and the only reflection we can make in the premises is that, in all human probability, had the Government ordered COLONEL SKENE or any other competent military officer to Manipore to assist MR. GRIMWOOD in carrying out the policy resolved on, the orders would have been executed and no disaster would have occurred. But we cannot charge the Indian Government with want of judgment because they entrusted the duty to the Chief Commissioner. Like the affair at Isandula, this was one of those horrible fatalities, which only exceptional genius can foresee or grapple with—for which the responsibility can be fixed on no particular shoulders. No House of Commons in its senses could pass a vote of censure for the catastrophe either on the Indian Government or on the Chief Commissioner. As regards the intention to seize the Senaputty at the Durbar, we think it indefensible. But it really had nothing to do with the massacre. The Senaputty would have resisted, Durbar or no Durbar. It surely will not be contended that the tragedy was a direct consequence of an attempt to commit "an act of treachery"—if treachery it be. The only thing that gives the Durbar incident any importance is the VICEROY'S defence of it.

THE Times, in its issue of the 20th instant, gives a curious account of the recent disturbances on the Punjab frontier:—"The Miranzai Expedition," we are told, "was directed against a tribe which, though nominally annexed to the British Crown in 1851, never appears to have entertained the idea of paying revenue or of becoming British subjects in anything but name. The Miranzais have stoutly opposed efforts made by the Afghan Governors of Kuram to bring them under the sovereignty of Cabul, but they have also resisted our civil officials with almost equal determination." A more hopeless blunder it would be difficult to conceive. The Miranzai Expedition was not directed against the Miranzais, or against any other tribe formally or informally annexed to the British Crown; and for some time past the Miranzais have been well-behaved and peaceful. The revenue of the Miranzai Valley will be found in SIR W. HUNTER'S "Imperial Gazetteer." As explained by the Saturday Review it was certain sections of the independent Orakzais who had to be punished. As long ago as 1859 the Commissioner of Peshawur reported that the Miranzais were settling down; and since then, they have given very little trouble. It is strange that the Times should be so inaccurate. Full information about the Miranzai Valley, as well as about the Orakzais, will be found in the official "Record of the Expeditions against the North-West Frontier Tribes," and in the annual Punjab Administration Reports.

A CORRESPONDENT writes a long letter to the Times from Chungking, under date of March 19, in which he laments the deplorable want of vigour that characterises our present diplomatic action in China. He says:—

The establishment of the "Foreign" Customs, by which Chungking becomes an open treaty port, was formally notified to the members of the small Anglo-American community already settled here on the 2nd inst. The circular announcing the fact was signed by Mr. H. E. Hobson, the Commissioner in the service of the "Inspectorate-General of Maritime Customs" appointed to the port last summer. The Chinese authorities had already inaugurated the opening on the previous day, Sunday, March 1, by the Taotai, or Superintendent of Trade, holding a reception on the newly-opened premises, at which a crowd of the minor officials and native merchants engaged in foreign trade, all dressed in the magnificent robes which constitute Chinese full-dress, called in the morning to pay their respects, exchange profuse salutations, more Sinense, and sip the customary boiling tea. The British Consular representative was, however, conspicuous by his absence, he apparently having received no instructions to take any part whatever in the opening of a port which has been opened solely by the insistence of the British Government, and whose approval, according to all precedent, is necessary to make such regulations as may be promulgated binding on British subjects. This holding aloof on the part of our own authorities has been much commented upon, and is seriously misunderstood by the Chinese, as it is inexplicable to the "foreigner." . . .

That Western China should be opened up in this half-hearted way, after the huge amount of preliminary labour that has been spent upon it, is truly pitiable. During the past fifteen years some of the oldest members of the British Consular staff have been steadily employed, at the national expense, in travelling over these Western provinces collecting commercial information, and for what result? Alone that the French should open a road through their recently-acquired territory and take toll of these riches, the existence of which our officials have spent their time in depicting? The French have succeeded in stipulating that produce going through Tonquin shall pay, on leaving Chinese soil, only one-half of the tariff export duty which British merchants exporting the same produce through the Chinese port of Shanghai have to pay. Where a Government exhibits such fatuous imbecility in protecting their own commercial interests as does the Chinese, ought we, who have still the lion's share of the trade, to treat their arguments seriously, as the present British Minister appears to have done, rather than to lead them by gentle yet firm pressure in the course which is avowedly best for them and best for ourselves?

But lest my letter should appear to be nothing beyond a long lamentation over accomplished facts, let me end it with a practical suggestion. We have given up our right for British merchants to run steamers here, but not the right, which we have everywhere assumed, of sending a British man-of-war to call occasionally at ports occupied by British communities. If the British Admiral at Hong Kong were instructed to send up a light-draught steamer to visit this port, it would not only prove to the Chinese (what no competent European observer who has of late years studied the problem now doubts) that the river is perfectly navigable by steamers, but would show the populace and the anti-foreign party generally, that we are a less isolated and defenceless community than they now appear to imagine us to be.

The sixteenth annual Burma dinner will take place at the Marlborough Rooms, No. 307 Regent Street, W., on Wednesday, June 10, at 7 o'clock, Sir Chas. H. T. Crosthwaite, K.C.S.I., in the chair, General B. L. Gordon, C.B., vice-chairman. Tickets (25*s.* each) may be procured from any of the undermentioned members of the committee:—General H. W. Blake, Elgin Lodge, Ladbroke Road, Notting Hill; Robert Stewart, Esq., 11 Chesham Place, S.W.; F. William Bucholtz, Esq., 34 Lancaster Road, Belsize Park, N.W.; David M. MR. QUINTON AND THE JOBRAJ.

THE narrative which the Englishman has given of the incidents precedent to the rising at Manipore can only be placed, as we have placed it, in juxtaposition with Lord Cross's statement in the House of Lords that "he did not believe the Indian Government ever intended that the Jobraj was to be summoned to the durbar for the purpose of being arrested, and that he would be greatly surprised if that was what had been done." That which would greatly surprise the Secretary of State has, if our contemporary may be believed, actually been done—done, too, against the judgment and the protest of the one official whom Mr. Quinton might reasonably have looked to as the wisest and most trustworthy of available councillors. The time has now come when the responsibility for all that led up to this terrible catastrophe must be candidly apportioned, even though in apportioning it justice can only be done to one of the victims by attaching blame to another. As the case stood at first it seemed that fatuity itself has guided the footsteps of Mr. Grimwood. He had been some years in the country; he knew the people and their leaders; he knew what their means of resistance were; he ought to have known how far, in case of provocation, they were likely to use them. So people were saying a month ago, and the most that was then said about Mr. Quinton was that he had been sadly misled—that he had suffered himself to be led by a blind guide, and so had been conducted to his doom. We have now heard the last of this view of the question. The Chief Commissioner of Assam, with less than limited knowledge of the country, followed no other guidance in this undertaking than his instructions from the Government and his own will. What these instructions are we do not know. They are on their way to England, where they will be made public. The Indian public, whom they concern much more intimately than the public at home, might, we should have thought, have been permitted while they are on their way to learn at least the purport of their contents. As to poor Mr. Quinton's determination—concerning which we have not yet been specifically told whether or not it went in advance of his instructions—this clearly had free play so far as any local check or guidance was concerned. The Chief Commissioner begins by sending forward his assistant, Mr. Gurdon, to make inquiries at Manipore and gather information. This Mr. Gurdon does with great assiduity, and with great astuteness too, for Mr. Grimwood had no suspicion of the purpose for which the information was being got, or of the object for which Mr. Quinton was coming to Manipore. It seems unhappily almost as easy to answer as to ask the question why Mr. Quinton's communication with his assistant at this time was carried on in Italian. If he had—as he almost surely had—a cypher code for his communications with Mr. Grimwood, these messages in the language of Machiavelli are inexplicable; let us still hope that it will not hereafter be necessary to say that they were unjustifiable. Mr. Grimwood is known to have been all along on friendly terms with the Jobraj. A glimpse of their relationship is seen in the fact that when Mr. Gurdon, having performed his share in the weaving of the net in which the Jobraj was to be caught, went back to Mr. Quinton at Sengmai, Mr. Grimwood, with a guest of his, accepted the Jobraj's hospitality in a shooting expedition. When, a few days later, the Resident met the Chief Commissioner at Sengmai, he was told in strict confidence, and to his dismay, that the Jobraj was to be arrested in open durbar, and that it was he who would have to carry out the arrest. How this plan struck Mr. Grimwood we learn only indirectly, but Mrs. Grimwood's appeal to Mr. Quinton to spare her husband a task which would be more than disagreeable to him, showed plainly enough what the Resident thought of a plan which was aimed at a noble with whom to the very last the pretence of an ostentatious friendship was being kept up. If an endeavour should be made to exclude Mrs. Grimwood's protest from the admissible evidence, the answer would be that an ex post facto solemnity is given to anything that that courageous and resourceful woman may have said, by the chapter that has been added to the story of heroism that was first told in these columns three weeks ago. If any endeavour were made to set aside Mrs. Grimwood as a witness, it would, we believe, be discouraged on all hands. So, then, the protest against the Jobraj's arrest—especially under the circumstances projected by Mr. Quinton—was as strong as it could well have been, and unless Mr. Quinton resolved upon the arrest in implicit obedience to the order of Government, and to that alone, he was acting against a light that should have been for his guidance. The justification that presented itself to him is clear enough. The Government of India, he told Mr. Grimwood, could not allow anyone except themselves to make and unmake Maharajas, and as the Jobraj had such a power in the country he must be deported. The ethical side of this declaration is sure not to escape notice. But for the moment we have to deal less with the principle itself than with the method which Mr. Quinton chose for carrying it out. Mr. Quinton told no one but the Resident that he intended to invite the Jobraj to the durbar and there arrest him. The Jobraj, suspecting nothing, attended the durbar at the time originally appointed. This is of primary importance. He might then have been arrested without difficulty; but a certain document of some importance in the proceedings had not been completed. The durbar was postponed till the afternoon, and it was this delay which proved fatal to Mr. Quinton's plan. For it enabled the fly to see the outer meshes of the net that had been laid for him, though within the Residency there were closer and stronger meshes in the shape of guards in every room and at every point of egress. All this fits in with the order that was first heard of some week ago, that in the durbar a British officer should sit between each Manipori. The long and short of the story is that the Jobraj refused to attend a durbar to which he plainly saw that he had been invited only that he might be arrested. If the question be asked whether the conduct of the Jobraj at this stage of the history was so very astonishing after all, there can, we fear, be but one answer to it. The material for astonishment is really on the other side. There was this man treating and being treated by British officers with the appearance of friendship, entertaining the Resident at a shooting party on one day, on another going out to meet the Commissioner and talking cheerily with him by the way about arranging for a polo match, and suspecting nothing until he sees that the little Manipore Residency to which he had been invited was guarded at every opening. On the other hand there was the Chief Commissioner, fair-seeming and friendly in outward demeanour, yet keeping his plans while they were in course of development from the officer whom he should from the beginning have consulted at every step, and when the time came for carrying them out, using a State ceremony which should have been an occasion of dignity as a trap for the capture of the highest personage but one in the State. Such is the story, as it now stands. It will astonish Lord Cross, and we suspect it will not greatly please the public at large, either in India or at home.—Bombay Gazette.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, May 5.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on April 30 made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 4 per cent. The Bank's statement for the week ending April 28 shows the following changes:—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 5,66,106	Increase
Do. at Branches	8,33,845	Decrease
Other Deposits	20,47,714	Increase
Post Bills	93,605	Decrease
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	Rs. 12,44,614	Increase
Loans	7,45,002	Decrease
Accounts of Credits	27,054	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	21,20,713	Increase
Cash at Head Office	4,15,213	Decrease
Do. at Branches	5,48,418	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows a further decrease of over 6 lacs in the ordinary trade demand, made out as follows:—By an increase of nearly 20¼ lacs in "Other Deposits," together with a decrease of 7⅜ lacs in "Loans," and over ½ of a lac in "Accounts of Credits," minus an increase of over 21½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," coupled with a decrease of nearly 1 lac in "Post Bills."

The Treasury balance at head office stands augmented by 5⅝ lacs, while at the branches it is reduced by nearly 8⅜ lacs. The Bank's investments were increased by nearly 12½ lacs.

The final result of these changes is a falling-off of over 4¾ lacs in the cash at head office, and nearly 5½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 4,36,37,679 rs., equal to 52·5 per cent of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 54·8 per cent. last week.

JUTE.—Another quiet week has to be chronicled; the home markets are listless, feeling the effects of the heavy shipments. In new crop no fresh transactions are reported. Sowings are progressing favourably, and definite information as to the extent of the crop may be expected towards the end of the month.

GUNNIES.—There is little change in the market during the week. There has been less inquiry for ready goods, but the scarcity continues, and full prices have to be paid for anything wanted.

HESSIANS have been quiet, but prices remain steady. A small line of 8-40" cloth was taken for July-August at 7/ with options.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—Another active week has to be recorded in the share market, in which jute mill scrip has played the most prominent part. The strong demand for this class of stock continued unabated throughout. Speculators have made quite a run upon it, with the result that in most cases a material advance over last week's closing quotations has been registered. The largest business has undoubtedly been done in Fort Glosters (ordinary), which have shown a marked rise within the week, amounting to no less than nine rupees a share. Barnagores and Kanknarrahs have also improved their position materially, and all the other companies show higher quotations, from 2 rs. upwards.

In Gold Shares transactions are not only few in number, but do not embrace any large lines. Prices are all round decidedly easier, and even Sonapets have declined fully two annas.

In Tea the prospects are encouraging. Samples of the new crop show well.

BANK OF BENGAL.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 4 per cent.

BOMBAY, May 8.

Arrivals of the new crop of wheat continue to be on a very large scale, but little demand has been felt from exporters during the past week, and in seeds (which are also coming to market very freely) only a moderate business has been passing; but cotton has latterly shown much more animation at somewhat enhanced rates, though purchasers for local account have far exceeded those for export. The course of exchange has been irregular, but on the whole an advance of about ⅛d. in bank paper and credits has been established on last Friday evening's rates. Money is abundant. Government paper is 3-16 per cent. higher in Fours. Freights have become quiet, with less demand for tonnage, and an easier feeling as to rates on the part of shippers. In imports there has been rather more inquiry for the principal descriptions of manufactures, and prices continue to be well maintained in most directions.

MONEY.—A decrease of over 38¾ lacs in the Presidency Bank's cash balance during last week, disclosed by the statement of affairs issued on Monday afternoon, did not really indicate any important change in the unusually easy position of money with the Bank nor in the open market; for though, as shown in the return, the amount out in Loans was greater by some 17½ lacs than at the close of the previous week, the increase in Bills Discounted was trifling, while, on the other hand, Private Deposits had swollen by 7¾ lacs, the net expansion of trade requirements being represented by only about 10¼ lacs, the further reduction in the cash balance over and above this sum being mainly due to the addition of some 16¾ lacs to the amount of Government security held by the Bank and to the withdrawal of Public Deposits. The financial requirements of the wheat and seed crop now coming to market, and showing in almost every case a more or less considerable increase over last year's arrivals, though doubtless heavy, have hardly been felt in presence of the ample funds available; and, moreover, the great increase in the receipts of other produce is more than counterbalanced in the money value by the falling-off in arrivals of cotton. No change in rates was made at the Bank's board meeting yesterday, and 4 per cent. is still the minimum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Wholesale buyers of staple grey goods have operated more freely during the past week, and rates generally have been well supported, while a small rise has been established in some special cases. Stocks are being gradually reduced, and both dealers and buyers have shown a disposition to do business at current rates. In Bleached goods, medium qualities of Jacconets, Mulls, and Nainsooks have been in good demand at last mail's prices. In Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods there has been no change in position or price since last mail, and the same may be said of local goods. The off-take of imported goods from the bazaar during the past week has been 4,000 packages; that of local goods 1,800 bales.

YARNS.—Imported twist has again been taken to only a small extent on the basis of previous prices and in a quiet market. Telegraphic advices from Hong Kong make the sales of local spinning for the week ending last Monday only 3,000 bales, with a small decline in some cases in No. 20s., and exchange at 221 rs. Spinners here have accepted a small reduction, and have thus been able to do business to the extent of about 6,000 bales.

METALS.—Both copper and yellow metal have been taken to a moderate extent during the past week at an advance of 4 a. per cwt., with a steady feeling in the market. Iron has been quiet in tone at last week's quotations, and with only a moderate business passing.

COAL has been firm. Sales have been reported during the week of Powell's Duffryn Cardiff, for August-September shipment, at 16 rs. to 16¼ rs. per ton; and of Davison's West Hartley, for June-July shipment, at 14¼ rs. per ton; and since ready Davison's found buyers at 14¾ rs. per ton.

Exports.—COTTON.—A small business continued to be done in this staple in a quiet market to the close of last week; but an advance of 1 r. per candy was established in prices of Belatee, Bengals, and Dhollera. On Monday, however, when the feeling was still quiet, and a moderate business passing for the mills, the advance was lost in the case of Bengals and Belatee. On the following day the market was quiet in tone again, with only a small business passing, and that mainly for export; but thereafter a good demand was felt, though more from local spinners than from exporters, and considerable purchases were made, while rates advanced 1 r. to 2 r. per candy for Bengals, Belatee, and Dharwar, and on the following day there was a further general advance to the same extent. The mills have taken some 12,000 bales during the week, consisting mainly of the Julgaum variety of Oomras, Dhollera and Bhownugger, Bengals, and Compta; and exporters have bought less than half that quantity, consisting principally of Bhownugger, Bengals, Broach, Dharwar, and Oomra kinds. The market closed steady this evening, with prices 2 rs. to 6 rs. higher for Bengals, Belatee, Dharwar, Westerns, and Bhownugger than they ruled a week ago.

The receipts of this season's crop of cotton during the past week have been 71,500 bales, compared with 60,000 bales in the previous week, and 79,500 bales in the corresponding week last season; and the falling-off in receipts this season compared with last has now reached 191,800 bales.

WHEAT remained quiet in tone to the end of last week, with a moderate business passing and rates unaltered; and this week there has been still less demand from shippers, and prices have receded an anna per candy, business having been upon a small scale and the feeling quiet.

SEEDS.—Only a small business was passing in this market when last mail left, but with the exception of a decline of 1 a. per cwt. in linseed, prices were unchanged. Since then the daily record of business has been moderate, and the feeling generally steady; but no further change in prices has taken place.

The increase in arrival of wheat in Bombay from the beginning of the year compared with 1890 has now reached over 2½ million cwt., and that of linseed over 1½ million cwt.; and in other kinds there has also been a more or less considerable increase, with the exception of poppy seed and castor seed, in which a falling-off is shown.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA,

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to May 13; Madras, May 14; Bombay, May 16.

Beginning with Friday May 29, the Homeward Overland Mail steamer will leave Bombay at 5 P.M. on Friday of each week until further notice.

The Viceroy has received from her Majesty the Queen-Empress an intimation of her desire that the relatives of the victims of the Manipore outrage should be made aware of her Majesty's deep sympathy with them in their affliction.

Lord Wenlock had expressed his intention to row in the Regatta which was to take place at Ootacamund in the last week of May. His Excellency once stroked a four in Madras last season and showed excellent form.

Lady Wenlock, with her child, and accompanied by Lord Douglas Compton, aide-de-camp, and Dr. Gabbett, arrived at Coonoor for a change of air on May 6, and were staying at the Hill Grove Hotel. Lord Wenlock was to have arrived there on May 14. Both their Excellencies were expected to return to Ootacamund on the 16th, when a dance would be given at Government House.

The Central Committee of the Countess of Dufferin Fund has made a grant of 10,000*l.* towards the Building Fund of the Calcutta Zenana Hospital.

Mrs. Grimwood and the Misses Quinton left Calcutta for England in the steamer Chusan on May 7.

Mr. Charles Spedding, contractor for the Gilgit road, has returned to India from England, and, the weather having settled, work is being pushed on. Mr. Geoffrey Millais, son of Sir John E. Millais, R.A., has joined Mr. Spedding's staff.

We (Times of India) learn from Reuter's telegrams that that arch-impostor Mme. Blavatsky is dead. We told the chequered story of her career in Cairo, America, and India shortly after she disappeared from Madras with, it is believed, a large sum of money collected from her dupes in India and Ceylon. The exposure of the cabinet trick and the way in which Koot Hoomi was worked prevented her return to this country. But she made fresh dupes in London and Paris among a class of persons she never attempted to reach in India. As a charlatan Mme. Blavatsky has not had her equal since the days of Hume the Spiritualist. It is no slight tribute to her genius as a professional impostor that a sketch of her life should be included in the new edition of "Men and Women of the Time," and that Reuter should have thought it advisable to telegraph out the intelligence of her death.

Lieutenant Ehlers, the German explorer, who had the advantage of seeing the frontier expedition during his sojourn in Indian territory by joining the Manipore Expedition at Kohima, and marching out with General Graham by way of Tammoo, was, when the mail left, on his way, via Mandalay, Fort Stedman, Mone, and Zimme, through the Siamese Territory to Bangkok.

Jules Le Grande, the convict who recently escaped from Nowgong Gaol, had been recaptured by the Orcha State Police in that territory, and, having been identified as the escaped convict, was conveyed to Nowgong under a strong guard.

During last year the value of exports from India fell off by 321 lacs, while the imports increased by 247 lacs. The aggregate value of outward transactions still exceeds that of inward shipments by, roughly, 40 per cent.

Balances held in cash in the Civil Treasuries of the Government of India and at credit of Government in the Presidency Banks and their branches on the last day of April:—1889, 12,94,12,000 rs.; 1890, 12,32,89,000 rs.; 1891, 16,20,10,000 rs.

From many places in the Punjab and North-West correspondents note that influenza is again prevalent. The orthodox form of the complaint is, as usual, a compound of cold in the head, with sore throat, headache, sneezing, tendency to fever, and a feeling of general collapse. In some places it is described as an epidemic; and in Benares Gaol, according to a correspondent, it is "raging."

Recent examination has shown that the Mud Gorge between Hurnai and Bostan on the Quetta Railway is absolutely useless, so far as the reconstruction of the railroad on the present alignment is concerned; and, says the Times of India, an extensive survey of the whole valley at that point is about to be undertaken.

The Englishman says:—A few weeks ago attention was drawn in these columns to the strange apathy of the Post Office in the matter of the extra service of Peninsular and Oriental steamships to Europe. A correspondent now points out that in various British colonies it is compulsory on steamers or sailing vessels leaving port to give three days' notice of their departure and destination in order that the public may have time to prepare its correspondence with the port in question. It is doubtful whether an arrangement of this kind would, under present conditions, materially accelerate the postal service between India and Europe. But there can be no excuse for neglecting so obvious a means as these extra steamers provide of improving the existing system of communication.

It is a fact worthy of note, says the same paper, that some two hundred chests of opium were exported from Ajmere-

Merwara to the Punjab during the past official year. There is a fine field here for an anti-opium propaganda, and one not unworthy of the attention of Sir Joseph Pease himself. It is scarcely probable, however, that he could be induced to undertake the mission in person. The work of persuading the Punjabi on his native heath has an even greater element of uncertainty than the snatching of a vote in Westminster.

The site of the Indus bridge for the Frontier Railway, which is to be built at Kalabagh, is not yet decided. The place is, however, already full of contractors, says the Bombay Gazette, who have gone to make fortunes out of it. Locomotives and short trains work to Mari almost daily, but the line is not open for traffic yet. The journey from Kalabagh to Kundian, about 35 miles by camels, is a dreadful experience; but as soon as the line is opened it will be easy and pleasant. The dawk from Lahore, which reaches Kundian at 2 A.M. on the 1st, is delivered at Kalabagh on the morning of the 2nd, exactly thirty hours later. When the line is opened a whole day will be saved.

SIR THEODORE HOPE, ex-Public Works Minister in India, is among the sufferers from influenza.

IT is rumoured that SIR NAPIER BROOME will succeed SIR W. DES VŒUX as Governor of Hong Kong.

The India mail train will henceforth leave Brussels at 6.41 P.M., and arrive at Strasburg at 3.29 A.M., twenty minutes before the departure of the Orient express. It will therefore now be possible to go from Brussels to Vienna in twenty-five hours.

Many of the Queen's Indian subjects in England celebrated her Majesty's birthday on May 30, when Mr. Rafiuddin Ahmed entertained a large company at his residence in Bedford Place. Mr. Rafiuddin Ahmed proposed the health of the "Empress of India," and the toast was loyally and cordially honoured. Indian music was provided after dinner for the entertainment of the guests.

Trinity College, Dublin, has established a brotherhood which is about to send out two members of the university to work with the newly appointed Bishop of Chota Nagpore, under the auspices of the Society for Propagating the Gospel.

I understand, says the London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, that an examination is to be held by the Civil Service Commissioners in August next for cadetships in Ceylon and the Straits Settlements. These appointments, like the student-interpreterships in the Levant and Japan, are intended as a means of recruiting the British service in these countries with men thoroughly versed in their languages, and the first duty of the successful candidates is to acquire this knowledge, periodical examinations being held to test their progress. The commencing salary is in Ceylon 3,000 rs., and in the Straits 1,200 dols. per annum, the cost of the journey out is defrayed, and half-pay enjoyed from the date of leaving England. Many higher posts are open to cadets and interpreters, not only in the countries to which they are first sent, but in the consular and diplomatic services throughout the world; and though the present Governor of Ceylon did not commence at the foot of the ladder, Sir Cecil Smith, the Governor of the Straits Settlements, whose appointment is worth between 5,000*l.* and 6,000*l.* a year, started as a student-interpreter at Hong Kong.

Her Majesty's Minister at Bangkok reports that the Siamese Government is prepared to receive tenders for the construction and equipment of the Bangkok-Korat Railway. The line will be 265 kilomètres in length. Forms of tender and specifications may be seen on personal application to the Commercial Department of the Foreign Office.

I understand, says the Manchester Guardian correspondent, that one of the results of the explorations of the Burma-Siam Boundary Commission, which have just concluded, is the discovery that the great river Meikong is wholly unsatisfactory as an eastern boundary of British Burma, and that from a military point of view it is quite untenable. It is desired as far as possible by the Government of India to remain on the west side of that river; but as it was recognised that this might in some instances be impossible, the Commission were directed to survey and explore the east side wherever it appeared desirable to do so, provided they were satisfied that in such places as they surveyed on this side Burmese rule had within recent years extended across the river. In two places the Commission found these conditions satisfied, and one of them includes the State of Kyaing-Chaing, which has not yet submitted to British power, and which has, in fact, been overrun by the Siamese. The point for the Government of India now to decide is whether this State is to be included in British Burma or not. On the one hand there is the indisposition to cross the Meikong and the desire to avoid giving offence to the Siamese; on the other there is the opinion of the Commission that the river as a frontier at this point is useless, and the fact that the State was recently subject to Burma. Practically this is the result of the explorations, of which so much was expected a year ago.

I hear, says the Glasgow Herald London correspondent, that Mr. Chaloner Alabaster, British Consul-General at Canton, who is now on his way home on leave of absence, will not return to his post, but will retire during the present year. The salary of the office is 1,200*l.* per annum, with a splendid residence in the heart of the city of Canton and offices in the foreign settlement. The former is maintained as a matter of policy in the native city, and was at one time the residence of a high Chinese official. It has a large park completely secluded from the vast population around, and the British Consul's deer in this park are almost as celebrated as the British Consul himself. Mr. Alabaster has spent thirty-five years in China, and he enjoys the distinction of having a record of services which fills more space in the Foreign Office list than that of any other servant of that department, with the single exception of Mr. C. M. Kennedy, the head of the commercial section of the Foreign Office, whose duties in connection with new commercial treaties are all fully chronicled. Mr. Alabaster accompanied the famous or infamous Commissioner Yeh in 1857 in his exile from Canton, where he was captured, to Calcutta, and was in attendance on him until his death. He served in all the numerous military expeditions in China of thirty to thirty-five years ago, and saw a variety of service which in these piping times of peace is all but impossible. So high has his reputation been among his countrymen in the East that his name has been frequently mentioned for the post of British Minister at Pekin. There must be something approaching to an instinct for dealing with Eastern affairs in the family, for Mr. Alabaster's younger brother, after going into the East in the British Consular Service in Siam, entered that of the Siamese Government, and obtained extraordinary influence and power in that country.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the correspondent of the Times:—

CALCUTTA, May 27.—The weekly weather and crop report from the North-West Provinces says that the heavy export of wheat to England has caused unusually high prices in all food grains, and should the rains fail this year, the result of these exports will probably lead to a great calamity.

CALCUTTA, May 29.—Orders for the return of the native troops engaged in the Miranzai expedition will be issued in a day or two.

The rising in Keunjore appears to be due to the oppression of the Raja's Ministers. It is reported that the rebels number 10,000, Bhuiyas, Juangs, and other tribes. They are armed with obsolete weapons, and are not organised. Mr. Toynbee, the Commissioner of Orissa, has gone to inquire into their alleged wrongs. About 300 police are advancing cautiously from Cuttack and Singbhoom, and a wing of the 17th Bengal Infantry has gone to Chakardarpore, on the Bengal and Nagpore Railway, and will advance thence if it should become necessary.

CALCUTTA, May 31.—There is no further news of the Keunjore rising. There is every reason to hope that the inquiry into grievances which the Commissioner of Orissa has promised to make will induce the insurgents to disperse. In any case the affair is not likely to give much trouble and has little importance save as another symptom of the spirit of unrest which seems to pervade India at present.

By a Government order the 24th and 26th Regiments of Bombay Infantry are to be converted into local corps for service in Beloochistan. The former will be stationed at Quetta, the latter at some place to be determined hereafter. Both will be recruited from the Pathan and Belooch tribes and will be maintained at full strength. Eight hundred of the present native officers and men will be pensioned. Each regiment will have nine British officers and be armed with Martini rifles.

The inquest on the two Parsee girls who were killed by a fall from the clock tower at Bombay continues to drag slowly along and appears as far from conclusion as ever. The affair has given rise to a great deal of local feeling, especially among the Parsees, and several scenes have taken place in the coroner's court.

The following telegram from the Governor of Madras was received on May 30:—"Good rain fell last week in South Arcot, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Madura, and parts of Tinnevelly, Coimbatore, and Malabar. Numbers on relief in Chingleput and North Arcot increasing, 8,200 employed on special works in former district, 9,900 in latter district. Number on gratuitous relief in North Arcot 1,183, in Chingleput 203. Settlement Commissioner has visited Malabar to confer with collector regarding condition of southern taluks, in which some distress was reported to exist. He considers that provision of work for those requiring employment is the only measure needed at present. Prices practically stationary."

WE cut the following from the Times of India:—

GRANT.

In the Old World and New a name of might Receives fresh blazon as we laud the name
Of Grant of Thobal, and with loud acclaim
Thank God for a brave leader, a bright light
Flashing from out the gloom of treachery's night
When Quinton and his comrades murdered fell
At Manipore. We read and breathless tell
How eighty, held at bay, victorious fight
Maintained 'gainst thousands: skill and daring shine
Throughout the record, Indian hearts of oak
Sustaining England's. Wisdom to divine,
Courage that in thy soldiers courage woke,
Strength to endure—these, gallant Grant, were thine
Thro' Him who in the battle rules each stroke.

To witness the solemnisation of the marriage of the Hon. Mr. Lowther Robert Windham Forrest, only son of the late Colonel L. T. Forrest, Bengal Staff Corps, with Miss Margaret Arden Acworth, youngest daughter of Mr. N. B. Acworth, of The Hook, Herts, and sister of our popular municipal commissioner, Mr. H. A. Acworth, C.S., a large and fashionable company assembled at All Saints' Church, Malabar Hill, on Thursday morning (May 14), says a Bombay paper. Half-past eleven was the hour at which the numerous friends of the bride and bridegroom had been bidden to attend, but fully half an hour before that carriages began to roll up to the church, and by the time the ceremony was to take place standing-room only remained for late comers. The bridegroom, accompanied by Mr. J. McN. Campbell, C.I.E., the best man, looking the happiest of men in a suit of subdued grey, had allowed himself a full ten minutes to spare; and the bride, escorted by her brother, who had abandoned the conventional black coat and silk hat for the bright uniform of the Volunteer Rifles, of which he is a Major, arrived just as the clock was chiming the half-hour before noon. There were no bridesmaids, and the bride herself was very simply attired, her dress being of white silk trimmed with chiffon, while her bonnet of tiny dimensions was composed of roses and orange blossoms, the handsome bouquet she carried, presented to her by the Hon. Mr. N. N. Wadia, attracting much notice. As the bride entered the church and passed up the aisle, Mrs. Gilbert played a stirring march. At the altar rails the Lord Bishop and the Rev. W. E. Scott, the Acting Archdeacon, were in waiting, and the marriage service was proceeded with, the bride being given away by her brother. When the ceremony at the altar was concluded, the newly-wed couple adjourned to the vestry to sign the marriage register, the signatures being witnessed by Mr. H. A. Acworth, Mr. J. McN. Campbell, and Miss Forrest. On their leaving the church shortly afterwards Mrs. Gilbert played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The guests followed them to Mr. Acworth's bungalow on the Ridge, where the customary festivities were observed.

The Lahore paper relates the following:—"Gymkhanas are not the only amusing incidents of Black Mountain frontier warfare. A Chagarzai spy was captured and brought before the General. The sentence 'Let him go,' pronounced in English, was Greek to the unhappy wretch; but the General's gruff tones convinced him that instant death was his fate. He was led out by two stalwart Sepoys and taken to the edge of the slope, where the troops had made a toboggan slide down the snow. He was placed on this, and began to glide swiftly downwards. When, instead of rifle-bullets, he heard snowballs whiz around his head, that look of abject terror on his face gave way to the broadest of grins; and arriving with a bump at the bottom of the slide, he gathered himself up and did a 'record' across country to his home. We hope Mr. W. G. Caine will take up this case of outrage upon an unarmed member of an unoffending tribe, who 'of course' only visited our camp as a sightseer, and whose treatment has probably left 'a nasty smear upon the reputation of British arms in India.'"

We clip this paragraph from the Pioneer:—The world is losing its humbugs. Mme. Blavatsky has quickly followed Phineas Taylor Barnum, and the great multitude who love to be deceived are left to mourn two of their greatest benefactors. There was no doubt a difference between the two. Barnum was an honest juggler, who confessed he took to the trade because he knew the vulgar loved to be fooled; to the end Mme. Blavatsky repudiated communion with the conjuror, professing indeed to be nothing less than the priestess of a new revelation. That Madame was a profound humbug only a few still doubt; whether she knew that she was so is a question which, with the example of Mr. Gladstone before our eyes, it would perhaps be ungenerous to decide to her discredit. The nineteenth century is usually regarded as the era of finished scepticism. It may be so, but the success of such a character as Mme. Blavatsky proves that extreme scepticism and extreme credulity lie close together.

Accuracy is the soul of history; and we are very willing, says the Pioneer, to be convicted by Mr. J. H. Rivett-Carnac of a mistake in having referred, à propos of the Benares riots, to the "historical hog-spear" with which the magistrate defended the winding staircase of the Nandeswar House in 1799, when most of the European residents were murdered by Vizier Ali and his adherents. Mr. Rivett-Carnac writes:—"The hog-spear is legendary, and I may be allowed to mention that the weapon with which my grandfather defended the staircase was one of the spears carried by the running orderlies of the time (after the manner of the High Sheriff's javelin-men of to-day). The shaft is of iron, the blade long and three-edged. I have often seen and handled the spear. It will be found described and figured in Sir J. F. Davis's published account of the defence. The spear is to be seen in the library of Hollywood Tower, Westbury, the present baronet's residence in Gloucestershire. Two Indian pikes crossed are borne by the family as an augmentation of arms, and in memory of the defence."

There is a man now in Colombo who calls himself a Mahomedan missionary, and is preaching to crowds of the Moorish community. He is said to be an Englishman with high connections at Calcutta, and to have received his education at a British university. The propagandist held forth lately demonstrating the truth of the "word of the Prophet." He said that he had been very successful in his mission in the west of England, and that now several British towns and cities counted thousands of the followers of Mahomet. The local Mahomedans are filled with joy at the presence of this English missionary in Colombo, and the gentleman is fêted wherever he goes among the Mahomedans of Colombo. He has made the Moslem Hotel his temporary headquarters at Colombo.

An occasional correspondent writes to the Times of India from Khandeish:—In most books on tiger shooting it is laid down that a tiger can only climb up a tree if it is at a considerable slope from the ground, or if there are large branches from which it can spring from one to the other. I think it as well to put the following facts on record to prove that a tiger can actually swarm up a tree to a height of several feet, even when severely wounded. On April 25 I came suddenly on the tracks of a tigress and cub leading into a ravine. Having a few men with me, I sent them round to beat her out. She broke at once with angry growls exactly in the opposite direction to where I was posted, and, seeing one of the beaters, without a moment's hesitation deliberately charged up a steep hill at him. He took refuge in a tree; but springing up she caught him and bit him severely through the leg, and then left him, breaking back through the beat. The man was on a bough about 10 feet from the ground. I am glad to say he is making a good recovery. A few days afterwards, in company with Dr. Martin, who had joined me, we tried to beat her out again. She was very savage, and broke back through the beaters, although crackers and guns were freely used to turn her. A three-quarter-grown cub, however, came on to Dr. Martin, who fired, breaking its shoulder. It immediately charged straight to where he was sitting on rather a low tree, and although receiving a bullet from a .12 bore and express while charging, attempted to climb the tree and pull him out until another express bullet from my rifle put an end to it. On May 4 the tigress killed, and was marked down again in the same ravine. After a lot of trouble she came out to Dr. Martin, who put a .12 bore bullet through her lungs. She fell to the shot with a roar, then galloped on about sixty yards to where one of the stops was sitting in a big tree 14 feet from the ground. He shouted and tried to turn her back to the guns, when she immediately swarmed up the tree to get at him. The man, after throwing his turban at her, scrambled up a higher branch; but she was very close to him when I caught a clear sight of her head and shoulders over the intervening bushes, and, firing at her shoulder, brought her dead to the ground. We carefully examined the tree afterwards. It grew straight up from the ground without a branch, for 14 feet was about 1 foot in diameter, and stood on almost level ground. The highest marks of the beast's claws were at a distance of 13 ft. 1 in. from the ground, just below the branch on which the man was sitting. She was a hill tigress, very muscular, measuring 8 ft. 3 in.

SCHWANN, M.P.

(See "St. James's Budget," April 24.)

Schwann, M.P., was a valiant man,
And he said as he squirmed, said he,
"Oh I love to hit, but don't like it a bit
When another fellow hits me.

"Let me say that in India Englishmen
Are brutal and even base;
But don't let them say Schwann is a gem
Who ought to be in a glass case.

"Let me rail at a 'reptile' Press that dares
In my statements holes to pick";
If an M.P. tries to advertise
Himself it exposes the trick.

O Schwann, M.P., it's clear to me
You ought to catch it hot;
But pass—I ween a bird unclean
Is not worth powder and shot.—Times of India.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

General Sir William Wyllie, G.C.B., whose death was announced on May 29, was one of the most distinguished officers of the late Honourable East India Company's Service. Born in 1802, he was appointed to the Bombay Army in 1818, and sailed for India in the following year with his brother-cadet, the late Sir James Outram. Sir William first saw active service when only twenty years of age in command of a detachment of 300 native infantry, sent against the now forgotten rebel chief Roop Sing, who in 1822 gave great trouble in the Mahratta Country. In 1823 Wyllie was again placed in command of a field detachment employed in Gujerat; and in 1825 received the thanks in General Orders of Sir Charles Colville, then Commander-in-Chief, for his spirited conduct when serving as adjutant of his regiment in an attack upon a large body of Meenhas strongly fortified on the heights of Jerun, in Cutch. In 1827 he was appointed major of brigade to the Malwa Field Force, and served with such marked ability in this force that on the formation of the Army of the Indus in 1838, under Lord Keane, for the invasion of Afghanistan, he was appointed major of brigade to the First Infantry Division under Sir Thomas Willshire, and going in advance of the Army, with Willshire's Brigade, was the first officer of the force to land on the banks of the Indus. In the subsequent operations he was at the storm and capture of Guznee in July 1839, and at the occupation of Cabul the following August. After this he accompanied the troops who were sent back to India from Afghanistan, and, as assistant adjutant-general under Sir Thomas Willshire, accompanied the storming columns at the capture of Khelat. After the fighting was over he found in the citadel the dead body of Mehrab Khan, the Khelat chief, and had it conveyed to the tent of General Willshire, who was not until then aware that the chief had fallen. In 1840 he served as assistant adjutant-general with the force sent, under Sir Richard England, for the relief of Sir William Nott at Candahar, and was present at both the attack on the heights of Hykulzye and the forcing of the Kojack Pass. Sir William Wyllie next served under Sir Charles Napier, the conqueror of Sind; and at the battle of Meanee, where he was assistant adjutant-general, he was dangerously wounded. When the rebellion broke out in the Southern Mahratta country in 1844-45, Wyllie was appointed to the command of the force sent to suppress it, and received the thanks of Government for the complete success of his operations. Subsequently to this he commanded the brigade at Ahmednugger, and on the amalgamation of the forces of the late Honourable East India Company with those of the Crown Sir William Wyllie was selected for the colonelcy of one of the new line regiments of the Royal Army, and was appointed first to the 109th Regiment and afterwards to the 103rd, now the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, of which he remained honorary colonel to the day of his death. Sir William Wyllie married in 1831 Amelia, daughter of Mr. Richard Hutt, of Appley, in the Isle of Wight; she died in January last. His eldest son, John Wyllie, Foreign Secretary to the Government of India, and for a short time before his death in 1870, at the age of thirty-five, M.P. for Hereford, was well known as the author of several essays on the external policy of India, which at the time of their publication exercised a remarkable influence on the political opinion of this country.

The death is announced of Major-Gen. J. M. C. Drake, C.B., at the age of fifty-eight. He served with distinction in the Crimean war, was present at the siege of Sebastopol, and commanded the First Division of the Royal Engineers during the Egyptian campaign of 1882, being present at Tel-el-Kebir and other battles.

With much regret we (Englishman) have to announce the death of Mr. James Charles Murray, late of the firm of Messrs. Kettlewell Bullen and Co., Calcutta. Mr. Murray's long residence in Calcutta made him a connecting link with the past, and he had many an interesting tale to tell of days long gone by. His business career began as long ago as 1842, under the auspices of Mr. David Cowie, and in 1860 he joined the firm of Messrs. Kettlewell Bullen and Co., becoming before many years elapsed the senior resident partner. In that capacity he took an active interest in the affairs of the commercial community, and served no fewer than four times as President of the Chamber of Commerce—namely, in the years 1872, 1873, 1875, and 1876. At that time Mr. Murray made a special study of the still vexed question of exchange, and in a pamphlet published in 1876 he expressed his views in favour of a gold currency. Mr. Murray retired from business and went home in the beginning of 1889. His kindly disposition and genial manners endeared him to a large circle of friends, by whom his death will be much regretted, and whose sympathy will be with his widow and family in their time of bereavement.

The Englishman also announces the sudden death of Mr. A. R. McIntosh, remaining representative of the firm of Messrs. Marillier, Edwards and Co., Calcutta. "Mr. McIntosh was widely esteemed, and his death will be mourned by a wide circle of friends, as well as by the large body of employés, to whom by countless acts of kindness he has proved himself a true and warm-hearted benefactor. Mr. McIntosh had been ailing somewhat for two days previously, but he was able to attend to business on the Saturday, and actually wrote a letter regarding an important contract as late as two o'clock. Feeling unwell, he retired to rest for a little, and died at 2.30, the cause being heart disease. Some twenty-five years ago the deceased was accountant on the Eastern Bengal Railway, and for the past twenty years has been connected with the engineering and contracting firm of which he finally became the sole principal. Under his management the business has greatly extended, and employs about a thousand men at the Howrah works, and an equal number during the busy season at the shipbuilding yard at Bellore, near Bally. Much sympathy will be felt for Mrs. McIntosh, who is in England with her two daughters."

It seems that Mr. Ferris, of the Surma Valley Light Horse, who died at Manipore the other day, was a son of Dr. Ferris, of Calcutta, with whom, says the Times of India, in the sad circumstances deep sympathy will be felt. The deceased was a popular member of the Cachar Corps.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the correspondents of the Times since our last issue :—

CALCUTTA, May 26.—The following are the details of the capture of the Senaputty :—It appears that he was found hiding in a cluster of huts about six miles from the palace by two officers of the frontier police, who effected his arrest after a severe struggle. The prisoner was so exhausted by the hardships and privations he had undergone during the last month that he had to be carried to the fort on a coolie's back.

At a meeting held at Naini Tal, with the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces in the chair, it was resolved to invite subscriptions towards a memorial to Mr. Quinton, and a committee was appointed with Mr. Justice Straight as chairman.

CALCUTTA, May 31.—Somewhat fuller details of the Manipore murders have come to light in the course of the recent trials. It appears that after some talk outside the palace the officers were induced to go to the durbar hall. There they were asked to consent to the troops laying down their arms. They refused, and turned to leave the palace, but when near the dragon idols they were forced back by the crowd and returned to the durbar hall. While ascending the steps, Mr. Grimwood and Lieutenant Simpson were speared. The former fell dead at once. The others were kept in custody for two hours, when the Tongal General ordered their execution. The Senaputty was then working the guns against the Residency. When the news of this order was brought to him he went to the durbar hall and, after a short consultation with the Tongal General, he directed it to be carried out. The officers were then put in irons and brought out together. They were beheaded one by one. The Regent was inside the palace and took no active part in the murders, but there seems no doubt that he could have prevented the massacre had he wished.

Colonel Sammo Singh and Major Aiya Parel have been sentenced to death for complicity in the murders.

The Regent's trial begins to-morrow

The date of the trial of the Senaputty is not yet fixed. It is to be hoped that it will not be long delayed. To the Oriental mind trial and punishment lose half their effect when they do not follow quickly on the crisis, and it is much to be regretted that the Indian Government felt itself bound, in deference to English sentiment, to require the death-sentences to be referred to it for confirmation.

The delay in announcing the fate of Manipore is also a matter of regret. The bulk of public opinion in this country favours annexation, but, as has been already stated, it is believed that the Indian Government is opposed to that course. Whatever the ultimate decision may be it ought to be given out at once.

RANGOON, May 31.—Major Grant, V.C., arrives at Rangoon to-day en route to Ootacamund on sick leave. During his stay at Rangoon Major Grant will be entertained at a dinner given by a number of the members of the European community.

The 60th Rifles suffered severely from sickness during the Manipore expedition and returning therefrom. In a detachment of 200 strong about forty deaths occurred. It is reported that during the advance ten sick were left behind at one station in charge of an officer. All these ten sick men died. The authorities are reticent about details.

CALCUTTA, June 1.—A despatch from Manipore states that the trial of the Jobraj for the murder of Mr. Quinton and his companions was commenced there to-day. The Commission consists of Lieut.-Colonel Mitchell, president, and Major Ridgeway, 44th Goorkha Light Infantry, and Mr. Davis, political officer, members. The first witness called was Russick Lall, chief clerk to the late Mr. Grimwood, the political agent. No facts supplementary to what is already known were elicited. The trial is proceeding.

We select the following items from the Indian papers received by the present mail :—

KOHIMA, May 8.—I have just come up the Kohima-Manipore Road. Things all along the line are very quiet, and the inhabitants are ploughing and carrying on work as if no unusual event had even taken place. Cholera has visited most of the posts along the line, but not in a virulent form. The Naga Hills military police have suffered most, having lost 10 men. All the troops coming from Manipore are subjected to quarantine before entering here. Kohima itself is quite free. The rains have set in, and a continuous downpour has been going on for twenty-four hours. The transport will suffer much till permanent camps are ready.

KOHIMA, May 11.—Cholera is reported in the Fesima Village, seven miles on the Manipore road. If the report proves true, it will be very difficult to procure Naga labour on the route. The 4th Goorkhas have been detailed at Kuzama on March 2, on the Manipore road. Owing to further cases of cholera, the Naga Hills Police lost three men yesterday, making a total of sixteen among the 200 men of this battalion who originally proceeded to Manipore with General Collett. The 13th Bombay Infantry will probably be leaving for India in a few days. Two hundred men of the 13th Bombay Infantry returned from Manipore to-day. Colonel Elliston, 42nd Goorkhas, who is in command here, is arranging for the cholera camp across the valley.

KAIRONG, via MANIPORE, May 8.—Yesterday the Tongal Major was brought in a prisoner. He is a decrepit old man, but is said to have caused more bloodshed during his lifetime than an African King. To-day the Regent was captured and brought in. This is the late Maharaja who usurped the throne last year.

ALLAHABAD, May 9.—On Thursday, the Tammoo Column of the Manipore Field Force having returned to Burma, was broken up, and General Graham issued a valedictory address, in which he thanked the officers and men for the manner in which they had performed their duties, and for the high discipline maintained. Particular attention is directed to the work done by Lieutenant Grant, 12th Burma Infantry, and the detachment of the 43rd Goorkhas under Lieutenant Grant, and afterwards under Captain Presgrave, who, remarks General Graham, did particularly good service previous to the advance of the column, and it is with great satisfaction that the general officer commanding announces that the services of both officers and the men have been brought prominently to the notice of Government. The Tammoo Column having been broken up, the various officers on the general staff rejoin their regiments immediately. Eleven cases of cholera are reported among the King's Royal Rifles, six deaths having already occurred. The latest news of the wounded officers, Lieutenants Cox and Grant, is favourable. A large convoy of rations left Tammoo for Manipore on Thursday. It is found easier to ration from Tammoo, which is much closer to Manipore than either Cachar or Kohima. The telegraph line is expected to reach Manipore from Burma side to-day.

ALLAHABAD, May 13.—The latest Manipore news, dated Camp Karong, says :—Government have sanctioned the 3rd and 18th Bengal Infantry returning to their stations in India. Half of the 36th Sikhs go to Shillong, the remainder to Debrugarh and Sibsagar. The 32nd return to Kohima. No cases of cholera among troops. The latest reports of the Jobraj say he is returning towards Karong. Great hopes are entertained of catching him.

ALLAHABAD, May 14.—It is now established that, at five on the afternoon of March 24, Colonel Skene announced to Mr. Quinton that the troops must retire from the Residency and grounds, as the position was no longer tenable ; but why this resolution of the senior military officer was not carried out is one of the several mysteries connected with the whole affair. Had this step been taken at that time, no disaster would have happened. None of the surviving officers seem to know when the plan of opening negotiations was proposed or who was directly responsible for it. It was about 7 o'clock that this fatal mistake was made. Mr. Quinton, with the non-combatant officers, was then in the basement of the Residency buildings, and he himself wrote the short note to the Regent. He had to use a scrap of paper, and write in pencil on his knee. A fair copy was made by Mr. Cossins. The note was a very short one indeed. It merely asked whether the Regent would consent to let the fighting be stopped and on what terms he would allow the troops to withdraw. The Senaputty at once assumed the position of a victorious general dictating terms. He compelled the Regent to say he would treat with no one but the Chief Commissioner in person, and in this way Mr. Quinton fell into the treacherously laid trap.

SIMLA, May 11.—The Manipore Regent was arrested on the 8th by some Maniporis sent out by Major Maxwell, and is now a prisoner under a military guard. He had been hard pressed by Lieut. Clay's party of the 43rd Goorkhas under Captain Dun, who have sent in the following arms found in the jungle :—Two Martini rifles, one double-barrel express recognised as belonging to the late Lieut. Simpson, one sporting Snider, one Westley-Richards, one presentation rifle given by the Viceroy in 1872, and a quantity of miscellaneous ammunition. Lieut. Clay's party now moves to Chassad, where a party of fifty Maniporis has been sent by Major Maxwell to hunt the Senaputty and other princes. Lieut. Clay's party under Captain Dun will act independently as circumstances require. Messengers are being sent into the Upper Chindwin Valley to let the people there know of the rewards offered, and to stop the fugitives if possible. Captain Cox is doing as well as his severe wound permits. Lieut. Grant has recovered. Captain Drury and Lieut. Carnegy left on the 5th for Kohima. The men under Major Maxwell, chief political officer with the Silchar column, have captured Ayia Parel, a major in the Manipore army, and the minister of the durbar. Other important arrests are expected in a few days.

In one of his last letters to a friend in India, Mr. Grimwood said :—"My wife leaves for England on April 9, and I hope to be home for September. I am expecting every day now the Viceroy's decision whether the Maharaja is to come back or not. His brothers, who turned him out, are rather uneasy as to what the result may be. If the Viceroy decides he is to return, there will be a small scrimmage. I hope he won't come back. Not that the present lot are much better; a native administration is a dreadful thing to have to do with. It seems impossible to improve it."

A Calcutta contemporary, says the Times of India, commenting the other day on the Manipore tragedy, declared that, now the story is told in detail, there can be no doubt that it was the intention to seize Koireng in durbar. It further goes on to add that as to the nature of the proceeding, there can be but one opinion. But in this, as in every other sublunary proceeding, there is room for two opinions. It is impossible to imagine that English gentlemen like the Viceroy and his Council and Mr. Quinton were capable of deliberately planning an act of treachery. The idea that it is hardly fair to ask a man to a durbar and then to seize him arises from the vulgar notion that a durbar is a social gathering. It is a State ceremony, or a native levée. The Viceroy has, both by right and by custom, perfect power to command any Native Chief to attend a levée or durbar. Manipore, it must be borne in mind, is not, because situated on the borders of the Empire, in any sense an independent State. It merely ranks as one of the minor native States, and in no State can the paramount Power permit civil war. The Jobraj had deposed one sovereign and placed another on the throne, a mere puppet. In fact, the Jobraj had made himself sovereign of Manipore. If an action of this nature were tolerated by the Supreme Government, there would be anarchy in every native State in India in six months. The Jobraj is a man of fierce and brutal character, and as long as he had power at Manipore there was no hope of a peaceful government. Ten years ago he had been banished for a year, by order of the Chief Commissioner of Assam, to an island on the lake at Manipore for one of his foul and brutal murders. The Government of India, as the Paramount Power, being bound to take notice of the rebellion at Manipore, determined so far to yield to the popular feeling as to place the Regent on the throne and banish Koireng. In the natural order of events they might have commanded the reigning sovereign to order Koireng into exile. But there was no reigning sovereign. They therefore sent the Chief Commissioner of Assam to represent the Viceroy and carry out his instructions. He took with him a body of troops, and this was sufficient to inform the Regent and the Jobraj that the time had come when the Government were going to give their decision regarding the late rebellion. A durbar was ordered to be held and the Jobraj commanded to attend. The representative of the Empress had a right to hold the durbar and to command the Manipore Princes to attend. Koireng was bound to obey the order. It was meant at open durbar to fully explain the policy of the Supreme Government to place the Regent on the throne, and to request him to arrest and banish the Jobraj. There was no fraud or treachery about this procedure. It erred from being too elaborate and ceremonial. If Mr. Quinton had asked the Jobraj to a garden party at the Residency and arrested him the action would have been open to censure. But he ordered him to attend a levée, and the Jobraj must have known perfectly well that at that levée the decision of the Government would be declared. In 1846, Lal Sing, the Vizier at Lahore, was arrested in the durbar tent with the consent of the Sikh Sirdars, confined to his house, and deported. It would be interesting to know how the critics of Government would have acted. If Mr. Quinton had commanded the Jobraj to surrender himself in order to be deported he would have refused, and there would have been bloodshed in attempting to seize him in his palace. The only hope of the arrest being made without loss of blood was ordering him to appear at a durbar, and there, after explaining the views of the Viceroy, arresting him. If the Supreme Government had the right of ordering him to appear at a durbar—which they undoubtedly had—and if they had the right of arresting him, it matters but little how the warrant was executed. If they had invited him to a social entertainment the action would have been reprehensible. When the Jobraj was summoned to the durbar he knew he was going before his liege lord to have his conduct either condoned or condemned.

FURTHER OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Further correspondence relating to Manipore has been presented to Parliament. It includes, besides despatches on matters of which the details have already been published, the following correspondence as to the ammunition of the escort of the Chief Commissioner :—

From the Adjutant-General of India to the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

Simla, April 10, 1891.

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief in India, to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the following particulars which have been furnished by the General Officer Commanding the Assam district regarding the ammunition in possession of the escort which recently accompanied the Chief Commissioner of Assam to Manipore.

2. The escort was, in the first instance, ordered to take 40 rounds in pouch and 50 in box, but on learning from the Political Agent at Manipore that there were 13,000 rounds of Snider ammunition in the magazine at the Residency, Brigadier-General Collett sent the following telegram to the officer commanding the escort :—

"No. 72, Feb. 24.—Have ascertained that there are 13,000 rounds of Snider ammunition in the magazine at your destination. Therefore please leave behind box, and march with 40 rounds in pouch."

3. At this time the general officer commanding had absolutely no grounds for anticipating danger; but having further considered the situation, he decided that the officer commanding the escort, who had the advantage of the Chief Commissioner's presence and advice, should be allowed to take an additional supply if it appeared desirable.

He therefore telegraphed on March 5 as follows :—

"No. 96.—There is a large quantity of Snider ammunition at Kohima in charge of police, on which you can draw if you think necessary."

4. The party reached Kohima on March 14, and, as General Collett has since ascertained, marched on the 15th without taking any reserve ammunition.

Transport was then very scarce, and Colonel Skene was no doubt guided by the fact that troops marching in Assam do not ordinarily carry more than 40 rounds, and by the knowledge that he would find 13,000 rounds at Manipore.

5. In submitting this explanation, I am desired to add that, in the opinion of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the general officer commanding the Assam district took every precaution which the circumstances appeared to demand.

Telegram from Adjutant-General in India, to Officer Commanding at Silchar.

Please wire what amount of ammunition Captain Boileau's party had with them when met by Captain Cowley; also how many men, if any, had lost their rifles.

Telegram from Assistant Quartermaster-General, Silchar, to Adjutant-General in India.

April 11, 1891.

Your No. 129 M. See my yesterday's telegram, answer to your No. 112 M. Captain Boileau left last night. Ammunition had not been exhausted, nor rifles lost. Party were full of fight when met by Cowley. Sensational telegrams of flight and escape quite untrue. Party took ten days marching from Manipore, and went miles out of way to pursue enemy on one occasion.

From the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the Adjutant-General in India.

April 14, 1891.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 10th instant, on the subject of the amount of ammunition in possession of the escort which accompanied the late Chief Commissioner of Assam to Manipore, and in reply to say that the Government of India concur in the opinion expressed by the Commander-in-Chief that Brigadier-General Collett took every reasonable precaution to secure to the escort a proper supply of ammunition.

2. I am also to say that the Government of India would be glad to be furnished with further information on the following points :—

(i.) What amount of Martini-Henry ammunition had the Resident's escort in pouch at the time of the Chief Commissioner's arrival at Manipore, and was there any further supply of this ammunition in the Residency?

(ii.) Did the Chief Commissioner's escort obtain any ammunition in addition to the 40 rounds which they had in pouch from the magazine at the Residency; and, if so, how much did they receive, and when was it given out to them?

Yours 18th and 19th. Manipore ammunition. Question of responsibility still under investigation by the Commander-in-Chief. I will send answer as soon as possible.

From Viceroy to Secretary of State.

May 25, 1891.

Military. Your telegram of 19th May. See Manipore No. 80 D., sent by mail of 13th May. Answers to questions asked in letter from Government of India to Adjutant-General, 14th April, are as follows :—First. Collett states Resident's escort had 40 rounds Martini-Henry ammunition in pouch and 3,600 rounds in quarter-guard. Of the 100 men, 35 were detached to Langthobal, and 11 elsewhere, so that 54 men in Residency would have had about 56 rounds per man, besides 40 rounds in pouch. Collett says, till this ammunition was issued to men during March 24, the detachment at Langthobal, besides their 40 rounds in pouch, had 2,400 rounds in guard-room. This was taken to Tammoo when they retired on that place. Second. In addition to 40 rounds carried in pouches of Chief Commissioner's escort, Collett states that there were 13,000 rounds of Snider in Residency magazine. This was issued March 23 to 25. Your telegram, 18th. See Manipore No. 122 B., sent by mail on April 15. Collett had ascertained there were 13,000 rounds Snider in Residency magazine, Manipore, and therefore told Skene to march with 40 rounds in pouch, but on March 5 Collett telegraphed to Skene, who was joined by Quinton on March 6 at Golaghat, that there was a large quantity of Snider ammunition at Kohima, in charge of police, upon which Skene could draw if he thought necessary. Skene apparently believed that Manipore reserve would suffice, and did not draw on Kohima magazine.

THE DEFENCE OF THOBAL.—MAJOR GRANT'S OWN ACCOUNT.

Lieutenant-General Douglas Grant has forwarded to the Times a letter from Major Grant to his mother in which he graphically narrates the defence of Thobal. After describing how the Manipore news arrived at Tammoo on March 27, Major Grant details his advance as follows :—

A GALLANT RUSH.

I marched at 11 P.M., 30th, and neared Thobal at 7 A.M., meeting slight resistance till within 300 yards of river, 3 ft. to 6 ft. deep and 50 yards broad ; there seeing a burning bridge I galloped up on poor Clinker (the old steeplechasing Burman tal I had just bought on selling my Australian mare Lady Alice), and was greeted by a hot fire from mud-walled compounds on left of bridge and trenches on the right in open all across the river. I saw the wooden bridge was burnt through, and made record-time back to my men, emptying my revolver into the enemy behind the walls. My men were in fighting formation ; 10 my men 2nd Burma Battalion of Punjab Infantry (new name) and 10 Goorkhas in firing line at six paces interval between each man, and 20 my men in support 100 yards rear of flanks in single rank, and 20 my men and 20 Goorkhas reserve, baggage guard 300 yards in rear, with elephants, and 30 followers of the Goorkhas (Khasias, from Shilong Hills) ; we opened volleys by sections (10 men) and then advanced, one section firing a volley while the other rushed forward 30 paces, threw themselves down on ground, and fired a volley, on which the other section did likewise. Thus we reached 100 yards from the enemy, where we laid for about five minutes, firing at the only thing we could see, puffs of smoke from the enemy's loopholes and covered with the dust of their bullets ; I had seen one man clean killed at my side, and had felt a sharp flick under arm and began to think we were in for about as much as we could manage ; but the men were behaving splendidly, firing carefully and well directed. I signalled up the supports to come up wide on each flank ; they came with a splendid rush and never stopped on joining the firing line, but went clean on to the bank of the river, within 60 yards of the enemy, lying down and firing at their heads, which could now be seen as they raised them to fire ; then the former firing line jumped up and we rushed into the water. I was first in, but not first out, as I got in up to my neck and had to be helped out and got across nearer to the bridge, the men fixing bayonets in the water. The enemy now gave way, and ran away all along, but we bayoneted eight in the trenches on the right, found six shot through the head, behind the compound wall. At the second line of walls they tried to rally, but our men on the right soon changed their minds, and on they went and never stopped till they got behind the hills on the top of the map. Our advance and their retreat was just as if you rolled one ruler after another up the page on which the map is. When I got to (A) I halted in sheer amazement, the enemy's line was over a mile long. I estimated them at 800, the subadar at 1,200, afterwards heard they were 800 men besides officers. They were dressed mostly in white jackets with white turbans and dhoties, armed with Tower muskets, Enfield and Snider rifles, and about 200 in red jackets and white turbans, armed with Martinis—a rifle that will shoot over twice as far as our Sniders. I simply dared not pursue beyond (A), as my baggage was behind, and beyond them I had seen two or three hundred soldiers half a mile away on my right rear.

"IN A HORRID FUNK!"

April 1, at 6 A.M., my patrols reported enemy advancing in full force from their new position. I went to (A), where picket was, and took a single shot with a Goorkha's Martini into a group of 10 or 12 at 700 yards. The group bolted behind the walls at (B), and the little Goorkhas screamed with delight at a white heap left on the road, which got up, and fell down again once or twice, none of the others venturing out to help the poor wretch. Then a group assembled on the hill, 1,000 or 1,100 yards off, and the Goorkha Jemadar fired, and one went rolling down the hill ; I fired again, but no visible effect. The enemy then retired under cover ; but at 3 P.M. they advanced in full force. I lined wall (A) with 50 men, holding rest in reserve in the fort. The enemy advanced to 600 yards, when we opened volleys, and after firing at us wildly for half an hour they again retired to 800 yards, and suddenly from the hill a great "boom," a scream through the air, then 50 ft. over our heads a large white cloud of smoke, a loud report, and fragments of a 9lb. or 10lb. elongated common shell from a rifle cannon fell between us and our fort ; a second followed from another gun, and burst on our right ; then another struck the ground and burst on impact to our front, firing a patch of grass ; they went on with shrapnell. I confess I was in a horrid funk, for although I knew that artillery has little or no effect on extended troops behind a little cover, I dreaded the moral effect on my recruits, who must have had an enormously exaggerated idea of the powers of guns ; but they behaved splendidly, and soon I had the exact range of the guns, by the smoke and report trick, 900 or 970 yards ; and after half an hour, during which their fire got wilder and wilder, both guns disappeared, and only one turned up on the further hill, 1,500 yards from (A), from which they made poor practice, as the Goorkhas' bullets still reached them, and they only ran the gun up to fire, and feared to lay it carefully. All this time the enemy kept up their rifle fire, from 600 to 800 yards, but I only replied to it when they tried to advance nearer.

By this time it grew dark, and when we could no longer see the enemy we concentrated in the fort, as the enemy had been seen working round to our left. I sent the men back one by one along the hedges, telling each man when and where to go ; none of them doubled. It was quite dark when I got back, and posted them round our walls, which seemed so strong in the morning, but were like paper against well-laid field-guns ; I felt very, very bitter. I was proud of the result of my personal musketry training of my "butchas" (children), all eight months' recruits, except ten to fifteen old soldiers, who set a splendid example, and talked of what skunks the Maniporis were compared to the men they had fought in Afghanistan and the North-West Frontier ; but they all said they had never seen such odds against them before. Our total day's loss—a pony killed and one man slightly wounded.

A SCRIMMAGE.

The next morning (6th) they attacked again at dawn, and as I had only 70 rounds per man for Sniders and 30 for Martinis, I closed into the fort. At first, after 40 minutes' shelling, they made determined efforts to cross the walls 100 to 200 yards in front of my front and left, but nearly every man was hit as he mounted the wall, and then they remained firing from behind the walls. At 8 A.M. a good lot had collected behind the wall 200 yards from my left. I crept out with 10 or 12 Goorkhas, who held my rear and right under the hedge, and drove them with loss by an attack on their right flank, and we bolted back to fort without loss. Then at 11 A.M. there was firing from behind the hedges to our front with a weapon that rang out louder than their rifles. I crept out with a havildar and six Goorkhas close in the ditch under the hedge, out to the front from our right, up to within 10 yards of the nearest of them. They opened a wild fire and bolted as we attacked their left flank, but then we found ourselves in a bit of a hole, for 30 or 40 were in a corner behind a wall 6 ft. high, over which they were firing at us. I had my D.B. 16-bore shot-gun and six buckshot and six ball cartridges, and, as they showed their heads over the wall, they got buckshot in their faces at 20 yards. When my 12 rounds were fired and the Goorkhas also doing considerable damage, we rushed the wall and I dropped one through the head with my revolver and hit some more as they bolted. When we cleared them out we returned to the fort along the ditch, having had the hottest three minutes on record, and only got the Goorkha havildar shot through the hand and some of our clothes shot through ; we had killed at least ten. Next day I visited the corner and found blood, thirty Snider and fifteen Martini cartridges, and one 4-inch long Express cartridge, ·500, which accounted for the unaccountable sounds I had heard. Next day I heard I had killed the "Bhudda" (old) Senaputty, or the Commander-in-Chief of the old Maharaja, father of the present lot of scoundrels, and also two generals, but that is not yet confirmed. Well, as I said, we bolted back into the fort, and I had thirty minutes' leisure to go all round my fort, and found I had only fifty rounds per man, enough for one hour's hard fighting, and only twenty-five for Martinis; so I ordered all the men to lie down behind the walls, and one man in six kept half-an-hour's watch on their movements.

THE MEETING WITH PRESGRAVE.

At noon, 8th, white flag appeared, and a man stuck a letter on road and went back. Went and found it contained a letter from Presgrave, with orders from Burma for me to retire on first opportunity, and he was not to reinforce me but to help me to retire. I was sick, but the orders were most peremptorily worded. So at 7.30 P.M., on a pitch-dark, rainy night, we started back ; a splendid night for a retreat, but such a ghastly, awful job ! We had two wounded elephants with us, and made just a mile an hour, only seeing our hands before our faces by the lightning-flashes. I had to hold on to a Sepoy's coat, as I could see absolutely nothing ; but they see better in the dark than we do. We were drenched to the skin, and were halting, taking ten paces forward when the lightning flashed, and then halting the column half an hour at times; but the feeble Manipori, of course, would not be out such a night, and we passed through three or four villages full of troops without a man showing. At 2 A.M., 9th, a man said, sleepily, "The party has come"—that was all—and the next moment Presgrave had my hand. He had heard that I was captured and all my men killed or taken at two different places ; had returned nearly to Tammoo, but the two Burmans with Maharaja's letter told him where I was, and he marched thirty-six hours without kit or rations, only halting for eight hours, and was coming on to Tammoo. He went back to meet some rations, and, then, after passing the night in a Naga village, returned to Palel and here, with 180 men and 11 boxes of ammunition —40 of them our mounted infantry.

POOR CLINKER.

At Palel we found three or four hundred Manipori soldiers, who did not expect us; they saw us half a mile off and bolted, after firing a few shots. I went on with the mounted infantry, and after trotting till within 300 yards of the retreating army, we formed line on the open and went in. I rode for a palki and umbrella I saw, and, shooting one or two on my way, got close up, but a hundred or so had made for the hills on our right and made a short stand, and suddenly down went poor Clinker on his head, hurling me off. Jumped up—I was covered with blood from a bullet-wound in the poor beast's fore leg, just below the shoulder. Two men came up. I twisted my handkerchief round with a cleaning-rod above the wound, stopping the blood from the severed main artery, and, refilling my revolver, ran on. By this time the men had jumped off and were fighting with the enemy on the hill, the palki was down, and, I fear, the inmate of it escaped. We killed forty of them without loss, excepting poor Clinker and another pony. After pursuing three miles we stopped and returned to the infantry, which were rather out of it, though they doubled two miles. Found poor Clinker's large bone broken and had to shoot him at once. We collected the spoil and returned to camp, where we had a quiet night, and were joined by the Hon. Major Charles Leslie and 400 of his 2nd-4th Goorkhas and two mountain guns; Cox of ours. Total, now, eight British officers; all very nice and jolly; but to our disgust we have to halt here for rest of ours, rest of Goorkhas, two more guns, and General Graham. Cox brought me telegrams of congratulations from Sir Frederick Roberts, General Stewart, commanding Burma, and Chief Commissioner, saying everything kind and nice they could. I sent in my despatches next day, and so the first act of the Manipore campaign closes. My men have behaved splendidly, both in attack, siege, and retreat, and I have recommended all for the Order of Merit. My luck all through has been most marvellous—everything turned up all right, and there was hardly a hitch anywhere. Poor Clinker! He was 300 yards from 800 rifles for twenty minutes and never touched, and a shot killed him at full gallop. Now "bus" (enough) about myself in the longest letter I have ever written.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on May 30 :—

The Hassanzai and Akazai tribes of the Black Mountain having surrendered unconditionally, and accepted the terms imposed upon them, their chiefs were received in durbar by Major-General Elles yesterday. He explained to them that the Government were ready to withdraw their troops at once if Hashim Ali, the source of all the trouble in that quarter, were given up. The chiefs replied that he was beyond their power of arrest. It will therefore be necessary to maintain a force in the country till the tribes are strong enough to prevent Hashim's return. The majority of the troops will return to India at once. So long as peace is maintained the tribes will be allowed to remain in undisturbed possession of the villages and to cultivate the lands. The commander-in-chief has telegraphed to Major-General Elles expressing his approval of the excellent work done by the troops.

Information from the Black Mountain says that, except a few stray shots fired occasionally by night, the opposition has now practically ceased in these parts. It is said that the entire Hashanzai and Akazai Jirgahs are anxious to come in, and intend to assemble at Kanach in a day or two, to talk matters over amongst themselves. They profess to be willing to submit to any terms, and to accept Ibrahim Khan or anyone else we select as the Chief in place of Hashim Ali. However, the Government has decided that it will be necessary to hut two battalions and one battery of native troops in the Hashanzai territory near Seri, and the huts are to be erected forthwith.

ALLAHABAD, May 12.—News has been received from the Black Mountain, dated yesterday. A friendly native brought in news on Sunday night that there were sixty armed men on the hills about the village of Peza, who meant to make a night attack on the Surmal. The officer commanding that post, Major Schalch, was warned by wire to keep a sharp look-out. Lieutenant Chesney, with forty men of the 2-5th Goorkhas, went up the hill to the source of the water supply to lay a trap for the enemy and to try and get in their rear and cut them off. Their scouts were on the alert, and fired two signal shots and disappeared in the darkness. Lieutenant Chesney's party remained out on the hill all night, but nothing more was seen of the enemy. Yesterday afternoon three or four men were seen on the road between Surmal and Maira trying to destroy the telegraph line on the hill above China. Major Schalch sent out a party who drove them off and exchanged shots, but without any casualties on either side. The Akazai Jirgha that was to have come in has not put in an appearance.

ALLAHABAD, May 13.—The latest intelligence from the Black Mountain announces that the force is now in occupation of the Khan Kheyl section of the Hassanzai country, and of territory of the Akazais. The latter is completely deserted by the inhabitants, who have not as yet submitted. They are sheltered from any action on our part by taking refuge just over the border of the Chagarzai country, which is beyond the scope of the operations prescribed for the force. During the last few days small parties of the enemy have crossed the Chagarzai border intent on mischief, cutting wires and firing into the camp, and shots have been exchanged, but they have retired at once out of range across the Chagarzai border.

The Times of India says :—A correspondent with the Black Mountain Expedition sends us a letter, of which it is perhaps advisable to quote only the first portion. Our correspondent, who is known to us and who should certainly know what he writes about, assures us that his letter reflects pretty accurately the prevailing opinion of a force. The portion of his letter we quote below will probably attract some attention : hence these preliminary remarks :—"That the inhabitants of Swat, Baner, and the Black Mountain should be steeped in superstition need not surprise us. But that the Mahomedans of Hazara and Rawalpindi should be ready to accept any childish story in support of the power of their Pirs, after years of British occupation, is not a little startling. Our retreat from the face of the enemy, however, at Pelosi has to be explained by them, and to their minds the explanation is not far to seek. In their opinion there is no mystery whatever in the fact that the Sircar has lost prestige, and that British arms have undergone a reverse. How could it have been otherwise? Did not Mian Gul, the Akund of Swat, appear on the heights of Baio and catch our harmless bullets in his hand? And did he not address our astonished General, saying to him, 'You did not know I could perform wonders? Now go, lest I destroy you.' And what happened then? Our General answered, 'Certainly I never knew it. Of course, I will go away at once.' So the order was given. Our mules were loaded, and, hey presto! the advance was abandoned, and the land of the Chigarzais was secured from intrusion. This is the prevailing story, and admirably it accounts for everything, for our protracted hesitation, for our inactivity in the presence of a mob of tribesmen who during daylight regularly flouted us with their standards and at night committed numberless acts of war upon us, and, lastly, for the meekness with which we accepted the conditions imposed upon us. There can be no doubt whatever that this expedition was intended to penetrate into the Chigarzai country. The force was aware of it, the Banerwals and the enemy generally were assured of it. The intention having, whether wisely or not, been once entertained, it should have been carried out at all hazards, and over every obstacle. It was a question at that stage of prestige, and no gathering of the Clans should have been held to daunt us. I do not believe myself that there was any necessity to summon the reserve in such nervous haste. Baio could have been seized from Towara, it could have been captured from Pelosi, no time should have been lost, and the one brigade would easily have swept the hills. We now discover in the prevailing belief how foolish and mischievous our do-nothing policy was. In dealing with Asiatics it is an axiom that to hesitate is fatal; to stand on the defensive a blunder.

THE MIRANZAI EXPEDITION.

IT is surely time for the authorities to alter the system by which designations are given to our frontier expeditions, says the Lahore paper. Why, for instance, should the force operating beyond Kohat be called the "Miranzai Field Force"? The Miranzai valley is British territory, and the inhabitants more or less peaceful subjects, so the term is decidedly a misnomer. The troops certainly have to traverse the Miranzai valley, but they are fighting against the Orakzais, and are at this moment in the Orakzai country, or beyond, and an alteration in the name of the force would make things clearer.

The following telegrams are from the Indian papers :—

SANGAR, May 9.—The sub-sections of the Samil tribes which had not already submitted sent in their jirgahs yesterday. They had an audience of General Lockhart in the afternoon. All the rifles and other Government property which remained in their hands were brought in and surrendered, and the headmen composing the delegations appeared so crushed and submissive that they gladly accepted our terms without demur. The fighting men of the Gar tribe being disheartened by our continued series of successes have dispersed to their homes, and their jirgahs wait upon the General to-day to hear and accept our terms. The Samil and Gar are the two great divisions that comprise all the Orakzai tribe, so that these people who can put 25,000 fighting men into the field have been conquered and subdued by the comparatively small force employed against them by General Lockhart in less than three weeks.

SIMLA, May 11.—No disturbance took place at Miranzai during the Eed festival. The latest news from General Lockhart states that all Government property has now been returned. The Samil jirgah was received on the 9th, and all accounts with them settled. A fine of 1,000 rs. was imposed on Anella Khel, and the Mishti were informed that British troops would destroy all towers at Kandi Mishtis and inflict chastisement on the tribes if they offered resistance. The jirgah complied submissively to all conditions. The Miranzai and Alisherzai jirgah have not come in, and if they fail to appear, General Lockhart will visit their settlements. The Afridis seem to be settling down, and work on Goolistan has been commenced. Two Afridi sepoys who recently deserted did not after all take their rifles with them.

ALLAHABAD, May 11.—A telegram from Miranzai announces that the jirgahs from all the remaining sections of the Samil tribe have come in to tender submission, and with them all the rifles and other Government property that had been taken. Nothing belonging to us remains in their hands. The jirgahs were received by the General and the Political Officers at Goolistan, and seemed utterly dispirited and cowed and prepared to submit to any terms that may be imposed. The jirgahs from the Gar tribe have announced their desire to come in, and are to be received at Goolistan also. A strong fortified position is to be constructed on the Mastaon Plateau, capable of affording accommodation to 300 or 400 men, and smaller posts are to be built without delay along the crest of the Samana Range, which we have compelled the Orakzais to recognise as our frontier, and which we may now confidently expect to maintain.

ALLAHABAD, May 12.—Information which has been received from Miranzai states that General Lockhart left Goolistan on Sunday morning, with six days' rations, for the Kandi Mishti Valley viâ Karappa, where half the force was left encamped. The jirgahs have come in from Kandi Mishtis, but they were not considered sufficiently representative, so our troops will march through their country. No opposition is anticipated. The force consists of the Peshawur Mountain Battery, and parties of rifles from the Manchester, the 29th Punjab Infantry, 3rd Sikhs, 2nd Punjab Infantry, and 6th Punjab Infantry, under Colonel Turner.

ALLAHABAD, May 13.—Miranzai news states that Sir William Lockhart having marched through the Kandi Mishti valley on the 10th, returned to Karappa, where he halted on the 11th. He was accompanied by representative jirgahs from all the tribes, who witnessed the destruction of their towers. All the villages were spared.

ALLAHABAD, May 14.—News from Miranzai, dated Camp Mastaon, yesterday, says that General Lockhart advances to-day up the Khanke Valley to Mamazai Bazaar, accompanied by Mamazai Ali Khel and Alisherzai Jirgahs. Heliographic communication was established with the headquarters to-day. The column returns to Karappa to-morrow, and to Goolistan on the 15th. The jirgahs promised that no opposition would be offered, and no damage is being done to villages and towers. All crops are being paid for, and supplies are being brought in freely.

SIMLA, May 15.—General Lockhart, on the 13th, marched from Sajdamal to Kanka Badar, the headquarters of the Mamazais, passing through the head of the village of Alisherzai. No opposition was offered. A complete survey was made of the Minjin Daru. All the tribes have now been punished. Those who offered resistance have made their submission. Nothing remains now but to garrison Samana on a peace footing.

THE VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

THE first meeting of the Legislative Council was held at Simla on May 14, at Viceregal Lodge. Sir Alexander Miller and General Brackenbury took their seats. Sir Alexander Miller was substituted for the Hon. Mr. Scoble as member of the Select Committees on the Bills to Amend the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, the Merchant Shipping Act, and the Bankers' Books Evidence Act. Regarding the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Bill, Sir A. Miller remarked that the Select Committee would probably not be able to report this Session. The Bankers' Books Evidence Bill was nearly ready, and he hoped the Hon. Mr. Hutchins would be able to pass it at the next meeting of the Council. The Bill to declare certain Courts in British India to be Colonial Courts of Admiralty was introduced by Sir A. Miller and subsequently passed into law. The main object of the Bill is to declare certain Courts in India having unlimited civil jurisdiction to be Colonial Courts of Admiralty in pursuance of the English Act of 1890. So far as the Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Jurisdiction of the Indian Courts are concerned the Bill extends and improves them. Sir A. Miller pointed out the confusion and inconvenience which such a measure as that under discussion would entail. The Courts in British India declared under the Bill to be Colonial Courts of Admiralty are the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, the Recorder's Court at Rangoon, the Resident's Court at Aden, and the Kurrachee District Court. The Council adjourned sine die.

YUNNAN.

THE North China Herald says:—The attention of the commercial world has been frequently called to Yunnan. The Margary tragedy made it famous, French and English travellers have visited it, and described what they saw. At the Asiatic Society's meeting last evening, General Mesny instructed us on what he saw in the same province. He had good opportunities for observation, being in the service of the Chinese Government, and speaking the language with great fluency. The size of the Chinese provinces is such that the capital cities are about as far apart as London is from Edinburgh, and the post journey from Yunnan to Peking takes sixty days, at the rate of thirty miles a day. The distance is estimated at 6,025 Chinese li from the yamên of the Viceroy of Yunnan and Kueichow to Peking. In proceeding there the Viceroy has to cross five provinces. He may go by Shensi. In that case he would travel through Chihli and Shansi to Singan Fu. From that city he would pass by the viaducts which conduct him into Szechuan, through chasms formidable for their depth and famed for their scenery. Szechuan is itself as large as France, and when this province is passed he finds himself in Yunnan. But he is more likely to go by Hankow, which he reaches by passing through Honan. Then he ascends the Great River and passes through the gorges into Szechuan. If he prefers going by water this is best, and that mode of travelling is less fatiguing. The traffic from Shanghai takes this route to Szechuan; the Japanese miners, for instance, proceed from Shanghai past Nanking and Wuchang westward into Szechuan and turn off at Chungking to the south-west, keeping in the province of Szechuan till they reach Yunnan. Machinery for the mines takes this route.

Yunnan is mostly 6,000 feet above the level of the sea. It is then, though so far south, mild in climate. The Mongolian plateau on the way to Kiachta is from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea. Yunnan is higher than this, but being much lower than Thibet it receives rainfall from the north-west in great abundance, and is therefore a fertile province with an equable temperature. It is a region subject to earthquakes, a circumstance which seems to be connected with its proximity to the Himalayan chain. The same liability marks the province of Kansu, and as Yunnan is rich in minerals it is natural to place these things together, and to suppose that the earthquakes are a remainder of the mighty force which lifted the Himalayas and Thibet to their present elevation, and that this line of earthquakes has so opened great fissures in the earth's crust that the molten metals below could escape under side pressure, and did at some unknown date reach points more or less near to the surface. It seems so, but who can tell? At any rate, however and whenever it took place, there they are buried in the Yunnan rocks in great abundance—precious and useful metals—waiting for machinery to crush them, and deliver them up to the miner.

The importance of the trade routes leading through Yunnan to Burma and Tonquin makes Yunnan an interesting province to the foreign merchant. It has become deplorably depopulated, but must recover its prosperity. Out of a trade valued in Mr. Happer's report at 183,000 taels, there was at Mengtze one-third of foreign merchandise, and one-eighth of native imports sent from Hong Kong. Native exports amounted to 88,000 taels. Most of the trade was with Hong Kong. The Tonquin share was less than that of Hong Kong. Beside the copper which goes to Peking tin is exported in slabs in increasing quantity, and musk is in demand as an export. The trade in Puerh tea is promising, and must increase. Mules are the burden-bearers. They look picturesque when ascending and descending the passes. The people decorate them with rosettes of Turkey red. Mengtze alone has more than 12,000 of these animals. The people begin to show a fondness for cotton yarn from Bombay. Tobacco from Canton is also valued. Many of the aborigines cultivate rice, and speak a language allied to the Burmese. Wheat, maize, millet, beans, sweet potatoes, and tobacco are grown there, as also pomegranates, peaches, persimmons, and plums. It is a country of perpetual sunshine, with a south wind that blows steadily throughout the year. The thermometer is never below 40 deg. nor above 80 deg., so that it has evidently a very fine climate. There is a strange malaria which carries off multitudes in a few days. Natives are the victims and strangers escape. The woods are very valuable, embracing ebony and coffin wood.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to May 13.

The Riot at Benares.—It is said in connection with the Benares riots that great discontent exists among the Mahomedan cloth-weavers, who were really in a measure responsible for the recent outbreak. A few days before the temple affair they went to the Collector and informed him that they had lost their means of livelihood through the competition of Manchester goods, and immediately afterwards in their soreness of spirit they attacked the Hindoos, who were then organising their festival. The alleged violation of Hindoo religious susceptibilities was merely the occasion for the general irritation existing in the city to give itself vent. The case connected with the wreck of the Telegraph Office during the recent Benares riots was concluded on May 11. Out of the fifteen accused, the jury acquitted seven and convicted eight, two unanimously, and six by a majority. The judge passed sentences of transportation for fourteen years in the case of three, twelve years on two, ten years on one, and seven years on another. A sweeper boy was also found guilty of being in possession of some of Mr. Ludgwick's property, and was sentenced to thirty stripes. Owing to dearness of provisions, says a telegram, rumours prevailed that there would be a recurrence of the riots at Benares after the Ramzan. Every precautionary measure was taken by the magistrate and the police, and a detachment of the East Lancashire Regiment was posted at the railway station. All, however, passed off quietly, but an order to remain in readiness for emergencies is still in force, though it is expected that there will be no need for the services of the troops.

Taking the official report, the total outturn of tea in Assam last year amounted to 82,119,252 lb., or 5,000,000 lb. more than that of the previous year. But the official figures are just five millions in excess of those of the Tea Association, which agree with the Trade Returns. It is, therefore, surmised that the Deputy Commissioners have overestimated the crop by this amount.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to May 14.

Accident to a Vicar-General.—On May 9, while Father Gelis, Vicar-General of the Coimbatore Episcopate, who is about seventy, was travelling on the train, he fell out of the door which he opened. A lady in the same compartment informed the officials at the next station of what had occurred, and help was sent. Father Gelis was found on the line with a severe cut on the head, a fractured shoulder-blade, and is in a very precarious condition.

Charge against the Madras Police.—Some time ago Mr. Emery, partner in Messrs. Orr and Company, succeeded in getting the Government to institute an inquiry into the circumstances under which he was arrested by the police for not appearing as a witness in a Mofussil Court. The Commissioner of Police held an inquiry, at which Mr. Emery was represented by counsel. The report of the inquiry having been submitted to Government it has passed an order that after full consideration of the evidence upon both sides, the Government has come to the conclusion that Mr. Emery has not substantiated the charges of insolent and intemperate behaviour which he has brought against the police. The report of the Commissioner of Police has not been published.

Sale of the Scottish Mission Memorial Buildings.—A Madras paper understands that the Rev. G. Milne Rae, as representing the Scottish Mission in Madras, has received a telegram from the Home Committee, authorising the sale of the Memorial Hall and with it, it is understood, Anderson's Memorial Church adjoining, to the local Government for the sum of 60,000 rs., the object of the Government in securing the premises being to erect upon their site a building for the new law classes, lecture-rooms, &c., &c. Correspondence has, it appears, been passing for some time past between the Government and the Home Committee of the Scotch Mission for the purchase of this site, which has at last resulted as narrated above, much to the chagrin and annoyance of the congregation of Anderson's Memorial Church, which, although composed of natives, intends to use the most strenuous endeavours to save this edifice from destruction, even at the expense of litigation, if necessary.

The Commander-in-Chief's Residence.—The matter of providing a suitable permanent residence at Ootacamund for the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army has again been brought up before the Council; and it was decided that, if it is found impossible to procure the grant of a sufficient sum of money to purchase any of the properties now decided on, Sir James Dormer is to submit any alternative proposals in regard to obtaining a residence on a lease. The whole matter will then be submitted to the Government of India for consideration.

CEYLON.

The Ceylon Pearl Fishery of 1891 is over at last, and Captain Donnan does not hold out any hopes of another for some time to come. The gross takings have been as nearly as possible 9,60,000 rs., and if, as is estimated, the expenses of the fishery, as well as bonuses, amount to 1,00,000 rs., it will leave a net profit to Government of over 8,60,000 rs.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to May 16.

Provincial Conference at Poona.—The Provincial Conference has been held at Poona. Over a hundred delegates, mainly from the Deccan, were present. Regret for Mr. Bradlaugh's death was recorded, and resolutions were passed on Education, Abkari, Income-tax operations, the Salt Act, the Municipal Act, and numerous other subjects. Before closing, Mr. Tilak, an opponent of the Consent Bill, proposed, and Mr. Lele, a supporter of the measure, seconded, and the Conference adopted, the following resolution:—"That this Conference places on record its regret that the Government of India was not pleased to give due regard to public opinion expressed about the Age of Consent Bill. The expression of public opinion was most distinctly explained to mean the opinion of all parties—that is, the protest of the opponents and the amendments of supporters." Mr. Tilak expressly stated that the resolution of the Conference made absolutely no reference to the merits of the Bill itself.

The Bombay Police.—At their meeting on May 11 the members of the Bombay Municipal Corporation had before them a letter from Government relative to the increase of the Bombay Police Force, and, on the motion of Mr. Mehta, a committee was appointed to consider and report on the matter, it being further resolved that in the meantime the president should telegraph to the Government of India, requesting them not to sanction the increase, pending the receipt of a representation from the Corporation on the subject. The Englishman, referring to the difference of opinion between the Government and the Municipality of Bombay regarding the proposed increase of the local police force, says:—The question is indeed one for which a satisfactory solution will be hard to find. An exactly similar issue has for twenty years embittered the relations of the Paris Municipality with the Central Government, and an agreement seems still to be as far off as ever. The difficulty lies, of course, in determining the exact measure in which the Imperial Executive benefits by the protection of the local police, and this is obviously a question which lends itself to endless differences of opinion.

The University Tower Fatality.—The excitement in the Parsee community at Bombay arising from the deaths of the two Parsee ladies continues unabated, says a Bombay correspondent on May 14; and the three Gujerati dailies contribute to it in no small degree by publishing each morning with sensational headings minute details of matters more or less connected with the fatality. They repudiate most strenuously the conclusion arrived at by the police officers on grounds which appear to them to be unanswerable. Inquiry is now being made into a report which was circulated on Saturday to the effect that the deceased were followed up the tower by a Parsee and two Mahomedans. A young Parsee named Manekjee Aslajee Daroowalla was sent for and examined, and then allowed to go home. He was again sent for, and was further examined for some time. The Superintendent allowed Manekjee to go home with his relations, but he is still kept under police surveillance. He is a young man, about twenty-three years of age, and is said to have inherited a small fortune some time ago. He has had no occupation hitherto, and appears to do no work of any kind. The police inquiries have not elicited anything to damage his character. He is said to be a relation or friend of a "certain person of considerable local influence," and this circumstance is supposed to have created a good deal of prejudice against him in the minds of most Parsees. Considerable surprise is expressed at the refusal of the Commissioner of Police to avail himself, in the interests of justice, of the offers of rewards for the detection of the supposed culprits, from Sir Dinshaw Manekjee Petit and Mr. Ardasir Sorabjee Dustoor-Camdin. Some important evidence, says the Pioneer, has been given at the inquiry into the tragedy by Dr. Sydney Smith, the coroner's surgeon. Dr. Smith, who made an autopsy, is of opinion that the marks on the unfortunate girls were caused by the fall, and he gives no support whatever to the theory of outrage.

A proposal has been made by Government to abolish the office of Sheriff of Bombay, entrusting its duties to a High Bailiff. At the same time it is under contemplation to amalgamate the process-serving staffs of the High Court and the Small Cause Court, and to place the whole of the bailiffs under this new official, who would be a continuator of the office of Under-Sheriff, but bearing a new title, and performing additional functions.

Wheat still continues to pour into Bombay, says the Times of India of May 16, and something like a thousand truck-loads a day have to be unloaded at Wari Bunder. Considering the very unusual pressure, the staff of the G.I.P. Railway are working admirably. The receipts are 2 lacs a day. The line is being kept in grand order. But, spite of the heavy traffic, the number of engines laid up are very few, while the organisation in the traffic and in the discharge of the goods at Wari Bunder is worthy of all praise, and reflects the greatest credit on the assistant superintendents and the employés generally. It is to be hoped that the directors will give a good bonus this year, not only to the office clerks at home—as they did last year—but to those who have, by their arduous toil and careful management, carried on so successfully the work suddenly rushed upon them.

The Shanghai Mercury is given to understand that Mr. W. R. Carles, the British Consul at Chinkiang, was leaving for Europe about May 1, and that Mr. Allen, from Amoy, will relieve him.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times writes on May 31 :—

The Marquess of Lansdowne will come to Burma during the next cold season. It is not decided whether he will come at the close of the present year or early next year.

The operations undertaken during the past dry season in the Bhamo district are producing satisfactory results. The orders issued by the British authorities are now complied with in a manner hitherto unknown. Several important Kachyen chiefs, including Leka, who has hitherto given great trouble, submitted personally or by their representatives. The rationing of the garrison left at the jade mines is nearly completed.

Numerous complaints have appeared in the local Press regarding the treatment of Indian coolies returning from the Chin Hills. During their passage through Upper Burma they appear to have been treated with harshness and neglect. One detachment was terribly scourged by cholera. Another detachment arrived at Rangoon in such an enfeebled condition that a number died from exhaustion after their arrival.

A telegram to the Pioneer from Haka (May 7) states :—On the 2nd instant a column commanded by Colonel Mainwaring, with Lieutenant Evatt as staff officer, composed of two guns No. 2 Mountain Battery, R.A., under Lieutenant O'Leary, 200 rifles of the 39th Garhwalis under Lieutenant Mocatta, 50 rifles of the 4th Madras Pioneers under Lieutenant Rainey, with hospital establishment under Surgeon Kalewala, and 100 transport mules, left Haka for the village of Klang-Klang, distant seventeen miles. The objects of the column were to establish Zahwit, known on the Lushai side as Zahoota, as a paramount chief of the Klang-Klangs, to destroy the houses of the two rebel chiefs Lalway and Koikway, and by a demonstration of force to expedite the payment of the fine inflicted by us for the attack at the Lawvar stream. Lieutenant Macnabb, police officer, Chin Hills, accompanied the column as civil officer. Klang-Klang was reached the same day after a trying march of five hours, during which the Boinu stream was crossed seventeen times. Next day half the force visited the tributary village of Tlangewa, distant seven miles. The remainder of the party entrenched themselves in a camp opposite Klang-Klang with the whole of the transport. This village had never been visited by us. Last year the fine imposed on Tlangewa by Lieutenant Macnabb for its share in the Lawvar attack was paid. The submission of its inhabitants was sworn to, and an additional fine, which had been imposed for their insulting Zahoota on his demanding the fine imposed, was paid in full. On the 5th the whole party returned to Haka, bringing with them twenty guns and two coolie loads of gongs and other utensils.

MAY 8.—The Political Officer informed the chiefs of Tungzang before leaving that if the fine of guns imposed was not promptly paid up in full the Government would be obliged to send a fresh column, and in that case the fine would be doubled. The Tangzang villagers, who lost their chief at the Lawvar action have sworn to avenge his death by one of our heads or of one of the Hakas. We now hope that our alliance with the Hakas is firmly cemented, especially as we neglected to destroy Klang-Klang owing to Shweling, a Haka chieftain, being left behind us on the 3rd ultimo to obtain news of the willingness of the tribes to submit, as we were afraid that they might murder him in revenge for the valuable aid which two Haka spies gave us in informing Colonel Mainwaring at Haka of a probable attempt on Lieutenant Mocatta's column returning from Tao on the 1st ultimo.

Lieutenant Rainey with 100 rifles, 4th Madras Pioneers, returned to Rawvan on the 7th. The guns leave this on the 10th for Mandalay via Kan, Kalemyo and Kalewa, accompanied by the six signallers of the 4th King's Royal Rifles. Surgeon Hoey and the field hospital leave us on the same date for Pokoko, and Lieutenant Harrison with the Burma Sappers left Rawvan for No. 3 Stockade on the 3rd. Lieutenant Ainslie and the Madras Sappers leave Haka on the 13th for the same destination to complete the work required there. Captain Browne, 39th Garhwalis, is shortly expected here to assume command on the departure of Colonel Mainwaring for a year's leave home. General Graham reassumed command of the Myingyan district yesterday on his return to Manipore.

THE CHIEF SECRETARY sends the following information to the Burma Press :—

On the night of March 1, as already reported, Lieutenant Burton's camp in the Bhamo district was rushed by a large number of Kachins. Two men were killed and ten wounded, among the latter being Mr. V. C. French, Assistant Engineer, who received a bullet wound in the foot. Reinforcements were promptly despatched to Lieutenant Burton's assistance under Major Smith, Devonshire Regiment, who on arriving assumed charge of the operations. It was at first believed that only the villages of the Hanton and Ngazin Kachins were implicated. These villages were destroyed and a certain number of the villagers captured, the majority, however, having fled. Later investigations revealed the fact that a number of the Lashi Kachins had also taken part in the attack. This tribe inhabit the country between the two branches of the Mankanha Chaung, which has generally been regarded as the boundary between Burma and China, and in this way have practically maintained independence of either country. They have recently taken part in attacks on Chinese caravans, and the assistance of the Chinese authorities was accordingly asked : but it was resolved to chastise them without awaiting the result of these negotiations. The operations were conducted by Major Smith, and were attended with complete success. On April 20 Piti and three other villages were occupied by our troops. A number of villagers and five guns being captured. In the house of the Piti Sawbwa was found a blanket which had been taken from one of our sepoys in the attack on Lieutenant Burton's detachment. The villages were left standing for a day, but, as no more Kachins surrendered, they were burnt on the 21st, and the troops then retired, owing to the want of rations. There were no casualties on our side.

JACOPA, the Lushai Chief who attacked Mr. Murray's party in February last, having refused to surrender, a small party of 120 Frontier Police, under Captain Shakespear, Superintendent, Lushai Hills, Mr. Pughe, Commandant, and Mr. Thomas, the Assistant, are going to turn him out of his new village which he has built near his old site. It is reported that he intends to make one more attempt.

IT IS PROBABLE that a considerable reduction will be made in the strength of the Military Police in Upper Burma during Sir Alexander Mackenzie's tenure of office. A circular has been issued to the various local officials of the Province in which the Chief Commissioner invites suggestions and opinions on the subject ; but his communication, meanwhile, leaves no doubt as to his own views in the matter. A reduction of some kind there must be ; the question merely is, to what extent, under existing circumstances, it will be safe to reduce the force. The change will probably be accompanied by a thorough reconstitution of the Civil Police, which is notoriously ill-disciplined and badly organised.

IT IS NOTIFIED that all the western and southern portions of Wuntho have been formed into a Public Works division, designated the Wuntho division, and that this division will be under the Third Circle of Superintendence. The boundary between the Wuntho division and the Katha division will be roughly a line drawn from Singon to the Mainthoung Hill, continuing thence to the watershed of the range northward. Mr. W. G. Bligh has been appointed to the executive charge of the Wuntho division.

SIR ALEXANDER MACKENZIE has addressed a letter of unqualified censure to the Municipal Commissioners of Moulmein. The city has long been one of the worst governed and most unhealthy in Further India. It is a veritable hotbed of disease, has been visited again and again during the last few years by attacks of cholera of an unusually virulent type, and harbours almost every infectious malady known to Eastern Asia—and this, despite an excellent situation, a heavy rainfall, and good natural drainage. In the opinion of Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the insanitary state of the city is due solely to the culpable failure of the Municipality to fulfil its first and most obvious duties. The Commissioners, in order to reduce taxation to the lowest possible limits, have postponed from month to month and from year to year the most necessary sanitary expenditure, and the result is that Moulmein has a lighter taxation and a heavier death-rate than any other town in Burma. In the interests of the Empire at large as much as of Moulmein itself, the Government has now decided to energetically interfere in the matter. Sir Alexander Mackenzie has pointed out in the plainest possible words that "Government cannot permit one of the principal seaports in Burma to fester any longer in its own filth."

HYDERABAD.

THE Viceroy, says the correspondent of the Standard, has just given his approval to the new scheme of land settlement in the Telingana province of the Nizam's dominions, which was drawn up a few weeks ago by the Government of his Highness. This settlement is the first serious attempt to place the ryot in the native State of Hyderabad on as favourable a footing, with regard to taxation, as the cultivator in Madras, where the ryot has enjoyed for a century the benefits of the enlightened policy of the great Anglo-Indian Statesman, Sir Thomas Munro.

The history of the measure is given in an able Government Minute, signed by Nawab Mushtak Hoosain, Finance Secretary in the Nizam's Government. It resulted from the labours, in 1889-90, of the Telingana Committee, which revealed a deplorable over taxation, at the cost of the cultivator, throughout a large part of this State. The proposed assessment by Mr. A. J. Dunlop, Settlement Commissioner, has been practically adopted ; and it is notified that the Jamabundi rates shall be fixed accordingly for the next fifteen years.

The English reader will gather what this alteration means for the ryot when I state that, whereas 166 rs. and 157 rs. per acre on sugarcane land was formerly paid, only 68 rs. and 59 rs. will be paid in future in their respective districts. The reduction is not confined to any particular class of land, but extends to all, and ranges from 50 to 75 per cent. It is also provided that if the local officers in any district be of opinion that these lower rates are in any particular case too high, they are at once to report to the Government, so that a further reduction may be made. The Minister concludes by laying down the honourable maxim that "when it appears that the defects in our revenue system tend to the benefit of the ryot, it will be better to make no change, for it becomes a Government like that of his Highness patiently to acquiesce in such disadvantages as it may suffer in the discharge of its engagement to its subjects."

The administration of Sir Asman Jah has done much good work during the last three years, but the Telingana settlement is certainly its greatest achievement, and is equally beneficial to the people and honourable to the Prince.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

ADVICES from Askhabad state that the Governor of the Transcaspian Province, General Kouropatkin, has issued strict orders absolutely forbidding Jews to enter his government, which extends from the Caspian to the Oxus.

A correspondent sends the Daily Chronicle this note from Tiflis (May 15) :—

A report having appeared in the Russian Press that Sheikh Djemal-ed-Din, the well-known Afghan agitator against the extension of English influence in Asia, had been arrested near Teheran and subsequently assassinated by order of the Ameen-es-Sultan, I have made inquiry into the matter. According to my information, Sheikh Djemal-ed-Din is now at Kermanshah, in Persia, where he has been since the Turkish Government refused to allow him to take up his residence at Bagdad. This is the Persian official statement.

The news which came lately from Jellalabad, that the Ameer had ordered the removal of Sirdar Shad Muhammad Khan, Governor of Jellalabad, on account of his unpopularity, appears to have been at least premature. Probably the wish was to a large extent father to the thought. Anyway travellers arriving at Peshawur still bring their passports from Jellalabad countersigned with his name.

The Ameer, it is said, has now called in his old coinage, and the new coinage, consisting of rupees, 8-anna, 4-anna and 2-anna pieces, has been issued instead. The old coins are being broken up for recoinage and issue.

Abdool Khalik, the Ameer's agent for the sale of the Afghan almond crop at Peshawur, has come to grief. Charges of peculation were brought against him, and after inquiry being held at Cabul, he has been deprived of the agency.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received :—

SHANGHAI, May 25 (Standard).—The popular movement against foreigners is spreading with somewhat alarming rapidity. Following on the outrages already reported, the Christian mission houses at Nankin have been attacked and pillaged, the inmates having narrow escapes for their lives. The agitation is ceasing to be local, and considerable apprehension is felt for the safety of the foreign residents at the Treaty ports on the Yangtze River. There can be no doubt that some or all of the secret societies with which China abounds, and which play so important a part in the development of the domestic affairs of the country, are at the bottom of the present mischief. Their agents have been, and are, hard at work fomenting discontent and organising the mob, with the result already seen at Nankin and elsewhere. The authorities are, of course, more than anxious to repress the movement ; but, in face of the tremendous influence wielded by these secret associations for murder and robbery, they are practically powerless. At the same time the safety of foreigners in this country must be secured, and if the Government is impotent other forces must be called in to its assistance.

SHANGHAI, May 26. (By Reuter).—News has been received here that a band of rioters has attacked the city of Nankin, on the Yangtze-Kiang, and pillaged many of the houses. Further particulars received from Nankin of the riots in that city state that European ladies and children have left the city. The girls' school attached to the Methodist Mission was fired and looted by the rioters. Other missions were attacked, but the mob was finally dispersed. Her Majesty's cruiser Porpoise has started for Nankin, and Chinese troops have also been despatched.

PARIS, May 27 (Reuter).—A telegram from Pekin announces that in consequence of a collective representation by the Diplomatic Body, the Tsung-li-Yamen has decided to give satisfaction for the recent riots at Woohoo.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 30 (Dalziel).—The Oceanic, which left Hong Kong on May 6 and Yokohama on May 15, reports that 40 houses in the town of Kirin have been burned, and that 11 persons lost their lives.

PARIS, May 30 (Reuter).—A despatch from Tokio states that Viscount Admiral Enomato has been appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs, in succession to Viscount Aoki Shinzo, who has resigned.

I hear, says the Glasgow Herald correspondent, that the Japanese are so proud of their first Parliament that they propose to commemorate its opening by erecting a huge monolith on the highest spot in Tokio. In Japan such a monument is erected with special care and consideration. To get an immense block of granite, and put it up on end with an inscription, is not the Japanese idea. The main purpose is to find a stone shaped by nature and chance in such a way as to be in some degree emblematic of the object to be commemorated. In the far north of the empire two stones deemed suitable have been found. They have been famous for ages in the district as "chrysanthemum stones," but the difficulty is their transport. Each stone is 33 feet high, and, when raised upon a group of fifty rocks piled together to form their pedestal, they will be 71 feet above the ground. On one will be inscribed the Emperor's name and the names and titles of the members of both Houses of Parliament, the inscription being copied from the handwriting of a member of the Imperial House. On the other will be certain poetical and classical inscriptions, written by Count Ito, to whom the Constitution owes the working out of its details.

The Kokkwai announces that the negotiations in Tokio on the Treaty Revision Question have been practically carried to a successful issue. It reports that the new treaty has been printed and that copies have been distributed to the various Ministers of State and foreign representatives, and that the draft has already been signed by H.B.M.'s Minister and the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs. We shall doubtless know, says the N.C. Herald, in a few days how much truth there is in this important piece of news.

There has been a tempest in the Hong Kong teapot. What may be termed a constitutional crisis has occurred, writes the local paper. The unofficial members of Council, about a fortnight ago, wrote to the Governor requesting him to telegraph to the Secretary of State to withhold his sanction to the increase of official salaries until he was in possession of a memorandum on the position and prospects of the Colony which the unofficial members were drafting. After waiting for a week without receiving a definite reply, the unofficials again wrote the Governor, asking him if it was his intention to telegraph the Secretary of State as they requested, and telling him that if he did not telegraph they would do so themselves. To this second letter a reply was received stating that the Governor had not telegraphed, and that he had no intention of telegraphing. In this reply the Governor—or rather the Acting Colonial Secretary on his behalf—informed the unofficial members that according to information received recently it might be inferred that a despatch on the estimates would arrive by the next English mail, and that this despatch would sanction the increase of salaries, with the reservation of a few points of detail. The unofficial members were advised to abandon their position because it would be a breach of faith to withhold the advance this year, and they were told that they might reconsider the whole question when next year's estimates were presented. The unofficial members, resenting the treatment they had received, wired the Secretary of State direct to the following effect :—"Unofficial Members Council dissatisfied with financial position and prospects ; request postpone increase salaries ; further consideration required ; preparing Memorial." After despatching the message, they wrote to the Governor informing him what they had done, and insisting on his submitting their arguments, with whatever reply he cared to make, to the Secretary of State. The Governor, enraged at their conduct, summoned them to a semi-private meeting, at which he lectured them on their bad behaviour, and declared that their last letter was disrespectful. He went the length of saying it was impossible to carry on friendly relations with them if they did not withdraw the letter, and he left them to reconsider their decision. The unofficials do not consider that there is anything disrespectful in the letter they wrote, and they have as yet taken no steps to withdraw it. Meantime, the Governor has published a long report on the condition and prospects of Hong Kong, in which he maintains that the Colony is in a fairly prosperous condition, and has been little affected by the speculative collapse.

A Bill is to be introduced to-day into the Legislative Council restricting Sunday labour in Hong Kong harbour.

We learn from the Hong Kong Telegraph that Mr. Chaloner Alabaster, H.M.'s Consul-General at Canton, will leave for home about May 10, and is to be succeeded by Mr. T. Watters, now Consul at Newchwang. Mr. Alabaster is retiring after thirty-six years' service in the East, which counts for fifty-four years towards his pension. His departure, says the paper, will be most earnestly regretted, for his ability, courage, and independence were a household word in the mouths of all British residents in China and there are too few like him. Now, if the Foreign Office wants to rehabilitate itself, it should send Mr. Alabaster out as British Minister to Peking.

Siam is now added to the list of countries in parcel-post communication with India. For the present, parcels will be forwarded only to Bangkok, but it may be hoped that the new service will shortly be extended to the limits of the Siamese postal system. The rate for each pound or fraction of a pound is 8 a.

The census of the Straits Settlements shows a population of 502,000 against 423,000 in 1881. That of Singapore has grown from 139,000 to 182,000. Penang indicates increase, but Malacca a slight falling-off.

There is not the slightest foundation, we (Singapore Free Press) are informed, for the rumour that has been started by the Ceylon Observer that Sir Frederick Dickson is about to leave the Straits Settlements for good. The Colonial Secretary may go home on leave towards the end of this year, but he will not abandon us for ever, his Excellency the Governor having too great need of his services to allow him to depart in this way.

The same paper says :—Our local contemporary gives currency to a rumour that the Hon. A. M. Skinner, C.M.G., Resident Councillor of Penang, will take leave early next year, and that Mr. C. W. S. Kynnersley will act for him during his absence. Although we are unable absolutely to contradict the first part of this report, we greatly question its correctness, as in the case of Sir Frederick Dickson going home, Mr. Skinner would undoubtedly be the man who would once more be called upon to act in his place.

Great regret was expressed in the Settlements at the news of the death, which occurred at Hankow, of Mr. William Forbes Sharp. Mr. W. F. Sharp was one of the oldest residents and most popular men at Hankow, and was very well known in Shanghai, and liked wherever known. The surviving brother, Mr. Charles S. Sharp, is now in Hong Kong.

The report of the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for the half-year ended March 31 states that the traffic returns were satisfactory so far as the passenger receipts are concerned, but the freight revenue exhibits a considerable deficiency in comparison with that of the corresponding period of the previous year. During the last few months outward freights have continued to decline, and the competition among ships engaged in regular trades has been greatly accentuated. In homeward freights from India there has been some improvement, though not sufficient, so far as the company are concerned, to counterbalance the deficiency in the outward trade ; while in the homeward trade both from China and Australia the prevailing rates have been extremely low. The outlook at the present moment in the Eastern carrying trade is by no means encouraging, especially as the enhanced price of coal and the general tendency to increased cost of labour in almost every direction must add a considerable percentage to the cost of navigation. The dividend now payable on the Preferred stock is at the rate of 5 per cent., and the directors recommend an interim dividend on the Deferred stock at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, the same as at the corresponding period of last year, both payable in one warrant on June 16.

Bombay Yarns.—In his report on the trade of Kiukiang during last year Mr. L. C. Hopkins, the acting British Consul, testifies, like other British representatives in China, to the remarkably rapid development of the trade in Bombay yarns. The total quantity of cotton yarn imported at Kiukiang last year was 4,488,000 lbs., showing an increase of 1,900,000 lbs. against the preceding year. In 1880 the import was roughly 316,000 lbs. It then advanced annually with great regularity at the rate of 133,000 lbs., until 1886, when it doubled itself at a bound, and has since then risen at the rate of about 666,000 lbs. per annum. This great increase is entirely in the Indian spinnings. The Customs returns began to distinguish between Indian and English spinnings only in 1888. In that year the import of the former was already between four and five times as large as that of English yarn. It is now nine times as great, and Lancashire sends not merely relatively but absolutely less than it did in 1888. Mr. Hopkins adds, however, that according to his information there is no reason to fear that the increased consumption of foreign yarn will lead to a decreased demand for shirtings or other piece goods. The cloth woven with foreign yarn does not compete with foreign shirtings. It is rather native yarn that is being supplanted.

The effect on the trade of Southern China of the opening of the Red River of Tonquin to trade is referred to in the last Consular report from Pakhoi, the most southern treaty port in China. The Consul mentions that Yunnan tin as an export from Pakhoi has almost wholly vanished from the customs returns; next year it will probably have disappeared altogether. From 11,529 cwt., valued at 50,843*l.*, the export has fallen to 1,291 cwt., valued at 5,700*l.* This alteration in the direction of the export of Yunnan tin has long been foreseen, and is due entirely to the opening of the Red River of Tonquin, by which route it may be prophesied the whole export of 1891 will be transported. It is the first marked effect of the opening of Tonquin and the establishment of the Imperial maritime customs at the inland stations of Mengtsze and Lunchow on the trade of Pakhoi, and the Consul does not doubt that the whole of the transit trade, both import and export, of Western Kwangsi and Yunnan, which has hitherto passed through Pakhoi, will at no distant date reach and leave those districts, via Haiphong, Langson, and Lungchow, for Western Kwangsi, and via Haiphong, the Red River, and Mengtsze for Yunnan. The former route will not, in all probability, compete seriously with the present route via Pakhoi and Nanning until the opening of the Haiphong-Langson Railway; but once that undertaking is completed the portion of the trade of Pakhoi destined for Western Kwangsi will take that route. Not even a railway to the interior would, in all probability, save the import trade of Pahkoi to these provinces, and such a railway is still below the distant horizon of the future. A small isolated district of Western Kwangtung and the south-eastern portion of Kwangsi, for which Yulin Chou is the depot, will remain to be supplied from Pakhoi; but once the Canton River is opened to steamer traffic, it is probable that nothing can save Pakhoi from decadence.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Monday, May 25.

The Manipore Disaster.—MR. CRAWFORD asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Government would undertake that no one should be put to death in Manipore as a punishment, or in retaliation for the deaths of Mr. Quinton and his companions, until the circumstances of the attack upon the Maniporis had been considered by Parliament.

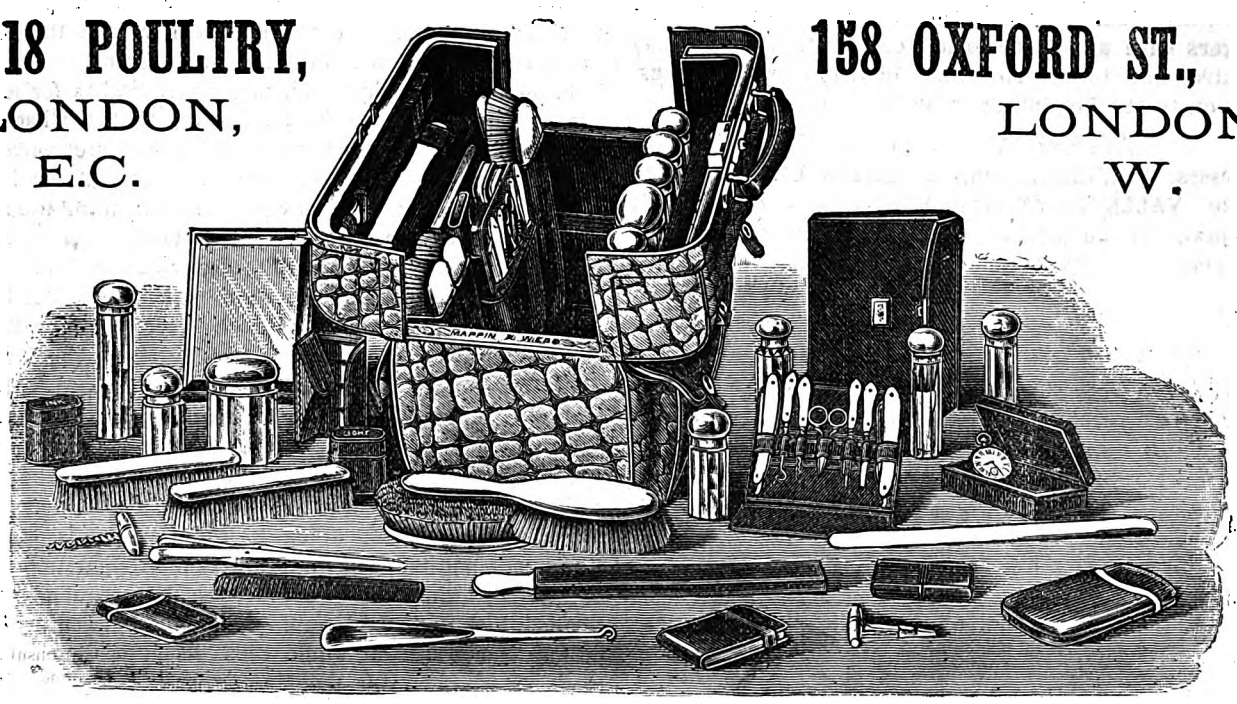
SIR J. GORST: No one will be put to death in Manipore in mere retaliation for the deaths of Mr. Quinton and his companions. The Secretary of State is surprised that such a question should be asked. But those who are found guilty of the murder of Mr. Quinton and Mr. Melville and their respective companions will be adequately punished, without waiting until the circumstances of the affair at Manipore have been considered by Parliament.

Manipore.—The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, replying to a string of questions with regard to the course of business, said that if it should not be necessary to proceed with the Newfoundland Bill on Thursday the Factory and Workshop Bill would be taken on that day, and, in answer to Sir W. Harcourt he said that if any one in the position of the right hon. gentleman expressed a wish to discuss the events at Manipore it would be the duty of the Government to find an opportunity for the discussion.

SIR W. HARCOURT thereupon gave notice that he would move for further papers with regard to Manipore and call attention generally to what had taken place there.

Monday, June 1.

The Engagement at Thobal.—VISCOUNT CURZON asked the Under-Secretary for India whether he had taken into consideration the great gallantry displayed by the native troops at Thobal under Major Grant; and whether he would recommend that some recognition of their services should be granted.



SIR J. GORST: Yes; the Government of India has determined, with the approval of the Secretary of State, to recognise the great gallantry of the native troops under the command of Major Grant in the following way:—The Order of British India will be conferred on all the officers, the Order of Merit on non-commissioned officers and certain selected men, those commissioned and non-commissioned officers who are fitted for promotion will receive a step of rank, and six months' pay and allowances will be given to all ranks, including camp followers. (Cheers.)

LADY DUFFERIN AT OXFORD.

A MEETING, attended by fully 2,000 persons, was held on May 29, in the Sheldonian Theatre, Oxford, in aid of Lady Dufferin's movement for supplying female medical aid to the women of India. The Vice-Chancellor, the Principal of Hertford, and the heads of houses and other distinguished members of the University, together with the Mayor and the Corporation in their robes, received Lady Dufferin in the Divinity School, and walked in procession to the theatre, where the Vice-Chancellor presided. Among those present were Lord Northbrook, Lord and Lady Reay, Sir William and Lady Hunter, the Dean of Christchurch, the Earl of Kerry, the Bishop of Calcutta, Sir Harry Verney, the Warden of Merton, Sir Henry Acland, Sir William Markby, Professor Max Müller, Lord Hardinge, Lord Basil and Lady Victoria Blackwood, Sir Stewart and Lady Bayley, Lady Lyall, Sir Charles and Lady Crosthwaite, and Sir William Anson.

The Vice-Chancellor having opened the proceedings, Lord Northbrook, Sir Henry Acland, and Lord Reay spoke in support of the movement.

The Marchioness of Dufferin, who was enthusiastically received, said: I have been asked to say a few words on this occasion, and, although I feel quite unequal to the task of addressing so large an audience, I must at least endeavour to express to you my deep sense of the kind and generous manner in which you have received me, my warmest thanks to those who organised this meeting, and my heartfelt satisfaction at the evidence this great assembly gives of the interest and sympathy with which the work of providing female medical aid for the women of India is regarded in the University and City of Oxford. Every such mark of British sympathy and approval is a stimulus and encouragement to the work in India. I always feel that the way in which English men and women there and native princes and native gentlemen have laboured for this object, and have spent their time and money in promoting it, deserves recognition here, while the charity itself, aiming at the diminuation of suffering and the saving of life among millions of helpless women, should surely not appeal in vain to the English nation. I want you to remember that the work we undertake is purely Indian; that we have no hospitals in England, and are connected with no institutions here, and that it is in India you must seek results. Nor can I close these few remarks without bearing my testimony to the enormous growth of this medical work in India during the last two years. Under the presidency of Lady Lansdowne, new hospitals and new branches have sprung up in all directions, and the last annual report is one long record of good work, well begun and well accomplished. At the same time I must remind all those who interest themselves in the matter that, although the progress made has been astonishing to all who, knowing the country well, feared that prejudice and custom would retard the work among the people, yet we are only at the beginning of our labours. What we have done is only a drop in the ocean compared with what remains to be done, and it is for this reason I thank you so heartily for coming here to-day, because I feel that your sympathy and your interest may awaken responsive chords in other parts of England, and that with a more earnest desire to help the work of the association, the support we so greatly need to carry on our share of the expenses and the responsibilities of this great Indian charity may be forthcoming. (Cheers.)

A vote of thanks was accorded to Lady Dufferin.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE BANK CASE.

AN Allahabad telegram of May 14 says:—The examination of Mr. Stowell, former manager, Uncovenanted Service Bank, was re-opened in the High Court here yesterday. Mr. Stowell said he took over the management of the bank in March 1866, when he took 300 shares, and deposited 9,000 rs. in floating account. In 1867 and 1868 he said he put in 10,000 rs., and in 1869 46,000 rs. He made every effort to recover the outstanding debts of the bank, and did recover a great deal, but 2 lacs and 45,000 rs. were lost. There was a special audit up to Dec. 31, 1865, the auditors being Mr. Bailey, manager, Agra Bank, and Mr. W. Yatt, accountant, Bank of Bengal, both of Agra. The auditors put the bad and doubtful debts at 2 lacs 82,584 rs., and drew attention to two items amounting to 1 lac 62,478 rs., saying that considerable doubt had been attached to them. The difficulty in its recovery was certain, and it would be fortunate if a heavy loss was not sustained, as many of the securities were informal and some illegal. When he became manager, the working capital of the bank was 6 lacs, 77,571 rs., 12 annas, and 9 pies, from which deductions had to be made for bad and doubtful debts and the debts of Mr. T. Y. Palmer and the Upper India Commercial Association, which reduced the working capital to 2 lacs and 32,508 rs., 9 annas, and 4 pies. They lost 30,000 by the Commercial Association, and 90,000 by Mr. T. Y. Palmer. When he became manager the bank was not, in his opinion, solvent, but Mr. A. O. Hume persuaded him to take up the appointment, and then issue a circular to the shareholders dealing with the appointment of Mr. Stowell and the position of the Bank, which, it was said was solvent. He called the usual monthly meetings of shareholders regularly for a long time; but no one used to attend. There were forty-three shareholders resident in Agra; and in order to get a quorum at the half-yearly meetings, he had to go and fetch people to the meeting. As manager of the bank he was entitled to 100 rs. per month house-rent, which he never drew, and so saved the bank 13,800 rs. He had also saved the bank the pay of an assistant manager.

Mr. Justice Straight, before whom the examination took place, said that everyone who lent himself to the publication of the bank's balance-sheets, exhibiting as they did the payment of profits when the bank was insolvent, put himself in a very serious position.

There was no intention, however, of prosecuting Mr. Stowell criminally.

LONDON: TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1891.

A BURMA AND CHINA RAILWAY.

IN a previous article we dealt with the sections of MR. HOLT HALLETT'S proposed direct route to China which lie to the west of the Salween River, and with the advantages which would attend their construction. Even as a matter of inter-provincial communication it appears strongly advisable that these sections should be carried out. The question of improving our means of communication with the western, or land-locked, half of China has been before the public since 1829, when LORD WILLIAM BENTINCK despatched DR. RICHARDSON from Maulmain into the Siamese Shan States in order to arrange for the establishment of overland trade. In 1860, more than thirty years ago, the Manchester Chamber of Commerce took up the subject, and from that time to this nearly continuous pressure has been put upon the Indian Government in order to have the necessary surveys executed, with the view of connecting Burma with China by railway. The importance of pushing forwards such a connection is so vast that it can hardly be exaggerated. In LORD DUFFERIN'S opinion, before no very distant date "our chief means of communication with China will be either through the north or east of Burma."

The impracticable character for railway construction of the mountainous region bordering China to the north of Mandalay is now well known. The Bhamo route is now put out of court, and even to the south of Mandalay the ascent of the so-called Shan plateau, which divides the plain of the Irrawadi River from the Salween, on examination by skilled engineers, was found so difficult that the Director-General of Indian Railways has been forced to declare that "no feasible route from the Toungoo-Mandalay Railway on to the plateau has yet been discovered." To reach the Salween River at any point in the Shan States by a railway it seems evident that the approach must be from the south in some such direction as has been pointed out by MR. HOLT HALLETT, and that any such railway must necessarily pass the junction of the Kamaphyoo Choung with the Salween, about the point at which MR. HALLETT proposes that the branch line through Karennee and the Shan States shall connect with his main line to China.

From the Kamaphyoo Choung, where tin has for many years been mined by the Karennees, to the village of Banoung, goods proceeding from Maulmain are conveyed along the river banks to be put into boats at the latter place for carriage to various villages neighbouring the river as far north as the Sato Ferry, a distance of some sixty miles. Little difficulty would probably be found in carrying the railway along this portion of its route, but from the ferry to the Meh Khok, which enters the Meh Kong or Cambodia River at Kiang Hsen, little can be known until the country is fully explored and mapped. It is known to be a region rich in teak forests, and the natural home of the tea-plant. It is probably rich in minerals, as coal, tin, copper, silver and lead are found in neighbouring regions, and gold is washed in the bed of the Salween. It is sparsely populated, owing to the slave raids of the Karennees, and the general destruction wrought among its inhabitants during the wars between the Burmese and Zimmé Shans, which occurred towards the end of last century. A railway, if constructed, would cause its population rapidly to increase, open up the country, and bring its virgin wealth to market. Other railways in Burma carried through districts equally destitute of population have proved highly remunerative within a very short space of time, much to the surprise of the Government of India, who previously had considered that a railway to pay in the East must be carried through a populated region, but where the people being poor and crowded, like locusts, left nothing to be carried away by the trains. The Burmese and Rajputana lines have opened the eyes of the Government on this subject, and, as MR. HALLETT has frequently pointed out to the Chambers of Commerce, the sparse population in a district can no longer be urged as a decisive reason against opening it up by railway construction. A railway brings population and spreads cultivation in Burma, as it does in America and in other regions capable of a vast increase in cultivation, and pays well. If a railway to China is, as LORD DUFFERIN has prophesied, at no very distant date to be our chief means of communication with that country, there can be no doubt that minor difficulties, or even extraordinary expenditure, on some of its sections should not stand in the way of its construction. Anyhow, the Government should put itself in the position of knowing what difficulties have to be met, and what expenditure would be needed to carry the railway into execution. The country to the east of the Salween from the Siamese frontier to Ssumao ought to be properly explored and surveyed, and mapped by efficient engineers acquainted with railway construction through hilly districts, when the best line could be fixed upon for the railway to follow. We would furthermore urge that the report of the Burma-Siam Boundary Commission, together with its boundary maps, route surveys, and full accounts of the explorations should be published without further delay as a Parliamentary Paper so as to allow the public to judge the character of the country and the measures that have been taken to safe guard our interests in a region which promises to prove of the utmost importance for the extension of British and British-Indian commerce. The projected railway would give us the long-wished-for railway connection with China and Siam. It would give us the much-needed efficient control over the British Shan States lying to the east of the Salween River, and it would put us in a position to compete on equal, and, in many cases advantageous, grounds with the French for the trade of Siam, the Shan States, and South-Western China.

ONE of the best reasons for not admitting women to Parliamentary and other public bodies is that there are too many old women of the other sex in them already. The eye which wanders over the reports of Parliamentary proceedings must be struck by the many indications of feeble and hysterical emotionalism which are therein recorded. It would be invidious to mention names but one cannot help thinking on reading some of the questions or speeches that there must be a fair number of members of the House of Commons who would seem much more at home in mob-caps and petticoats than in silk hats and the form of divided skirt affected by the civilised Western male. The correspondent of the Times at Rome, in a letter on the demoralisation of Italy, alludes to an excellent phrase of PROFESSOR TURIELLO'S for describing the tendency to "irrational vibrations of emotion" which is effeminating and denaturalising the Italians. He calls it "progressive womanliness—progressiva muliebrita." Is it quite clear that the hysterical and sentimental elements in our own politics are not tending to the deterioration of our British fibre? Are we too not suffering from an epidemic of progressiva muliebrità? A member the other day asked SIR JOHN GORST to give the House an assurance that none of the persons incriminated in the Manipore assassinations should be punished until the House had had an opportunity of passing judgment on the matter. The Secretary of State may well have been surprised that any member of the legislature should ask such a question. It indicates a hopelessly illogical and incoherent mind, and is but an episode in a general effort by the progressive muliebrity to bring the entire action of the Executive and the administration of the law—Judges, Military and Naval Forces, Police and all the rest to the test of its feeble emotionalism. The curious thing is that men like MR. CRAWFORD, seem to reserve their morbid sympathies for the basest and cruellest savages that disgrace humanity. The more vicious the criminal—the more shocking his crime, the more hotly do these people try to find excuse for him, and engage in a crusade to deliver him from the penalties he has incurred. MR. GLADSTONE asking the British elector to—"Remember Mitchelstown," while the abominable crimes resulting from boycotting and the Plan of Campaign were passed over as "regrettable incidents," is an instance of the same morbid moral distortion, of which almost every day affords an example.

MR. M. M. BHOWNUGGREE, C.I.E., Judicial Member of the State Council of Bhownuggur, arrived in town on May 24, and has been received with a general welcome that must be most agreeable to him. He was one of the most popular of the Commissioners sent from India to the Indian and Colonial Exhibition. His genial and generous nature made him troops of friends all over the country, and among all sorts and conditions of men. It was, therefore, no surprise to those who knew him to learn that on the day following his arrival he was elected an honorary member of the Savage Club. MR. BHOWNUGGREE has also been made a member of the Indian Committee of the International Congress of Hygiene and a steward of the Newspaper Press Fund Dinner to be held on July 13 under the presidency of VISCOUNT CROSS.

SIR ALEC WILSON (of MESSRS. JARDINE, SKINNER, AND CO.) and MR. W. J. MCCAW (of MESSRS. KETTLEWELL, BULLEN, AND CO.) will represent the Bengal Chamber of Commerce at the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography. The delegates selected to attend on behalf of the Calcutta Corporation are MR. H. J. S. COTTON, B.C.S., and MR. W. M. OSMOND. MR. HOLT HALLETT has been invited by the secretaries of the Demographical Division to read a paper on the Indian Factory Question. It may be, as the Indian papers are constantly telling us, that MR. HALLETT has no practical acquaintance with the Bombay mills, but he is, nevertheless, a force. He has secured the ear of the Times, and his letters to that journal have made a great impression in this country. We believe that the honorary secretary for India is asking the Bombay Millowners' Association to recommend some gentleman who will put the case before the Congress from the employers' standpoint. Hitherto MR. HALLETT has had it all his own way on this side. We are glad that there is to be an opportunity of having the subject threshed out. It is gratifying to learn that some of the Native Princes have intimated their intention of becoming liberal subscribers to the Congress funds. We hope their Highnesses will send men as well as money. The desirability that the Congress should include Native as well as Anglo-Indian delegates, cannot be too strongly insisted upon. The chairman of the P. and O. Company (SIR THOS. SUTHERLAND) and the Secretary of the Political Department, India Office (SIR STEUART COLVIN BAYLEY), have joined the Indian Committee within the past few days.

The Lancet says:—We are pleased to record that a strong Indian Committee has been formed in London to insure the adequate representation of Indian interests at the forthcoming Congress. The committee is composed of leading Anglo-Indian officials and prominent East India merchants, together with other non-officials. Thus what has often been termed the Second India will have a voice in the Congress. By this is meant the non-official India, and it embraces very vast interests. Finally, there are three native Indians on the committee—namely, Mr. Dadabhoy Naorojee, Mr. B. M. Malabari, and Mr. M. M. Bhownuggree, C.I.E. These three gentlemen are Parsees, but several prominent Hindoos and Mahomedans have been asked to join the committee. In India the Chambers of Commerce of Bengal, Bombay, Kurrachee, and Upper India have already appointed delegates, thus following the example of the Indian Government and the Municipal Corporation of Calcutta. Other leading municipalities and the syndicates of the Indian Universities have intimated their intention of nominating delegates, and we are especially pleased to hear that some of the Indian princes have promised their aid either by sending subscriptions or deputing representatives. In one respect, however, prompt and energetic action is necessary. The London Indian Committee have strongly urged upon the Secretary of State for India the desirability of securing the attendance at the Congress of a certain number of native experts. It is understood that the Home authorities for India thoroughly approve of this proposal. Surely, on further consideration, Lord Lansdowne's Government will be equally desirous to see this carried out. There can be no lack of suitable candidates, and how can the native populations of India be taught to appreciate the benefits of sanitation if we do not have native Indians as members of the Congress of Hygiene?

Lady Dufferin's concert in aid of her Fund for Supplying Medical Relief to the Women of India will take place at Grosvenor House (by kind permission of the Duke of Westminster) on Friday afternoon, June 5, at 3.30 o'clock. The following artistes have kindly promised their services:—Mme. Nordica, Signor Sgambati, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Gatty, Miss MacDougal, Miss Fitzroy, Mons. Eugene Oudin, Herr Johannes Wolff, Herr Joseph Hollman, and Mr. Wilhelm Ganz will preside at the piano.

According to the Times correspondent the Japanese Legation at Berlin has received a telegram to the effect that Tsuda Seuzo, the would-be assassin of the Czarevitch, has been tried before the Supreme Court of Judicature in Tokio and found guilty of the crime laid to his charge, and he has accordingly been sentenced to the extreme penalty allowed by law in such cases—namely, penal servitude for life.

The Italian papers announce the death of Gaspare Gorrisio, the Sanscrit scholar, best known by his edition of the epic poem, "The Râmâyana," with a beautiful translation in Italian. The Italian Government recognised his literary merits by making him a Senatori del Regno; the French Académie des Inscriptions honoured him by electing him one of its eight associate members. He was a pupil of Eugène Burnouf, and probably the senior of Sanscrit scholars in Europe.

An interesting census has just been taken of the Indian students at Oxford. The group includes seventeen persons, in many respects representing the most highly educated classes of their fellow-countrymen. Of the seventeen nine are Hindoos, comprising representatives of both the Mahratta and the Bengalee Brahmins; three are Mahometans, four are Christians (one of them being a lady), and two of Eurasian or Portuguese descent, and one is a Parsee. Their ages vary from about nineteen years to thirty-one, and of the whole seventeen only two are married, while a third is a widower.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, May 12.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on May 7 made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unaltered at 4 per cent.

The figures of the Bank's statement for the week ending May 5 show the following changes :—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 1,07,892	Increase
Do. at Branches	7,36,073	Increase
Other Deposits	20,46,383	Increase
Post Bills	14,644	Increase
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	Rs. 61,830	Decrease
Loans	1,00,295	Increase
Accounts of Credits	1,49,046	Increase
Mercantile Bills	1,28,742	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	24,46,050	Increase
Do. at Branches	3,55,186	Increase

Analysing the above figures, it will be seen that the public demand had further decreased to 19⅜ lacs, made up as follows :—By an influx of nearly 20½ lacs in "Other Deposits," and over ⅛th of a lac in "Post Bills," together with a decrease of over 1¼ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," less an increase of 1 lac in "Loans," and about 1½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits." The Treasury balance stands augmented by 1 lac and 7⅜ lacs at head office and at the branches respectively. The Bank's investments were realised to the extent of about ⅝ths of a lac. The final result of these changes is an increase of nearly 24½ lacs in the cash at head office, and over 3½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 4,64,38,914 rs., equal to 54·0 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 52·05 per cent. last week.

EXCHANGE.—The sterling exchange market, though quiet, has been exceedingly steady, the price for six months' sight documentary bills having been maintained every day at 1/5⅜ for near delivery, while the Bank's selling rates are lower all round owing to the rise in the rates of discount in the money market at home, which are at the close quoted at 4½ per cent. for long and short currency. A fair amount of business has been put through in private paper, and forward wire has also been dealt in to some extent.

TEA.—About 1,700 chests have changed hands, prices showing scarcely any alteration.

JUTE.—There has been little or no business of any consequence to report.

GUNNIES.—The market has ruled steady. The principal business has been in 2¼ lbs. No. 2 for up-country and C's for Burma and the coast. Australian corn sacks have been inquired for without producing business. The U. K. took a line of flour bags at 24.

HESSIANS.—A slight drop in prices of 8-40" cloth brought out buyers for a line up to September, and inquiries are still in the market. Frisco shows no sign of life.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—There has been another week of activity in the share market, and the list of business done shows the numerous companies over which operations have been extended. Almost every description of stock has come in for some measure of support, especially jute-mills and pressing-companies' shares. In jute shares the business put through has been considerable, and prices, as anticipated, have further advanced, though not to such an extent as in the week previous. There has been quite a brisk demand for press shares, and all the companies dealt in show a marked advance in their quotations. There has been a spurt, too, in tea, and the list of transactions reported is most encouraging, though these are for the most part confined to shares standing at a heavy discount. Closing quotations for these stocks show a pronounced enhancement of the market value. Very little can be said of gold shares. There has been practically no market for them. In miscellaneous stocks rather less than usual has been done, owing as much to the speculative movement in the market as to the scarcity of shares. In cotton a transaction has been reported in Bowreahs after some time, and Muir Mills have changed hands at current quotations.

BANK OF BENGAL.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 4 per cent.

BOMBAY, May 15.

Business in exports has been very quiet, not to say dull, in all its branches, transactions in cotton, wheat, and seeds having been upon a small scale, while prices of the last two staples have declined in presence of a slight inquiry and large supplies. The course of exchange has been irregular, and rates have fluctuated to the extent of ¼d. to 3-16d., closing 1-16d. lower for Bank Bills and 3-32d. for Credits than they were. Money is no dearer. Government paper is slightly highest in Fours. Freights have been weak and inactive; but there has latterly been more inquiry for tonnage at reduced rates. There has been a fair inquiry for staple imports, though of a rather retail character, and previous prices are generally quoted.

MONEY.—Although the state of the money market in Bombay did not necessitate any change in the Presidency Bank's rates of interest and discount last week, and there now seems no likelihood of a return to much higher rates this season, there was some expansion of the trade demand during the week, covered by the Bank's statement of affairs issued on May 11. The falling-off of some 32 lacs in the cash balance shown by the return was 6⅓ lacs less than at the close of the previous week; but private deposits had diminished by 36¼ lacs, and though this was counterbalanced to some extent by a diminution of nearly 12 lacs in loans, and a decrease of over 4¼ lacs in bills discounted, the increase in trade requirements was represented by nearly 20 lacs, against 10½ lacs disclosed by the previous return, the further contraction of the cash balance having again been due to Government withdrawals. Meantime there has been no new feature in the market, and the directors of the Presidency Bank having made no change at their meeting, 4 per cent. remains the minimum rate.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—In a few weeks more the active business season will be over, and the retail up-country buyers are now freely purchasing what they require to despatch before the commencement of the south-west monsoon. The business of the week, aggregating some 3,800 packages of imported goods, has been mainly in this direction, and at current rates. Bleached, dyed, printed, and Turkey red goods are quite without change in position and price. There has been no wholesale demand worth mentioning for local goods beyond what has been felt for light weights of Zanzibar T. cloths, and the clearances during the week have not exceeded 1,500 bales.

YARNS.—A moderate business has transpired in imported twist in a quiet market, and with prices quite unchanged.

METALS.—Copper and yellow metal have been taken to a moderate extent, the tone of the market having been steady and prices unaltered. Iron has been quiet in tone, with not much doing, previous rates being quoted for all descriptions.

COAL has been steady in tone but quiet, and beyond a few lots of ready Davison's West Hartley, sold at 14¾ rs. per ton, no ready business has transpired.

Exports.—COTTON.—This staple has been quiet, with a slack demand from the mills, and very little inquiry from exporters; but, with the exception of a decline of 1 r. in the price of Bhownugger, prices have been maintained. The purchases by local spinners for the week have aggregated about 7,000 bales, consisting chiefly of Julgaum and other Oomra varieties, Dhollera and Bhownugger, Compta and Bengals; while exporters have taken about 2,500 bales, mainly Bengals, but including some Oomra descriptions and Broach. The market closes with a quiet feeling, and with prices 1 r. to 3 rs. higher in Belatee and Oomras, and lower to the same extent in Bhownugger and Westerns, compared with last quotations.

The receipts of this season's cotton during the week have been 71,100 bales against 71,500 bales to hand in the week preceding and 83,800 bales arrived during the corresponding week last season, and the falling-off in receipts this season, compared with last, has now reached 204,500 bales.

WHEAT has been quiet when not dull, only a small demand having been felt on any day from exporters, while arrivals have continued to be on a large scale, severely taxing the means of transit.

SEEDS have been less dull in tone than wheat, but only a small business has been done on most days, and prices both of linseed and rapeseed have declined 2 to 3 annas per cwt.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to May 20; Madras, May 21; Bombay, May 23.

The present mail is the last of the Saturday mails until after the monsoon. Beginning with May 29, the homeward mail will, until further notice, leave Bombay on Friday of each week.

A Madras telegram of June 5 says:—The monsoon has burst in Malabar, but there is no rainfall as yet. The prices of food grains are rising in the Northern Carnatic, comprising the districts of Nellore, Chingleput, and North Arcot, and the present situation in the threatened districts is undoubtedly critical. The total number of persons employed on the relief works, however, is not greater than was expected.

It was notified that the Bombay Government would assemble at Poona on Saturday, June 6.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and suite arrived in Simla on May 16 under the usual salute.

Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, who has been with his regiment, the 2nd battalion 60th Rifles, on the Samana Range, left Saugor on May 20, on his way to England.

The Government Printing Press in Madras has published, in a collected form, the graphic and interesting narrative of Lord Connemara's official tours, which his private secretary, Mr. Rees, has issued from time to time during the last four years. The book, a Times telegram states, forms a valuable record of the prosperity which the Southern Presidency enjoyed and the progress it made, especially as regards railways, under one of the most successful and popular of recent Indian Governors.

The Exchange Telegraph Company states that application will be formally made to Mr. Justice Jeune to-day to make absolute the decree nisi obtained by Lady Connemara against her husband, Lord Connemara, who was Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs in Lord Beaconsfield's Administration, and subsequently Governor-General of Madras.

Bishop Caldwell contemplates immediate retirement. He arrived at Tinnevelly half a century ago.

Captain C. Maguire, lately appointed personal assistant to the Secretary, Military Department, had left Simla to take command of the Military Police in the newly-constituted provinces of British Central Africa. His services have been lent for two years, and he takes with him fifty Musbi Sikhs and thirty men of the Hyderabad Contingent.

Mr. Archer and Captain Fulton, of the Chingmai Kyaington Mission, who were last heard of on Feb. 24 from Kyaingchaing, and were then about to proceed down Mekong to Cambodia, have safely completed their journey, and arrived at Bangkok on May 15.

Baboo Radhika Roman Chatterjee, of Tajhat, Rungpore, has, with the permission of the Government of India, undertaken the translation into Bengalee of Sir W. W. Hunter's "Imperial Gazeteer." Rafa Govindalal Roy, of Rungpore, has patronised the undertaking with a donation of 1,000 rs., and Maharaja Bahadoor Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, K.C.S.I., has consented to be a subscriber. The undertaking is laudable, remarks the Times of India, and it is hoped will meet with the encouragement it deserves.

Arrangements have now been made in regard to the presidency of the Rampore Council, rendered vacant by the murder of General Azim-ud-din.

The Indian Meteorological Department has published its annual forecast of the prospects of the monsoon founded on the winter's snowfall in the Himalayas and in Central Asia. The chief inferences drawn are that Burma, Bengal, and Assam will obtain normal or abundant rain; that the conditions will be slightly less favourable for Behar and the eastern districts of the North-West Provinces; that there are very unfavourable prospects for Rajpootana, the Southern Punjab, the western districts of the North-West Provinces, and Gujerat; that in Bombay and Berar the rainfall is likely to be slightly deficient, and that Southern India is likely to receive a favourable amount of rain.

A Times telegram from Calcutta says:—It is announced that the members of the Leprosy Commission, who are now pursuing their researches in Simla, have made the important discovery that the leprosy bacillus can be isolated and cultivated artificially. A rabbit was inoculated and killed after some days, and distinct leprous nodules were found in the body. It is stated that the bacillus has never before grown outside the human body.

The coroner's jury in Bombay, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times says on June 4, have returned an extraordinary verdict in the inquest on the death of the two Parsee girls, which has been occupying the public attention for the last month. They found by a majority of eight to one that Buchoobai died from injuries caused by throwing herself from the tower in consequence of an attempted outrage by a person unknown; that a man named Manockji Aslaji was privy to the outrage, and that the act of the person unknown and Manockji amounted to manslaughter; also that Therozebai was thrown from the tower by Manockji to destroy the evidence of his complicity in the outrage, and that he was therefore guilty of murder.

The verdict, adds the correspondent, does not appear to meet with general approval. The case will now be investigated by a magistrate, and it is to be hoped the inquiry will be conducted with less excitement and that it will lead to a more definite result.

The Siamese have completed their railway surveys as far as the town of Chiengsen, and have even aligned the railway through the jungle. Their surveyors have been three years at this work. Chiengsen is one of the most important trade centres in Indo-China.

A Reuter telegram from Calcutta of June 5 says:—Owing to the arrest of the leaders of the opposing parties at Keunjar, Orissa, all is now quiet at that place. It is not likely that there will be a repetition of the disturbances, and the troops are returning.

The intimation that the Keunjur rising was not likely to give much trouble, another despatch of June 7 says, has been fulfilled. The leader has surrendered to the police, and the wing of native infantry which was sent there from Calcutta is returning. But the past week has afforded further evidence of the restless spirit which seems to pervade the country. A small riot with violence has occurred at Vizagapatam, and there was a report of a disturbance at Mirzapore, but this happily proved to be unfounded.

It appears clear, says the Calcutta correspondent of the Times on June 8, that the Keunjur rising, which has now completely collapsed, was due to oppression on the part of the Maharaja. Hitherto he has borne a high reputation. It is difficult to understand how he managed to hoodwink the British officers, but perhaps the fact that the State is one of the most distant and inaccessible in Orissa accounts for it. An inquiry into the alleged grievances will be made.

The Singapore Free Press is responsible for the following:—A general officer of the Indian Army, for many years occupying a high post in the Burma administration, writes to a relative in Singapore and mentions the Manipore business in these words:—By the time this reaches you I suppose that uncomfortable affair in Manipore will have been thoroughly settled. I knew Quinton in Burma, where he was Judicial Commissioner, and a good official, but if anything in the way of resistance was expected he was hardly the man to select for a mission to the hill people.

Although Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff's term of office as president of the Royal Geographical Society has expired, there is reason to believe that he has consented to remain in the presidency for another year.

Private advices from Chile, dated Iquique, April 9, give the following information:—

"When in the act of placing the paper on the pad to commence this letter at 8.45 A.M., there occurred the sharpest earthquake shock which I have felt since my return to this country. It stopped the clocks here, and along the line. There has not yet been time to examine the line in order to see if rocks have been thrown down in the cuttings. There has not been any large wave sent in upon the shore by the shock.

"This week Arica and Tacna have been occupied by the Congress troops without serious resistance, and the Government troops have fled into Bolivia, as they also did when Antofagasta was occupied in the previous week. Thus the whole of the northern part of Chile, from the Peruvian frontier to the province of Copiapo in the south, is now in possession of the Congress Party.

"The occupation of Tacna and Arica is of much importance to us, as fresh vegetables and fruit will come from there. During the last week the price of beef has gone down from 1 dol. 30 cents to 60 cents Chile currency, exchange being 16*d.* to the dollar for bills at 90 d/s.

"The Government has a very large body of troops in the south, and if they can get ships of war and transports may yet retake this province.

"All letters and newspapers should come via Panama, as the President does not allow any steamer to be despatched from Valparaiso for Iquique."

GUP.

The correspondent of the Times of India writes from Simla, May 11:—At last the station seems to show some signs of commencing its usual swing of gaieties and frivolities. The "settling down" state is almost at an end, the majority of those visitors who intend to spend the summer in the queen of hill stations have put in an appearance, and the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab is close at hand. But that the season is to be a late one, and that it is not likely to be a particularly gay one, so far as its start is concerned, must be admitted without a doubt, and perhaps after all a short pause before we begin the usual programme of dances and dinners, flower shows and fairs, fêtes and frivolities, will be no great hardship.

'Tis whispered—and, I believe, with truth—that there is a sad scarcity of men in Simla this season. Certainly, so far as the clubs are concerned, there are still many vacant chambers in both the United Service and New Clubs. The Miranzai, Black Mountain, and Hazara Campaigns have, of course, much to answer for, so far as the dearth of those useful articles—the dancing young men—goes, as well as for the paucity of that class of the genus homo recognised as a highly necessary item at a picnic or tennis party: but ladies, of course, do not always recognise the inevitable, and complaints, if not loud, are numerous enough. However, the Birthday week is rapidly approaching and the races, levée, and State ball may yet attract batches of hill captains and subalterns gay, to rejoice the hearts of our sisters, our cousins, and our aunts. And, perhaps, while on this subject it will not be betraying confidence to say that a charming maiden, whose arithmetic is above suspicion, has whispered in my ear that 106 damsels ("spinster" is an ugly term) await the invitation to dance, picnic, and lunch; and possibly, moreover, a gallant Colonel will pardon me for repeating his remark:—"By Jove, sir, I never saw such a lot of pretty girls in the station before." To which the writer would add that Calcutta has contributed in nowise to call forth the verdict.

So far we have had no musical entertainments, nor indeed have any rumours been heard of any very talented new arrivals. On the other hand, we have lost several of our best performers, among whom Mrs. Owen and Mr. and Mrs. Muir-Mackenzie may be prominently mentioned. However, a grand amateur concert in aid of Lady Roberts's Fund for Nursing Sisters' Homes in the Hills has just been announced for June 2, and no doubt some new prima donna will make her début and enchant us. Captain Pakenham has been most successful in his management of the Saturday Gymkhanas, and each meeting seems to surpass its predecessor in the excellence of its programme.

Talking of Gymkhanas, however, mention must be made of a delightful afternoon party given jointly by Mesdames Pritchard and Thomson, at Annandale, last Thursday afternoon. The hostesses had provided an excellent card of events, all of which were keenly contested, and the "Lloyd Lindsay Competition for ladies and gentlemen," won by Mr. Thuillier, Miss Pritchard, Captains Hamilton and Hume, was quite the event of the afternoon.

The Mahableshwar week was in full blast when the mail left. It opened on May 18, with the Ladies' Shooting Competition for the "Bella Vista Diana Plate," presented by her Excellency Lady Harris, who was herself one of the competitors. Judging from the excellent shooting that was witnessed during the practice that has been going on for some little time, says a correspondent, it was expected that the competition would have been keener than it eventually turned out to be. Major Curtis, the Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, had the management of this part of the week's programme, and to his credit be it said that everything went off without a hitch. The arrangements at the small rifle range were very good, the place from where the competitors had to fire being roped in and shaded. A small stop butt had been set up, and much care had been bestowed upon the targets. The bull's-eye was four inches in diameter—distance, fifty yards. The competition was a handicap, her Excellency Lady Harris and Mrs. Rivett-Carnac being the only two competitors who were handicapped. They had two points deducted from the scores they made. The order of firing had been drawn for at the Frere Hall last evening. There were two prizes for the competition, the first being a very handsome silver cup presented by her Excellency, and the second prize being the entrance fees, each competitor having to pay an entrance fee of 2 rs. A large number of spectators were present to witness the shooting, the natives also turning up in strong numbers. Ten ladies competed.

The first to shoot was Mrs. von Donop, who made the good score of 31 out of a possible 35. She was a little nervous at the commencement, her third shot only scoring a magpie; but she soon settled down to steady shooting, and made a score which none of the other competitors could beat. Mrs. Blundell—thé general's wife—was the next to enter. She unfortunately missed the first shot, and only once found the bull's-eye. Her score was 22. When Mrs. Rivett-Carnac took her place at the firing point a good score was looked for by everybody, for this lady has on a previous occasion given us an exhibition of her skill with the rifle. To the disappointment of everyone present, she missed the target altogether with the first shot. This was due to the fact that the "sight" had not been correctly adjusted, the bullet going over the target. But this mishap did not unsteady her, for having corrected the sight she got on to the bull's-eye immediately afterwards, and kept it—making six bull's-eye in succession. She fired both quickly and accurately, and the general impression was that had she continued to shoot further she would have put in several more bulls in succession. No sighting shot was allowed, so that her score was 30, from which two points were deducted for the handicap. The spectators applauded her upon her excellent performance, and greatly sympathised with her for the mishap which had caused her to miss the first shot. Miss Cunningham fired very steadily, making 28. Mrs. Curtis, who followed, made five "inners" successively, all her shots being very close to the bull indeed. She went all round the bull's-eye, but could not get on to it at all. Her last two shots went further away from the bull, making her score 25. Her Excellency Lady Harris, who had made some brilliant records at practice, then took her seat at the firing point, and was the first and only competitor who scored a bull's-eye with the first shot. This did not, however, appear to give her Ladyship confidence, for the next shot proved to be a "magpie," and the following one an "outer." She then made a centre, but fell off a bit again in the fifth shot, and wound up with two bull's-eyes. Her score was 27, and from this two points were deducted for the handicap, bringing it down to 25 points only. The following are the full scores made by each competitor in order of merit:—

Miss Croft	4 3 3 5 4 5 5=29—20 rs.

His Excellency Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, gave a dance on May 18 at the Frere Hall, Mahableshwar, which was very numerously attended. About 250 invitations were sent out, and over 160 responded. The hall, which is an adjunct of the club, was very prettily decorated, thanks to the good taste of the kind ladies who lent a helping hand in the matter. The mantelpiece looked particularly effective. The floor had been beautifully polished, and looked very inviting. The guests began to arrive shortly after 9 o'clock, and were received on alighting from their carriages by Captain Peyton, A.D.C. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief received and welcomed his guests at the end of the passage leading into the hall from the side entrance. Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris, with members of their Staff, were present, and so also was everybody else who could get out. It was a lovely moonlight night, and the dance was an exceedingly pleasant one, in spite of the fact that the little hall was rather crowded. Dancing to the strains of the band of the 3rd Bombay Light Infantry, from Satara, commenced at 9.45 P.M., and was kept up with great spirit until about 2 A.M. The programme comprised twenty dances, inclusive of two supper dances. Supper was laid in the room adjoining the billiard-room, and it is almost needless to say that it was excellent.

MAHABLESHWAR, 1891.

(FROM THE Pioneer.)

"A maiden she sat at her door
And sighed as she gazed at the sea:
'On this hill there are damsels at least two score
And of bachelors only three.'"

You ask me why the young man comes not here
And also why the female element
Of our society is to the male
As three or four to one: whilst of the men
Nine-tenths are wed, and nearly all the rest
Are bald, or grey, or fat, or deaf, or blind
And fit for naught but golf or badminton?
My friends the reason is not far to seek.
Consider the attractions that the place
Can offer to an able-bodied man
In full possession of his faculties.
Will any such, I ask you, be content
To come here and, for sixty mortal days,
To tramp one morn from Dan to Beersheba
And trudge the next from Beersheba to Dan;
To ride to Bombay Point one afternoon,
To Sidney, or to Babington the next,
Gaze on bare hills, seen dimly through a haze,
And mutter feebly "What a lovely view!"
To meet three days a week at 8 A.M.
And play "Push feather," in a tin-roofed shed,
With fourteen ladies and one other man;
To leap and scream and smite the shuttlecock,
And stuff himself with strawberries and cream
And bread and butter, till he feels that life
Is hardly worth the living: after lunch
To play four-anna Bumblepuppy, or
Perchance, with crooked cue and oval balls,
A game of billiards, on the self-same board
Whereon Shem, Ham, and Japhet played "three pool"
To while away the afternoon, what time
The ark lay stranded on Mount Ararat:
And after this, by way of exercise,
To play at Pat-ball, in a red-mud court,
Or be persuaded much against one's will,
To figure in a "Ladies' Cricket Match";
To bowl long-hops left-handed and be hit
To leg for four, amidst derisive cheers
Of friends and enemies; and then go in
And get clean bowled for duck first ball and hear
The ladies whisper, "What a stupid man,
I wonder why on earth he came to play:
He's evidently not a cricketer!"

* * * * * *

My Christian friends, is this a life for which
A self-respecting man, whose tale of years
Is less than half a century, would pay
Thirty or forty pounds for two months' rent
Of a small freestone cottage such as those
They build at home for grooms and gamekeepers'
Or "pig it" in th' indigenous hotel,

Digitized by Google

Eat billy-goat and drink the doubtful brands
They give one under native management ?
'Twere better far upon the plains to stay,
Inhabiting a comfortable house,
Consuming decent food and wholesome drinks,
Getting a game of polo twice a week,
And now and then an outing after pig,
A comfortable rubber at the club
And racquets every idle afternoon.
Mussorie, Murree, and sweet Naini Tal
Have each a racquet-court : the last can boast
A lovely lake, whereon are outrigged skiffs,
Canoes and sailing boats : Simla has got
Two "squash-ball" tennis courts, and all the four
Have cricket matches once a week at least
Throughout the season. Our amusements here
Are purely epicene, and our young men,
For all the fun this wretched place affords,
Might just as well be girls. What wonder then
That in this station, each succeeding year,
The female element preponderates ;
While of the males, some eighty per cent.
Are infants, convalescents, married men,
Old fogeys, cripples, duffers and the like,
In whom no rightly brought up English girl
Can take the slightest interest ? Alas !
What can our maidens do ; but wait and pray
For better days to come ? In six weeks' time,
The Lord be praised ! we'll all be off the hill.

JAY PENNE.

There have also been gay doings at Ooty, as the correspondent of the Madras Times relates. He writes on May 14 :—The long-talked-of fancy-dress ball came off last evening. The night was a lovely one, bright and clear, and shortly before 10 P.M. crowds of carriages were seen wending their way towards the Assembly Rooms, where Sir James and Lady Dormer were awaiting the arrival of their numerous guests. Every conveyance of any kind whatever was booked weeks ago, and fully 200 people turned out last night. Ooty has never before seen a larger or more aristocratic gathering, and the idea of all the ladies being attired in black and white was so novel that it made the scene a most interesting one. The decorations of both the large and smaller rooms were very pretty ; flags and palms were largely used, and the mirrors were decorated with ferns and evergreens, which contrasted well with the bright colours in the room. The arrangements for the supper and sitting-out were admirable, and no pains were spared to make everything go off well. Lady Dormer may be congratulated on the complete success of her splendid entertainment, for every one went home delighted with the evening and with all they saw and heard.

It is quite beyond our powers to describe even half of the beautiful dresses of both men and ladies, but we will begin with a few of the most noticeable. Programmes were again prohibited, and the ball opened with two extras, then two valses, after which came the "Devils' Dance." This was the feature of the evening. At a sign from one of the A.D.C.'s the band struck up the "Bogie Man," and there was a sort of buzz—each devil made a rush up above, and brought down his particular angel. Some appeared to come unwillingly, while others fell easily, then began the dance. Lancers was selected in preference to a quadrille, and a most curious sight followed. No one but the eight from heaven and the other eight from somewhere else took part in this dance, the rest of the guests being content to watch the flying angels and the long-tailed devils. Lady Wenlock simply flew about, her feet scarcely touching the ground. Her costume was a very lovely one, enhanced as it was by a sparkling tiara of diamonds, and a necklace of exquisite brilliants. Her dress was white silk with very high sleeves mounted in a sort of ball at the shoulder, hanging draperies from the arm representing wings which expanded as she moved, silver bands round a very high waist and under and across each arm. The effect of these eight ladies all garbed in soft white flowing robes made one think one must be in some higher place than even Ootacamund, and were it not for the demoniacal partners compassing these bright spirits, one might imagine oneself in heaven above !

The devils' get-up was equally good of its kind. Long black forked tails, tufts of hair on either side of the head gave the idea of pointed ears ; black coats, with a kind of bat's wing under the arm, and joined to the side ; black bands of silk across the shirt front, to cover all gleams of white—knee breeches, silk stockings, and pumps. The whole sixteen seemed to enter fully into the spirit of the dance, and went through the figures with great spirit. Instead of the grand chain in the last figure, the couples galloped or rather flew round the whole length of the big room. After this dance was over, the band struck up a valse, and the dancing went on as before.

The Singapore Free Press says :—It was to be expected that some curious answers would be found on the Census Schedules. The "occupation" column seems to have puzzled a good many. Here are a few of the entries :—Verandah snuff bazar, Christian, Washing Coat, Nagapatam, Klerk, Shipping Cargo, Globe Trotter (the gentleman hailed from one of the "hotels" near the Central Police Station), Eating and playing (a schoolboy), Cuting hare, Washing Cloth, Learning Chinese (a little girl), Scholar under ten, Married, Cooker, Wayanger, Virgin.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

MANIPORE, June 2.—The trial of the Jobraj (the Regent) for the murder of Mr. Quinton and his companions was resumed here to-day, when the examination was continued of Russick Lall, chief clerk to the late Mr. Grimwood. The gist of his evidence, which bore chiefly on the events immediately preceding the massacre, was as follows:—

On arriving at the Residency to attend the durbar convened by Mr. Quinton for noon on Sunday, March 22, the Regent stated that the Senaputty was sick, and that he was unable to compel his attendance at the durbar. On the same evening the witness accompanied Mr. Grimwood and Lieutenant Simpson when they were sent to the Palace by Mr. Quinton to confer with the Ministers, and, if possible, to see the Senaputty. They were, however, refused admittance. The Senaputty similarly declined to appear on the following morning, even when asked to come down in a dooly (a swinging litter used to carry sick persons). At one o'clock on Monday afternoon the witness was again sent to the Palace with the Political Agent, who bore the letter from the Chief Commissioner to the Regent ordering him to produce the Senaputty. He waited until four, and then went to the durbar-room in the Palace, where were Mr. Grimwood, Lieutenant Simpson, and the Regent, with several of his Ministers. The Political Agent stated that thirty minutes would be allowed to the Regent to decide whether the Senaputty should be surrendered or arrested. The Regent made many excuses, and finally left with the chiefs, apparently to hold a private durbar. Some of the Ministers returned and begged Mr. Grimwood for mercy, imploring him not to arrest the Senaputty. The witness was of opinion that the Regent was powerless and afraid of the Senaputty. The latter had been ordered to grant an interview, but when Mr. Grimwood explained the views of the Government and begged him to yield, the Senaputty refused, pleading sickness, although he said that he would surrender afterwards. The witness reported to Mr. Grimwood that there was a general impression in Manipore that the British would be attacked if they attempted to arrest the Senaputty. Long before Mr. Quinton's arrival it had been rumoured that he was coming to arrest the Senaputty. On the commencement of the firing on the morning of March 24, when the troops were sent to surround the Palace and capture the Senaputty, the witness fled, and remained in hiding until the 26th, when he was arrested by the Maniporis and taken before the Senaputty, who asked the witness and others to write favourably about him to the Government. After a list had been made out, all the prisoners were released except the witness, who was retained as a translator. The witness, the native doctor, and all the servants and villagers near the Residency sent away their families on the evening of Monday, March 23, owing to rumours that the British were to be attacked.

Russick Lall's evidence was confirmed by Bamon Charan Mookerjee, clerk to the Regent, who was the next witness called. He added that the Maniporis were prepared forcibly to resist any attempt to reinstate the old Maharaja. He personally saw the Senaputty go to the Residency with the Regent on the Sunday morning when the durbar was to have been held. They were kept waiting, however. On the Monday afternoon, observing signs of commotion among the people, the witness became suspicious, and spoke about the matter to Mr. Grimwood, who told him that he had better remove his family, so he sent them away that night. On the next evening (March 24) two men from the Regent's office came to the Palace with the letter sent by Mr. Quinton to the Regent after the attack made on the Residency that afternoon by the Maniporis. This letter was to the following effect:—"On what condition will you cease firing on us? Give us time to communicate with the Viceroy and repair the telegraph." The signature was Mr. Quinton's, but the body of the letter was in another hand. The witness translated it into Manipori for the Regent. That night two more men came to the witness at the Palace, with a paper bearing the words, "We are entrapped. They want us to make over our guns." The writing was in pencil, and the paper bore no address and was unsigned. The messengers stated that the sahibs in the Palace durbar-hall had written it.

This paper was doubtless hastily scribbled by one of the Englishmen after they had gone out from the Residency to discuss terms, and had found that they were being treacherously dealt with, in the hope, probably, that it might reach the British Residency and inform the garrison of the state of affairs.

The witness translated the paper and returned it. Soon afterwards the firing recommenced. This was the midnight firing which intimated to those in the Residency that the Chief Commissioner and his companions had been made prisoners. The witness stated that he wrote the letter sent by the Regent to the Viceroy on the subject of the outbreak, and remained in Manipore until the arrival of the British.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, June 3.—After Russick Lall and Bamon Charan Mookerjee had been examined, Havildar Dhupchand, of the 44th Goorkhas, was the next witness. He gave an account of the proceedings of Lieutenant Brackenbury's detachment, and said that the Maniporis fired first.

Lieutenant Chatterton, who was examined yesterday, described the military operations. He was present after "cease firing" was sounded, when a Manipori brought a letter from the Senaputty replying to Mr. Quinton's message, and requesting the troops to surrender. He heard Mr. Grimwood ask the messenger if Mr. Quinton could go safely to meet the Senaputty, and the messenger replied:—"Yes, why should we harm you? Are you not our god?" The officers then left the Residency, Colonel Skene telling witness to send some chairs, as they were going. When they had got half-way to the Palace, the witness saw no more of them.

Another witness, Girichri Singh, described the meeting of the British officers and the Senaputty on the evening of March 24, also the death of Mr. Grimwood and the wounding of Lieutenant Simpson. His description corresponds with the account given in my telegram on Sunday. The witness added that the Senaputty ordered him to keep the sahibs in the bungalow, and he placed sentries there, and then went away for an hour. On his return he found the sahibs had been killed. The Senaputty did not punish the witness for leaving, nor did he punish the sentries.—Times Correspondent.

CALCUTTA, June 5.—In the trial of the Manipori Princes the evidence so far seems to point to the conclusion that the Senaputty gave the order for the execution of the officers, but that he did so with some reluctance, and after being pressed by the Tongal General, who urged that he had gone too far to be forgiven, and that it would, therefore, be better to kill the sahibs while they were in his hands.

The executioner's account corresponds with that already given. The victim's feet were cut off after death, in order to remove the fetters. Mr. Grimwood, who was killed by a spear thrust, was afterwards decapitated, but his feet were not cut off.

The Amrita Bazar Patirka, a Calcutta native paper, publishes a letter from a native who was present in Manipore at the time of the disaster. He asserts that the Senaputty tried to save the officers, but the mob insisted on murdering them under the notion that they were thereby carrying out the injunction of the sacred books; but the internal evidence of the letter appears to show that, while the writer was an eye-witness of the events that took place at the Residency, his account of what happened in the Palace is founded on hearsay.

Further evidence in the trial proves that the Senaputty took an active part in the fighting, that he directed the firing, also that he was present when the officers were assaulted by the mob, and that he ordered them to be locked up, though he could easily have passed them out of the fort, and also that he remained in the guard-house close at hand while the executions were taking place. The case for the prosecution closed yesterday, and the charges were then read to the accused, who pleaded "Not guilty." The charges are:—First, waging war against the Queen-Empress; second, abetting murder.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA, June 7.—Captain Butcher, the last witness for the prosecution, said that the orders given to him were that he was not to fire unless fired upon. He also stated that he did not see any women or children in the Palace enclosure during the fighting.

On Friday the Court announced the third charge which had been added—namely, that of murder, to which the accused pleaded "Not guilty," and handed in a statement of defence prepared by the help of a Bengalee named Janokinath Bysack whom he had retained to assist him.

Replying to questions by the Court, the prisoner said that the reason so many men were in the Palace was because they were required for parades; that he was unable to surrender himself owing to his being attacked; that he opened fire in his own defence; that he could not conduct the British officers to the gate, as there was much firing going on at the time; that afterwards, being tired, he fell asleep and did not know that the officers were murdered till next morning; that, when the men came asking him to confirm the Tongal General's order for the execution of the officers, he told them on no account to obey the order; and that he kept the officers because there were many armed men about and he intended to release them in the morning. The prisoner admitted that he did not punish the Tongal General, but said it was because he was an old and faithful servant, and great confusion prevailed.—Ibid.

RANGOON, June 7.—Major Grant, V.C., has been entertained at a dinner presided over by Major-General Stewart, commanding in Burma. The health of Major Grant and of the men who served with him was very warmly received. Major Grant was offered the wing commandantship of the 33rd Madras Regiment, but he declined it, as he wished to continue to serve in the same regiment with the men who had fought under him at Thobal.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA, June 8.—The Government of India has commuted the sentence of death on Mia Singh, a major in the Manipori army, to one of transportation for life.—Ibid.

MANIPORE, June 8.—Subhadar Niranjan Singh, the ex-British sepoy who was found guilty of having taken a leading part in the recent revolt, was hanged in front of the West Gate this morning. He met his fate perfectly unmoved.—Reuter.

The Manipore correspondent of the Times of India gives a full account of the events that preceded the tragedy, from which we extract the following:—

AT THE RESIDENCY.

At the hour fixed for the durbar the officers attended in the verandah of the Residency, and certain troops were disposed about the Residency compound. The Maharaja arrived without the Jobraj, and on inquiry it was reported that the latter was at the gate of the Residency, but did not come in at all. The Chief Commissioner thereupon refused to hold the durbar, and sent for the Jobraj, whom, for convenience, and to keep the story as it has been told, I will call in future the Senaputty, he being in reality Senaputty until such time as the Regent was installed as Maharaja by the Chief Commissioner. The Regent now departed to his palace, no ill-feeling apparently being visible so far. The usual market was held near the polo ground in the evening. The Regent's band played at dinner at the Residency. Next day a durbar was to have been held at 8 A.M., and if not attended another at 3 P.M., which did not take place. About 2 P.M. on the 23rd idem Lieutenant Lugard was warned to go with eighty men, accompanied by Lieutenant Gurdon, and to arrest the Senaputty and take him to Sengmai. Captain Butcher with 100 men was to assist if necessary. These instructions were not carried out, as other things intervened which changed the course of events. Lieutenant Simpson and Mr. Grimwood had meantime gone to the Regent's palace. The Regent refused to surrender the Senaputty, and these officers returned to the Residency. It is reported that the Maniporis were seen distributing ammunition to the troops in the palace. On this evening no bazaar was held in the market—an ominous sign of coming trouble, as this daily event was never broken by any weather or other causes. A nautch, which was to have taken place at the Residency, did not come off on this evening. In fact, a storm was brewing which few feared; and in this, indeed, they seem to have done what most people who know Manipore would have done themselves, viz., never doubted that it was unlikely any resistance would be met with, except of the most feeble character. The Senaputty was to be captured next morning, but a regular attack was only to be made if the Maniporis fired on our troops, and it was believed he would be found in the Regent's palace, and not his own. At dawn on the 24th the Senaputty's palace, which is north of the Regent's, was attacked at 5 A.M. Lieutenant Brackenbury with thirty men of the 44th Goorkhas left the Residency. His orders were to approach by the northern gate of the city and cut off the Senaputty if he attempted to get away by that gate, and to keep a look-out for Captain Butcher's attacks. Captain Butcher himself, with Lieutenant Simpson and seventy men of the 42nd and 44th Goorkhas, went by the west face of the city wall, where it was in bad repair, and low at a distance of some 250 yards north from the main gate, which is in front of the polo ground.

THE AMMUNITION QUARTER.

The troops as now disposed were 380 of the Chief Commissioner's escort and sixty-five men of the Resident's escort (thirty-five being quartered at Ling Thobal, four miles on the Tammoo road). Thus some 450 men were available for duty. Of these 200 were left under command of Captain Boileau to hold the Residency and the Camp, and 250 were ordered for the attack on the Senaputty's and Regent's palaces. The ammunition in hand consisted of a reserve of thirty rounds per man in the Residency quarter guard, of which twenty rounds had been served out to the men in case of need, and the Chief's escort had in pouch forty rounds each. Thus every man had seventy rounds of ball ammunition in possession, but this was practically all, no further reserve, except as above enumerated, being obtainable.

AFTER THE SENAPUTTY.

Captain Butcher was fired on as he approached the city wall. Leaving a small party at the wall he pushed on, using the bayonet occasionally, to the Senaputty's palace. On reaching this Lieutenant Lugard reinforced him with forty men, and the whole occupied the temple, which stands in the middle of the grounds, with a loss of seven men. The Maniporis opened a heavy shell and musketry fire on this building at a distance of some 300 yards. Meantime the main gate near the polo ground had been taken most gallantly by Lieutenant Chatterton, who thus gained a good footing, and completely enfiladed the west face of the city from the towers of the gate, from which also can plainly be seen the Regent's palace entrance and two dragons, the road leading between the gate and entrance to the Palace being through another smaller gate and causeway of solid bricks, with a gate which can be closed if necessary. All this time the Maniporis were keeping up an incessant fire on every one of our parties, and several of our men were killed or wounded at various points of the attack. Colonel Skene was now informed that ammunition was running low in the Senaputty's palace party. Colonel Skene went to the Senaputty's palace with fifty rifles, accompanied by a British officer, and also carried scaling ladders and a supply of extra ammunition, as it was evident the actual assault on the Regent's palace must be made soon; the whole of the Senaputty's palace and grounds were in our possession, but the man himself was in the Regent's enclosure. Lieutenant Brackenbury, who had proceeded to carry out his orders, had been wounded somewhere in the vicinity of the east gate of the Senaputty's palace, and help was sent to him as soon as this was ascertained. Subedar Hema Chund, 44th Goorkhas, was found by Lieutenant Lugard dangerously wounded in the same vicinity, and with assistance they were carried in under a heavy fire. The first news of Lieutenant Brackenbury being wounded was learnt, it is believed, by Lieutenant Simpson, who had been sent across the river to cover the final assault on the Regent's palace. It was Lieutenant Simpson who called for help to carry off Lieutenant Brackenbury, who had received several very dangerous wounds. It was impossible for those in the Senaputty's temple to see Lieutenant Brackenbury, as he was lying behind the Palace wall, and many trees and buildings intervened to obstruct any view. It was now considered that a successful assault could not be delivered on the Regent's palace, as the ammunition was running low, and consequently Colonel Skene went to see the Chief Commissioner, leaving Captain Butcher in command of the Senaputty's palace grounds and temple. At noon as the officers were proceeding to get some food a heavy fire was opened on the Residency. The enemy had got round the building as the firing began from the back of the Residency compound. It is said that about this time a conversation took place between the Chief Commissioner and Colonel Skene as to whether the Residency should be given up and a position taken up in the open, where the enemy's guns could be captured if they attempted to use them. Whatever the decision arrived at may have been will never now be settled, but there can be no doubt that this was a sound decision, and had further events not altered everything, the results might have been very different.

COLONEL SKENE'S CONDUCT.

All are agreed in maintaining that Colonel Skene's admirable coolness and judgment were most marked throughout the day, and the 42nd have lost in him a gallant soldier and the best of English gentlemen. After the opening of the heavy fire from the rear of the Residency Colonel Skene determined, if possible, to erect a bamboo bridge across the moat of the west wall of the Pat, and thus attempt to break the walls and get in by that means, but this plan could not be executed. About this time the havildar's party, which was all that now held the main gate on the west of the city walls, was obliged to retire to the Residency owing to the heavy fire brought on them, and about that time or a little before, Lieutenant Simpson and Dr. Calvert had also returned to the Residency. From 5 P.M. till 8 P.M. the enemy kept up a heavy fire on the Residency from the west wall of the city. During the fire Mr. Grimwood's bedroom was shattered by a shell. Captain Boileau was then on the north face, directing his men. The east wall was too high for men to fire over. At 8 P.M. the "Cease fire" was sounded, by whom is not known. The Chief Commissioner and the other officers, who were afterwards murdered, had meanwhile gone to the Regent's Palace; and the officers in the Residency appear to have thought all was over, as the chief and his staff had gone to make or dictate terms. All appeared still round the Residency; but at midnight the enemy again opened a furious fire from the west walls of the city, and this fire continued until the final retirement of our men towards Cachar, and even long after they had left Manipore.

CHOLERA.

The same correspondent telegraphs on May 16:—Cholera, which we had hoped was dying out, has carried off Sergeant Laidlaw, Scottish Rifles, acting commissariat sergeant, yesterday. He had been ill some days, but appeared to be recovering. He was buried last evening in the Residency compound. To-day I regret to have to report the death of Lieut. Stevenson, 18th Bengal Infantry, and officiating deputy assistant commissary-general, also from cholera. He had come up with his regiment from Cachar, and on its return volunteered to remain. Though only a short time here, he was a great favourite with every one, and his sudden death is greatly regretted.

ANTIQUARIAN RESEARCHES.

The following order was issued at Manipore on April 26:—The Chief Political Officer having brought to the notice of the officer commanding the Silchar Column that a valuable library containing works of interest and ancient literary and historical records is housed in a large temple easily distinguishable by a gilt dome and spire close behind the Raja's Palace, he directs that this building should on no account be destroyed or entered without special orders. The above were strictly observed, but the carefully-guarded temple was opened on the evening of April 27, in the presence of General Collett, Major Maxwell, and Colonel Rennick, after a huge padlock had been demolished, and was found to contain not a sacred book or an idol. They had all been removed. When the 3rd Bengal Infantry leaves Silchar, the Silchar Column of the Manipore Field Force will be broken up.

The first experiment of sending pack-bullocks to work on the transport line to Manipore seems to have ended disastrously. Between 500 and 600 were purchased, originally in the Julpaiguri district, and sent by rail and steamer at enormous expense to Shikarighat. There are now less than a score left, and not one of these has managed to pass Golaghat. Over 400, we (Bombay Gazette) hear, were condemned outright on being landed on the banks of the Brahmaputra. Such as did not die realised seven or eight rupees at auction. The survivors are very precious animals, as they represent at least half a lac of rupees originally spent, not to mention railway charges, and 15,000 rs. for a special steamer chartered for their conveyance up the river. In the face of this it seems incredible that 500 were bullocks from the Deccan. Six thousand rupees per head per bullock delivered at Golaghat has quite eclipsed the charge for the celebrated pakhali bullock which the Madras Sappers took up the Khyber in the Afghan War.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND THE SIMLA GOVERNMENT.

Lord Cross and Sir John Gorst between them, says the Pioneer, seem bent upon making the position of the Government of India quite an impossible one. We have noticed the latter's declaration that the British expedition in Manipore would be bound by the same conventions as a German army in France. Now it is his Chief who throws a fresh embarrassment upon the Government by declaring that no reward can have been offered with the Viceroy's sanction for the apprehension of those responsible for the outrage of March 24. One fails to imagine how Lord Cross can possibly be so ignorant as he represents himself as to what was being done by the authorities out here in the middle of last month, for it is certain that, as usual on these occasions, incessant communications have been exchanged between the Viceroy and the India Office. But if the Secretary of State's memory had deserted him, his intelligence need not have done so; and reason would have suggested that, if the Manipore chiefs had to be caught, the offer of a reward for their capture was the best means available for bringing this about. If the State is in strict subordination to British rule then we presume the Regent, his brother, and his chief officials are cruel and treacherous criminals, whom it is urgently necessary to bring to book. If, on the other hand, they are patriots rightfully asserting their independence, it is evident that Government was wrong, not only in offering rewards for their seizure, but much more in sending Mr. Quinton to Manipore at all; and Lord Cross, instead of sheltering himself behind an incredible ignorance of the doings of the Government of India, should be cancelling their policy in toto. He and Lord Ripon had better put their heads together and arrange that the Manipore worthies shall be reinstated, with an ample apology for any inconvenience to which they have been put. The explanation which arrives by a second telegram after these words were written does not make things much better. It appears that the kernel of the matter lies in the reward having been supposed to be offered for the offenders "dead or alive." But in the summary of Mr. Mackenzie's proclamation in the Pioneer of April 17, which has alarmed Lord Ripon's sensibilities, there is not a word about "dead or alive." It is an announcement to all concerned that if the fugitives appear on the Burma border they are to be arrested, coupled with a personal description enabling them to be recognised. A stronger Secretary of State would have refused to allow the Viceroy to be worried, because Lord Ripon or any one else chose to read into this words that were not there.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

A TELEGRAM from Allahabad (May 18), says:—The prospects of an early termination to the Black Mountain warfare seem to be clouding over again, as the Akazai Jirga after a week's negotiations have abandoned their intention of coming in to submit. It is supposed that the influence of the Chagarzais is at the bottom of this change of attitude, it having been found that the Akazais had been crossing over to Bimbal to cut corn, which is now ripe, so on Saturday morning Colonel Stead, with three guns of No. 2 Derajat Mountain Battery, 100 men of the 11th Bengal Infantry, and thirty men of the 2-5th Goorkhas started from Darbanrai and Dialiari and reached Bimbal. The raft used by the Akazais in crossing was found to be moored on a further bank, and was destroyed by the guns. Excellent practice was made, and several shells sent through the dug-outs by which the raft was supported. One shell cut the rope by which it was secured, and the raft floated down the stream a short way and then sank. By this time some thirty or forty men with guns had collected on the side of the river, and opened a brisk fire, which was returned by the 11th Bengal Infantry, one of the enemy being killed.

A telegram from Hangu, dated yesterday, says that the No. 3 Mountain Battery, R.A., 60th Rifles, and the Manchester Regiment reached Hangu this morning on their homeward march to India, and were met by orders directing them to retrace their steps and return forthwith to the places they had just left on the Samana Range. No one seems to have any idea of the cause of the alteration of orders, and surmises are many and various. There is apparently no information of any fresh gathering among the tribes. All is quiet.

A later telegram, dated May 20, says there is yet no sign of submission on the part of the Akazais, and from the preparations the Engineers are making in the way of providing shelter for troops they evidently expect to remain on the Black Mountain right into winter.

THE MIRANZAI EXPEDITION.

ALLAHABAD, May 16.—General Lockhart has visited Shnauri, at the foot of the Samana range, to examine the site for the proposed posts. Villagers are bringing in supplies freely, which are paid for. General Lockhart and his staff went to Shinwara on the 15th to select sites for posts. The whole of the British troops, now with the force, return to Rawal Pindi at once. Three native regiments and one native mountain battery remain on the Samana range to hold it and protect the workmen building the fortified posts.

ALLAHABAD, May 19.—Brigadier-General Sir William Lockhart has received the following telegram from the Commander-in-Chief:—"Please accept my hearty congratulations on the successful termination of the Miranzai Expedition, and let the troops under your command know how highly pleased I am with the excellent work they have done."

No. 3 Mountain Battery R.A., the 16th Rifles, and the Manchester Regiment reached Hangu on their homeward march to India, on May 17, where they received orders at once to return to the places they had left on the Samana range. The 19th Punjab Infantry, the 15th Goorkhas, and the Derajat Mountain Battery have been ordered to stand fast.

It is reported from Seri that the Akazais are in a starving condition, and may be seen at night moving about the hills with torches, evidently in search of food.

ALLAHABAD, May 20.—It is announced from Miranzai that the Doulatzai Jirgahs having been summoned to Hangu on the 20th, Mr. Spencer has left to bring them up to Mastaon, where General Lockhart will receive them on the 21st. The Public Works Department are hard at work on the new posts, which are being built of cut stone. The post at Gulistan is nearly finished, and work has now commenced at Dhar and Sungar Picket Hill.

MAY 21.—Definite instructions for the return of the European troops in the Miranzai Field Force will possibly be issued in a few days, though a strong body of infantry with some artillery will be maintained on the Samana Range for some time.

THE UNCOVENANTED BANK.

THE Allahabad correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes on May 15:—

Mr. Stowell, late manager of the Uncovenanted Service Bank at Agra, in his examination on May 8, said that when he left the Bank the bad debts were 2,80,048 rs. in February, 1888. He wrote to Mr. Conlan about the affairs of the Bank and to Mr. A. O. Hume, and they both visited Agra in May, 1889, when he asked them to nominate some one whom they could trust to be associated with him in the preparation of a report on the Bank. His letter to Mr. Hume was written in August, 1888. The exact amount owed by Mr. Palmer was 1,07,948.6. rs. The money realised from that debt was treated as profits for dividends to shareholders. They had obtained a decree on a bungalow belonging to Mr. Palmer, which when put up to auction was bought for 20,000 rs. and subsequently sold for 60,000 rs. Instead of carrying this 40,000 rs. to the bad debt of Mr. Palmer, they used it for the purpose of declaring a dividend, which Mr. Justice Straight characterised as a disgraceful transaction.

Mr. Stowell was again under examination on May 15. He said he issued no reports after 1870. None of the shareholders ever objected to this. The financial position of the Bank had improved, and deposits had increased between 1866 and the time he left the Bank.

Mr. George Colclough Webb, the present manager of the Bank, was examined with reference to his audit of the Bank's accounts. His colleague in the audit was Mr. A. Campbell, who was eighteen or nineteen years of age. He said he was compelled to sign an audit report which appeared to him irregular and improper; and that he drew the attention of Mr. Hume and the shareholders to the amount owed by Messrs. Ball and Stowell and to the fact that the lien given to the Bank by the manager, Mr. Stowell, was engrossed on unstamped paper. He consented to a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, because it was a practice which had been carried on for years, though he recognised now he had done wrong.

Mr. Justice Straight directed the official liquidators to take legal advice as to whether they should apply for a summons against Mr. C. W. Stowell or others, under section 214 of the Indian Companies Act.

The official liquidator informed the Court that although advertisements had been inserted in the papers notifying that June 4 was the latest date on which claims from creditors would be received, the claims up to the present time amounted to less than two lacs of rupees.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Departure of Col. Butlin.—A correspondent, writing from Belgaum, says:—The Cheshire Regt.—in fact, all Belgaum—is suffering from a severe loss, which we sustained last Tuesday, May 12, by the departure for England of Col. Butlin and his amiable wife. He has served in the regiment for nearly thirty-one years, and four years ago was promoted colonel. During all this time he has been loved and honoured by all who knew him, but more especially by the officers and men who had the happiness of serving under him. As the time of his departure drew near a general gloom spread over all, reminding us of the old adage, "Time and tide will wait for no man." On the evening previous to his leaving the officers of the regiment gave a dinner in his honour in the Cheshire Mess, the band had prepared a charming programme, but, owing to the indisposition of Major Sheringham, who was thrown from his horse during the gymkhana sports in the afternoon, only two or three items were gone through. The health of the guest (Col. Butlin) was proposed by Capt. Richardson, and he was afterwards carried round the messroom, amid ringing cheers and the regimental march, which was lustily sung by all present. Songs, toasts, and choruses continued with great vigour till the small hours. On the afternoon of their departure the officers, after removing the "biles," drew Col. and Mrs. Butlin in their dumney down to the station, in the middle of a scorching hot afternoon, where quite a large crowd, including nearly all the ladies of the station and the Cheshire band, had congregated to witness the departure. We all take this opportunity of thanking them both for their many kindnesses and favours, and of wishing them bon voyage, and every joy and happiness in "Old England."

The Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-Generalship, Intelligence Branch, Burma.—On the recommendation of the general officer commanding Burma District, Capt. J. H. Verschoyle, 1st batt. Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, has been permitted to perform the duties of deputy-assistant quartermaster-general of the Intelligence Branch in Burma, vice Capt. Norman Bray, deceased, and pending the appointment of Capt. G. V. Burrows, Madras Staff Corps, at present paid Attaché. The selection, says the Madras Times, is a good one, as the last officer has a large experience of Burma, having been assistant provost-marshal during the Burmese Campaign of 1885-86, and subsequently staff officer of Mounted Infantry. Capt. Burrows was appointed as paid Attaché in October last, and has since then been performing excellent work for the Burma Intelligence Branch. We have not heard who will succeed Capt. Burrows as paid Attaché, but probably Capt. Hussey Walsh, Cheshire Regt., who is the senior unpaid Attaché, will be appointed, but this officer has proceeded to England on medical certificate. According to the Army List, the other officers in the Burma Intelligence Branch are Lieut. C. A. Wilding, 2nd Inniskilling Fusiliers; Lieut. G. W. T. Prowse, 2nd Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry; and Lieut. A. Blewitt, 4th King's Royal Rifles. The appointment may therefore go to one of these officers. The Intelligence Branch in Burma has been collecting a great deal of information since its formation in 1885, when Capt. Dun—now with the Manipore Expedition—was first placed in charge. Officers of the branch have been continually out with expeditionary columns on the frontiers collecting and writing up information of the various parts of the country visited, and by this means a large amount of topographical and geographical information already exists for purposes of general reference. The late Capt. Bray took much interest in the working of the Branch, and himself spared no pains in collecting all the information about the country generally, and particularly of the frontiers and their tribes. He was bringing back with him a large amount of useful information of the Wuntho country on the return of the Expedition under Brig.-Gen. Wolseley, when he unfortunately took ill and died on April 6 last. In him the Intelligence Branch has lost a most valuable officer.

A Gallant Native Officer.—Havildar-Major Sangram Singh, who commanded the detachment of twenty Frontier Police during the action at Jacopa's village in February last, has been admitted to the third class of the Order of Merit. The much-coveted distinction, says the Times of India, has never been more gallantly won than in his case. The detachment, it may be remembered, while quartered in a guest-house, was suddenly surrounded by hundreds of Lushais, who made a determined attack on the post with spear and musket. The havildar (then jemadar) was injured early in the action by a bullet which shattered his arm, but he kept his men together, and, when the Lushais succeeded in firing the house, led them in good order through the village, fighting their way step by step. So formidable, in fact, was the front presented by the little band that the enemy eventually drew off, and after four days' march the fugitives succeeded in reaching a British outpost. A sepoy of the same detachment has received the Order of Merit for conspicuous gallantry during the action, but the particulars of his services are not stated. Possibly he was the sentry who is mentioned as having received four spear wounds and shot down two Lushais.

Tampering with Rifles—It having been brought to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army that grave irregularities have occurred in the 1st batt. Connaught Rangers, and 2nd batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers, through a system that has prevailed in those battalions of tampering with the rifles (with the view of lightening the "pull-off" of the trigger), and thus rendering the weapon unserviceable and dangerous. His Excellency has directed :—I. That these two battalions shall forfeit all musketry prizes gained during the last annual course. II. That their musketry "figure of merit" shall be published in Army Order; with the remark: "Cancelled, the men having tampered with the 'pull-off' of their rifles." III. That individual soldiers found tampering with their rifles, after the issue of this order, shall be tried by court-martial. Sir George Greaves, the Commander-in-Chief, views this state of things with serious displeasure, and will resort to severe measures if it continues. His Excellency calls on all ranks to aid in putting a stop to a practice that makes the rifles of a battalion unserviceable and dangerous, and which is in direct violation of para. 46 (f), page 40, Regulations for Musketry Instruction, 1887.

The Deolali Rifle Range.—A committee for the selection of a new rifle range was lately assembled at Deolali—president, Col. Hursey; members, Capt. Thacher, Musketry School, and an Engineer officer from Bombay. It is believed that the result will be the retention of the old rifle range, with the firing points and butts reversed. The old range faces the north, and when reversed will face the south. The change will give a slight depression to about 400 yards firing-point, and a gentle one therefrom to the 1,000-yards point, which will be on about a level with the targets.

Major-Gen. R. C. Stewart, C.B., A.D.C., arrived at Mandalay from Myingyan on May 10.

Brig.-Gen. G. B. Wolseley, C.B., A.D.C., arrived at Mandalay on May 11 from the Wuntho expedition.

Speculation is rife as to who will succeed Brig.-General Kenney-Herbert as Military Secretary to the Madras Government. The names mentioned are Col. Leigh-Hunt, Col. Shelley, and Col. Hughes Hallett.

Col. J. L. N. Willis, 16th Bengal Cavalry, has been granted leave in India, on private affairs, to Nov. 15 next.

Lieut.-Col. C. Norman and Major the Hon. R. H. Bertie, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, have been posted to the 1st battalion.

Capt. A. F. Clothier, 27th Madras Inf., has reported his arrival at Rangoon, and taken up his duties as additional deputy assistant adjutant-general, Burma District, and on tour with Major-Gen. Campbell-Stewart, the general officer commanding Burma District.

Capt. C. W. Park, 2nd Devonshire Regt., late officiating deputy assistant adjutant-general, Burma District, is appointed to officiate as deputy assistant adjutant-general, Mandalay District, vice Capt. A. B. Murray, proceeding to England on furlough on medical certificate.

Captain O'Niel, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, who has been at Deolali learning the duties of a paymaster with an embarkation depôt, with a view to his appointment as paymaster of the Kurrachee depôt, left for Kurrachee on May 16.

The Deccan Standard hears that Captain W. Barnett, second in command of the African Cavalry Guards, at Kyrtabad, is seriously ill. Recently he had a fit of apoplexy whilst in his bath. Medical assistance was summoned, and everything possible was done for him.

Captain C. R. Phillips (officiating deputy assistant adjutant-general) has been appointed to be deputy assistant adjutant-general, vice Captain A. B. Mein, resigned.

The services of Captain A. W. Forbes, 4th (Prince Albert Victor's Own) Cavalry (Poona Horse), have been placed at the disposal of the Government of India, with effect from June 1, 1891.

Lieut. J. R. B. G. Carter, 8th Bombay Inf., has been appointed to be cantonment magistrate at Malegaon, in addition to his military duties, vice Lieut. W. H. Errington, 1st Bombay Inf., transferred.

Major R. E. D. Reilly, Staff Corps (second in command, 28th Bombay Inf.), assistant adjutant-general, Sind district, has been granted leave for one year.

Lieut. W. R. Brakspear, 1-2nd Goorkhas, passed the higher standard in Hindustani on the 4th inst., and Capt. S. C. Koe, Royal Irish Regt., and Lieut. W. A. S. Kincaid, R.E., the lower standard.

Surg.-Major W. P. Carson, M.B., Indian Medical Service, acts as medical storekeeper, Bombay, during the absence of Surg.-Major J. Parker, or pending further orders.

Lieut. Johnson, of the Liverpool Regt., having resigned the Staff Corps, has left Mandalay for Dinapore.

Col. Rennick, in Brigade Orders, pays a high tribute to the memory of Trooper Ferris, of the Surma Valley Light Horse, who died of typhoid fever at Manipore on April 30. He records his appreciation of the truly patriotic and gallant manner in which Trooper Ferris discharged his arduous and self-imposed duties, never sparing himself when there was a call on the Volunteers. As an instance, after riding thirty miles on April 17, the deceased did not hesitate to ride ten miles more, from Lakhipore to Jeri Ghat, on escort duty.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to May 20.

Attempt to Sell a Girl.—In the Calcutta Police-court on May 14 two natives, named Mundle, and their aunt were charged with trying to sell a girl of nine, the wife of one of the accused. He married her five years ago, but she being of low caste he was excommunicated, and therefore sent her to Calcutta to be sold for 300 rs., and with the proceeds his intention was to give a feast in order to regain caste. The police got wind of the affair, and arrested the parties. The girl, when examined, said a Brahmin offered 100 rs. for her, but the offer was declined. The case was adjourned, and an officer was to be sent to Midnapore to investigate it.

A Riot in Calcutta.—A serious riot occurred on May 15 in a suburban area of Calcutta. A Baboo had lately purchased a plot of land on which was a kutcha mosque, and he applied to the Court for leave to remove the mosque. The Mahomedans opposed the application, but the Court decided against them and allowed them fifteen days to remove the mosque themselves. The fifteen days expired on May 14, and on the 15th the Mahomedans, thinking that the Baboo would come to take possession of the mosque, assembled in large numbers with bludgeons. A small body of police were then sent to disperse the unlawful assembly, but were beaten back. Additional police were sent, but were again routed. Finally Mr. Lambert, Commissioner of Police, went to the spot with all the available European and native police. The Mahomedans were by this time in a great state of excitement, and numbered quite 2,000, and almost at once a desperate encounter ensued. At first it seemed as if the police would get the worst of the fight, and application was then made for the services of the military. Two hundred men of the Buffs, with forty rounds of ammunition each, were promptly despatched from Fort William in tram-cars, but before they reached the scene of action they were met by Mr. Barnard, deputy commissioner of police, who informed them that their services were not required. Mr. Lambert, by dividing his force and attacking the Mahomedans in the rear, had succeeded in scattering them, they being also aware that troops were on the way. The desperate character of the fight may be gathered from the fact that forty Mahomedans and eleven police are in the hospital, many of them fatally and all severely injured. Two Mahomedans and two policemen have died. Mr. Lambert and Mr. Barnard are both badly hurt with bricks, and Mr. Robertson, Superintendent of Police, was unconscious for several hours with a blow on the head. 140 arrests have been made.

Torturing a Woman.—At the Calcutta High Court on May 13 the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Beverley disposed of the appeal of the sub-inspector of police of Darjeeling, who was convicted of wrongfully confining and torturing a Bhootea woman in order to extract a confession. They affirmed the conviction, and found that the superior magistrate and the police-officers tacitly assented to her detention and treatment, while on the face of her complaint of ill-treatment, the confession she made could not be considered voluntary. Their lordships therefore sent a copy of the judgment to the Local Government for action.

Attempt to Murder.—William D'Silva, a Calcutta signaller, telegraph office, shot his sister-in-law in attempting to murder his brother. Accused was recently expelled from the house owing to disrespect shown to his mother. He challenged his brother to fight, but on meeting at the rendezvous he suggested weapons instead of fists, but his brother declined the challenge. Accused next day bought a pocket-pistol and cartridges, and went to his brother's house and sent in a message asking an interview. His brother refused to see him, whereupon he forced his way in and shot at his brother, who was lying down. The bullet struck his sister-in-law, who was sitting beside her husband, in the wrist. The case was partially heard before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and adjourned. Accused was remanded to gaol.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to May 21.

Madras Apothecaries Fund.—For some time past endeavours have often been made to obtain the sanction of the Secretary of State for India to place this fund under the management of the State, but the motion has as often fallen through. In February 1890 the Government was not satisfied with the valuation set by Mr. F. Hendriks, the actuary; Surgeon-General Bidie, then surgeon-general with the Government of Madras, thereupon proposed to the trustees to the fund that Mr. G. H. Stuart, M.A., of the Education Department, might be appointed to value the fund on an honorarium of 2,500 rs.; but the proposition collapsed as it failed to obtain the concurring votes of two-thirds of the subscribers, without which no proposal involving a money outlay can, according to the rules of the fund, be acted upon. The trustees subsequently obtained an explanation from Mr. Hendriks as regards the alleged imperfections of his valuation report, and the Government was again addressed to recommend to the Secretary of State for India that the Fund be transferred to the State on the terms stated in the memorial, dated April 16, 1889, in accordance with the general wish of the subscribers. Moreover, the capital of the fund has since risen from 3,24,638 rs. to 3,30,926 rs. The Government has, however, intimated that Mr. Hendriks' supplemental report does not meet with the objections entertained in regard to his original valuation. He asserts that the omitted items of assets and liabilities counterbalance, but there is no proof, one way or the other, such as a satisfactory valuation report would furnish. The question cannot therefore be reconsidered.

Serious Accident.—Captain A. C. Griffin, an old and respected resident of Ouchterlony Valley and Ooty, was thrown from his carriage on Monday, May 18, at Ooty, and so severely injured that little or no hope was entertained for his recovery.

It is rumoured that before long the Madras Forest Department is to be disconnected from the Board of Revenue, and constituted a separate department directly under Government, with Major Campbell-Walker at its head.

Colonel J. Pennycuick, R.E., Secretary to the Government of Madras, P.W.D., prior to his proceeding on leave, wrote, it appears, says Indian Engineering, a lengthy memorandum protesting in strong terms against the demolition and removal of the Madras lighthouse, but the matter was overruled by His Excellency and both his colleagues, who were in favour of the measure.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to May 23.

The Clock Tower Tragedy.—Particulars of this inquiry have been anticipated by telegraph, but we extract some further details. On May 15 a ghastly experiment was made. A dummy dressed as a Parsee woman was thrown from the top in the presence of Mr. Acworth, municipal commissioner, and other gentlemen. The dummy, weighing about four stone, was placed outside the parapet, with its feet resting on the projecting stonework, as Pherozbai was described to be standing. Turning a somersault it fell past the first balcony immediately under the clock, and then assuming an horizontal position struck the edge of the gallery 72 feet from the ground, splintering the parapet wall immediately above the spot where the telegraph wire was snapped, and fell without further opposition to the ground, almost at the spot where the bodies were found, and in the same position. Mr. Rienzi Walton, Executive Engineer of the Bombay Municipality, watched the effect in the compound. The distance of the drop was about 185 feet. At the inquest Mr. Walton described the result as observed by him from below, and Mr. Tomlinson, another Municipal Engineer, described it as it appeared from above. The experiment may be regarded as informal, the coroner having, on taking his seat, stated to the jury that as the dummy was found unsuitable, he had abandoned the idea of making a trial with it officially. Mr. Walton calculated that a human body weighing about eight stone would have taken about $3\frac{3}{4}$ seconds to fall, and that its pressure on the ground would be about 18,500 feet. On May 16 Mr. Craigie, who is watching the proceedings in the interest of the relatives of the deceased, produced a witness, Argun Rama, a sepoy in the office of the Registrar-General, who said that on the day of the tragic occurrence, he was standing outside his office, when he saw paper fluttering in the air, that called his attention to the Clock Tower, and, looking up, he saw a body falling, and after that another body. Seeing the first body fall, he thought someone had thrown it over, and he saw three persons on the parapet at the time the second girl fell, one of whom was near enough to push her over. He could see his head and part of his body, and when she went over he saw him look over the parapet and disappear. He took the jury to where he was standing, and must have had a clear view. He could not say what caste the man belonged to, but he thought he wore no turban. He was uncertain how he was dressed, but thought he wore something white. Aslajee, it may be noted, was wearing a black coat when he was seen in the Tower. The witness stated that he mentioned the occurrence to Ananta and Miranddy, clerks in the Registrar-General's office, immediately after it happened, but to no one else. On May 19 Mr. Craigie produced one of the Parsee children, whom it was stated on a previous occasion he intended to bring forward. The little girl in question, Navazbai Shapurjee Engineer, aged eleven years, deposed that in company with two of her juvenile uncles and her little sister she was present in the tower on the afternoon of the tragedy, and in her examination she gave a most startling and sensational account of what she had witnessed. According to her statement herself and her juvenile companions were admitted to the tower on payment of an anna at the door, but she was unable to recognise the sepoy to whom she gave it. While they were at the top of the tower she deposed to seeing Buchoobai and Pherozbai come on the balcony followed by a Parsee. Afterwards the ladies went downstairs, followed by the same Parsee, and returned a little later with their dresses disarranged, and in an excited state, the Parsee still being behind them. Mr. Craigie asked how witness knew they were agitated, when Navazbai replied that they were out of breath and that the thinner and fairer of them said to the other: "Parsee children are here; come here." Mr. Craigie followed up this question by asking what the ladies subsequently did, and the witness answered, they came and stood before us and the Parsee came. The ladies afterwards went out of sight and the Parsee went after them. Shortly after the clock had chimed 3.30, the Parsee, according to witness, ran past herself and friends with coat unbuttoned and turban in hand and hurried downstairs. Witness did not hear any screams. On arriving at the bottom of the tower witness saw two bodies, which she recognised as those of the ladies she had seen upstairs. Witness was sure that one of the ladies was wearing spectacles, and the other carrying a book or pamphlet in her hand. Mr. Craigie asked witness if she wou'd be able to identify the Parsee, but she said she was not sure of that, whereupon Mr. Craigie asked the coroner to produce Manockjee Aslajee before the Court for identification in the clothes he was wearing at the time of the tragedy. Superintendent Brewin objected. The identification was attended by the indecorous demonstrations which have followed the production of this unfortunate individual on former occasions, it being some time before the police and coroner succeeded in restoring order. Superintendent Brewin asked the Court to allow him to reserve his cross-examination until the other children who were with witness on the tower had been examined, on the ground that the police had been unable to obtain access to the children. The coroner asked if the police had been refused access, whereupon Superintendent Macdermott stated that Mr. Craigie had refused to supply him with any information. Mr. Craigie denied this, but the coroner allowed Superintendent Brewin's application; and the inquiry was adjourned.

Industrial Association of Western India.—This Association has been founded at Poona with Sir George Birdwood as president and Mr. E. C. Ozanne, C.S., Professor James Scorgie, Mr. T. B. Kirkham, Mr. H. P. Jacob, Captain Beauclerk, Mr. George Cotton, Mr. F. S. P. Lely, C.S., and a number of influential native gentlemen as original members. We (Times of India) learn that it is proposed to hold a conference of the Association in August next, when it is suggested that the Association shall take up many other important subjects, a proposed appeal to the Government to make an industrial survey of the Presidency. "The application of the principle of co-operation to the economic problem" is another subject which it is proposed to discuss. The keynote of the Association is that in the rehabilitation of an industrial system based as of old on diverse employments, and suited to the genius of the people, lie the sole safeguard of the poorer classes against famine, the keystone of Indian finance, and the only lasting and effective means of developing the resources of the empire. The Association hopes to achieve this end by encouraging and promoting native arts and industries by means of exhibitions, trade museums, and art galleries, by helping the formation of trades and technical schools and libraries, subscribing to scientific books, periodicals and newspapers, by arranging to hold public lectures on subjects of economic and industrial importance for the benefit of the public generally and of the industrial classes in particular; and by collecting and sifting information regarding industries and arts as practised in the country, and by arranging it in such a form as to be useful to those engaged in their pursuit or seeking information concerning them. The secretaries to the Association are Messrs. M. B. Namjosi and D. J. Gokhale.

BURMA.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphed on June 2:—A band of dacoits has attacked the Paleik Railway Station near Kyauks, in Upper Burma, killing the station-master and plundering the station.

A Reuter despatch of June 3 states:—News has just reached here that a large gang of dacoits have attacked Louklichdung, a village about forty miles north of Rangoon, in the direction of Prome. The local police were defeated, one man being killed and another taken prisoner. The dacoits retired after capturing a number of Snider rifles and a quantity of ammunition. The military police are in hot pursuit of the marauders.

On June 7 the Times correspondent telegraphed:—An attack was made last night by dacoits on the Belin railway station, in the Kyauksai district in Upper Burma. As this is the second attack within a week on railway stations in Kyauksai, the military police have been ordered to occupy the railway stations in this district to prevent this attempted system of raiding them. The Kyauksai district has been in an unsatisfactory condition for some time. Rumours have been recently current that disturbances on a large scale would occur in Kyauksai. A change in the police arrangements in that district seems to be urgently required. Mr. Hodgkinson, C.S.I., Judicial Commissioner in Upper Burma, has on two occasions severely censured the action of the district superintendent of police in Kyauksai and the manner in which his subordinates have acted.

IN Lower Burma the police have had unsuccessful encounters with a large gang of dacoits at Taikkyi, a village on the Prome Railway line. One policeman was killed, one was taken prisoner, and some arms were carried off. A strong body of military police has been sent in pursuit of the dacoits.

THE RESULT of the recent Commission which sat under Mr. Ward on the case of Mr. Duke, of the Burma Uncovenanted Service, has resulted in that officer's services being no longer required. It appears he failed to take proper cognisance of a case of offering an illegal gratification.

SO FAR, the operations of Sir Lepel Griffin's oil syndicate at Yenangyaung, says a Rangoon paper, have not been crowned with the success that was expected. A depth of 920 feet has been reached, but no oil has been found.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

A RESOLUTION of the Government of the North-West Provinces and Oude brings the Judges of the two provinces on one list. Hitherto, observes the Lahore paper, owing to the lower rate of pay drawn by judges in Oude, and the difference in their powers, and owing also to the fact that the judgeships in Oude have generally been held by military or uncovenanted members of the Oude Commission, it has been necessary to maintain separate lists for the provinces. Now, however, the work of Sessions Judges, presently performed by the Commissioners in Oude, is to be transferred to the District and Sessions Judges, and instead of four District Judges, exercising only civil powers, there are to be in Oude six District and Sessions Judges. In view of their increased work and responsibility, the judges are graded as follows:—One on 2,500 rs.; two on 1,833 rs.; and three on 1,666 rs. The conferment of Sessions Judge powers and the increase of pay, enabled the Lieutenant-Governor to take the step that he has taken, and the grades of judges on the list of the two provinces are now announced as follows: First grade, two judgeships on 3,000 rs. per mensem (both in the North-Western Provinces). Second grade, eight judgeships on 2,500 rs. (seven in the North-Western Provinces and one in Oude). Third grade, thirteen judgeships on 1,833-5-4 rs. (eleven in the North-Western Provinces and two in Oude). Fourth grade, three judgeships on 1,666-10-2 rs. (all in Oude).

There was a large gathering of the leading native gentlemen of the district, and also several European ladies and gentlemen, in the Dispensary compound on May 12, to witness the laying of the foundation stone of the new Dufferin and the Male Hospital wards. The ceremony in connection with the former was performed by Mrs. Anderson, who has taken great interest in the hospital since her arrival in the station. Mr. Connell, District Magistrate, laid the foundation-stone of the male wards. The proceedings, which were somewhat marred by a duststorm, which began half an hour before, were opened by Raja Jaikishan Das, C.S.I., Honorary Secretary, who explained the object of the gathering and made a statement showing the present financial condition of the hospital and the need for further subscriptions. Mrs. Anderson then laid the foundation-stone, and Dr. Anderson thanked the Committee on behalf of his wife for the honour they had done her in asking her to perform that duty. He hoped that all present would lend a helping hand in furthering the good work.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

From the commencement of the Mahomedan year there has been a great influx of pilgrims into British India viâ Cabul and Peshawur, en route for Mecca. Their numbers are estimated, up to date, at about 1,500; and the cause of the rush by this route is said to be due to the fact that the Russian Central Asian Railway, by which they would otherwise have travelled, has broken down utterly, owing to excessive rain. Proclamations have, it is said, been widely circulated by the Russian authorities warning pilgrims against travelling by that route, as owing to the floods along the railway there would be no chance of their reaching Mecca in time.

A propos of the relations which now exist between the Ameer and his Shia subjects, we may note, says an up-country paper, that rumour in Cabul—which seems to attribute every action of the Ameer, which can be anyhow twisted in that direction, to dislike and distrust of the Government of India—says that the reason that the Shias of the Muradkhana quarter have been made to suffer is that they are suspected of being in communication with the Government of India through the British Agent, whose house is situated in the north-east corner of that quarter!

The Naib Sultan of Cabul, who is still under suspension on a charge of embezzlement and bribery, has been imprisoned, and his case has been transferred by the Ameer to Shazada Habibulla for decision. The Naib Sultan is a native of Candahar, and his family property there has been seized by the Ameer, but it is suspected that he has managed to send off most of his jewellery and valuables to Meshed. The Ameer's son, Habibulla, has issued a circular to all the Naib Sultan's subordinates, asking for information of cases of bribery and corruption on the part of the prisoner. Under these circumstances plenty of evidence will, no doubt, be forthcoming.

The Civil and Military Gazette is responsible for the following:—From Cabul a correspondent writes that the two British subjects, named Latif and Ibrahim, from the Peshawur District, who have been for some time imprisoned without trial, have not yet been released nor brought to trial. Despairing of release by legitimate means, they are said to have sent to Peshawur for the title-deeds of some property in Cabul, by the sale of which they hope to purchase their freedom. We have no knowledge of the details of their case, but our Cabul correspondent insists that the Government of India ought to interfere to protect these men, especially as the offence of which they are supposed to be suspected is that of being spies of the Government.

If we are to rely on the statement contained in an up-country paper, fighting has probably commenced before this between Umra Khan of Jandol and Safder Khan of Nawagi. The latter is assisted by the ex-Khan of Dir, Muhammad Sharif, and the Khan of Lalpura, the last named acting under the orders, it is believed, of the Ameer. The result of the fighting will probably finally decide the sovereignty of Bajaur, as the Khan of Nawagi is the only remaining chief of that region of sufficient importance to oppose Umra Khan. The latter, being well aware of the new combination which was forming against him, has, with his usual promptitude, assumed the offensive, for about two weeks ago, so a trans-frontier correspondent informs our contemporary, he sent an ultimatum to the Khan of Nawagi. In this Umra Khan demanded that his old enemy, the ex-Khan of Dir, should be expelled from Nawagi, otherwise the Khan of Nawagi must be prepared to accept the consequence. To this Safder Khan replied that he would not send away the Khan of Dir, but intended, on the contrary, to retake Dir for him by force of arms. Umra Khan, on receipt of this reply, advanced with 500 men to Munda, and the Khan of Nawagi, with a force of double that strength, is reported to have taken up a position at Jan, on the frontier of Nawagi territory. He has also sent, it is said, another appeal for assistance to the Ameer.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

Tokio, June 4 (Reuter).—The Japanese Cabinet has just been reconstructed. Count Oki Takato, former President of the Imperial Privy Council, has been appointed Minister of Public Instruction. Viscount Tanaka, formerly Japanese Minister in Paris, takes the portfolio of Justice, and Viscount Shinagawa, former Secretary of Legation at Berlin, goes to the Ministry of the Interior. Count Ito, President of the Senate, is appointed President of the Privy Council.

Shanghai, June 4 (Standard).—The outrages on foreigners, which are the work of the secret society of Kolo, the direct descendant of the Taipings, are not yet at an end. The object of the perpetrators—or, rather, of the men who direct their violence—is to embroil China with foreign States, and so pave the way for a rebellion. In some cases the mob have been dispersed and their leaders executed, but the movement is still most serious, and gives rise to the utmost anxiety, both in foreign and official circles.

Shanghai, June 7 (Standard).—The bitter feeling of the natives against foreigners shows no sign of abatement, and fresh outrages continue to be reported. At Wusuch, near Kinkiang, there have been two more victims to the brutality of the mob, an English missionary and a Customs officer having just been murdered at that place. The numerous European residents here and in other Treaty ports urge the necessity of immediate energetic action on the part of foreign Powers, with a view to the protection of aliens from further violence.

Shanghai, June 8 (Standard).—The epidemic of anti-foreign outrage which has already appeared at several of the foreign settlements along the course of the Yang-tse-Kiang has now reached the immediate neighbourhood of Shanghai. At Wooseh—a place in the proximity of this city—was an extensive French mission establishment. It has been attacked by the mob and destroyed. So far the preparations which the Central Government have directed the local officials to make, by way of giving assistance to the menaced communities, have utterly failed of their effect. The mere despatch of one or two gunboats to the scene of the riots—supposing even they have gone in good faith on their mission—has not arrested the movement.

Under these circumstances, the French and American Ministers have called upon the Imperial Cabinet to give efficient protection to European and American residents, accompanying the demand with a sufficiently plain hint that failure to comply may involve hostile action on the part of their respective Governments. Locally, the determination to use force in defence of foreign interests takes a still more definitive form. The French Squadron threatens to bombard Nankin unless prompt reparation be made for the injuries done by the mob in the recent disturbances in the shape of an adequate indemnity. Unfortunately, whatever the origin of the trouble may be—whether it be the work of secret societies who are as much opposed to the Throne as to the intrusion of the stranger—the Provincial Mandarins, far from discouraging violence, rather give it countenance and support. If it were merely a case of menacing demonstrations and damage to property the condition of things would be serious enough. But the attacks are of the most deadly and cruel character. The details of what we must now call the Wusuch massacre are horrible. Women and children escaped murder only by flying naked from their abodes.

It is reported that as soon as the Kaiping Railway has been extended via Shanhaikuan, Moukden, and Kirin to the Russian frontier near Vladivostock, the Board of Public Works will grant a yearly subsidy of 2,000,000 taels for its support. The mountains obstructing the road are to be tunnelled to make the passage, at the estimated cost of 60 dols. per foot. The railway between Kaiping and Tientsin collected freight on coal alone to the amount of 16,000 taels for the first Chinese moon and 21,000 taels for the second. Added to these are freights on other merchandise and passenger traffic, so that the company is certainly doing well and the shareholders will enjoy a good dividend.

The relations between Governor Des Vœux and the majority of the unofficial members of Council at Hong Kong still remain strained when the mail left. Mr. Keswick withdrew from the letter which the Governor considered disrespectful, but Messrs. Ryrie, Ho Kai, and Whitehead maintained that the terms used were not intended to be disrespectful, and that the interpretation put upon them by the Governor was strained. His Excellency has left, via America, for England.

The Governor's threat, in his recent report on the condition and prospects of the colony, to still further increase the tonnage dues, has called forth a letter from the Chamber of Commerce showing that the charges levied on shipping more than repay the expenditure thereon.

A correspondent writes from Chungking to the North China Herald:—There is but little news from this far-away inland port to concern the outside world, but recent events may be of interest to your readers. The foreign Custom House has now been opened about forty days and not a single piece of business has been transacted, nor do I hear of any being discussed at all. Why is this the case? It is the same old story, so often told, the likin; still they "pile it on." Previous to the opening of this port very considerable quantities of goods went away from here under outward transit pass. These goods paid no likin in Chungking, but of course paid likin at all the barriers en route from the interior to this place, of which there are several on each route. Now that the port is opened and the outward transit pass system is to be abolished, the Chungking Taotai has decided to collect a likin in its stead, notwithstanding the fact that these goods have already paid likin at several places, consequently the deadlock that now exists. The Taotai has not issued a proclamation, but in drawing up the regulations for the foreign customs he has made it compulsory to produce a likin receipt before the goods can be shipped. Now, if this extra likin be established, let us enquire what has been gained by the opening of the port. It will simply amount to this: the half transit duty that was collected under the treaty regulations will have been abolished and a likin tax established in its stead, over which there is no treaty regulation control and the amount collected or demanded is entirely under the control of the local officials, who can increase it to any amount they see fit. They have a very convenient name for this tax. They call it Lo-ti likin, which was originally supposed to be collected at the final destination of the goods only, but now it appears that if the goods are shifted from the water to a land route they are required to pay a lo-ti-shui or tax, and again a further charge has to be paid by the shopkeeper who retails them at their final destination. Imports under the new regulations have not yet arrived; but collecting the lo-ti likin on them when landed has already been decided on by the Taotai, I am informed, which has not been done heretofore. Thus it appears that it is a definitely arranged plan on the part of the Chinese to grant foreigners the right to ship goods direct to Chungking, suspending the half transit duty until the goods are out of the foreigner's control, and then collect it from the native merchant under the name of likin or war-tax, over which there is no treaty control. It only remains to be seen if the British Minister will allow the Chinese to carry these matters through according to their programme. This likin has always been a sore point with the Chungking merchants. There have been several very serious anti-likin riots here, and the likin office has come to grief more than once. At the present everything is very quiet. What have the consumer of exports and the manufacturer of imports gained by the new Articles to the Chefoo Convention? I may say emphatically, nothing. The right to run steamers on the Upper Yangtze has been surrendered. The Chinese Government grants foreigners the right to run steamers to Chungking after the Chinese have done so, and reserves solely to itself the right to grant its own subjects that privilege, which, from what we know of the Chinese officials, it is clear enough they will never grant. Under the new arrangements exports are to pay an extra likin duty before being exported, in lieu of the former transit half-duty, but with this difference, the local officials have the right to increase the likin as much as they please, which right they had not formerly. Imports are in just the same position as the exports. An extra likin tax will be imposed in place of the half transit duty abolished. Why has the British Minister made or sanctioned such regulations, or, in fact, sanctioned any agreement without stipulating that the likin should not be increased? Is he labouring under the same hallucination as Lord Wolseley, and does he believe that everything the Chinese ask must be conceded them to avoid the dire calamity of an invasion of England by their powerful navy under the command of its gallant bow-and-arrow Admiral Ting?

A correspondent, writing from Bangkok on May 2, says:—"The Siamese and Annamite forces have come to blows on the left bank of the Mekong, some distance below Lhuang Phrabang. From the meagre information to hand it appears that the Siamese troops, composed almost entirely of Laotians, have been in the habit of raiding the districts in dispute between France and Siam, destroying the crops, burning the villages, and carrying off the inhabitants. It is one of these marauding expeditions, no doubt, that has caused the severe fighting reported to have taken place. The intelligence has alarmed the Siamese Government and caused great annoyance to the King, who had but recently despatched a special envoy with orders to the garrisons along the Mekong to strictly abstain from any act of aggression. M. Pavie, Chief of the French Boundary Commission, is in the neighbourhood of the fighting, and, though he was due in Bangkok at the end of March, no tidings of himself or party have yet been received. As the Siamese officials are known to be hostile to the French party, some little anxiety is felt for their safety."

HYDERABAD.

WHAT is spoken of as the great Hyderabad theft case, and which is now before one of the magistrates in Bombay, is attracting much attention, says the Pioneer correspondent. A theft of over 700,000 rs. worth of jewellery occurred in the city during the Peshkar's administration in 1884, in which one or two of the city nobles were implicated. The complainant and all the accused belong to the same family. The matter was inquired into by a commission specially appointed at the time, but as in the opinion of the then Government the inquiry was incomplete, it was subsequently referred to another commission, consisting of the Nawab Mehdi Hassan, the then Chief Justice, and others. In his memorandum the Nawab Mehdi Hassan pointed out that circumstantial evidence led to the belief that the theft had been committed, but that owing to the police having failed to institute a thorough inquiry into the case, the ends of justice had been frustrated. He recommended that the case should be referred to the police for further investigation with a view to its being re-tried. No action appears to have been taken on this memorandum until the discovery of some of the stolen property in Bombay led to the proceedings in the Magistrate's court there. A resolution is now about to be issued in the Home Department ordering a re-trial of the case by a special commission which will be vested with the powers of a High Court Judge, Original Criminal Side. Colonel Ludlow, C.I.E., Inspector-General of Police, will be instructed to take up the case, and, after completing the necessary inquiries, to commit it to the commission for re-trial. The Resident will be asked to move the Bombay Government to have the case transferred from that city to Hyderabad. The Nawab Azum Jung is one of the accused, and from the magnitude of the theft and high social position of the parties in the case, the matter is creating some sensation in the city.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND UNCOVENANTED OFFICERS OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

IN March last Mr. H. S. King M.P. forwarded to the India Office a memorial of certain retired officers of the old East India Company's Service, whose correspondence with the Secretary of State on the subject of their special grievances in August 1889 we published at the time.

We now publish Mr. King's covering letter, the memorial and the reply sent by direction of the Secretary of State, on which comment will be found in our leader columns.

MR. KING TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

65 Cornhill, London, March 3, 1891.

MY LORD,—I have the honour to forward, with an earnest hope that it may have your Lordship's kind consideration, a memorial of fourteen retired members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service of India, which sets forth in clear and temperate terms their grounds for appealing to the Government of India for a reconsideration of the terms under which they were retired.

Your Lordship is aware that the case of these gentlemen has before been submitted to you, but that was at a time previous to the meeting of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, when the memorialists were not so fully informed of all the facts and arguments which are favourable to their claims, and were unable to point to those expressions of opinion and declarations of the Under Secretary of State, which appear if genuinely applied to the circumstances of their service and retirement to constitute an unanswerable claim for compensation.

I have always felt that the case of these gentlemen of the East India Company's Service, whose rights on the transfer of the Government of India to the Crown were protected by a clause in the Government of India Act, stood apart on a special, and I may venture to say, a strong basis, and that they are really suffering from the application of ex post facto regulations, enforced in the teeth of the protection which Parliament had intended to afford them.

It is perhaps late to hope for a revision of decisions so long since taken, but though to these gentlemen the tardy recognition of the wrong done to them can now bring only a brief satisfaction, I venture humbly to represent that even now, if your Lordship shall be convinced by the Memorial that substantial injustice has been done you will not hesitate to direct that some reparation shall be made for the regrettable error from which they have sustained a grave injustice.—I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's humble obedient servant,

H. S. KING.

The Right Hon. the Lord Cross.

THE MEMORIAL.

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE VISCOUNT CROSS, her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India.

THE MEMORIAL of the undersigned retired European Officers of the Indian Uncovenanted Civil Service, residing in England,

HUMBLY SHEWETH—

That during the sitting, in July last, of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, on the inquiry into the grievances of the Uncovenanted Civil Service of India, the Chairman, Sir John Gorst, was pleased emphatically to declare, on behalf of your lordship, that the Secretary of State repudiated the intention of giving retrospective effect to any rule to the injury of an officer of that service.

2. That your Memorialists are all officers of the East India Company, whose services were transferred to Her Majesty the Queen in 1858, and whose pension rights, as your Lordship is aware, were protected by Section 58 of the Act of Parliament c. 106 of 1858.

3. That your Memorialists entered the service of Government under the Pension Rules of 1831, which provided pensions of one-third salary after twenty years' service, on medical certificate; pensions of one-half salary after thirty years' service, also on medical certificate, and half-salary pensions after thirty five years' service, without medical certificate (the last not being claimable of right as against the right of the Government to insist upon further service); and the Government of India brought to the notice of the Court of Directors in a letter, No. 67, dated Sept. 4, 1854, that there were then Uncovenanted officers in their service drawing from 800 rs. to 2,000 rs. per mensem, who, if invalided after thirty years' service, would get under the rules, "according to established usage," pensions of from 480*l.* to 1,200*l.* per annum.

4. That, in 1855, the Court of Directors fixed a limit of 500*l.* for the pensions of officers who might be appointed "hereafter," leaving untouched the case of officers like your Memorialists, who had previously joined under the rules of 1831.

5. That, as explained by Mr. Waterfield, C.B., Financial Secretary at the India Office, in answer to question No. 2,359, "They (the Court of Directors) did not say that officers already in the service might not have specially large pensions, but they said: In future, no one hereafter entering the service shall have a specially large pension." And, in answer to the next question, he stated: "I think that is the only effect of that Despatch. I do not think it has any other effect than to lay down what was to be the rule in the future. I do not think it affected the men who were in the service already."

6. That in answer to questions Nos. 2,174 and 2,175, Mr. Waterfield stated as follows:—"By established usage he (an Uncovenanted officer) may for ordinary good service receive the half-pay, provided that that is not in excess of the spirit of the Rules of 1831," and "The grant of pensions beyond the limit of 5,000 rs. was supposed to be within the spirit of the rules. There are many such cases."

7. That, as a matter of fact, this is exactly how affairs stood until 1863, and it is confirmed by the letter of the Government of India to the Secretary of State, No. 111, dated Aug. 6, 1862, wherein that Government stated (para. 2):—

"Referring, however, to the extension of the Service and the alteration in the prospects of its members since the rules were passed, the late Court of Directors decided in their despatch, No. 21, dated Feb. 28, 1855, that 500*l.* should be the maximum pension to be granted to Uncovenanted officers 'hereafter appointed to the Service.' Accordingly, as respects all Uncovenanted officers who entered the Service prior to that date, the rules of Jan. 4, 1831, continue to be applied."

Digitized by Google

8. That, with reference to the many cases in which, according to the evidence of Mr. Waterfield, the limit of 5,000 rs. was exceeded, that gentleman further stated in reply to question No. 2174 —"In each case the recommendation of the Government of India has been considered specially. In the case of the officers who have not received pensions beyond that limit, there are no such recommendations."

9. Your Memorialists humbly submit that the only reason why the Rules of 1831, under which they joined the Service, were not given effect to in their case, or that the Government of India or the local governments did not in all their cases make the recommendations referred to by Mr. Waterfield, or recommended in a rare case but an inconsiderable excess, was that in 1863 a new rule was introduced making the reduced limit of 500*l.*, or 5,000 rs., applicable to all Uncovenanted officers, whether appointed before receipt of the Court of Directors' Despatch of 1855, or after and allowing that limit to be exceeded only in cases of extraordinarily meritorious service.

10. That your Memorialists have all thus had, more or less, to suffer from retrospective effect being given to the rule laid down by the Court of Directors in 1855 for only officers thereafter entering the Service.

11. That in 1863, a set of new leave rules was passed in modification and supersession of the leave rules of 1856 authorised by the Court of Directors. It was made compulsory to apply for any kind of leave in future under the new, and not under the old, rules; and it appears there was a notification published by the Government of India in 1865, to the effect that those officers, who took any benefit under the new rules which was not allowed by the old, could not count their service for pension under the old rules. Your Memorialists observe that the meaning of this notification was originally misunderstood, but was, as they now for the first time learn, explained by the Government of India in their letter to the Secretary of State, No. 5, of April 11, 1868 (Home Department, Education), as follows:—

"12. In paragraphs 8 to 11 of the Memorial there is a misapprehension of the leave rules. Educational officers, in common with other Uncovenanted servants, can obtain leave under the new rules only. But if such of them as were in the service on the date of the first promulgation of the new pension rules—viz., June 8, 1863—desire, under the ruling contained in our Notification, in the Financial Department of March 9, 1865 (No. 1,349), to retain the privilege of counting towards pension service under the old rules, rather than under the new, they must abstain from taking so much of the advantages of the Leave Rules as may be in excess of the corresponding advantages under the old rules. The deduction of periods of leave from service qualifying for pension forms a part of the new pension rules and not of the new leave rules, so that, if service for pension be counted under the old pension rules, necessarily the periods of leave which were recognised as service by those rules will be reckoned by the applicants.

"13. The Memorialists are under a further misapprehension that the Secretary of State's Financial Despatch, published under the orders above mentioned, has allowed the option of the old pension rules in their entirety, i.e., with respect both to the reckoning of service and the amount of pension to Uncovenanted servants who were appointed before the promulgation of the new rules in June 1863; for the terms of that Despatch gave the option of simply counting service under the old or the new rules in the manner explained in the preceding paragraph, and this interpretation of the Despatch was confirmed in the Secretary of State's financial letter, No. 193, dated May 24, 1867."

12. That your Memorialists were never, in the whole course of their service, informed of the advantages of the new Leave Rules over the old, but, on the contrary, were always under the impression that the old rules were superior to the new; and when some of them applied for leave under the new rules, the only means of obtaining leave, the Accountant-General never informed them that they were asking for any advantage which would deprive them of their right to count their service for pension under the old rules, intimation that some such advantage had been taken being only conveyed to some of them on their retirement from the Service. Your Memorialists beg leave on this subject to refer to Mr. Waterfield's answers to questions Nos. 2,274 and 2,279 to 2,283, quoted below:—

"2,274. (MR. KING) Can you say whether, when an officer applies for leave, any intimation is given to him as to the effect which his taking leave under certain rules may have upon his future prospects for pension?—No, certainly not, I should think. I am not aware of any."

"2,279. Was not the fact that they had gone under the Leave Rules of 1863 cited against them as conclusive against their claim to have pension under the Rules of 1831?—No, I do not think that is quite a justifiable inference. If they had taken the greater benefits under the Rules of 1863, it would be so. I have no reason to think that any of the officers guarded themselves, or did not avail themselves of the new privileges.

"2,280. The officer could not possibly have known, of his own knowledge, that he had to guard himself by taking these precautions against future action on the part of the India Office, could he?—I have nothing to say on that point, except to state the fact that public notification was given of it. I dare say the officers did not know it.

"2,281. You could give an instance to the Committee, could you not, of some one who has suffered in consequence, or who has been refused on the ground that he had gone under the Leave Rules of 1863, some one who had acted indiscreetly?—Yes, I have no doubt there are many; but, as a rule, the Uncovenanted officers do not apply to the India Office, except by way of appeal; so that we do not hear, in the first case, of the application when made in India. I think it must have happened in a good many cases. I should think so.

"2,282. These alterations in the rules are rather confusing to the ordinary mind, are they not?—Very.

"2,283. Are they not almost traps into which the unwary may fall?—Yes."

13. That, in the case of some of your Memorialists, the Accountant-General's Department not only held that they were prevented by the Notification above referred to from counting their pensionable service under the old rules, but also that they were excluded from the benefit of those rules as regarded the amount of pension—a misapprehension pointed out in the Government of India's letter of April 11, 1868, above quoted.

14. That your Memorialists are, to this day, not aware that any of them ever took any leave under the new rules in excess of that which they might have had under the old; and they entreat your lordship to direct an inquiry to be made into this matter, the result of which, they submit, will prove to what extent they have been made to suffer by the application to them, ex post facto, of a new rule, improperly understood.

15. That your Memorialists are humbly convinced that had they been in a position to claim their pensions in 1862, their pensions would have been granted under the Rules of 1831, and that it cannot be right, nor would the Secretary of State permit, that they should suffer by rules introduced since that date.

16. That, so lately as 1888, the Government of India in a letter, No. 4,520, dated Aug. 17 of that year, informed an Uncovenanted officer, who was in 1862 allowed a half-salary pension of 7,200 rs. per annum, that it was "in accordance with the rules" that he was admitted to pension, and that "it was not intended to treat his case specially."

17. That, in begging that a distinction be made between the claims of officers who joined the Service before May 19, 1855 (the date of the publication in India of the Court of Directors' Despatch of Feb. 28, 1855), and those who were appointed thereafter, your Memorialists are not forgetful of the fact that in Sections 9 and 10 of the Act of 4 and 5 Wm. IV, c. 24, passed on July 25, 1834, a distinction is expressly made between officers in England who entered the service before Aug. 5, 1829, and those who entered thereafter, the superannuation allowances of the former class being superior to those of the latter.

18. That some of your Memorialists, who were present at the meetings of the Select Committee, were impressed with the question suggested by Sir John Gorst (question 85), whether, however large might be the salary of an officer on retirement, a pension of half-salary was claimed under the rules of 1831.

19. That, with reference to that question, your Memorialists humbly submit that they do not desire or apply for any departure from the spirit of the rules of 1831, and that the utmost they can reasonably expect, and which they now beseech your Lordship to grant, is that their pensions may be readjusted in accordance with the spirit of those rules, under which they entered the service.

And your Memorialists will ever pray.

REPLY OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

India Office, Whitehall, S.W., May 6, 1891.

SIR,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated March 20, forwarding a memorial from fourteen retired members of the Uncovenanted Service, appealing for a reconsideration of the terms under which they were placed on the pension list.

In reply, I am desired to say that the case of these gentlemen was carefully considered in communication with the Government of India about two years ago, and the result was intimated in a letter addressed to Mr. O'Donnell on Aug. 9, 1889.

Since that date the only new feature is that the Memorialists have had an opportunity of presenting their case very fully to a Select Committee of the House of Commons, which, after carefully investigating it, did not consider it necessary to make any recommendation on the subject.

I am, accordingly, desired to inform you that Viscount Cross cannot admit that any injustice has been done to the Memorialists, and that he regrets to be unable to comply with their prayer.

In the 13th and following paragraphs of the Memorial, a reference appears to be made to individual instances of persons whose pensions were reduced in amount through their having taken under the new furlough rules leave which was not permissible under the old regulations. On this point I am directed to enclose a copy of the Notification of Jan. 3, 1868, in which the matter was clearly explained; and I am to say that, if the pension of any of the memorialists is believed by him to have been reduced in consequence of his having taken leave under the new rules before that date, the case shall be investigated on the requisite particulars being furnished.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, (Signed) A. GODLEY.

HENRY S. KING, Esq., C.I.E., M.P., 65 Cornhill.

Financial Notification, No. 59, of Jan. 3, 1868 (Page 6 of "Gazette of India"), No. 59, Jan. 3, 1868.

To remove certain misapprehensions of the Rules for leave of absence and pension to Uncovenanted servants, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to publish the following orders:—

2. Financial Notification No. 3,031, dated Oct. 29, 1866, promulgated new pension rules for native judges. The option of the old pension rules, which is secured by that Notification, to native judges, who were in the Service on Oct. 29, 1866, is not affected by their transfer to Small Cause Courts as judges.

3. New rules for leave of absence and pensions for Uncovenanted Servants, generally, were promulgated on June 8, 1863. An Uncovenanted Servant appointed before that date, and whom the Government may consider to be entitled to favourable consideration, is allowed by Financial Notification No. 1,349, dated March 29, 1865, to count service towards pension under the old rules, whenever, in respect of such reckoning, they may be more beneficial than the new, provided he shall not at any time have availed himself of the benefits conferred by the new leave rules. This proviso does not give any Uncovenanted Servant appointed before June 8, 1863, the option of the old leave rules. Whatever leave he requires must be given under the new rules, but if he desires to retain the benefit conceded in Financial Notification dated March 29, 1865, he must abstain from availing himself of so much of the advantages of the leave that he may take under the new rules as may be in excess of what he could have had under the old rules.

4. Periods of absence on any leave, except privilege leave and (conditionally) preparatory leave, do not count towards pension. This prohibition is a part of the new pension rules, rather than of the new leave rules, and accordingly all who are debarred from the option of the old pension rules, are also debarred from counting as service periods of absence which, in the new pension rules, are not regarded as service.

His promotions were: lieutenant, Oct. 26, 1844; captain, Feb. 10, 1855; major, July 20, 1858; lieutenant-colonel, April 26, 1859; joined Bengal Staff Corps, Feb. 18, 1861; colonel, Nov. 17, 1864; major-general, Feb. 6, 1870; lieutenant-general, Oct. 1, 1877; placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List, Sept. 7, 1884; general, Dec. 1, 1888; C.B., Feb. 28, 1861; V.C., March 1, 1861; K.C.S.I., March 7, 1876; K.C.B., July 25, 1879.

Sir Samuel James Browne served throughout the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and was present at the passage of the Chenab, the actions of Ramnuggur, Sadoolapore, Chillianwallah, and Guzerat (medal with two clasps), in command of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry and Corps of Guides, served on the Derajat and Peshawur frontier from 1850 to 1869, including operations against Oomurzaie Wuzeerees in 1851-52; the Bozdar Belooch Expedition in March 1857; the attacks on Narinjee (Eusufzai border) in July and August 1857, and in various minor skirmishes (medal with clasp); was in command of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry during the Indian Mutiny campaign of 1858, including the siege and capture of Lucknow (brevet of major); actions of Koorsee, Rooyah, and Allygunge, and capture of Bareilly; commanded a Field Force of cavalry and infantry at the action of Mohunpore and defeat and dispersion of the rebels; commanded a Field Force of cavalry and infantry in the attack and defeat of the enemy in their position at Seerpoorah, and capture of their guns and camp—dangerously wounded in two places, first by a severe sword-cut on the left knee, and afterwards by another sword-cut which severed the left arm at the shoulder—(several times mentioned in despatches, and thanked by the Commander-in-Chief and by Government, brevet of lieutenant-colonel, C.B., Victoria Cross, and medal with clasp); received the V.C. "for having at Seerpoorah, in an engagement with the rebel forces under Khan Alie Khan, on Aug. 31, 1858, while advancing on the enemy's position at daybreak, pushed on with one orderly sowar upon a 9-pounder gun that was commanding one of the approaches to the enemy's position, and attacked the gunners, thereby preventing them from reloading and firing upon the infantry who were advancing to the attack. In doing this a personal conflict ensued, in which Major Browne, commandant of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, received a severe sword-cut wound on the left knee, and shortly afterwards another sword-cut wound, which severed the left arm at the shoulder, not, however, before he had succeeded in cutting down one of his assailants. The gun was prevented from being reloaded, and was eventually captured by the infantry, and the gunner slain." In the Afghan War of 1878-79 he commanded the 1st Division Peshawur Valley Field Force in the attack and capture of the Fort of Ali Musjid, the forcing of the Khyber Pass in November 1878, and subsequent operations till the end of the campaign (received the thanks of the Government of India, and of both Houses of Parliament, Aug. 4, 1879; K.C.B., medal and clasp).

Indian Tea in Australia.—In commenting on the export returns of Indian tea last year, the Collector of Sea Customs draws attention to a very noteworthy increase in the shipments to Australasia. It would seem that Indian tea has at last taken a firm hold on the Australian market, and although the competition of Ceylon in this quarter is likely to be severe, we may expect a very rapid growth in the exports from Calcutta during the next few years. In the case of America, there is little hope of any similar development. In spite of the efforts which have been made, notably by the Tea Association in London, to push the sale of Indian tea in that country, the exports show a decided falling-off, and it is probable that the Chinese product will hold its own on the North American Continent for many years to come. A reduction of upwards of a quarter of a million pounds in the shipments to Bombay is probably to be accounted for by the rapid increase of exports from Ceylon.

Mr. Digby and the National Congress.—Mr. Digby, C.I.E., ought to prove a worthy successor of Mr. Barnum, says the Pioneer. His report on the sixth Indian National Congress is a masterpiece of the showman's art. We in India know what a failure the Congress was owing to the appearance on the scene of the social question. Some inquisitive patriots would put the burning question whether the Congresswallas were in favour of the Age of Consent Bill. The masses were opposed to all reform of Hindoo customs, and the delegates dared not oppose the voice of India, or on the other hand disprove the criticism that the Congress seeks only political change and the cleanliness of the outside of the platter. So the failure is judiciously ascribed to the "underhand persecution of so many officials," and to a policy of deliberate restriction of members. Only 702 attended we are told, and as a similar difficulty is expected next year, we are warned that a system of "subsidiary delegates" is to be resorted to. We presume that the subsidiaries will not only be subsidised, but carefully coached in their parts. The report is almost rabid on the monstrosities of civilians. Lord Reay was misled by a "wrongheaded" one. "To draw their handsome salaries, to save money, do as little as possible outside their ordinary routine work, and get away to England to spend the money of the people of India are their most cherished objects." The picture of the country's ruin effected by these "unprincipled" blood-suckers is an amusing contrast to the temperate speech with which the report opens, and which is clearly introduced in order to attract the simple civilian and induce him to read on till his wicked motives are dissected and his villainies laid bare to an astounded world.

LONDON: TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1891.

THE "EX POST FACTO" QUESTION AGAIN.

THE Memorial from fourteen gentlemen of the old East India Company's Uncovenanted European Service, and the correspondence which has passed between MR. H. S. KING, M.P., and the Secretary of State with regard to it, will be read with somewhat mixed feelings by all those who remember SIR JOHN GORST's declarations before the Select Committee on the vexed question of ex post facto rules. When evidence was offered by MR. JENKINS on that subject, SIR JOHN GORST said:—"You need not direct your evidence against a contention which the Secretary of State is prepared to say he never set up, namely that he claims the power of depriving gentlemen, by ex post facto rules, of rights which have accrued to them." This important and emphatic statement, which was reiterated in several forms, was made in the teeth of a rule published in the Civil Code by which the Government of India reserved to itself explicitly the very right thus disavowed. It surprised not only those whose interests were represented before the Select Committee. Military officers in the General List, deprived in 1881 of privileges promised them in 1862 and 1864, and the "Unlucky Forty," who have recently, very much we should think to their own astonishment and that of the entire Indian Military Service, been informed by our contemporary the Home News that "officers who volunteer for the Staff Corps elect the rules for Indian Service en bloc, and it is absurd to suppose that Government has no power to alter those rules when public policy requires it"—and impliedly of course to give them ex post facto application—were naturally awakened by SIR JOHN GORST's declaration that the Secretary of State repudiated a principle of which they conceived they had been victims. The effect of SIR JOHN GORST's statement was that it diverted the Select Committee from any further inquiry into the subject, and it was accepted by them in good faith as a declaration of policy which would be acted on, and therefore needed on their part no special expression of opinion. The fourteen gentlemen, and we believe others, ingenuously supposed that they had only to bring to the notice of the Secretary of State cases of grievance from the illegitimate action of such ex post facto rules in order to obtain a prompt redress. Their case is stated very clearly in the Memorial, and need not be recapitulated here. They entered under the Rules of 1831 which, as regards them, were practically confirmed by the East India Company by the Rules of 1855, and solemnly warranted to them by Parliament in the Act for the Government of India, by the Henley clause. A careful perusal of their Memorial and of the reply of the Secretary of State shows that they were deprived of the rights thus secured to them by the operation of rules made after the Government of India was transferred to the Crown. As MR. KING put it in his letter to the Secretary of State:—"I have always felt that the case of these gentlemen of the East India Company's Service, whose rights on the transfer of the Government of India to the Crown were protected by a clause in the Government of India Act, stood apart on a special, and I may venture to say, a strong basis, and that they are really suffering from the application of ex post facto regulations, enforced in the teeth of the protection which Parliament had intended to afford them." No other conclusion could be come to on the moderate statement of their case presented by these gentlemen. The Secretary of State, however, takes refuge behind the old breast-work of bothered officialism—a previous decision, that of Aug. 9, 1889. "Since that," he says, "the only new feature is that the date Memorialists have had an opportunity of presenting their case very fully to a Select Committee of the House of Commons, which, after carefully investigating it, did not consider it necessary to make any recommendation on the subject." The "new feature," not here alluded to, is SIR JOHN GORST's declaration, which the decision practically invalidates. If the Select Committee did not make any recommendation on the case of these gentlemen, it was because it was as to this very part of the entire case submitted to them, that SIR JOHN GORST was most emphatic in applying his declaration. The Select Committee may well have thought it unnecessary to do more than accept protestations so solemnly made. This correspondence would seem to show that they were mistaken.

THE HULK OWNERS AT GIBRALTAR.

LOCAL politics at Gibraltar are not too lively, but there is just now a small typhoon ruffling the calm of the historic bay. Every one is familiar with the hulks moored about the basin in which is carried on a large coal trade, coming up to nearly half a million tons a year. The coal hulk owners are said to contribute indirectly by the payment of port dues on vessels consigned to them as much as one-third of the entire revenue of the colony, and besides that they pay a license fee of from 30*l.* to 40*l.* per annum on each of the hulks. This mounts up to a pretty large sum, and one would expect that the Governor would think twice before he came to cross purposes with so important a trade. The hulk licenses issued by the Government have always borne a clause that they were "revocable at any time at the pleasure of the Governor"; but in 1889 SIR ARTHUR HARDINGE wrote to the local Chamber of Commerce, assuring it that "the Government, having the interest of the trade of Gibraltar at heart would never put such powers in force unless circumstances fully justified such action," and that the licenses should be regarded as continuous. Now, without notice to the trade, the form of the revocation clause has been altered and made more stringent. Licenses are to be revocable by the Governor "without assigning any reason whatever"—and he may refuse to renew "at his absolute will and pleasure." Why these strenuous epithets are now being introduced the hulk-owners are determined to know and MR. KING is to put a question about it. Of course men are not likely to invest sums like 3,000*l.* to 5,000*l.*, which represent a hulk's value, on the mere chance of being able to keep on good terms with the Governor, or more accurately perhaps some underling in the administration. Besides, as the Chamber of Commerce points out in a memorial it has addressed to LORD KNUTSFORD:—

'The absolute powers conferred on the Governor would seriously interfere with the Coal Trade of Gibraltar, inasmuch as no yearly engagements or contracts can be undertaken with any degree of safety, if, at a moment's notice, merchants may be arbitrarily deprived of the means of fulfilling their engagements.

That is obvious enough and ought to have some weight at the Colonial Office. Having regard to the necessity of maintaining an ample supply of coal at that important station the threatened quarrel ought to have the prompt attention of the Secretaries for War and the Colonies.

THE LATE MR. HAROLD R. KING.

THE remains of the late MR. HAROLD R. KING are being brought home from Aden, and are expected to arrive on or about the 14th instant. They will be laid in the family grave at Chigwell. We are asked to intimate to friends, who may be interested to know it, that a funeral service will be held at Chigwell Church, on Wednesday, June 17, at 2.15 P.M. A train leaves Fenchurch Street Station at 1.2 P.M., and carriages will be in attendance at Woodford Station to convey those who desire to attend to the church. Friends intending to be present are requested to forward their names to MR. H. S. KING, at 65 Cornhill, in order that sufficient carriage accommodation may be provided.

THE gold medal presented to CAPTAIN F. E. YOUNGHUSBAND, King's Dragoon Guards, was a fitting testimony to the scientific value of his explorations in Central and North-Eastern Asia; the Companionship of the Indian Empire now bestowed upon this distinguished young officer is a proper reward for the performance of hazardous duties in the service of the State. His journey from Manchuria to Cashmere, over the Mustagh Pass, and his more recent expeditions to Kunjut and Eastern Turkestan were no mere pleasure trips, nor were they even undertaken solely for the advancement of geographical knowledge. The examination of almost unknown passes over the Himalayas was of the greatest political importance. It was most undesirable that the Russians should have monopoly of information regarding this part of what is virtually the British frontier line. The country examined by CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND—roughly speaking from Karakorum to Wakhan—in 1889 and 1890, forms the extreme right of our defensive position. We need fear no actual invasion by this route; but there might be threats and political intrigues. To guard against dangers of this kind, the Indian Government saw that it was necessary to establish an outpost at Gilgit and to get trustworthy intelligence regarding the passes. The latter duty has been admirably performed by CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND; and the distinction he now receives has seldom been better earned.

WE are glad to learn that his Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda has, through his Dewan, sent to MR. S. DIGBY, the Honorary Indian Secretary of the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography, the sum of 100*l.* as a contribution to the Congress Fund. MR. JAMSETJEE N. TATA, of Bombay, has subscribed 10*l.* LORD REAY, the HON. SIR ARTHUR GORDON (ex-Governor of Ceylon), SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE (late Chief Commissioner of Burma), SIR C. E. BERNARD (Secretary of the Revenue Department, India Office), SIR W. W. HUNTER, MR. J. M. MACLEAN, M.P., MR. PATRICK MACFADYEN (MESSRS. ARBUTHNOT AND CO.), and MR. T. H. THORNTON, C.S.I., D.C.L., have joined the Indian Committee. We hear that the Madras Chamber of Commerce have been in communication with several gentlemen in this country with the view of their being selected to represent that body at the Congress. Several offers of papers have been already received from Indian authorities.

WE are informed that the following extract from an Indian paper which we printed in last week's Homeward (p. 681) is inaccurate:—

Major Barrow, Bengal Staff Corps, has been appointed personal assistant to General Brackenbury, the military member of the Viceroy's Council. Major Barrow served in the two recent Egyptian campaigns.

The gallant officer who has received the appointment indicated is MAJOR A. F. BARROW, C.M.G., of the Bombay Staff Corps. He was private secretary to SIR PETER LUMSDEN in the Afghan Boundary Commission, and afterwards accompanied SIR JOSEPH RIDGEWAY to St. Petersburg as one of the Commissioners in the Penjdeh dispute. He afterwards served for three years in the Intelligence Department at the War Office under GENERAL BRACKENBURY.

Her Majesty has been pleased to confer upon MRS. GRIMWOOD the distinction of the Royal Red Cross, in recognition of her devotion to the wounded under most trying circumstances, during the attack upon the Residency at Manipore.

The decoration of the Royal Red Cross, which has been conferred upon Mrs. Grimwood, was, according to "Burke's Peerage," instituted by Royal Warrant, dated April 23, 1883, for the purpose of rewarding services rendered in nursing the sick and wounded of the Army and Navy. It is worn by the Queen, the Princess of Wales, the Empress Frederick, seven other Royal Princesses, Lady Wantage, Miss Nightingale, and about fifty other ladies, mostly nurses and nursing sisters.

WE note with extreme regret the telegraphic news that SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN died at Quetta on June 3. Among the élite of the Indian Services he held a high and a well-won place, and just now the Government can ill afford to lose an official of his experience, knowledge and activity.

WE hear that a somewhat important meeting of representative Indian indigo planters assembled at the Langham Hotel on June 2, to consider the action of the Calcutta brokers and discuss plans for placing indigo directly on the London market, and thus save the profit now absorbed by the middleman.

According to current gossip in Anglo-Indian circles at Home, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the Chief Commissioner of Burma, proposed to deal promptly with the Manipore business by sending a force through Tammoo, along the route which Major Grant had proved to be practicable. This seems to outsiders to have been a sensible suggestion. But, for some reason, best known to themselves, the Simla military clique set aside this proposal. It would be interesting to know what were the motives of this decision. The impression left on people's minds after reading all the reports of the military expeditions concentrated on Manipore is that time was wasted and that the business was rather overdone.

I understand, says the London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, that an examination is to be held by the Civil Service Commissioners in August next for cadetships in Ceylon and the Straits Settlements. These appointments, like the student-interpreterships in the Levant and Japan, are intended as a means of recruiting the British service in these countries with men thoroughly versed in their languages, and the first duty of the successful candidates is to acquire this knowledge, periodical examinations being held to test their progress. The commencing salary is in Ceylon 3,000 rs., and in the Straits 1,200 dols. per annum, the cost of the journey out is defrayed, and half-pay enjoyed from the date of leaving England. Many higher posts are open to cadets and interpreters, not only in the countries to which they are first sent, but in the consular and diplomatic services throughout the world; and though the present Governor of Ceylon did not commence at the foot of the ladder, Sir Cecil Smith, the Governor of the Straits Settlements, whose appointment is worth between 5,000*l.* and 6,000*l.* a year, started as a student-interpreter at Hong Kong.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Thursday, June 4.

Factory Work in India.—MR. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the letter of Mr. Holt S. Hallett on night-work in Indian factories, which appeared in the Times of May 20; whether he was aware that Mrs. Pechey Phipson, who for the last seven years had medically attended native Indian females, declared in her recent lecture delivered in Bombay that "a Hindoo girl of fifteen is about equal to an English girl of eleven, instead of the reverse, and that statements to the contrary by Englishmen who have no opportunity of becoming acquainted with Hindoo family life were totally misleading"; whether his attention had been called to the grave evils which result from night-work in factories in India; whether he was aware that girls in India from fourteen upwards were classed as women, and did the same work as men; whether his attention had been drawn to the statement of Mr. Robert Baker, one of her Majesty's senior inspectors of factories, given before the last Factory and Workshops Act Commission in this country, wherein he declared that "all night-work for anybody is very injurious," and that this was a fair sample of the views held by each of her Majesty's inspectors of factories, and by every medical man who had been consulted on the subject; whether his attention had been drawn to the statement of the Hon. Mr. Bliss that "the Indian idea of night is that it is a cool and pleasant time, when all work which does not require a better light than can be easily and readily afforded can best be done"; whether as a fact the temperature in Indian factories was usually very high, even at night being frequently 95 deg.; whether the new Indian Factory Act afforded any protection to hands employed in factories working less than four months in the year, or where less than fifty hands were employed; whether his attention had been drawn to the evidence given before the Bombay Factory Commission of 1884, proving "that five-sevenths of the small ginning factories are in a dangerous condition," that "the same set of hands work both night and day, with half an hour's rest in the evening. The same set continue working day and night for about eight days. . . . The hands who work these long hours frequently die;" and whether Mr. Holt Hallett's statement that children under the new Act were allowed to work 168 hours a week in the minor factories and workshops was correct.

SIR J. GORST: The answer to paragraphs 1 and 2 is yes; 3, night-work for women is very much restricted by the Indian Factory Act, and is absolutely prohibited for children; 4, girls of fourteen and upwards are classed as women, but the Secretary of State is not aware that they do the same work as men. The answer to paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 is yes; 8, the Act empowers the Local Government to apply its provisions to factories employing twenty hands and upwards, provided that they work more than four months in the year. The answer to paragraph 9 is yes; 10, in factories and workshops employing less than twenty hands there is no restriction on the length of children's labour.

The Treatment of Indian Coolies.—MR. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the telegram from Rangoon, which appeared in the Times of June 1, regarding the treatment of Indian coolies returning from the Chin Hills; whether the Government had any information regarding the alleged harshness and neglect with which it was stated they had been treated; and whether inquiry would be made into the accuracy of these statements.

SIR J. GORST: The Secretary of State has no information which corroborates this statement.

Mrs. Grimwood.—MR. LABOUCHERE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether there was an Indian Order which could be conferred upon ladies for distinguished services in India; and whether, if so, it was intended to confer it on Mrs. Grimwood.

SIR J. GORST: The Secretary of State regrets, in view of the courage and devotion exhibited by Mrs. Grimwood during the attack upon the Manipore Residency and the retreat, that there is no Indian Order which can by its statutes be conferred on ladies for distinguished services.

MR. LABOUCHERE asked for what services the Star of India was conferred on ladies.

SIR J. GORST: I think the Star of India is not conferred on ladies. It is restricted to the male sex.

Purchase Officers.—GENERAL FRASER asked the Secretary of State for War, in view of the great anxiety experienced by the purchase officers of the Army relative to their position as affected by Royal Warrants, when it was probable that the Army Estimates would be brought before the House, and when an opportunity would be given for the alleged grievances of the officers to be fully discussed.

MR. E. STANHOPE: I should wish to point out to my hon. and gallant friend that the great anxiety of the purchase officers for a debate on this subject might have been gratified either on Feb. 19 or 23 or March 5, in Committee on Army Estimates, or some effort might have been made to obtain a day by ballot. It will be for my right hon. friend the leader of the House to fix the day when Army Estimates can again be taken, but personally I shall be very glad to discuss this matter as soon as possible.

Friday, June 5.

Mrs. Grimwood.—MR. LABOUCHERE asked the Under Secretary for India whether he was aware that the only British ladies eligible for the Imperial Order of the Crown of India were the Royal Princesses and the wives and other female relations of former or actual Secretaries of State for India, Viceroys of India, and Governors of Madras and Bombay; and whether he would consider the advisability of rendering all other British ladies who might, like Mrs. Grimwood, have performed distinguished services in India eligible. (Hear, hear.)

SIR J. GORST: The reply to the first paragraph is in the affirmative. With regard to the second paragraph, I have ascertained that the Secretary of State does not propose to suggest any alteration in the status of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. My noble friend, who has not yet received the official reports of the attack on the Manipore Residency, authorises me to say that when they have been received he will gladly consider whether it is open to him to make any representation on Mrs. Grimwood's behalf. (Cheers.)

MR. J. M. MACLRAN: Are not the Government now in a position to give an express assurance that her Majesty will be advised to confer a special mark of favour on this brave lady, who at a most trying time, and at the greatest personal risk, has upheld the honour of the British name in India? (Cheers.)

SIR J. GORST: No official reports have yet been received, and, further, there is the question what order or distinction could be conferred on this lady. There is an order for conspicuous bravery, but I do not know whether that order is restricted to men, or whether the circumstances of the case are such as would bring Mrs. Grimwood within the purview of the conditions of this order. All I can say is that the Secretary of State will, as soon as the official report is received, consider whether there is any mark of public distinction that can be conferred on Mrs. Grimwood. (Cheers.)

Our Relations with Manipore.—MR. MACLEAN asked the Under Secretary for India whether there was any record in the India Office of the acceptance, by Rajah Chandra Kirti Sinh, of Manipore, in 1852, of the "very material alteration in the relations of the Government of India with Manipore," described in the dispatch from the Court of Directors of the East India Company of May 5, 1852, which had just been presented to Parliament; and whether there was any official correspondence to show what action was taken by the Government of India in 1885, on the death of Chandra Kirti Sinh, to secure the recognition by the new Rajah, deposed last year and now living in Calcutta, of the position assumed by the British Government of "pledged protectors of the Rajah."

SIR J. GORST: The answer to the first paragraph of the hon. member's question is in the negative; the answer to the second paragraph is in the affirmative. There is a despatch of June 23, 1886, from the Chief Commissioner of Assam to the Government of India, and a reply from the Government of India of July 23 of the same year.

MR. MACLEAN: Will my right hon. friend produce those papers?

SIR J. GORST: Yes; if the hon. gentleman will move for them they shall be given as an unopposed return.

Monday, June 8.

The Magazine Rifle.—COLONEL EYRE asked the Secretary of State for War whether regiments under orders for India, now armed with the magazine rifle, would, on proceeding to India, exchange the magazine rifle for the Martini.

MR. E. STANHOPE: This question is at present under discussion between the India Office and the War Office.

COMMERCIAL.

New Three per Cent. Indian Loan.—The Secretary of State for India in Council gives notice that he will be prepared to receive at the Chief Cashier's office at the Bank of England, to-morrow, June 10, at or before two o'clock, tenders for a Three per Cent. loan of 2,600,000*l.*, at the price of 92*l.* per cent., on security of stock to be created under the East India Loan Acts, in order to provide funds for the discharge of debentures and for the construction, &c., of railways in India through the agency of companies. This stock will be consolidated with the India Three per Cent. stock now existing. Trustees are empowered to invest in this stock, unless expressly forbidden by the instrument creating the trust. Copies of the prospectus, containing full particulars, and forms of tender may be obtained at the Chief Cashier's office, Bank of England; or of Mr. Willie A. W. Scott, the broker to the Secretary of State for India in Council (Messrs. Sheppards, Pellys, Scott and Co.), 57 Old Broad Street. No tender will be received unless upon the printed form. Instalments may be paid up in full on and after June 18, under discount at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

CALCUTTA, May 19.

The directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on May 14, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 4 per cent.

Below are given the figures of the Bank's statement for the week ending May 12 :—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 28,87,632	Increase
Do. at Branches	7,98.555	Decrease
Other Deposits	2,56,126	Increase
Post Bills	35,784	Decrease

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 4,87,650	Increase
Loans	89,604	Increase
Accounts of Credits	4,39,194	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	8,055	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	4,51,746	Increase
Do. at Branches	27,16,557	Increase

Analysis of the above figures shows a further decrease of over 5¾ lacs in the public demand, made up as follows :—By an increase of over 2½ lacs in the "Other Deposits," together with a decrease of over 4⅜ lacs in "Accounts of Credits" and nearly ⅛th of a lac in Mercantile Bills, minus a decrease o f about ⅜ths of a lac in "Post Bills," coupled with an increase of ⅞ths of a lac in "Loans." The Treasury Balance at Head Office stands augmented by 28⅞ lacs, while there is a decrease of nearly 8 lacs at the Branches. The Bank's investments were increased by 4⅞ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 4½ lacs in the cash at Head Office, and over 27⅛ lacs at the Branches, making the exact total 4,96,07,217 rs., equal to 56·1 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 54·0 per cent. of last week.

TEA.—On May 14, rather over 3,000 chests were sold by public action, the prices given were rather below those paid on the 1st and 8th, owing chiefly to unfavourable telegrams from London of the state of market there.

GUNNIES.—The market has been very quiet and closes weak with a lower tendency. For early delivery there is no business of any importance; the country seems to be satisfied for the present, and the U.K. and other outside markets unable to pay the prices asked. Forward some speculative sales of plain goods are reported.

HESSIANS also are quiet, but prices steady.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—The share market is hardly able to sustain operations in more than one description of stock at a time, as is well exemplified by the transactions of the past two or three weeks. A fortnight ago jute mill shares were all the rage, and scarcely any others were dealt in or inquired for, with the result that gold was depressed. Last week the demand for jute continued, though not to such a large extent, and Press shares came in for a measure of support. The week under review shows that gold shares have once again been in the ascendant, and that other stocks are comparatively neglected, with little or nothing doing in them. The volume of business in jute shares has fallen off considerably, and prices ruled a shade easier, but close firm again. There does not seem any desire to sell except at full rates, and considering the prospects of cheap money for some time to come, and the large profits being earned by the mills, it is not expected that a lower range of prices will prevail. Less business, too, has been reported in Press shares, as well as in tea stocks, which for the present are as it were in suspense, pending the play out of the present gold rush.

BANK OF BENGAL.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 4 per cent.

BOMBAY, May 22.

The principal feature in the week has been a revival of activity in wheat, considerable purchases for export having been made in that staple at advancing rates. Otherwise business, affected partly by holidays on the other side, has been quiet, transactions in cotton having been upon a small scale from day to day, though with exporters more in the market than local consumers; and seeds have been taken to only a moderate extent, though the feeling has been steady throughout. Exchange has been weak and drooping, and a further decline of $\frac{1}{8}d.$ in Bank bills and of 3-22$d.$ in private paper has been established. Government paper, after fluctuating a little, has returned to last week's quotation for Four per Cents. Money is even more plentiful than of late. Shares are without animation. Freights have been weak, and lacking takers unless at lower rates; but latterly there has been more inquiry again at slightly higher quotations. Imports are unchanged, both as to the volume of business passing and prices of staple manufactures.

MONEY.—The withdrawal of 36½ lacs of private deposits, which was the principal feature in the Presidency Bank's return issued at the beginning of last week, and was the main cause of the decrease in the Bank's cash balance of some 32 lacs, was followed in the week covered by the statement published on May 18 by an increase under the same item of within 4 lacs of that amount, and an addition to the cash balance of 29⅜ lacs, indicating the continued superabundance of money with the Bank, which has also been apparent in the open market. The figures of the last weekly return disclosed, moreover, in every item going to indicate the position of the trade demand, a contraction in that direction, both loans and bills discounted having decreased materially, the total diminution in requirements under that head having been no less than 46⅜ lacs, compared with an increase of 20 lacs in the previous week. If anything, the feeling has been still easier meantime; but no change was made at the Board meeting on the 21st, and 4 per cent. remains the minimum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Generally speaking there has been no change in the market for grey goods in any way, and most of the business reported has been made up of retail purchases by upcountry buyers, both dealers and buyers having been willing to do business at current rates, which are the same as quoted last week. Supplies are in the same position as before. In bleached goods, a moderate demand has been felt for jacconets, nainsooks, and mulls at previous rates. Dyed, printed, and Turkey red goods show no change. In local goods only a small business has transpired at gradually drooping prices. The clearances of imported goods from the bazaar during the week are estimated at 3,700 packages; those of local goods, at 1,500 bales.

YARN.—The market for imported twist has been quiet, and only a moderate business has transpired, but prices are quite unchanged.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper at an advance of 4 annas per cwt., the market having closed steady at the rise. In yellow metal only a small business has transpired; but sheathing has advanced 4 annas per cwt., other descriptions being unchanged. Iron has been in moderate request, at an advance of 8 annas to 1 rupee in British round and square nail, but a decline of 4 to 8 annas in sheets and hoops. The market is steady.

COAL.—Inquiry for this mineral has been slack, but rates may be called unchanged, the only transaction which has transpired being the sale of some 2,000 tons Powell's Duffryn, for June shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton. The market was quiet and weak at closing.

Exports.—Cotton has been a quiet market throughout the week, but not without some fluctuations in price. At the beginning of the week Bengals, Broach, and Dharwar declined 1 rs. to 2 rs. per candy, while good Bhownugger advanced 2 rs., and subsequently fine Belatee was quoted 2 rs. higher. The demand from the mills especially has been slack, only about 3,000 bales, consisting mainly of Julgaum and other Oomra descriptions, Dharwar and Comta, having been taken in that direction, while the reported purchases for export have reached about 4,500 bales, made up chiefly of Dharwar, Bengals, and Bhownugger. The market closes quiet, with prices 2 rs. to 3 rs. per candy higher in Belatee, Khandeish, and Westerns; and 1 rs. to 2 rs. lower in Bengals, Broach, and Dharwars, compared with those ruling a week ago.

The week's receipts of this season's crop of cotton have been 65,500 bales, compared with 71,100 bales arrived during the previous week, and 89,200 bales in the corresponding week last year; and the falling off in this season's receipts as against those for 1889-90 for the same period is now 228,200 bales.

WHEAT.—Transactions were on a moderate scale at the beginning of the week, though afterwards the market became firm in tone and active, a large business being reported daily, and prices further advancing 1 to 2 annas per cwt.

SEEDS were taken to only a small extent in a quiet market at the close of last and the beginning of the present week; but subsequently, though no movement took place in prices, the return of business became moderate, and the tone of the market steady.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1860. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

GENERAL NEWS.

BY the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to May 26; Madras, May 27; Bombay, May 29.

The first intimation of the monsoon in Ceylon this year arrived just four days earlier than last year, on the 19th instead of the 23rd of May.

Although the question is not quite settled, it is most probable that a medal will be given for Manipore and Miranzai. Should it be given for Manipore, says the Bombay Gazette, the Calcutta Pioneers will find themselves decorated with the frontier medal.

The important post of Governor-General's Agent at Beloochistan, rendered vacant by the lamented death of Colonel Sir O. St. John, is not yet filled up, and the Government, says the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, seems puzzled to find among the senior political officers anyone fitted to carry on Sir R. G. Sandeman's work there.

A correspondent, writing to the Madras Mail, suggests that a public reception be given to Lieutenant Grant on his arrival there en route to Ootacamund.

A Reuter telegram from Simla says:—Doctors Rake and Buckmaster have succeeded in cultivating the leprosy bacillus in serum. They were assisted in their researches by Surgeon-Major Thomson.

According to the Calcutta correspondent of the Times the Government of India is about to consider thoroughly the question of legislating for the protection of labour in mines, and it is not improbable that legislation may be undertaken this year. There are, however, very few underground mines, except in Bengal and in the Central Provinces, and even there the number of persons employed is not great.

The committee recently appointed to inquire into the subject of European and Eurasian pauperism in Calcutta has begun its work, census papers are being taken, and statistics of charities are being collected. The question, the above quoted correspondent says, is to be considered of opening avenues of employment and extending the powers of the law dealing with professional beggars.

The British Indian Association, a body representing the landholders of Bengal, propose to hold a meeting on June 17 to consider the advisability of petitioning the Secretary of State on the subject of the Age of Consent Act.

The question of linking up the metre-gauge systems of Bengal and Bombay is understood to be in active discussion at home, with every prospect of the only proper settlement being at last arrived at.

Koujup, near Manipore, which is over 5,000 feet above sea-level, has been selected as a site for a sanitarium.

Fighting has been going on in Swat for the possession of Maniyar, and the Malik of Migur, having ousted his rival of the Babuzai clan, is in occupation.

The Khans of Aladana and Thanna in Swat are also fighting, and it is probable that the result will be the capture of Thanna, and the establishment of a strong foothold in Swat by Mura Khan.

A small rising has occurred in Gilghit, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times states, but it causes little anxiety and is not likely to assume any importance. The news received from the British agent, Colonel Durand, dated June 5, stated that he was at Chalt with 500 men. The chiefs of the Hunza and Nagar tribes appeared to be afraid to attack, and had communicated with him by letter. The 3rd Regiment of the Cashmere Imperial Service troops has been ordered from Jamoo to Gilghit, but it is believed that its services will not be needed, and that the affair will take a peaceful turn before it arrives.

A telegram from Captain G. H. Butcher, of the 42nd Goorkha Rifles, with reference to the "Story of Manipore," requests us to "contradict the statement connected with his name." Captain Butcher is only mentioned twice in the narrative, once as having shot five Maniporis during the retreat, and again as having reserved two cartridges, one for himself and the other for Mrs. Grimwood, in the event of their falling into the hands of the enemy. These statements not only appeared in the Englishman, but were telegraphed independently to the Times on the express authority of Mrs. Grimwood. Probably a letter from Captain Butcher may clear up the misunderstanding.

Owing to the departure of the mail a day earlier we are unable to give our usual Latest "Gazette of India" Notifications, and the Latest Bombay Army Orders.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

BENARES, June 10.—The trial is proceeding here of the persons implicated in the disturbances in this city in April last, arising out of the demolition of a temple to provide a site for the waterworks. A number of cases have already been dealt with, and most of the prisoners have been sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment with heavy fines. A special judge has been appointed to try the remainder of the rioters.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, June 14.—Further details from Madras show that the recent outbreak at Vizagapatam was led by three men, one of whom was concerned in the Rumpa rebellion some years ago. Apparently their object was to obtain arms and ammunition and to attack the neighbouring village. They seized and burnt a police-station about fifty miles from Vizagapatam town, killing three constables. When pursued they dispersed. One ringleader has been captured, and no further outbreaks have been reported.

The weather reports from Upper India appear so far to justify the alarming forecast of the Meteorological Department. The Bombay branch of the monsoon current continues to be very weak, and is being driven back by pressure from the north. Unless matters mend soon the rainfall is likely to be very deficient in Rajpootana, the Southern Punjab, and the western districts of the North-West Provinces. A week ago the monsoon seemed to have set in throughout Bengal, but in this province, too, the current appears to have been checked, as the rain has ceased and excessive heat prevails.—Times.

The following telegram from the Governor of Madras was received at the India Office on Saturday:—"South-west monsoon has burst, and good rain has fallen throughout Malabar and South Canara. Rainfall fair in parts of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, North Arcot, Chingleput, Tinnevelly, Coimbatore, Nilgiris, and Salem. Condition of North Arcot and Chingleput unchanged; 8,353 employed on special work in former district, 6,892 in latter district. Number on gratuitous relief in North Arcot, 1,494; in Chingleput, 166. Price of rice slightly risen, dry grain stationary."

THE Pioneer correspondent writes from Simla on May 17:—On all hands there is abundant proof now that the season is advancing. Every week little parties are made up for picnics to the glen, or to Mashobra or other of the many suitable spots near Simla. Mashobra is specially in favour, for there, far from the madding crowd, under the odorous pines, with the ground carpeted thick with the fallen pine needles, existence must be, indeed, what an enthusiastic resident calls heavenly. The fine band of the Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment is, I believe, shortly expected here for the season. There will be a dance at Government House on the 21st, and there are rumours of a projected smoking concert and other entertainments during the race week. On the first of next month a concert is announced with the object of benefiting the various institutions which are connected with Lady Roberts' name. And lastly, the most telling sign of all is that the first wedding of the season is fixed for the 20th inst. The pressing want, however, is still men. Now that the little wars seem to be nearly over it is to be hoped these will come in their scores.

An important incident in connection with the Simla Races is that Scott (senior), the well-known steeplechase jockey, who does not wish to take out a licence as a jockey this season, has been refused permission by the Calcutta Turf Club to ride even his own horse, that body seemingly recognising that he must carry the professional penalties, and to do so must have a licence.

The Devil's Dance at Ooty, described in our last issue, has caused some excitement in Madras. The following additional account of it is from a local paper:—The great feature of a ball given at Ootacamund the other evening by Sir James Dormer, the Madras Commander-in-Chief, was a set of Lancers, danced by eight men attired as devils in black coats, knee breeches, black stockings, shoes, and black gauze wings, with long black tails and horns. When the first discordant crash of fiendish music was heard (the introduction to the Bogie Man Lancers), each devil seized a reluctant angel and dragged her to a place in the set. The angels were most becomingly attired in loose flowing robes of white, with silver girdles, and stars in their hair, flowing wing sleeves, and a big spray of lilies in their hands. The devils and angels danced as follows:—

Devils.		Angels.
H.E. the Governor	and	Miss Dormer.
H.E. the Commander-in-Chief	,,	Lady Wenlock.
Captain Lawley	,,	Miss Garstin.
General Kenney Herbert	,,	Miss Galton.
Captain Cavaye	,,	Miss Lockhart.
Captain Baring	,,	Miss E. Dormer.
Lord Douglas Compton	,,	Miss L. Dormer.
Captain Bethune	,,	Miss M. Dormer.

The devils danced with the most wonderful fiendish grace and agility, dragging their partners, whirling them round and pirouetting round them. They finished up with a wild, rapid waltz, ended by giving yells of triumph and truly unearthly shrieks.

It would have been too much to expect, says the Bombay Gazette, that the strange scene at a recent ball at Ootacamund would pass without protest from people who take their neighbours' pleasures sadly. Somebody writes to the Madras papers that "the Christian people of Ootacamund are intensely pained and indignant at the disgrace committed on Christianity by those persons who acted the part of 'angels' and 'fallen angels' in the Fancy Ball given in this place on the 13th inst., and are resolved to protest publicly against such conduct. A protest is being prepared, and will shortly be presented." If Lord Wenlock has to receive a deputation on the subject he will not be greatly helped in drawing up a reply by the apology that the Mail has invented, that it would be hard for anyone to say what exact connection there is between Christianity, "in the proper sense of the terms, and angels—whether fallen or not." Lord Wenlock, who has been just long enough in the country to be diplomatic, would do better to tell the protesting deputation that there are two sides to every question, and that an impartial Governor was not doing greatly amiss in seeing to it that while the angels were so adequately represented, even the devils had their due. Madras, nevertheless, would do well if, in organising its entertainments in future, it were to act on the principle that the devil is not a desirable acquaintance, even in a ballroom. The Mail condemns the whole thing as a mistake, made more glaring by the want of dignity displayed in it by the chief actors. A Governor whose personal staff is adequate should feel that he is thereby relieved from all personal obligation to supply the society of a hill station with amusement. What is Triboulet for if Francois Premier persists in playing the part of court jester? For all which considerations we hope that diableries will not again be heard of in the social administration of the Madras Presidency.

A Darjeeling note (May 21) in the Englishman says:—The Lieutenant-Governor, with Messrs. Paul and Buckland and an aide-de-camp, is touring in Sikkim. Major-General Lord Frankfort has returned from his inspection at Gnatong. I hear he had fairly good weather, and enjoyed the trip. The usual Birthday Ball is to take place at the Shrubbery on the 29th. It is to be hoped that the night will be fine. Usually it is the reverse. Whether it is that there are more people here now than usual, or that they have become more religious, I know not, but the church is crowded now as it never was before, some persons actually being unable to obtain seats.

After all, is the Maharaja (of Mysore) going to England? I am afraid, says a writer in the Madras Times, there is no truth in the statement, which is freely going the round of the newspapers now. A high officer who is intimately connected with the palace told me the other day that the first intimation of his visit to England reached the Maharaja from that country. However, the talk about his going has done one good. It has set him a-thinking, and I am given to understand that a conference of pandits will be held to discuss whether the Maharaja can go without losing caste. I also learn that the subject will be proposed to the Mutradipaties for their opinions.

The Times of India correspondent writes from Mahableshwur (May 22):—A very noticeable feature at the Fancy Dress Ball which came off last night at "Bella Vista," Government House, was that a larger number than usual appeared in ordinary evening dress, which rather spoiled an otherwise brilliant and very pleasant function. It is usual at a fancy dress ball for the guests to don fancy costume. Of course a few always do appear in evening dress; but it is hardly the correct thing on an occasion like this for young gentlemen to wear ordinary evening dress. About half the number of gentlemen present wore ordinary dress, which was rather a pity. Her Excellency Lady Harris as "Esmeralda" looked particularly well in a dress of white and gold, with a red cap and sash, and heavy coin trimmings. The only other "Esmeralda" in the room was Miss Howard, who looked charming in her very becoming dress. Mrs. Nugent made a great impression as "Silver Queen" in a sparkling white silk dress, which suited her very well. The "Peasants" and "Maids" of sorts were all smart-looking and prim, as also were the "Gypsies." Miss Croft, as Lady Teazle, was very prettily dressed. Indeed, it was remarked that some of the dresses worn last night were the most expensive and the prettiest dresses which have been seen at a fancy ball. The "Cambridge M.A." looked very dignified, while "The Bride," "Water Lily," "Violets," "Sunflower," "Liberty Silks," "Blush Rose," and "Magpie" looked sweetly pretty. "My Great Grandmother" was very good indeed, while Mrs. Little's fancy dress looked remarkably well.

As to the gentlemen, there can be no doubt that the Government House Staff formed as handsome a group as has been seen at any similar function. His Excellency was dressed in the handsome costume of the Tickham Hunt, his genial Military Secretary having donned the equally bright-looking dress of the "Belvoir Hunt," Captain Cox, A.D.C., and Captain Gott also appearing in hunt dress. Captain Fowle, A.D.C., looked remarkably well in his dark costume "Black Brunswicker." Dr. Nevins, of the Gaekwar's Staff, made an uncommonly good "Mahratta," while Major Potts as the "Ameer of Sind" and Mr. W. Hughes as "Arabi Pacha" were very well disguised. Sir George Greaves appeared in hunt dress, and looked very well too. Mr. Burder, Dr. Collis Barry, Mr. Davidson, and Mr. Snow looked very well in their fancy costumes. The "Moghulai" costume of Major Lister, R.E., and the "Flunkey" of Major Spratt, R.E., were also good. There is not much to say of the others.

Dancing commenced shortly after 9.30 P.M. to the strains of the Governor's Band, who were stationed in the verandah at one end of the brilliantly lighted dancing-hall, the floor of which had been polished to a nicety. His Excellency the Governor danced the first set of Lancers with Mrs. Moore, and the second set with the Hon. Mrs. Ramsden, whom he took in to supper. His Excellency danced the fifth waltz with Mrs. Nugent—the "Silver Queen." His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief danced the first set of Lancers with Lady Harris, and he took her ladyship in to supper.

On May 18 almost everybody in Mahableshwur found their way to "The Glade," a beautifully shady spot on the way to Carnac Point, to witness one of the most interesting cricket-matches that has ever been played here. Some of the ladies who took part in the match were quite experts with the bat, particularly Miss Howard, whose brilliant batting formed quite the feature of the game. She is quite a recruit in the game, as a matter of fact, but one would hardly have thought so from the freedom with which she knocked the balls about all over the place, making several boundary hits, some of which scored four, while others scored two. Several bowlers tried to get her out, but she treated them all alike. There was no attempt at a mere defence of the wickets, but every ball was hit at with the object of making as many runs as possible. In her first innings Miss Howard, however, was not given the opportunity of doing much, for when she stepped forward to strike out at a slow ball served to her by Colonel Rhodes, she was cleverly stumped by his Excellency Lord Harris, who made a good wicket-keeper, in spite of having to use only his left hand. She rushed back to avert this disaster, but unfortunately let the bat drop out of her hand before she had got back within the crease. She made up for this, however, when she went in to bat for the second time, by treating the field to a great deal of leather-hunting, and running up her score to 28 before being dismissed. She ran very well indeed, and missed no opportunity of adding to the score. Her performance was certainly a very creditable one, and she most thoroughly deserved the great applause which greeted her on vacating her place at the wickets. Major Von Donop also batted remarkably well, and between himself and Miss Howard they made a stand which quite demoralised the field. Major Leach displayed grand form also, and indulged in some free hitting in the second innings, though he could do nothing in the first innings. Her Excellency Lady Harris captained one of the teams, while Mrs. Pinhey from Bombay captained the other. Each side was made up of six ladies and five gentlemen, the conditions being that the gentlemen should bat left-handed with a broomstick (rather a thick one, by the way), and should bowl and field with the left hand also. In fielding, Mrs. Hensley, a new arrival from Secunderabad, where she had captained a team with success, greatly distinguished herself by making some very clever catches, which earned for her the applause of the spectators.

THE GRAVE BESIDE THE ROAD.

A STORY OF OCHTERLONY'S, MARCH 1815.

I know nothing which should keep a gentleman from sleep,
The sleep which he enjoys, I may remark,
Because he has been shown on a piece of mouldering stone
The name of Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

I sure can live without her who nothing knew about her,
Save this record on her tombstone, save the mark!
That 'tis years and years ago since they laid this lady low
In the grass beside the road, this Mrs. Clark.

The words go on to say, in a strange eccentric way,
That the tombstone was erected as a mark
Of a common sentiment in the Twentieth Regiment
For the lady, Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

She was but a soldier's wife, and she followed to the strife
The husband she had wed, and in the dark
The hand that she had wed was the hand that stretched her dead,
He was such a cautious sentry, Private Clark.

For the battle-thunder fills all day long the echoing hills,
The woods were battle-lighted till the dark
Threw its solemn sable shield o'er the blood-besprinkled field,
And the vagrant Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

"Ah! my God, if he be dead let me share his lowly bed,
Let me stretch me where he lieth stiff and stark.
On that dear breast to lie, ah! 'twere happiness to die," Wept this foolish Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

Then she climbed a darkening height towards a point of twinkling light
That glimmered o'er the valley through the dark.
By that twinkling light he stood in the picket-guarded wood,
Private Murphy alias Joe Dalrymple Clark.

Now what is this he hears as he lends his listening ears,
Bustling footsteps creeping towards him in the dark?
"Who goes there?" and no reply save a wild convulsive cry—
Heaven help you, Private Joe Dalrymple Clark!

Did no pitying angel stand by that all too ready hand
To whisper that her bosom was the mark?
No; the fatal bullet sped and the faithful bosom bled,
She hath fallen, Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

She lived long enough to say, "Oh for twenty miles to-day
I have followed on your steps from dawn till dark.
At last, dear love, we meet, and even death is sweet."
For God's sake seize his musket! hold him, soldiers! Private Murphy alias Joe Dalrymple Clark.

She had a little child and they say it crowed and smiled
On the bosom that was lying stiff and stark.
They took it from her breast and they laid her down to rest
In the grass beside the road, this Mrs. Clark.

I know nothing which should keep a gentleman from sleep,
The sleep which he enjoys, I may remark,
But my spectacles are damp, there's a fog about the camp,
Heaven help you, Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

With the light about His feet He hath met her who will meet
Every poor forlorn wanderer of the dark;
To the Pilgrim of the Night He hath op'd the gates of light,
She hath entered, Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

Heaven's softest dews be shed on her lone and lowly bed!
Heaven's justice keep her memory from the dark,
Heaven's stars their watches keep o'er the long eternal sleep
Of the faithful Mrs. Anastasia Clark.

General S. M. Lowder, C.B.—The death is announced at Forest Hill, London, S.E., of General Samuel Netterville Lowder, C.B. General Lowder was born in 1812, and joined the Royal Marines in 1833. He became captain in 1848, and in 1854 was present at the action of Esknaes, in the Gulf of Finland, in the war with Russia. He also took a part in the operations before Bomarsund, and was in command of the detachment of Royal Marines at the surrender of Fort Prasto. In 1855 Captain Lowder served with the Baltic Expedition. For his services he received the medal and the brevet rank of major. General Lowder commanded the battalion of Royal Marines employed on special service in Mexico in 1861 and 1862, during the troublesome times preceding the election of Maximilian as Emperor. He was an aide-de-camp to her Majesty from 1863 to 1868, and deputy adjutant-general to the Royal Marines from 1867 to 1872. His wife died last year.

One more survivor of the Balaclava charge, Lieutenant-Colonel Edmond D'Arcy Hunt, has died recently. Born on Feb. 5, 1827, he entered the Army in October 1847, and served with the 9th Lancers in the last Punjab campaign, being present at the battles of Chillianwallah and Gujerat, for which he received medal and clasps. He also served with distinction in the Inniskilling Dragoons during the Crimean War, taking part in the battles of Balaclava, Inkerman, Tchernaya, and the siege and fall of Sebastopol. For this he received medal and clasps, the Sardinian and Turkish medals, and the Fifth Class of the Medjidieh. He became major of the Inniskilling Dragoons in 1858, and lieutenant-colonel in February 1861.

News has been received of the death at Malta, while playing polo, of Major F. R. S. Hemphill, of the 1st Berkshire Regiment, his death having been caused by a severe fall. Major Hemphill, who had seen just over sixteen years' service, and had only recently been promoted to the rank of major, served in the Egyptian and Soudan expeditions.

The colonelcy of the 9th (the Queen's Royal) Lancers has become vacant by the death, on June 10, of General Sir Archibald Little, G.C.B. This officer, who was in his eighty-first year, joined the Army in 1831, and became full general and was placed on the Retired List in 1880. He served at Sobraon in the Sutlej campaign of 1846, and in the Mutiny was wounded at the relief of Lucknow, and commanded at Dilkoosha, the battle of Cawnpore, and the actions of Seraighat and Khudargunge. General Little died at Upton House, Tetbury. He had been colonel of the 9th Lancers since 1875.

Captain A. Griffin.—The Ootacamund correspondent of the Madras Times writes on May 25 :—The injuries sustained by Captain A. Griffin on Monday last were, as we feared, most serious. After lingering in great pain for five days, he died yesterday at 5 P.M. The terrible fall from his dog-cart down the bank dislocated his neck, and although every medical assistance was tried, it was only a matter of time, as his lower limbs were paralysed from the time of the fall. Colonel and Mrs. A. C. Smith put their house at Captain Griffin's disposal, and their kindness was most deeply felt by him. Mr. A. C. Smith cheered him up to the last, and almost the last words he uttered were a murmur of thanks to the kind people who had done their best for him in his last trouble. Yesterday afternoon the funeral service was read over Captain Griffin at St. Thomas's Cemetery at 4.15 P.M. Nearly all the residents of Ootacamund attended the funeral. We noticed the Hon. Mr. Garston, Colonel A. Hutchins, Colonel Hughes-Hallett, Colonel Hope, Colonel Liardet, General Clementson, Captain Begbie, Dr. and Mrs. Ross, the Hon. Mr. G. Hammett, and a great many others. The coffin was carried from the hearse to the church by Colonel A. C. Smith, Mr. Minchin, Mr. Large, Mr. Wapshare, Mr. Sinclair, and Mr. Griffin. The Bishop of Madras, the Rev. J. Morley, and Rev. Pritchett Shaw all assisted in the service. The grave-yard was thronged with people, and the coffin was covered with beautiful white flowers, the gifts of loving friends.

The Rangoon Gazette says :—We regret to hear of the death, from heat apoplexy following an attack of Arracan fever, of Mr. Walter Huntley, the local agent of the Bank of Bengal. The greater portion of Mr. Huntley's service has been spent in Burma, he having been accountant in the Rangoon office some years ago, and having afterwards been agent first in Akyab and then in Moulmein. His promotion to the management of the Rangoon agency is comparatively recent. In all three places Mr. Huntley has been very popular, and his sudden death in the prime of life will be greatly regretted by a large circle of friends. He leaves a widow and two young children to mourn his loss.

A report has reached Simla of the death of Mr. Lennard, a well-known sportsman, who was travelling in the neighbourhood of Gilghit, and though it lacks confirmation, says the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, it is generally believed to be true.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams, from the correspondent of the Times at Calcutta, have been received since our last issue :—

JUNE 9.—The Senaputty's written defence alleges that, seeing the troops gathered round the Residency, he thought the durbar was a trap, and that he fought in self-defence, and did not begin till the British troops opened fire. He adds that the murders were committed while he was asleep, and the Tongal General is alone responsible for them. The statement concludes by referring to the good service done by the prisoner and the Manipori troops in the Naga war of 1879.

JUNE 10.—The trial of the Regent at Manipore began yesterday before the same Court which had tried the Senaputty. The evidence was very similar to that in the former trial, and the same two Bengalee pleaders defended the accused. The execution of the Tongal General has been postponed, as he may be required to give evidence.

JUNE 11.—The trial of the Regent of Manipore was continued to-day. Captain Butcher aud Lieutenant Chatterton were examined. Their evidence added little to what is already known. Lieutenant Chatterton stated that the letter replying to Mr. Quinton's was signed by the Regent, and expressed readiness on his part to cease firing if the troops surrendered their arms and accoutrements. The charges against the prisoner are—first, waging war against the Queen ; second, abetting murder. The prisoner pleaded "Not guilty."

JUNE 14.—Yesterday afternoon the Court appointed for the trial of the Senaputty gave judgment. The finding of the Court on the first count—namely, waging war against the Queen—was Guilty ; on the second count, the abetment of murder, Guilty ; and on the third count, murder, Not guilty, as the accused was not actually present at the executions. The Court passed sentence of death on the prisoner, subject to confirmation by the Government of India.

In the Regent's trial the case for the prosecution closed on Thursday, and the Court then adjourned till Monday to give the prisoner time to prepare his defence. The greater part of the evidence was a repetition of what is already known, but some few new pieces of information came out. For instance, Captain Butcher stated that during the retreat from the Residency he saw some mounted messengers leave the palace and communicate with the villages along the route, whereupon the villagers fired on the retreating troops.

The Government has published an interesting account, by Jemadar Birdal Nagarkote, of the 43rd Goorkhas, who commanded a detachment at Langthobal, of the manner in which he brought a little party of thirty-three rifles safely to Tammoo. Although he was threatened by a large force of Maniporis who were fresh from their triumph at the Residency, the Jemadar showed no panic, but retreated in good order, taking a number of transport coolies with the Government stores which were under his charge. The enemy attacked the Goorkhas several times on the march, but they made good their retreat without loss, and on reaching Tammoo they returned with Major Grant and took part in his gallant exploits at Thobal. General Collett, in forwarding his report, remarks that the Jemadar acted in a highly creditable manner, and the Government has recognised his skill and courage by admitting him to the Second Class of the Order of British India, with the title of Bahadore. A similar honour has been bestowed on Subhadar Mahtal Din, of the 12th Burma Regiment, while a step of rank and a donation of six months' pay have been granted to the non-commissioned officers and men of Major Grant's party.

LATER.—The judgment in the Senaputty's case discusses the evidence at some length, and finds that it is clearly proved that the accused intended to resist ; that he directed the fighting ; that the Maniporis fired first ; that the accused could have saved the officers, but made no effort to do so, and that he acquiesced in the murders. As the proceedings must be sent for consideration to Simla, which is fourteen days' post from Manipore, it will be some time before the prisoner's fate is finally settled. The delay in confirming the Tongal General's sentence is due to the fact that the papers on his case had not reached Simla up to yesterday.

LITTLE OF INTEREST which has not been anticipated by telegraph is found respecting Manipore in the papers received by this mail. We select a few items.

HOW THE SENAPUTTY WAS CAPTURED.

A telegram to the Pioneer (May 24) says :—The Jobraj is now under a guard of the 43rd Goorkha Rifles. His capture was effected by one of Major Maxwell's constables, who was visiting a suspected house. It was intended to surround the house by night if the Jobraj was there, it being thought that an attempt by day would be unsuccessful and would arouse suspicion. The Jobraj, however, saw the constable approaching and made a bolt for it. The constable overtook him, and the two men had a tussle in which the Jobraj got the best of it and nearly strangled the other. At this juncture another of Major Maxwell's men came up and threw a lump of earth at the Jobraj, cutting his mouth badly, and the two having overpowered him, impressed the services of a Manipori, who carried him on his back to the fort. The Jobraj has had a rough time of it, and walks with difficulty. He is a sturdy man, and in appearance not unlike a Goorkha.

MR. QUINTON AND MR. GRIMWOOD.

The Times brought by the mail, says the Pioneer, contains a long letter, addressed from Cachar, from Mrs. Grimwood to her sister-in-law. The letter contains a graphic account of the fighting at Manipore and the subsequent retreat—when it was written Mrs. Grimwood was still ignorant of her husband's fate—but it is perhaps a pity that it should have been published without revision. As it stands, it contains one important misstatement, the result it must be of a misapprehension, which has entirely misled the whole English press. "Frank," writes Mrs. Grimwood, "must have told you about the chief coming with 450 men of the 42nd Goorkhas. They kept us in the dark as to their real reasons for coming until they arrived on March 22." Had this been so, the burden of responsibility resting on Mr. Quinton would undoubtedly have been even heavier than it is, and we not unnaturally find the St. James's Gazette declaring that "Mr. Grimwood, the Resident, seems entirely exonerated by the fact that he was not consulted." Now it is possible that Mr. Grimwood's suggestions may have been disregarded, but that he was not made acquainted with Mr. Quinton's designs until the latter's arrival at Manipore is, as we have already stated, quite a mistake. Lieutenant Gurdon arrived at Manipore on March 15, nine days before the disaster, and in pursuance of instructions received from the Chief Commissioner at once informed Mr. Grimwood of the intentions of Government. It is quite possible—indeed in the circumstances exceedingly probable—that Mr. Grimwood did not let his wife know everything until March 22, and this may explain the mistake ; but it is none the less unfortunate. It is to be feared that none of the chief actors concerned in the disastrous affair can be relieved of responsibility : the exact share of blame to be apportioned to each it may never be possible to determine ; but let us at least endeavour to avoid unjustly exculpating one at the expense of the others.

LORD RIPON'S ATTITUDE.

The Englishman has the following remarks on Lord Ripon's attitude regarding the Manipore disaster :—Lord Ripon's daily display of energetic interest in Manipore affairs has not failed to attract attention in India. The people of England have, and have had ever since the disaster at Manipore became known to them, the extraordinary spectacle of a past ruler of India, who must be thoroughly acquainted with the difficulties which beset Indian administration, especially in connection with the Native States, endeavouring at every opportunity to discredit and embarrass the action of the present Government. Before the Indian Government can possibly put the home authorities in possession of the facts, and while yet public opinion is influenced entirely by the incomplete reports in the newspapers and by the speculative comments based upon them in editorial columns, we hear constantly of questions put by Lord Ripon which can have only one object, that is, manifestly to inform the public that in his opinion the present Government of India is incapable of performing the functions of its office. No one should know better than Lord Ripon the mischievous and hampering effect of interference by the Parliament of England with matters of Indian administration, and it is to men of his experience that any Government of India should look for reasonable support and fair endorsement in critical moments, or at all events for silence until circumstances make comment fair. But Lord Ripon is not bound by the ethics of courtesy. Apparently he is not even bound by any consideration of the accuracy of the statements which he makes to the Lords under the guise of questions. Lord Ripon, so the telegram runs, called attention to a Government of India proclamation putting heavy sums on the heads of those concerned in the outbreak at Manipore. But the rewards offered were for the captives alive, and not dead. This makes a difference ; but even had the Marquess been right in his facts, the proposal was not one of such an outrageous character as to form any excuse for his eager and mischievous intermeddling.

Capital remarks :—It seems to us that the whole of this miserable imbroglio is due to the absence of the Government at Simla. The mind of a man is insensibly affected by the atmosphere in which he dwells, and if the Government of India choose to withdraw themselves from the reach of all honest public opinion, they can hardly feel surprised if they fail to gauge the popular sentiment. Had Lord Lansdowne been in a position to consult any unofficial gentlemen of any education and standing, and with any knowledge of the true English feeling in such matters, he would never have gone so grievously astray. But, surrounded by officers whose advancement and success depended on his goodwill, he could hardly expect to get impartial and indifferent advice. The consequence is that British honour has been trailed through the mire, and the Home Government may be driven to ask him to resign.

THE FUTURE OF MANIPORE.

A DELUSIVE IDYL.

THE Calcutta Englishman says :—Sir James Johnstone's schemes for the future of Manipore do honour to his heart. They are the natural, the spontaneous expression of a very becoming sense of gratitude. We all know how attractive the Indian life appears in the reminiscences of those who can look back upon it from the safe vantage-ground of pension and retirement. It is easy to imagine that the retrospect, in the case of an ex-Resident at Manipore, must be exceptionally agreeable. It involves no sordid memories of dull days spent in the grind of cutchery. It is almost touching to see how the veteran Resident's thoughts turn fondly to "stately little processions," to "royal festivals," to boat races and dances, to "the thousand and one pretty ceremonies inseparable from a Native court, and which give a zest to native life." It reminds one of Ali Baba. We all remember how with the lightest, most whimsical touch he displays the weaknesses and vices of his raja, but goes on to say, with his knack of apt quotation : "Do not turn this beautiful temple of ancient days into a mere mill for decrees and budgets, but sweep it and purify it, and render it a fitting shrine for the homage and tribute of antique loyalty, that proud submission, that subordination of the heart which kept alive, even in servitude itself, the spirit of an exalted freedom." That is what we would all like to do, and we can easily sympathise with Sir James Johnstone when he writes to the Times to say that you have only to "carefully select and officer, and give him the fullest powers," to "let the State be covered with roads," and "hasten to carry the much-needed railway through the State into Burma," and the thing is done. The wish is characteristic, not only of the man, but of a whole race of men, of the Indian official who learns to love the scene of his labours with a zeal which blinds him to the stern needs of Indian administration, and to the fact that India is a poor country.

No one would grudge the ex-Resident his roads and railways. Every Indian official who cares for his district cries for railways and roads. An advocate for railways in Manipore has the advantage of, indirectly, crying out for railways for many other regions, seeing that, after all, Goalundo is about the nearest existing railway station to Manipore. How is the average reader of the Times to realise that Goalundo is on the banks of the Padma, and that the Padma and many other streams interpose difficulties almost as serious as those afforded by the strip of sea between Dover and Calais? No existing Indian railway can touch Manipore. An offshoot of the Chittagong-Assam line might possibly run through Manipore to Burma. But that line, much desired of Assam planters, has only reached the stage of survey and estimates. A branch line over the hills which separate Cachar from Manipore has not yet reached even that stage of embryonic growth. It may be a perfectly feasible project. Its execution would give sincere pleasure to everyone interested in Eastern India. But even in Europe such a scheme could hardly be realised offhand. Meanwhile the problem of settling Manipore is one of practical and immediate urgency. The Government of India has to select a settlement which shall be best for the Manipuris themselves and for their neighbours. It has, so far as we can see, a free field of choice. The ex-maharaja appears to have been ejected from his kingdom, if not by the mass of his subjects, at all events by that portion of them who chose to take an interest in the task of government. If the Supreme Government resented his extrusion, it was, so far as we know, on the express grounds that it was not for Tikendrajit, or any other subject, to play the part of a king-maker. The usurper, whom charity requires us to regard as the tool of Tikendrajit, has practically placed himself beyond the range of the most complacent charity. The field seems fairly open. The settlement of Manipore may be made in two ways. We may have, as Sir James Johnstone suggests, a revived raja, with a strong Resident to look after him, and roads and railways to prevent him from doing much mischief. The objection to this plan is that roads and railways cannot be made in a day, especially in remote valleys which present considerable natural obstacles and are without a large supply of human labour to meet such obstacles.

The other alternative is to reduce the Manipuris of Manipore to the self-elected state of the Manipuris outside Manipore, who are to the former as the Irishmen out of Ireland are to those who still dwell in the distressful country, namely, many more in numbers. It is well known that a majority of the Manipuri race, refugees, apparently, from the conditions of the indigenous government, live in Sylhet and Cachar. These acquiese, happily enough, in the common incidents of British rule, and it has to be proved that their brethren in Manipore itself would be better off under the rule of a maharaja, aided by a Resident supported by roads and railways, especially as the railways and roads are not likely to be made in the near future. The latter aids to locomotion and good government must needs be paid for. Manipore clearly cannot pay for them. In India the cry for economy is at least as loud as the cry for indigenous institutions. The planters of Cachar demand roads as vehemently as Sir James himself, and apparently cry in vain. If we are to have a maharaja in Manipore again, it is clear that he must begin his rule without the roads and the railways which the ex-Resident, with no apparent sign of irony, desires as an indispensable condition of renewed semi-independence. The strong Resident, the only other condition, is easily supplied. But it seems clear that he could more effectually secure justice for the Manipuri people, whom we are loath to hold responsible for the recent massacres, if he be not the maire du palais of a raja. The Penal Code is not so attractive to a romantic mind as political influence. But there seems no very obvious reason, at present, why the people of Manipore should be subjected, rather than their neighbours, to the indirect methods of political influence. We all know that Tikendrajit, long before his last performance, was guilty of crimes which under a system of Penal Code would not have been visited with the punishment they actually obtained, of fictitious banishment to an island in a lake. It would have been better for Manipore, perhaps for Tikendrajit himself, had he been taught that crime brings real and deterrent punishment.

We have to think not only of the Manipuris, but of the races who surround them. On three sides is British territory, on the south are the wild and unexplored Lushai hills now gradually coming under the influence of Mr. McCabe. The physical and political conditions are very much the same as those of the Cachar Valley, once the seat of an ancient and famous raja, whose rule is not only not regretted, but is forgotten. Are there any particular reasons why we should relegate the Manipuris of Manipore to conditions from which the Manipuris of Sylhet and Cachir have escaped? The boat races and pageants on which Sir James Johnstone's memory dwells lovingly furnished no doubt a picturesque and quaint representation of the mixed Hindu and Naga customs of the race. But such things are luxuries and have to be paid for. If such a thing as a wise, masterful, enlightened Native ruler were possible in those parts, we might give him not only Manipore but the Lushai hills alongside, inhabited by a kindred race. The plan would save India expense and trouble. Parliament would be pleased by so magnanimous a concession to Native opinion. The vernacular newspapers would have to seek for some fresh grievance in place of the woes of the house of Arjan. The concession would bear a false air of being politic, generous, and popular. But anyone who knows Eastern India will have no difficulty in deciding that it is not for the good of that part of the Manipuri race which lives in the Imphal Valley to be entrusted with Armstrong guns, Residents, flagstaffs, and other vanities of that sort. Even if the roads and railways were forthcoming, it seems of doubtful utility to prop up expensive pageants for which the Manipuri ryots, and not we, have to pay. There are not only the Manipuris who have to be considered. There are the subject tribes, Nagas and Kukis, hewers of wood and drawers of water; convenient scapegoats in time of trouble, and probably not enthusiastic admirers of Manipore rule.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

"TAXPAYER" writes the following sharp, we have reason to believe only too well-founded, criticism on the Black Mountain Expedition, to the Pioneer :—

As an exponent and powerful supporter of the present frontier policy of the Government of India—a policy once called "Mischievous Activity," now euphemised as "Forward"—you can perhaps explain one of its latest developments. I allude to the causes, conduct and object of the Black Mountain Expedition, 1891. So far as is known to the public the Black Mountain tribes had been on their best behaviour since their punishment in 1888, the date of the last expedition. On the principle of letting sleeping curs lie it would, one would think, have been wise to have left them alone. But no : in October last it was decided "to test the temper of the tribes," in other words to stir them up. Accordingly a strong force was sent to the Black Mountain to perambulate within our nominal, but their actual tribal, border. As was anticipated, Hashim Ali's loosewalahs resented the invasion by firing a harmless fusilade from a safe distance as the troops marched up the hill. Whereupon, for the third time in Black Mountain history, they marched down again, instead of then and there exacting punishment for the insult. That insult was the ostensible cause of the big expedition, which was launched nearly two months ago. Of course there could be no opposition to 7,000 troops ; nor was there. A bridge of boats was dragged up the Indus ; the river crossed ; the two brigades united, the trans-Indus hills partly ascended, the objective being Baio, a few miles further up the mountain. This Baio, it seems, is a village common to Akazais, Chigharzais and Bonerwals. Hence the Baiowals, as expected, in honour bound began a game of brag, collected to the number of ten or fifteen hundred, waved flags, danced war dances and shouted defiantly : "Come on ; but by jingo if you do we'll—run away." Upon this demonstration our army was halted for three weeks, grumbling sorely at the inaction. But behind that army all was action and decision of purpose. The reserve brigade was mobilised and pushed to the front. A fourth brigade was formed at Hoti Mardan to demonstrate on the Boner frontier. Finally, when 12,000 perfectly equipped troops were ready to eat up Akazais, Chigharzais, Bonerwals, and all other zais and wals who might come in their way, the expectant army was faced rearwards, and for the fourth time in Black Mountain history meekly marched down hill again ; the zais and wals being, I presume, apologetically informed that it was all a mistake—there had never been any intention of occupying Baio, since which strategic movement to the rear that army reduced to its original strength of 7,000 men is sitting on a deserted hill-top cis-Indus wondering what the whole show meant and means. And what does it mean, I ask? Everything done and left undone by actual and possible enemies from the insulting fusillade in October last up to date was exactly foreseen. Government seems first to have deliberately sought a pretext for the expedition by trailing its coat within our nominal border, and having provoked a show of opposition on the part of one small faction leisurely prepared a large expedition, leisurely marched its army some miles up the Indus, leisurely bridged the river, crossed it, and then spasmodically met the Baiowal brag (waving flags, &c.), by British counter-brag (calling out two more brigades), and finally peacefully withdrew cis-Indus, having accomplished nothing beyond spending some fourteen or fifteen lacs of rupees and destroying a few huts worth a hundred rupees or so. This Black Mountain mystery wants clearing up. Why was a pretext sought for an expedition? Why was the insult of October last not punished then and there? The tribes generally were passive and behaving well. The force on the spot was sufficient to go to Hashim Ali's village and destroy his cottages and those of his adherents. An expedition being determined on, why was it launched on such a large scale, if Baio and the Chigharzai country were not to be visited? As they were not, what was the object in crossing the Indus at all? What in keeping the force inactive for weeks about Palosi? What in withdrawing cis-Indus? What in calling out the reserve? What in mobilising a force at Hoti Mardan? What is now the use of keeping 7,000 troops on a hill-top cis-Indus? The Black Mountain camp-of-exercise, on service conditions—for the expedition is nothing more—must already have cost many lacs. Why let more heavy expenditure be incurred? There is no enemy worthy of the name cis-Indus. If the Black Mountain itself is to be annexed that would be a reason for leaving a couple of native regiments up there for the summer, or permanently; but why keep two brigades there? And what is the use of annexing the country? It has no strategic value. It can never give us good recruits as its people are not warlike. It can never yield us revenue. Annexation would simply mean an extra permanent charge of several lacs a year for posts and garrisons. If the object of the expedition was simply the capture of Hashim Ali, that ruffian's cousins and his aunts would probably have gladly captured him for the Sarkar for a few hundred or thousand rupees, or better, he himself would have willingly exchanged the life of a hunted and hungry wolf for the luxury and safety of a pension of 10 rs. a month and a plot of land in British territory. Expeditions cost money, and India is too poor to waste lacs on unnecessary expeditions. If this Black Mountain camp-of-exercise is a specimen of the way the Government of India works its "forward policy" the sooner we revert to "masterly inactivity" and consolidate our frontiers within our frontiers, the better for India and India's taxpayers. If many lacs are to be spent on an expedition whenever some petty trans-frontier ruffian exhibits his impotent hostility towards us, the little wars which seem inseparable from the "forward policy" as now conducted will be unending.

I, as a taxpayer, protest against needless expenditure, and so far as my lights go this Black Mountain Expedition of 1891 is a case in point. From inception up to the present situation there has been seemingly an entire absence not only of statesmanship but of ordinary business prudence. The confidence of taxpayers in the wisdom of the Government of India, so far at least as regards the conduct of its present "forward policy," if not in that policy itself, is being shaken. If you can remove the impression you will do a good work.

In reference to the above, "Taxpayer and Soldier" also writes to the Pioneer:—

I have read with much interest both "Taxpayer's" letter and your leading article on the subject of the Black Mountain. May I be permitted to make a few remarks on both? It was no doubt the Provincial Government which was responsible primarily both for the so-called promenade in October and for the present punitive expedition. That it is expedient to insist on the terms of a treaty being carried out few will deny, but in this particular case there are two questions to be asked: first, why were the terms of the treaty allowed to remain in abeyance for two years when the effects of the expedition had more or less died out, instead of being carried out immediately, while the memory of the punishment was still fresh in the minds of the tribesmen; secondly, when it was tardily resolved to attempt the march along the crest, why was not either a small force of a hundred men or so, accompanied by tribal representatives, sent to carry out the ceremony (as I believe was the idea as originally understood both by ourselves and the tribesmen), or a force sufficiently strong, not only to overcome opposition, but to inflict summary punishment if opposition were offered, despatched at a more suitable time of the year? Perhaps as so long a period had been allowed to elapse, the first alternative would have been risky, but had it been done promptly after the 1888 expedition, and repeated periodically, there would have been no risk, and the periodical marching of the normal Aghi garrison along the crest would have been a more logical outcome of the Battye-Urmston episode than the attempt to do it with a strong force. In fact it was our duty to show the tribes that by the moral force acquired by means of the expedition we asserted and upheld the right to march small bodies of troops similar in strength to Major Battye's party along our own border line. If we could not do that, the expedition of 1888 was thrown away, and so it has proved, not by any fault of execution by the military, but by the neglect of the responsible authorities to avail themselves of the terms that the military had fought for and acquired. Regarding the Chagarzai question, our past and present attitude is incomprehensible. In 1888 the Provincial Government tied the hands of the military by giving assurances to this tribe that if they abstained, as a tribe, from joining the combination against us, we would not enter their country. What was the result? Combine against us they did not (a few of the young bloods no doubt joined in for the fun of the thing), but they gave an asylum to Hashim Ali and his following, and to their wives and cattle, and also to the Hindustanis, and allowed their country to become a base of operations against us. The same thing has apparently occurred in the present expedition, and our troops are sitting idle and disgusted in a deserted country, while Hashim Ali and Co. cock moral snooks at us from behind the Chagarzai border. No wonder frontier expeditions are abortive when so conducted, but if the sillier answer recently given by an Under-Secretary of State to a silly question by a humanitarian M.P. is to guide our policy in future, and our frontier expeditions to be conducted according to the rules of European warfare, is there not some rule about belligerents taking refuge in neutral territory?

ORDERS have been issued, says a Times telegram from Calcutta (June 11), for the reduction of the Black Mountain Force. The Welsh Fusiliers and the 9th Mountain Battery will occupy Mnimal on the crest of the Black Mountain. The 28th Punjab Infantry will remain at Oghi. The 4th Sikhs, the 1st Goorkhas, and the fourth company of sappers will be quartered at Serf till Hashim Ali is given up. The remainder of the troops are to return to India.

THE Pioneer publishes the following telegrams:—

SERI, May 19.—No reliable news has been got as to the submission of the Akazais, so here we stay until they do come in. All is quiet; there was not even any firing into the camp last night. The health of the troops is good. The infantry in working parties are employed felling trees for hut-building, the pioneers and sappers in road-making. A thunderstorm with heavy rain has just come on again. The sooner the huts are built the better. They are estimated to cost 60,000 rs., but the final approval of the Government has not yet been obtained to the pattern of hut proposed by the engineers, who say that nothing cheaper will afford proper shelter through a monsoon. These huts, moreover, may be required to shelter our troops for some months of the winter, for here we shall stay until the tribes submit to our demands, which are such as will render them powerless to give trouble in the future, and to these demands they will not submit until they are in the last extremity.

MAY 21.—Affairs here are very peaceful. The Hassanzai villagers with their wives and cattle are gradually returning to their homes. There is no news of the Akazais coming in, but for the last night or two they have left off firing into the camp at Kand. Stormy weather continues.

MAY 22.—General Hammond arrived here to-day to confer with General Elles. We have got information that the Akazai jirgah is assembled at Kamach with a view to coming in to notify the submission of their tribe. Our informers also tell of how twenty-five of the Hindoostani fanatics have started on the war path, have crossed the river, and are coming to pay our pickets a visit. We only hope they will make some decent attempt to re-establish their reputation. The 11th Bengal Infantry leave this on the 24th. The 1st Goorkhas are expected at Abbottabad on the 26th, and here on the 30th. They are to stay at Seri. They are only 490 strong. We all like this climate, in spite of frequent storms and downpours of rain.

MAY 23.—The Akazai tribe has surrendered. About half of the total number of representative men of the tribe who make up the jirgah have arrived in camp. They say the rest will be in to-morrow. If so, all that will remain to be done will be the intimating to the tribes the intentions of Government as to what we intend to do to secure ourselves against any trouble in the future. It is improbable that these tribes will be able to surrender Hashim Ali to us, he being too strongly protected by the Chagarzais and Boner-wals. The 37th Dogras are transferred to the 2nd Brigade, vice the 11th Bengal Infantry, ordered to India. The 1st Goorkhas, on arrival, will be attached to the 1st Brigade. No. 9 Mountain Battery is to come to Seri on the 25th, No. 1 Mountain Battery going to Abu Kotal. General Hammond is still here.

MAY 24.—All the members of the Akazai and Hashanzai jirgahs are now in here. Our terms will probably be officially notified to them to-morrow. We all expect the force to be broken up at an early date, and that the 1st Goorkhas will be one of the two regiments that are to stay behind at this place in the huts which are being built and progressing rapidly.

THE MIRANZAI EXPEDITION.

BREAKING UP OF THE FORCE.

THE Pioneer prints the following telegrams:—

SANGAR, May 19.—The Daulatzai jirgahs having been summoned to Hangu on the 20th, Mr. Spencer left to-day to bring them up to Mastaon, where General Lockhart will receive them on the 21st.

Major Legh returns from Kohat to-morrow, whither he went in company with Mr. Udny, Commissioner of the Peshawur division.

The health of the troops continues good. Continual thunderstorms help to keep the air cool, but the sun is gaining power day by day.

The Public Works Department are hard at work on the new posts which are being built of cut stone. The post at Gulistan is nearly finished, and work has now commenced at Dhar and Sangar picket hill.

MAY 20.—Nothing is yet known here as to the reasons for the recall of the troops. The whole country is reported quiet.

The weather continues bad. Thunderstorms are of daily occurrence. The troops are tired of the inaction of the last few days, and are looking forward to a speedy return to their comrades.

MAY 21.—No. 3 Mountain Battery probably leaves here for Hangu to-morrow or next day, on their way to Rawul Pindi. The remainder of the force hope this is the commencement of the break-up of the force, but no further orders have yet been issued. The Daulatzai jirgah has come in and will be received by General Lockhart to-morrow at Mastaon.

Lieutenant Currie, attached to 5th Goorkhas, rejoins to 2nd Sikhs at Dera Ismail Khan immediately.

MAY 22.—Orders have again come for the break-up of the force and the return of the British troops to India. The Manchester Regiment and the 60th Rifles start this morning for Sialkote and Rawul Pindi; No. 3 Mountain Battery, R.A., leaves to-morrow for Rawul Pindi, and from thence marches to the Murree Hill; the 19th Bengal Lancers move to Jhelum, the 5th Goorkhas and No. 2 Deraja Mountain Battery to Abbottabad, the 19th Punjab Infantry to Rawul Pindi, the 27th Punjab Infantry to Jullundur, and the 4th Goorkhas to Pattancote. The Peshawur Mountain Battery, the 2nd Punjab Infantry, 15th Sikhs, and the 29th Punjab Infantry remain in occupation of the posts on the Samana range. The 1st Punjab Infantry and 3rd Sikhs return to their respective frontier stations.

Both yesterday and to day swarms of locusts have been passing overhead from north to south.

THE BURMA-CHINESE FRONTIER.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

THE Rangoon Gazette is informed on the best authority that the Chinese Government have initiated negotiations with our Government for the purpose of arriving at some settlement in regard to the delimitation of the Burma-Chinese frontier. It has been generally supposed that the delay in carrying out one of the provisions of the Convention of 1886 was due to the habitual dilatoriness of the Chinese Government; but this is not so. The Chinese do not desire to press for a complete detailed delimitation of the frontier, if that course be inconvenient to the Government of India. They are prepared to enter upon such a delimitation at once, but they do not press the point. They are, however, urging that it is most desirable that certain general principles should be laid down between the two Governments, and details worked out at the convenience of both. The reason which chiefly moves the Chinese to this course is that the British by their surveys and explorations are acquiring a detailed knowledge of the whole frontier region, which the Chinese cannot hope to equal, and they fear that when the time for delimitation arrives, they will thus be placed at a great disadvantage. They say the British would be in a position to bargain for that with which they are intimately acquainted, while the other side will have no knowledge of the respective values of their concessions or acquisitions.

In reply to the suggestion that they, too, might set about investing the frontier districts as the British are doing, they reply they have nobody qualified to investigate thoroughly the region, or to advise them in regard to such points as strategic importance, mineral wealth, commercial advantages and the like, and therefore they desire, now that both parties are in a position more nearly approaching equality than they will be a year or two hence, to have certain general principles, laid down by mutual agreement, by which both parties will abide ever after, whatever may be revealed by subsequent discoveries and explorations. With regard to these general principles the chief one is that the Taiping river shall be the boundary between the two counties, at least in its lower course, just before it enters the Irrawaddy. They abandon altogether the proposition so strenuously supported by the late Marquis Tseng, when Ambassador in London, that the Shweli should be their boundary, for they feel that, whatever might have been the case in 1885, when the whole matter was more or less of a tabula rasa, our five years' occupation of Upper Burma puts the cession of any portion of any territory governed by Theebaw out of the question. The scheme of owning Bhamo and opening it to trade on conditions similar to those at the coast parts of China, which was a pet idea of the Marquis Tseng, has therefore been abandoned absolutely.

The Chinese, however, desire to extend to the Irrawaddy, and are ambitious of having a port of their own on the river close to Bhamo, where their trade can be carried on just as it is on the Russian frontier between the adjacent town of Kakhta and Maimachin, one being on the Russian side and the other on the Chinese. There are other general principles which the Chinese desire to lay down; but this is the principal one, and they are now pressing the point on the British authorities. Both the British and Indian Governments are desirous of meeting the Chinese in every possible way, for it is recognised, and has been officially admitted, that the conduct of the Chinese, not only in regard to Burma, but also with reference to Sikkim, has been characterised by the utmost friendliness and good faith; but there are difficulties in the way of admitting the general outlines for which the Chinese contend, and these may delay negotiations for a time. The latter are, however, being urged by the Chinese on our Government with that perseverance and tenacity of purpose which are characteristic of their diplomacy.

THE INDIAN FINANCES.

A RESOLUTION is issued in the Gazette of India showing the leading figures of the audited accounts of the year 1889–90 of the estimates for that year and of the accounts of the preceding year. The total revenue in India exceeded the Budget Estimate by 1,977,160 rx., while the total expenditure fell short of the estimate by 833,691 rx. Of this total improvement of 2,810,851 rx., 1,189,796 rx. occurred in the provincial and local section of the accounts, the improvement in the Imperial section being 1,621,055 rx. The revenue in England also exceeded the estimate by 121,668*l.* and exchange on it by 51,075 rx., while the expenditure in England was less by 321,277*l.* and exchange on it by 390,658 rx. The total improvement in England in exchange was 884,678 rx., which with the improvement of 1,621,055 rx., which occurred in the Imperial section, raised the surplus of 106,300 rx., anticipated in the Budget estimate, to 2,612,033 rx. The improvement of 1,977,160 rx. in the revenue of India occurred chiefly under the principal heads of revenue, the total of which exceeded the estimate by 1,918,000 rx. Of this amount 589,699 rx. occurred under Land Revenue and 323,056 rx. under Opium, the prices obtained at the monthly sales of Bengal opium having been higher than expected; and the remainder was fairly equally distributed over the other heads, with the exception of tributes from Native States, the realisations of which were slightly less than the Budget Estimate. Of other groups of heads, the Irrigation and Civil Departments showed improvements of 101,778 rx. and 92,151 rx., while Miscellaneous and Railways showed a decrease of 85,686 rx. and 81,023 rx. The variations in the other groups were unimportant. The saving of 833,691 rx. in expenditure in India occurred chiefly under the group of Direct Demands on Revenues, under which the decrease was 818,297 rx., being almost entirely due to partial failure of the opium crop. Other decreases were—Salaries and Expenses, Civil Departments, 73,828 rx.; Railway Revenue Account, 171,836 rx.; Army, 162,905 rx.; Special Defence Works, 144,564 rx.; while there was an increase of 499,500 rx. under Famine Relief and Insurance owing to partial restoration of the famine insurance grant. The improvement of 1,189,796 rx. in provincial and local sections of the Accounts was the net result of an increase in the Revenue of 1,256,336 rx., 490,000 rx. arising from postponement to 1890-91 of the special contribution from Provincial to Imperial revenues, and an excess in the total estimated expenditure of 66,540 rx. The increase of 121,668*l.* in revenue in England occurred mainly under interest, 105,633*l.*, and decrease in expenditure, 321,277*l.*, chiefly under army and special defence works. A saving of 390,658 rx. in exchange on expenditure in England arose partly from the actual average of the rate of the year having been higher than that adopted in the Budget Estimate, namely, 1*s.* 4·566*d.* as against 1*s.* 4·38*d.* Land revenue collections considerably exceeded both the Budget Estimate of the year and the collections of the previous year. The causes are: 1st, extended cultivation in Burma, following the establishment of order in the country; 2nd, changes in date of payment; 3rd, realisation in Bengal, North-West Provinces and Punjab of revenue due on 1888-89 not collected in that year on account of scarcity and other reasons; 4th, revision of settlements in some districts of the North-West Provinces, Punjab, Central Provinces, and Bombay; 5th, collection in March, 1890, in some districts of Madras and Central Provinces of revenue not due till the following month; and 6th, large sales of land in Bombay for cultivation and extensive rate of cultivation in Sind. Fifty-seven thousand chests of opium were sold at an average price of 1,136 rs. per chest. After five successive years of bumper opium crops in Bengal, the crops seriously failed in 1889–90, the production being only 38,305 chests. The reserve stock, which amounted to 31,010,931 in December, will be 18,770 chests only on December 31, 1891. The import duties increase is ascribed to a larger importation of kerosine oil, of arms and ammunition in Bengal, and of spirits in Bombay. The Post Office revenue is speedily increasing. The telegraph revenue increases slowly, with the gradual expansion of traffic. The imports of and coinage of silver were large.

ANCIENT RUINS.

THE archæological discoveries of Dr. Stein in the Punjab forcibly point to the fact that the British official, civil or military, is, as a rule, but a fly on the wheel of Government with little leisure for the cultivation of arts and ologies. Within easy distance of the cantonments of the Punjab by rail is a region teeming in archæological interest, well worthy of exploration and research; but the cares of office and duty make the more distant and cooler sanitaria in the Himalaya not so much a luxury as a necessity for the restoration of jaded energies and often of failing health to many who might with profit add a chapter to the as yet unwritten history of India. But for the score or so of dry records of measurements buried in the blue-bound archæological official reports of General Cunningham and his confreres, very little light has been thrown for the benefit of the reading public on the dark ages of India, and upon that mysterious and highly civilised state of society which existed in this country from the pre-Macedonian era to that of the Mahomedan conquest. It is to this period that the magnificent ruins at Amb in the Salt Range lately visited by Dr. Stein belong. Far in the recesses of an almost unknown tangle of mountains, deep in a distant and gloomy gorge, over which towers majestically the cloud-capped summit of Mount Sakesar at the western extremity of the range, are the ruins of a city of gigantic proportions girt with walls of colossal height and cyclopean masonry. It is covered with remains of splendid temples and stairways, embellished with ornamentation of excellent design and workmanship essentially Greek in character. Who and what were the people who lavished so much energy and skill on so desolate and unapproachable a site? For miles around there is nothing but a labyrinth of tortuous and dark ravines overshadowed by towering cliffs, while beyond stretches to the horizon the dreary waste of the Thall desert. To the geologist these precipitous cliffs, from the torrent beds below to the peak of Sakesar, present great interest, and are rich in magnificent fossil forms. The silurian of the river courses is capped with massive limestone, probably carboniferous, full of most exquisitely preserved specimens of the products of gigantic size, resplendent with the most exquisite play of colour on the perfectly-preserved mother-of-pearl. Higher up the mountain side huge ammonites are found, graduating through every form of mezozoic life to the rich deposits of the tertiary and nummulitic shells of the summit. While here and there immense splashes of scarlet marl add colour and beauty to the view, and indicate the presence of the salt, which from the earliest ages has formed the wealth of the locality, and which may have been the object which drew hither the earliest settlers, and amongst them the race whose traces we still find in the ruined cities.

Who and what were they? A highly civilised race from all appearances, imbued with the art and cultivation of the Greeks. Were they led here and settled as a commercial community, or was it the strong position and fertile valleys of the interior which harboured them securely from the outer world in the dark ages of Indian history? At Kabaki and elsewhere in the neighbourhood are similar remains, in which Greek coins and sculptured gems are constantly turning up. From the essentially Hindoo character of the ecclesiastical remains, it would appear that these early inhabitants were the Hindooised Yachati Turks who succeeded the Seleucidæ. They were in all probability the contemporaries of Yen Kiao Chang, otherwise known as Hima Kadphises, whose effigy is familiar on the Indo-Sythic coins of the period: a truculent Turk of Brahminical tendencies or toleration, as the obverse of the coins bears the figure of a purely Hindoo dhoti-clad attendant leading the bull Nandi, and the Hindoo trident is a conspicuous monogram on the coins. To this race also belonged the later Rajas Kanishka, Havishka, and Jashka, the Kanerki Oorki, and Bazdeo of the numismatists, who held sway from Cabul and Cashmere to the confluences of the five waters in the early years of our present era. The presence of the Greek inscription on the earlier series of these coins, in conjunction with the Aryan characters on the obverse, recalls to mind the interesting fact that the Greek language, according to the most eminent authorities, had in the closing centuries of the B.C. period taken so firm a hold in the country that it was freely spoken in the villages of the Punjab. are a few of the interesting features of this strange and little-known region, rarely visited by the white man save by a few sportsmen in quest of the oorial.—Pioneer.

AN INDIAN SOLOMON.

ONCE upon a time there was a beautiful Indian girl who had four lovers. They were all of equal rank, only one was much richer than the others. She could not make up her mind which of the four lovers to choose for a husband. While she hesitated, she caught a fever and died. You will think the story ends here, but it does not. The girl was carried to her grave, followed by her four lovers. When the grave was opened one of them killed himself on the grave, and was buried with the girl. Another got up into a tree, and spent the night saying "Boh and Bah," to keep off the jackals from eating the bodies. The rich lover went back to his fine house and spent the night in weeping and lamenting. The fourth lover put on the dress of a holy pilgrim and started for a distant shrine. Soon after he had left his native village he came to a wood. In the wood he saw a house. He went and looked in at the window and he saw an old woman baking bread, and a child playing noisily about. The old woman told the child to be quiet, or she would kill her. The child took no notice, and went on making as much noise as before. Then the old woman took hold of her and strangled her, and threw her body in the corner. When the pilgrim saw this he rushed in and asked the old woman what she meant. "What's the matter?" said she; "there's nothing to make a fuss about. I have only quieted her." Then she went to a cupboard and took out a bottle containing some white powder, with which she sprinkled the child, who at once jumped up and began playing about as noisily as before. When the pilgrim saw this he said to the old woman, "I am a very holy man on my way to a shrine, and you must give me shelter for the night." The old woman said she would, and so he stayed. In the night he got up quietly and went to the cupboard, and took the powder and went away back to the village as quickly as he could. When he got there he collected the villagers and told them to open the grave. As soon as it was opened they saw the bodies of the girl and of the lover who had killed himself just as they had left them, and the other lover was still crying "Boh and Bah" in the tree. The pilgrim then sprinkled the girl with the powder, and some of it falling on the body of the lover they both jumped up and seemed in perfect health. Then the lovers all began to claim the lady again. The first said, "I ought to have you, for I died for you." The one in the tree said, "If it had not been for me, you could not have come to life again, for the jackals would have eaten you." The third said, "Did I not go home and weep all night?" and the fourth said, "You must be mine, for I brought you to life again." Then, as the girl could not still decide which of the four to marry, it was resolved that the matter should be brought before the raja and that he should decide it. So the raja assembled his court with great pomp, and called the lady and all the lovers before him. He listened with great attention to each as he set forth his claim. When he had heard all, he said, "As I find myself quite unable to decide between so many rivals, I see the only one way out of the difficulty is that I should marry the lady myself."

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Return of Surgeon-General Markey.—Deputy Surg.-General E. C. Markey, who was suddenly ordered to Manipore on April 25, appears to have been told on arrival at Mandalay that his services would not be required, for he returned to Madras on May 15. Manipore was occupied on April 28, and it must have been well known long before then that no more medical officers would be required; yet, says an Indian paper, owing to bungling somewhere, Government has been put to the expense of transport both ways, and Deputy Surg.-General Markey, and the other medical officers who accompanied him, must also be considerably out of pocket by this useless move.

The Manufacture of Steel Projectiles.—About six months ago the Director-General of Ordnance and Magazines in India, Major-Gen. Walker, inspected the Gun Carriage Factory, Madras, when he selected four Ordnance artificers—Messrs. Bailey, Blazey, Graham, and Tate—to be sent to England to acquire a knowlege of the manufacture of steel projectiles in the large arsenals. The Government of India has approved of General Walker's recommendation, and the men were to leave for England by the British India Steam Navigation Company's steamer Goorkha, sailing from Madras on or about June 13. In sanctioning the measure the Government of India observed that it is of the utmost importance that India should, especially in time of war, be independent of England for the supply of steel projectiles. The men will undergo one year's course of instruction in England, and, besides being provided with accommodation and rations, will each receive during that period 5*l.* per mensem, and will be furnished with a kit of warm clothing before leaving India. The contemplated abolition of the Ordnance Artificer Corps will in no way interfere with the above arrangement.

The Mess and Band Funds of "Converted" Regiments.—When we wrote recently upon the action of Government in confiscating the mess and band funds of the "converted" regiments, and handing them over to the new corps created in their stead, says the Pioneer, it was under the impression that in Madras the similar orders that appeared last year had been subsequently revoked. Unfortunately that does not appear to be correct; for in the case of the 10th Madras Infantry, at any rate, the balance that remained to credit of these funds after the accounts had been closed has been handed over to the 10th Burma. Unfortunately the same step has already been taken in the case of one of the recently disbanded Bengal regiments, which to a certain extent weakens the position of the rest. Nevertheless, we believe that legal opinion is strongly favourable to the rights of the officers dispossessed, and though of course it has necessarily been delivered on an ex parte statement of the facts, we strongly suspect the military lawyers would be found of precisely the same opinion. It is difficult to see why the officers concerned should submit to be deprived of their rights, though it is no doubt difficult for them to take action. But the case is so clear that one is almost compelled to believe that the authorities must to some extent have relied upon their reluctance to appeal to the law, and the impediments that would beset such a course, before they decided to lay hands upon the property.

Bombay Army Headquarters are to be re-established at Poona on June 8.

Col. G. C. Hogg, Bombay Cavalry, Deputy Quartermaster-General, has been appointed Quartermaster-General, Bombay army, with the local rank of Brigadier-General, in succession to Brigadier-General F. J. S. Adam, whose tenure of appointment has expired.

The undermentioned officers are granted furlough out of India under article 689, Army Regulations, India, Vol. I., Part I.:—Capt. A. L. Carroll, Royal Art., ordnance officer, 3rd class (m.c.), for six months; and Capt. E. S. F. Walker, Royal Art., ordnance officer, 3rd class (m.c.), for six months.

Capt. C. W. Park, 2nd Devonshire Regt., who has been officiating deputy-assistant adjutant-general, Burma district, has been appointed to officiate as deputy-assistant adjutant-general of the Mandalay district, vice Capt. A. B. Murray, 10th Burma batt., who has proceeded to England on furlough on medical certificate.

Lieut. C. S. Warwick has resigned his probationary appointment in the 32nd Madras Inf., and has been posted to the 2nd batt. Devonshire Regt., pending further orders.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to May 26.

The Return of the Pioneers.—At a dinner given by the Calcutta Volunteers at the headquarters to Captain Cox and the Pioneers who went to Manipore, Colonel Chatterton, commandant, in the course of a speech which was applauded to the echo, stated that his Excellency Sir Frederick Roberts, while offering his congratulations, asked as a token of appreciation of his enterprise and zeal in the cause of volunteering, to be permitted to present Captain Cox with a sword, to replace the one lost by the sinking of the boat in which Captain Cox lost all his belongings, papers and weapons, and narrowly escaped with his own life. The Viceroy also desired to convey his congratulations, and welcomed them back to Calcutta.

The Recent Riot in Calcutta.—The chief mullah, Ally Yar Khan, who was in charge of the mosque, as also the Mahomedan preacher, Nasirul-Huq, have absconded, and are still at large, says a Calcutta paper. A relative of the former, named Ameer Ally, who took an active part in the riot, was among those injured, and died at the Medical College Hospital. Thirty-nine of the rioters who were injured are still under medical treatment. A few of them are said to be in a hopeless condition. About twelve members of the Calcutta police force met with serious injuries, among whom a native police constable has died. Superintendents E. Robertson and Srinath Pal are reported to be improving, while Inspector Yasubuddin is still in a critical condition. Superintendent Merriman, who received a bad cut under the left eye, got an attack of sunstroke. He had left the Police Office to take his breakfast when on reaching his quarters he fell down in a fit. His condition at first gave occasion for alarm, but he is recovering. No further disturbance has taken place at the scene of the occurrence. The police are still on special duty there. In a day or two such of the rioters as have been arrested will be placed on their trial before Mr. Baker, the District Magistrate of Alipore.

The Sea-borne Trade of Calcutta.—There is a satisfactory increase in the volume of the sea-borne trade of Calcutta with foreign and Indian ports during the year 1890-91. In the foreign trade, the growth is confined entirely to imports, which amounted to nearly 30 crores of rupees, as against a little over 26 crores in the previous year. Exports, on the other hand, declined from 38 to 26 crores, leaving a net increase of some 140 lacs in the total volume of this branch of trade. The coasting trade showed a general and rapid increase, the imports into Calcutta amounting to 406 lacs as against 329 lacs, and the exports to 714 lacs as against 590 lacs—a net gain of nearly 200 lacs on both heads. This is the more satisfactory, since the previous two years have shown a decrease of between 50 and 80 lacs. In the foreign and coasting trade combined, the figures for 1890-91 show an increase of nearly 3½ crores, or 4·63 per cent. over those of 1889 90, which in their turn, as compared with 1888-89, were almost stationary.

The Foreign Trade of Calcutta. n the statistics of the foreign trade of Calcutta last year it is noteworthy that, with the exception of dutiable goods, the increase in the value of importations has been general. The total of 366 lacs is, indeed, the highest yet recorded. The decline in exports took place under free produce, which contracted by over 8 per cent.; while the export of dutiable produce, on the other hand, increased by about 26 per cent. The decrease in exports of Indian produce, though partly due to a falling off in some of the items of produce, is attributed in a great measure to a reduction in the average price. Of imports, cotton manufactures are still the most important, heading the list with 13½ crores, an increase of more than 42 lacs over the previous year. Metals account for over two crores, woollen stuffs for 75 lacs, and machinery for 81 lacs. In exports raw jute comes first with 6½ crores, opium next with 6 crores, and tea third with 5 crores. In comparing these figures with those of previous years, it is necessary, however, to make allowance in all cases for fluctuation in market prices. In some cases it will be found that, although the total money value has increased, the bulk of the trade shows a decided diminution.

The superintendent of the Royal Botanical Gardens, Calcutta, and of Cinchona Cultivation, Bengal, who has hitherto discharged the duties of the new office, is henceforth to be designated director of the Botanical Survey of India in addition to his other titles.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to May 27.

The Maharaja of Mysore, G.C.S.I., accompanied by Major Martin, private secretary, Dr. McGann, and Mr. Desaraj Urs., A.D.C., left Ootacamund on May 20 for Mysore, and, says the Madras Times, of May 27, he will doubtless receive a cordial welcome both at Bangalore and at Mysore. Mr. Sheshadri Iyer, C.S.I., prior to returning to Mysore, proceeded to Calicut last Sunday. In the course of a week or two, his Highness will welcome H.H. the Gaekwar of Baroda, who proposes to pay the State a visit about June 1. The Mysore Prince has very pleasant recollections of the time when he visited Baroda two years ago, and he will doubtless do his utmost to make the Gaekwar's visit pleasant; but the notice given has been rather short, and it may not be possible to make such extensive preparations as would have been feasible had more time been allowed. It is interesting to note that it is nearly a century since a Mahratta Prince visited Mysore.

The Administration of Law and Justice.—The Bangalore Daily Post gives some particulars of the new scheme suggested by Sir Oliver St. John in regard to the administration of law and justice in the civil and military station at Bangalore. It appears from the Post that, under the recommendation of Sir Oliver St. John, the British Resident, concurred in by Mr. Crawford when he was the Assistant Resident, a scheme was submitted to, and has received the approval of, the Government of India. This scheme is to appoint a Subordinate Judge on a salary of 700 rs. or 800 rs. a month, with jurisdiction limited to 5,000 rs. in original cases; further, to have two Assistant Residents, the first of whom (with an increment of 500 rs. to his usual salary) should have original jurisdiction in suits above 5,000 rs., also hear appeals from the District Magistrate and Second Magistrate's Court, the Subordinate Judge's Court, and the Munsiff's Court, and be invested with the powers of a Sessions Judge. This, says the Madras Times, is certainly a sweeping scheme of reorganisation; and consequently it is one that ought not to be brought into force without the most thorough inquiry into the matter. If, as is now stated, Mr. Crawford has changed his opinion, that is one reason more why hasty changes should be deprecated. The object of the new scheme appears to be to strengthen the power of the Resident and to increase his establishment. It might be difficult to quote a precedent to prove the wisdom of any such course, and it would assuredly not be easy to make out that the Political Department is the proper field wherein to select men to decide large original suits and appeals.

Tea in Madras.—The total area of land under tea cultivation in the Madras Presidency, including Travancore, during the year 1890, was 22,214 acres, of which 14,305 acres were in Travancore. The number of plantations was 151, viz., forty-seven in Travancore, ninety-one in the Nilgiris, seven in Wynaad, three in Madura, and three in Vizagapatam. The crop was not harvested on the last three estates, which had an area of only 8½ acres, as the plant did not thrive. In Madura there were only 6½ acres, which were not worked during the year. There has been a considerable expansion of the tea industry on the Nilgiris, where, out of the approximate yield for the whole Presidency of 1,836,983 lbs., the out-turn was 1,010,404 lbs. This is attributed to the Ouchterlony Trust having recently erected a large factory, and to a large number of young plants coming into bearing in the Ouchterlony Valley, and the greater attention paid to tea estate of late. The yield of the Travancore estates amounted to 804,979 lbs., and in Wynaad 21,600 lbs. The highest yield per acre was achieved on Pathanapuram in Travancore, where it stood at 642 lbs., followed by Shencottah 370 lbs., Wynaad 300 lbs. The average yield of the estates on the Nilgiris was 202 lbs. The cost of cultivation varied from 100 rs. per acre on Menachel estate to 30 rs. on Shencottah. The cost in the Nilgiris and Wynaad was 50 rs. per acre. The cost of manufacture was lowest on the Nilgiris, 1 anna per lb., and highest in Wynaad, 4 annas per lb. In Travancore it ranged from 1 anna 3 pies to 3 annas 10 pies. Of the total area of 22,214 acres, 8,124 acres are under mature plants, 2,744 under immature plants, and 11,346 acres have not yet been planted.

The Government of India has sanctioned an additional allotment of one lac of rupees for loans under the Land Improvement and Agricultural Loans Act, for the Madras Presidency. The amount is to be principally utilised in the districts threatened with famine.

The Government of Madras finds it impossible at present to provide funds for the proposed line of railway from Palghaut to Dindigul, about which the inhabitants of Palghaut memorialised the Governor in Council in February. The survey by the Madras Railway Company for a line from Palghaut to Kurapatnam, at the head of the water communication with Cochin, has, however, been recently sanctioned.

There appears, says the Englishman, to be a widespread distrust in certain parts of Madras of the Government relief works, which have been instituted to afford subsistence to the starving pariah. In one village the inhabitants, although dying by inches, refuse point blank to accept this means of relief, on the ground that those who went away to the works in the last famine never returned, and that they prefer to starve, if necessary, in their own homes.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to May 29.—There are few items of special interest beyond those which may be found in other columns :—

The Clock Tower Tragedy.—At the resumption of the inquiry on May 20, the Parsee child, Navazbai Shapurjee, was taken up the tower, and pointed out the place where she and her companions were standing when they saw the Parsee ladies, Manockjee Aslajee and the two Mahomedans. After this Sorabjee Ardeshir Godiwalla, a young student of the Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Parsee Benevolent Institution, was called and examined by Mr. Craigie. He deposed to having been present with Navazbai on the tower on the afternoon of the fatality. He corroborated in all material points the evidence given by Navazbai on the previous day. The persons in court having been warned that in the event of any disturbance the court would be speedily cleared, Manockjee Aslajee was again ordered to be dressed in the clothes he was wearing on the day of the occurrence and placed among a crowd of Parsees for the purpose of identification, whereupon he stepped forward and protested to the coroner that on Tuesday, while sitting on the bench near the door of the court, the Parsee who was in charge of Navazbai pointed him out to the girl as she entered the court as the Parsee and said, "This is the man." The same thing had been repeated that day by the same Parsee when bringing into court the witness now under examination. The coroner here intervened and asked if any one was present when the Parsee had pointed out Aslajee, whereupon Aslajee replied that sepoy No. 516 had seen him pointed out to the boy. The sepoy was then examined by the coroner, and said that the Parsee remarked to the boy, "Look to your right, this is, this is." Then the boy looked towards Manockjee. The coroner inquired if any other person besides Manockjee was present, when the sepoy replied that Manockjee was sitting alone on the bench. Cowasjee Adarjee Mistry, another of the batch of Parsee children, called by Mr. Craigie, repeated the story told by Navazbai. It was also suggested that he should identify Manockjee, but the coroner, in view of what had taken place, insisted that there was no need of further identification, and shortly afterwards the court adjourned till Monday, when Mr. Frere, who has now appeared on behalf of the Crown in this matter, will cross-examine the witnesses called by Mr. Craigie.

The Bombay Poisoner.—A Government resolution in connection with the Kambekore Street poisoning case states that the prisoner, Buchu Haji Abdulla, should be informed that the offence which was brought home to him at his trial at the Criminal Sessions was of a diabolical character, and that any leniency in the case would be misplaced. The law must therefore take its course. [The hanging of the condemned has been announced by telegraph.]

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Rangoon correspondent of the Times :—

JUNE 9.—Much sickness prevails amongst the garrison at the jade mines. Captain O'Donnell and all the other European officers are ill, and so also is a very large proportion of the native officers and men. The sickness is mainly due to the bad housing of the troops, no barracks having been yet erected. Serious difficulties have been experienced in provisioning the garrison at the jade mines. It is necessary to convey the supplies for the garrison across the Uru river, but this has been found to be impossible owing to the rapid current of the river. Hawsers are being forwarded from Bhamo to Mogoung to facilitate the passage of the boats. The post at the jade mines is provisioned until July 4.

JUNE 11.—Lieutenant Whitehead, of the 33rd Burma Regiment, and Lieutenant Wilding, of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, two officers of the garrison at the jade mines, arrived at Bhamo to-day. Both are very ill. Fifty Goorkhas are being sent to the jade mines from Bhamo to reinforce the garrison, which consists of 200 military police and two guns of No. 6 Bombay Mountain Battery.

JUNE 14.—In addition to the passage of the Uru river, great difficulties are being experienced in forwarding supplies from Mogoung to the garrison at the jade mines, as, during the rains, the intervening country is almost impassable. It seems probable that the post may have to be abandoned until next season, when suitable quarters for the troops could be constructed.

The Kachyen tribes in the neighbourhood of the jade mines are warlike, and the presence of the elder Wuntho Tsawbwa in the district is a source of danger.

During the recent cholera epidemic at Prome amongst the Indian hill coolies, a very plucky feat was performed by Surgeon Waller, of the Medical Staff. Owing to the intense heat, several sick men tried to throw themselves from the hospital flat into the river. One patient succeeded in doing so, and was being rapidly carried away by the strong current of the Irrawaddy when Surgeon Waller, who was in charge of the hospital, jumped into the river with his clothes on and succeeded in bringing the patient to shore in safety.

Le Courier d'Haiphong, in a recent issue, published an apparently inspired communication claiming the whole of the valley of the Mekong for France, declaring that, from an historical point of view, "it belongs en droit et en fait to our kingdoms of Annam and Cambonia." It added that French influence in Bangkok was waning, owing to German and English intrigues.

Commenting on this article, the Rangoon Gazette urges that the Indian Government should assert its claim at least to that portion of the Mekong Valley which is north of the Chiengsin, that territory having been always claimed by the Burmese King.

THE Pioneer publishes the following from Tammoo (May 20):—The remainder of the 12th Burma Regiment, with Lieutenants Rainey and Williams and Surgeon Newland and the whole of their sick, leave to-morrow for Sittaung on the Chindwin en route to Thayetmyo. The details of the 2-4th Goorkhas and Surgeon Vickers with the native field hospital also accompany the 12th Burma to Sittaung, the Goorkhas going on to rejoin their regiment at Bakloh; the remainder of the 32nd Burma Regiment leave in a few days. With their departure Tammoo will have seen the last of the Burma Column of the Manipore Field Force. Surgeons Gifford and Way will take down the last batch of sick by boats to Kendat. From Kendat the various regiments and their sick are being carried to their respective destinations as steamers become available. Cholera has now died out at Tammoo. Rain falls nearly daily.

OWING TO the recent murder of Shans on the Chin frontier a military post of 50 rifles is at once to be established at Kampat between Auktaung and Yasagyo. The 5th Madras Infantry will furnish the garrison of the post.

THE MANDALAY correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette writes:—The tradespeople are now turning the nimble rupee in good earnest, consequent upon the return to headquarters of the gallant warriors and others who took part in the recent Wunthoo Expedition. General Stewart and Brigadier-General Wolseley have arrived. The latter is looking wonderfully well after his picnic at the jade mines. Quite a lot of the D. P. W. are here, on leave, the majority of them returning to complete the road-making operations on which they have been actively engaged. They speak in glowing terms of the magnificent timber which abounds in these newly-acquired tracts. One tree (teak) in particular is attracting attention, measuring 18 feet in girth and 50 feet from base to branch, and this, I am told, is not the only forest giant of like dimensions.

IT IS due to Mr. Duke, whose dismissal by the Government of India we have previously announced, to print the following note from the Rangoon Gazette:—The decision of the Government of India in Mr. Duke's case will, we think, come as a surprise to most people. We do not know what guided the Government in its decision, but if there was nothing against Mr. Duke except the evidence produced before Mr. Ward in the recent enquiry, the punishment is grossly excessive. Of the three charges originally made against Mr. Duke, namely, those of corruption, perjury, and compounding a felony, the first was not gone into, for there was not an atom of evidence to support it. Those who have read the proceedings before Mr. Ward will have seen how lame and inconclusive was the evidence given in support of the second charge. As for the third charge, there was no doubt ground for suspicion, but we think that the weight of evidence went to show a grave error of judgment on Mr. Duke's part, rather than a desire to shield a criminal. The Government is right in insisting that their servants should be above reproach, but this laudable desire should not induce them, unless on much stronger evidence than that given at the recent investigation, to mete out such heavy punishment to a man who has been twenty-four years in Government service.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

A MEETING was held at the Assembly Rooms, Naini Tal, on May 9, to consider the question of inviting subscriptions for a memorial to the late Mr. Quinton, C.S.I. The chair was taken by the Lieutenant-Governor, and there were present:—Mr. J. R. Reid, the Hon. Mr. Lumsden, the Hon. Mr. Woodburn, the Hon. Mr. Benett, Colonel Ollivant, Mr. Holderness, Mr. Porter, the Hon. Mr. Deas, Mr. White, Mr. Wall, Colonel Erskine, Mr. Petre, Mr. Hooper, Colonel Pitcher, Colonel Ross, Mr. Malony, Mr. Winter, the Rev. Mr. Luckman, Mr. Pike, Colonel Harrison, Colonel Tweedie, Mr. Matthews, Mr. Lancaster, and Lalla Kishna Sah. It was decided that the following gentlemen be asked to form themselves into a committee (with power to add to their number), and that the committee, after considering the proposals that have or may be made as to the form of the memorial (excluding, however, any proposal of a sectarian nature, such as the proposal to complete the Lucknow Civil Church), select one or more of the proposals as approved by them and circulate them with a call for subscriptions; and that the committee, when they are in a position to ascertain what is the amount likely to be contributed, finally decide upon the form of the memorial and take steps to carry it out:—The Hon. Mr. Justice Straight, chairman; the Maharaja of Benares, the Hon. Rana Sir Shankar Baksh, the Hon. Mr. Woodburn, the Hon. Mr. Benett, Raja Amir Hussan Khan of Mahmudabad, the Maharaja of Ajudhia, the Raja of Manda, Mr. J. R. Reid, Colonel Erskine, Mr. J. B. Thomson, Mr. Cornell, and Mohamad Ali Khan, Reis of Jahangirabad.

MANIPORE is not the only instance in which a Hindooising process has taken place in modern times, writes an Indian paper. To the south-west lies Hill Tipperah, the reigning family of which are closely allied by marriage to that of Manipore. The Tipperahs are unmistakably aboriginals. Their Mongolian features betray pretensions to Aryan descent. But the Maharaja and his family are strict Hindoos, and their claims to rank as Khetris are now very generally admitted, not universally, however, whence the wretched misgovernment and disorganisation of the State. For the test of the warrior caste is the acceptance by a Brahmin of water from a claimant's hands. The Hindoo carpet-baggers who infest all native territories are subjected by his Highness of Tipperah to this shibboleth. Those who will take water from his royal hands are advanced to high dignity, and those who refuse receive the cold shoulder. It is obvious that the man who will sacrifice worldly advancement to religious scruples has more backbone than the supple knave who throws all prejudices overboard at the back of self-interest. Hence the Maharaja's entourage leaves much to be desired, and the active interference of the Bengal Government cannot be much longer delayed.

THE present Keonjhar disturbance, says an Allahabad correspondent, is evidently not the first, for in 1868, on the failure of the succession, the Government nomination being unpopular, the Bhinyas rose and murdered the Minister and declared a candidate of their own. A large force was sent against the insurgents, causing harassing warfare. The ringleaders were captured eventually, and some of them were executed, some imprisoned or transported, and the country then put under British superintendence, but handed back to the Raja subsequently, under certain conditions. Keonjhar is the largest of the tributary States of Orissa, excepting Morbhanj. It is hoped the police will be sufficient to deal with the present disturbance.

THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES Government Gazette contains the orders of the Local Government respecting the Temple Riots of Benares. The temple is to be allowed to stand in situ, the priests attached thereto receiving passes to get to it through the waterworks enclosure. The public are excluded, and it will depend on their future behavour whether they are readmitted when the waterworks are completed. The Allahabad Morning Post is complimented on the remarkable accuracy of its report respecting the Benares riot.

RAWUL PINDI was only just recovering from the plague of crawling locusts, says the Pioneer, when a worse plague came. The place has just been visited by an enormous swarm of young flying locusts, pink in colour and full grown. They came from the south, passed over the Park, and invaded the whole station. More damage has been done to the trees by this flying swarm in one day than had been done in two months by the young and wingless insects. They seem to be fond of the siriss (Acacia speciosa) and the Pinus longifolia. The tali (Dalbergia sissoo) they have as yet left untouched. In the Park they have not done much damage, the trees there, principally Acacia modesta, are not to their liking. The swarm lighted on Sirdar Sujhan Singh's gardens, and he engaged a large number of coolies in the vain hope of driving the insects off. Young locusts without wings can be dealt with, but the flying ones will not be denied.

THE WEEKLY CROP and weather report published by the N.-W. Provincial Government is usually a colourless and formal matter enough; but to the summary in the Gazette of May 23 there is a significant addendum on the question of food stocks as affected by the present rush of exports:—"The late rabi promised well, but owing to rain, frost and hail, was, on the whole, below the average. It would, however, have sufficed to bring down prices had it not been for the heavy exports of wheat to Bombay for England, rendered possible, not withstanding high prices here, by the rise in the price of wheat in London from 32 shillings the quarter to 44 shillings and 46 shillings, and by the simultaneous fall in silver exchange. The export of wheat from Lucknow, Cawnpore and elsewhere still continues, resulting in the present high prices of all food-grains. Should the rains fail this year, the result of these exports on the food stock of the provinces will be felt in its full force, and will lead probably to a great calamity."

HYDERABAD.

THE Nawab Motashum Jung, a brother-in-law of the Nawab Vicarool Oomrah, Revenue and Military Minister, died on May 21, after a short but painful illness.

The Hyderabad correspondent of the Indian Daily News states in that paper that it is strongly rumoured that the Nawab Mooshtak Hoosain's son will shortly supplant Captain Beauclerk, secretary to the Salar Jung Estate Committee, and that this has created a sensation among the nobles and the public generally. There is absolutely no truth in this rumour, says the local correspondent of the Pioneer.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

SHANGHAI, June 9 (Reuter).—The French Church and Orphanage at Woosieh, near Soochow, have been completely destroyed by a riotous mob.

SHANGHAI, June 12 (Reuter).—Intelligence of fresh excesses on the part of the native population against foreigners continues to be received from the interior. The property belonging to the Catholic and Protestant communities at Wuchen, on Lake Poyang, has been burned, and rioting has also occurred at Takatang, where the troops sent to quell the disturbance have joined the native mob. The European ladies of the China inland mission have reached Kiukiang in safety.

PARIS, June 12 (Times).—An evening paper states that, on account of the seriousness of the situation at Wuhu, in China, M. Ribot has asked the Minister of Marine to send thither all the ships now disposable on that station.

The Kokkai Shimbun gives publicity to the following rumour. Mr. Kataoka Kenkichi, a native of Tosa and member of the House of Representatives, a gentleman noted for his virtue, becoming weary of the ever-changing condition of political affairs since his withdrawal from the Jiyū-tō (Liberal party), purposes to resign his seat in the Diet and to establish a Japanese colony on the Pacific coast of America. He is at present soliciting co-operation in his project for despatching several hundred able-bodied married farmers, from twenty to thirty years of age, who are to be inhabitants of Tosa. Mr. Kataoka is a Christain, and on this account the Kokkai presumes he will be kindly treated in America. Two of his sons are at present in Vancouver, and their knowledge of American affairs is expected to be of great service in carrying out this colonising scheme.

Rumours of the speedy extension of the railway to Pekin are making themselves heard, says the Tientsin correspondent of the N. C. Herald (April 28), but in how far there is any truth in such statements it is impossible to say. The Empress Dowager talks of repairing the Yuan Ming Yuan. Now that Yen Ching-ming is no longer at the head of the Board of Revenue, money is much more easily obtained by Her Majesty than heretofore, and she seems determined to make full use of her opportunities.

Governor des Vœux has published in the Hong Kong press a long speech which he intended to deliver, in which he combats the pessimist views of Mr. Whitehead. He shows that Hong Kong has now fifty-four public companies, with a paid-up capital of 44,074,950 dols., and a market value of 77,200,550 dols.; that the trade with China has not fallen off; that the deposits in the banks have not fallen off; that the shipping trade has not fallen off; and that the assessed taxes yield has only fallen off 2½ per cent., and a recovery is certain.

On April 7, Major-General George Digby Barker, C.B., was sworn in by Sir James Russell, chief justice, as officer administering the Government of Hong Kong. There were present:—Hon. W. M. Goodman, attorney-general; Hon. N. G. Mitchell Innes, treasurer; Hon. S. Brown, surveyor-general; Hon. J. H. Stewart Lockhart, registrar-general; Hon. J. J. Keswick, and Hon. Ho Kai. His Excellency was attended by Captain Clayton and Mr. F. H. May. A company of the 91st Regiment, with the colours, was drawn up in front of the Government Offices. The band also was in attendance, and played the National Anthem as his Excellency retired from the Council Chamber.

Mr. C. T. Gardner, H.M.'s Consul at Hankow, informs us (says the North China Herald), and suggests that we should make the information public, that he has received a letter from Mr. Everard, H.M.'s Consul at Ichang, to the effect that British subjects proposing to visit the Ichang gorges had better apply to Mr. Gardner for passports. The Ichang Taotai, it appears, lives at Chingchow, and consequently it takes ten days or more for a passport issued by H.M. Consulate at Ichang to be countersealed by the Taotai. If people travel without passports they will be liable to be stopped and turned back. (Are the celebrated monkeys of the gorges on the war-path again?) Mr. Everard believes that the Chinese are going to be very strict on this point. From this we gather that while Sir John Walsham has succeeded in getting Chungking made an open port, with an English proconsul, the only road to Chungking cannot be traversed without passports; which seems to the lay mind somewhat absurd.

From the latest statistics published by the Chinese Customs, it appears that the number of foreigners resident in all the Treaty Ports of China at the end of last year was 8,107; of these 3,317 were British, 1,153 Americans, 883 Japanese, 648 German, 610 Portuguese, 589 French, 304 Spanish, 155 Swedish and Norwegian, 131 Russian, while the remainder were of other nationalities. The number of foreign mercantile firms was 522, of which 327 were British and 80 German. It is interesting to note that the aggregate native population of the Treaty Ports is estimated at more than 5,500,000, of which Canton had 1,600,000, Tientsin 950,000, Hankow 800,000, Foochow 636,000, and Shanghai 380,000.

Frontier Policy.—The Madras Times asks:—Has the Government of India a fixed policy in regard to the frontier question? Some people say "Yes" and some "No." And not seldom those who answer in the affirmative proceed to prove the negative, while those who assert the latter argue in favour of the former. Of course, this is not done intentionally, but it happens. If the Government has a fixed policy, what is it? This is what interests every one in India, and yet no answer is possible. All sorts of ideas are afloat. It is thought in some quarters that the policy is one of annexation. But in many more it is regarded as merely one of restless meddling. The present Black Mountain Expedition would not have been required had its predecessor never started. But India, whether intentionally or not, is playing an old Russian game. There is a bull, here is a red rag. The bull is quiet enough. It wants rousing up. So the red rag is brought into use, and very soon the bull waxes furious. "Mad bull, mad bull!" is now the cry; and the red rag is followed up by the matador, who "goes for" that bull and does it to death. Is the bull to blame? That matters not when he is dead and his carcase belongs to the slayer. But it is time that the matter was looked into, for England is called a civilised nation, and bull-baiting is not a civilised sport. Surely it is time for inquiry when a highly respected Anglo-Indian journal writes thus in its leading columns: "If it is a part of our fixed policy to make our little punitive expeditions only stepping-stones to others a little bigger, and so on, until we have the whole frontier from Abbottabad to Quetta in a blaze at once, and a really 'big thing,' with its honours, decorations, medal and despatches on our hands—then by all means let us blame the Punjab Government and Punjab frontier officials for putting a spoke into the wheel of the prospective triumphal car."

THE "EX POST FACTO" QUESTION AGAIN.

MR. F. O. STACK sends us the following correspondence with the India Office:—

On Jan. 22 he wrote to the Under-Secretary of State for India:—

"I have the honour to forward a copy of a letter from the Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal Financial Department, dated Dec. 18, 1890, sanctioning the grant of an ordinary pension of 416-10 8 rs.

"I also forward copy of a letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal to the Director-General of Police, in reply to an application of mine for a special pension.

"The Select Parliamentary Committee appointed to inquire into certain grievances of Uncovenanted servants recommended that pensions be paid at a minimum rate of 1*s.* 9*d.* per rupee. I presume, however, that the Parliamentary Committee, in making this recommendation, or the Secretary of State in adoping it, did not intend that the pensions of all Uncovenanted servants should be paid at the minimum rate, but simply that no pensions should be paid at a lower rate.

"I beg now, with much deference, to submit my reasons for asking a higher pension than 437*l.* 10*s.* per annum.

"I was appointed in 1859 under the Pension Rules of 1855, in which it was stated that for 'approved good service' I would get a pension not exceeding 5,000 rs., or 500*l.*

"I can show that throughout the whole of my career my service has been approved, and, I think I may add, exceptionally good. Letter No. 5,623 from the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal sufficiently proves this.

"When I entered the Service there was nothing in the rules about payment of pensions in England at the rate of exchange. I would respectfully submit that to give me now 437*l.* 10*s.* per annum, instead of 500*l.* per annum, is giving the rules which were published four years after I entered the Service retrospective effect. As chairman of the Parliamentary Committee, Sir John Gorst distinctly repudiated on behalf of the Secretary of State any desire or intention to give the Pension Rules retrospective effect."

[The remainder of the letter referred to personal claims—based on long and good service.]

On Jan. 24 Mr. Waterfield acknowledged receipt of the letter of the 22nd inst., and referred Mr. Stack, with regard to any appeal which he desired to make for the grant of a pension in excess of the amount admissible under the regulations, to the Government of India, through the Local Government.

On Jan. 27 Mr. Stack wrote:—

"I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of Jan. 24, 1891, and to state that I do not ask for any increase to the pension granted me by the Government of Bengal; but that the sum sanctioned by that Government be paid me at the rate of two shillings per rupee instead of one shilling and ninepence.

"I put forward this claim on the ground that to give me less than this will be to give retrospective effect to rules made and published four years after I entered the Service.

"I base my application on the assertion of Sir John Gorst as chairman of the Parliamentary Committee that the Secretary of State disclaimed any intention of giving any rules retrospective effect.

"I venture to think, therefore, that this is a question for the Secretary of State and not for either a local or the Indian Government."

To this the following reply was received:—

"India Office, Whitehall, S.W., Feb. 10, 1891.

"SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th ultimo, requesting that your pension may be issued at the exchange of 2*s.* the rupee.

"In reply, I am to acquaint you that the declaration made by Sir John Gorst was that the Secretary of State disclaimed the power of depriving officers, by ex post facto rules, of rights which had already accrued to them in accordance with the Regulations under which they were serving.

"At the time you entered the Service, officers of the 'Uncovenanted Service' could not receive their pensions in this country, as pensioners were not allowed to be paid at the Home Treasury until the rules of June 8, 1863, were sanctioned.

"Under those rules pensioners were thenceforth permitted to draw their pensions in this country, subject to the condition that the pensions should be converted into sterling at the rate of exchange annually fixed for the adjustment of transactions between the British and Indian Exchequers, and the Secretary of State for India in Council sees no reason to relax the existing regulations in your favour.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, "A. GODLEY."

Mr. Stark replied:—

"SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. F.372, of Feb. 10.

"1. In the first paragraph of your letter, you state 'that the declaration made by Sir John Gorst was that the Secretary of State disclaimed the power of depriving officers by ex post facto rules, of rights which had already accrued to them in accordance with the regulations under which they were serving.'

"2. I beg most respectfully to submit that, having carefully examined the Parliamentary Report of the proceedings of the Select Committee, before which Sir John Gorst made the statement to which I appealed in my letter of the 27th ult., I have been unable to find any such qualification as that now attributed to him in the words I have above underlined, and submit that, as now quoted, these words convey no definite meaning—if, however, as the words seem to imply, they are meant to indicate that the rules under which an officer entered the service, and which were applicable to his case by virtue of that fact, are not to be altered by ex post facto regulations—and that seems to be the meaning which was attached to Sir John Gorst's declaration, and accepted by the Select Committee—I venture respectfully to submit that my position and claims under Sir John Gorst's declaration and the regulations under which I was serving, are in no w y compromised by the fact stated in the third paragraph of your letter, and for the following reasons:—

"3. At the time when I entered the service, the rules then in force assured me a pension of 500*l.* sterling, and neither I nor any other of the officers appointed under the same rules could have acquired the right to pension before 1880.

"I submit that the interjection of the Rules of 1863, to which you refer, cannot fairly prejudice the position I had previously acquired, namely, the right to a sterling pension of 500*l.* at the end of my service, and that any other interpretation is in direct contradiction of Sir John Gorst's declaration before the Select Committee, by whom it was accepted in good faith.

"As to your statement that officers of the Uncovenanted Service could not receive their pensions in this country, as pensions were not allowed to be paid at the Home Treasury until the Rules of June 8, 1863, were sanctioned, I think further inquiry will show that this is not quite accurate, and that Uncovenanted officers have received sterling pensions before the date you have mentioned. And, as a further answer to this objection, I beg to state that I am quite willing to take the pension of 500*l.* sterling in Calcutta."

Mr. Godley replied on March 13:—

"Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 3rd instant, I am directed to refer you to my letter dated Feb. 10, in which you were informed that the Secretary of State in Council saw no reason to relax in your favour the existing regulations respecting the payment of pensions to officers who had served under the Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, "A. Godley."

Mr. Stack rejoined:—

"Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of March 13 in which you refer me to your letter of Feb. 10, in which I was informed that the Secretary of State in Council 'saw no reason to relax in my favour the existing regulations respecting the payment of pensions to officers who had served under the Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules.'

"The existing Regulations are those framed in 1863, some years after I entered the Service.

"Am I to understand by your letter that the Secretary of State does not consider himself bound by Sir John Gorst's declaration made before the Parliamentary Committee?

"I would with much deference invite special attention to the fact that, at the close of the inquiry, Sir John Gorst stated that 'in future it was competent to the Service to refer officially to his declaration before the Committee.'

"This important statement in addition to those already made by Sir John Gorst on the same subject during the inquiry were accepted unreservedly by both the Committee and the Service as a clear promise that retrospective effect would not be given to the Pension Rules.

"I also beg respectfully to point out that no previous ruling has been given in my case, nor, to my knowledge, in any similar case since the conclusion of the Parliamentary inquiry.

"I am not, therefore, in any way asking the Secretary of State to reverse, modify, or revise the decisions of his predecessors.

"I claim with much deference that no retrospective effect shall be given to my detriment to the Rules of 1863—being entitled beyond question under the Rules of 1855, under which I entered the Service, to a pension of 500*l.* per annum.

"Either Sir John Gorst's declaration is meaningless or I am protected by it to the extent I claim.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

"Oliver S. Stack, late Deputy Major-General, Bengal Police."

Mr. Godley replied on April 22:—

"Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 31st ultimo, I am directed to inform you that, in accordance with the pension rules in force before 1862, you may receive your pension of 5,000 rs. a year in India; or that, under the orders of 1862, you may draw in England the equivalent thereof at the rate of exchange annually fixed, subject to the recent concession that this rate shall not be lower than 1*s.* 9*d.* the rupee. In this decision retrospective effect is not being given to any of the pension rules; and I am to desire that you will regard this communication as final.—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

"A. Godley."

Mr. Stack wrote on May 13:—

"Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1,245 of April 22, acquainting me with the decision of the Secretary of State with reference to my pension, and requesting me to regard the communication as final.

"I beg very respectfully to put on record one more communication lest silence should be misunderstood to mean acquiescence in the Secretary of State's decision, and in the force of the reasons on which that decision is ostensibly based.

"In the first portion of your letter No. F 1,245, dated April 22, you state 'that in accordance with the rules in force before 1862 you may receive your pension of 5,000 rs. in India.'

"This I must respectfully submit is not an accurate quotation of the rule in force before 1862, and under which I entered the Service. According to the Pension Rules sanctioned by the Court of Directors on Feb. 28, 1855, the prescribed pension is 500*l.*; and in the notification of the Government of India dated May 19, 1855, issued with the above rules, the amount of pension is given as 5,000 rs. or 500*l.* It is on these rules I base my claim. The omission by you of these important words, and the silence observed throughout the whole of this correspondence as to the sterling pension promised by the words I have quoted is a practical admission that the Secretary of State has no satisfactory answer to my claim to a pension of 500*l.*

"In the letter under reply I am given the option of drawing 5,000 rs. in India, or 'under the orders of 1862, may draw in England the equivalent thereof, at the rate of exchange annually fixed subject to the recent concession that this rate shall not be lower than 1*s.* 9*d.* the rupee.'

"I beg to point out that the alternative mentioned in the rules under which I entered the Service is 5,000 rs. or 500*l.* The alternative under the Rules you quote promulgated after I entered the Service is 5,000 rs. or 437*l.* 10*s.* Thus by denying me the pension promised under the Rules of 1855, and thereby forcing me to take pension under the Rules of 1862 the Secretary of State does give retrospective effect to these rules and I lose 62*l.* 10*s.* per annum.

"It is useless in the face of these facts to state as you do in the closing paragraph of your letter 'that in this decision retrospective effect is not being given to any of the Pension Rules.'

"The net result of the correspondence is that the Secretary of State practically repudiates Sir John Gorst's declaration and refuses to be bound by it. That declaration had the desired effect for the time. It prevented the Uncovenanted Service from bringing forward evidence before the Select Committee proving cases in which retrospective effect had been given to the Pension Rules. It prevented the Select Committee making any separate and definite recommendation on the subject, as Sir John Gorst said, in effect, his declaration was sufficient. The result of this correspondence shows that his declaration was valueless and misleading.

"I cannot afford to remain any longer without drawing my pension, but I do so under protest.

"I consider the Secretary of State's decision unfair and unjust—and this will not be my opinion only—I think it will be generally held that there has been a breach of faith with the Uncovenanted Service, and also with the Select Parliamentary Committee. The question has more than a personal interest, and will, I venture to assert, create great discontent, and lead to renewed agitation.

"I presume the Secretary of State has no objection to the publication of the correspondence.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, "Oliver S. Stack,

"Late Deputy Inspector-General of Bengal Police."

POLITICAL OFFICERS OF NATIVE STATES.

The Bombay Gazette says:—The recent Government Order on the relations between Political Officers and the Durbars of the States in which their duties lie is too important an indication of the desire of the Government to make their agents honourably independent of the Native Princes and chiefs to pass unnoticed. It marks the growth of a wholesome feeling in this matter that we are now very far indeed from the state of relationship to the Native Courts in which Political Officers thought it a correct and regular thing to draw as freely as they chose upon the liberality of the durbars, which were hospitable from policy no less than from instinct. The horses, the carriages, the servants, the houses, and the table supplies of the raja used to be deemed to be at the free disposal of the Political Officer, and very generously indeed have the Native Courts always responded to the expectations of their visitors in this regard. If the claims upon them have gradually been reduced, we believe it has been not through any reluctance in their hospitality, but to a very great extent through the growth of an honourable feeling amongst the Political Officers themselves that they ought not to tax the kindness of the chiefs as much as it had been taxed in former days. In Kathiawar the name of the late Colonel West, one of the kindliest and worthiest of men who ever served in the province, will long be remembered for what he did in curtailing the demand on the durbars for transport in his official tours. The resolution, as we understand it, aims at bringing the practice in future into conformity with Colonel West's ideal. "Where an officer," it is laid down, "must depend on the assistance of the durbar for his supplies, he must request the durbar to appoint dealers from whom the articles required can be procured for proper payment. It is to be understood that grass or fodder, or free supplies for the table of officers staying in State bungalows, for however short a time, are absolutely and expressly prohibited. In any case where a Political Officer visits the capital of a Native State in the course of his tour, he is bound to supply himself with all that he requires." Where it is necessary for emergent reasons, and no other means are procurable, to use the durbar carriages, the fact, and the reason for it, must be notified to the Government. Thus, as the resolution sums it up, the use of any durbar carriage will be restricted to the rarest occasions and to the narrowest limits; and officers will under no circumstances be allowed to live in State bungalows at the cost of the durbar for their supplies. We can conceive of no practical inconvenience following the issue of these orders, and they will in all probability prevent many misunderstandings. If there is any expression of regret that they have been issued, we should expect to find it not among the Political Officers, but amongst the ruling class in the Native States, who look upon hospitality as essential to their abru. But the spirit in which the resolution has been issued will in the long run be fully understood and widely appreciated.

Indian Invasion of Australia.—The increasing influx of Afghans, Pathans, and other races of India to Australia has engaged the attention of the Premier, who has sent a communication to the Secretary of the Government of India on the subject. Mr. Munro points out that the immigration is steadily increasing, ninety-three Indians having arrived in Victoria during the half-year ended March 31 of this year, as compared with thirty-eight during the previous six months. As a reason for the Government of India taking action in the matter he draws attention to the fact that the common avocation of the immigrants is hawking, and as the number of hawkers' licenses is to be restricted, there is no employment for many of the men, and they are likely to become troublesome. In support of this view Mr. Munro forwards police reports as to what took place at Sandhurst last December, when out of sixty-eight applications by Indians for hawkers' licenses only fourteen were granted, and when those who were disappointed indulged in threats that they would be compelled to commi acts of lawlessness.

The Indian Troopships.—It has been decided that the Indian troopship Jumna, which has been taken off the roster for the past few years in the Indian relief service, shall now be brought forward as an ocean-going trooper. New boilers will be put into the vessel at Portsmouth, and she is expected to be ready to take the turn of the Orontes when that vessel comes back shortly from her trip with naval supernumeraries to Australia.

The future of the Indian troopships, says the London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, is at present engaging the attention of the Government. There are five of these vessels, which are practically only employed during six months of the year, and the fact that they absorb about 1,100 officers and men inclines the Admiralty to favour any scheme which would set these free for war ships. Many years ago the P. and O. Company had the contract for the service, but that method was found very costly, and is not likely to be resorted to again; and it is proposed as an alternate course that the Government should find vessels, and private persons work them; indeed, I hear that negotiations are actually being carried on with the Orient Company with that object. If arrangements on these lines be completed Army men will rejoice, as complaints of the discomforts of the passage by troopers are constant, and as old as the ships themselves. Food, it is said, is bad and dear, and the domestic service highly unsatisfactory. It is only in very rare cases that ladies are allowed to take a servant, and as there are no stewardesses on board, the "dovecote," as the ladies' quarters are called, are every morning invaded by a detachment of men whose manners, if the narratives of passengers may be believed, leave much to be desired.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Thursday, June 11.

The Arming of Troops in India.—MR. WEBSTER asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he was in a position to state the number of native troops in the service of the Government of India who on Jan. 1 last were armed with the Martini-Henry rifle, and the number who were armed with the Snider rifle; whether any other rifle requiring a different description or gauge of ammunition was then used in that service; whether it would be possible, in order to minimise the chance of difficulties arising in times of emergency, that in any future change of rifle in the Indian Army the change be made division by division throughout the length and breadth of India; whether it would be possible to issue instructions that on any relief of her Majesty's Indian regiments being sent to a division armed with a new rifle, that that relief be armed with the new rifle before its departure from its old quarters; and whether there were any general instructions fixing the minimum number of rounds of ammunition British or Native troops in India should have with them, or accompanying them, on the line of march, on their going on active service, or proceeding on a mission on which hostilities might be reasonably anticipated.

SIR J. GORST: The Secretary of State has not the exact figures, but, roughly speaking, rather more than half the native troops had Martini-Henry rifles and the rest Sniders. No other rifle is in use among native troops. As to paragraphs three and four, the plan proposed would not produce the result desired, as troops could not be restricted to service in that division only to which they were allotted. As to paragraph five, there are general instructions dealing with the points named, but in time of war the number of rounds would depend on the circumstances of the case.

East Indian Civil Servants.—MR. KING asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Secretary of State has had under consideration those recommendations of the Select Committee on the East India Civil Servants to which effect has not yet been given—particularly those relating to a uniform scheme explicitly describing the terms of pension and furlough, and the insufficiency of the present furlough pay. And whether it may be expected that early steps will be taken to carry those recommendations into effect.

SIR J. GORST said that the Secretary of State was in correspondence with the Government of India on the subject of the recommendations of the Select Committee on the East India Civil servants. The matter was still under consideration.

Riots in China.—In answer to Mr. Birrell, SIR J. FERGUSSON said: Her Majesty's Consuls at Kinkiang, which is near to Wusuch, and at Hankow, the next treaty port further up the river, have reported that Mr. Green, in the China Customs Service, and the British agent of the Wesleyan Mission, have been murdered at Wusuch, but nobody else, as far as is known, and that most of the other British subjects on the spot are known to be safe. The Consuls have made no appeal for assistance, but if any had been required they would no doubt have communicated direct with the Consulate-General at Shanghai, and so with the nearest British naval officer. On the occasion of the riot, which occurred at Wuhu last month, Chinese and other men-of-war were at once despatched from Shanghai to restore order, and accordingly there can be no reason to doubt that any necessary measures have been taken in the present instance, and that the Consuls are satisfied on the subject.

Friday, June 12.

The Tongul Rising.—MR. PICTON asked the Under-Secretary whether the telegram, stating that the execution of the Tongul General had been postponed, as he might be required to give evidence, was correct, and whether, if so, this involved a commutation of the capital sentence; and should that not be so, whether there was any English precedent in recent times for reprieving a condemned prisoner in order that he might give evidence, and then executing him afterwards.

SIR J. GORST: The Secretary of State has received no information which corroborates the statement referred to. The Tongul General has been sentenced to death, and the sentence confirmed by General Collett, but the execution is not carried out pending the sending of the record to the Government of India for orders.

KEUNJHAR.

SERIOUS news, says the Times of India of May 29, is telegraphed by our Simla correspondent. A rising of apparently a very determined nature has occurred at Keunjhar, one of the principal Tributary States of Orissa. The Bhuiyas, the Juangs, and some of the other tribes who rose in 1868 have again revolted, and have seized and looted the treasury, released the convicts from the gaols to swell the rebelling forces, and have blocked the roads. Keunjhar is the second largest of the Orissa States with an area of 3,096 square miles, and in 1881 had a population of nearly a quarter of a million. During the Kol rebellion in 1857, the then Prince of Keunjhar rendered good service to the Government, and the title of Maharaja was bestowed upon him. At his death, without legitimate issue, in 1861, the Government nominated his natural son, the present Maharaja, to the gaddi, and then began the dispute as to the successor which culminated seven years later in the rising already referred to. This rebellion was led by one Ratna Naik, who succeeded in carrying off the Minister and adherents of the Maharaja, the former being subsequently murdered. A British force was sent out, and Ratna was captured and executed with three of the other ringleaders, and 189 other rebels were transported. For the time being the State was placed under British superintendence; but when the tribes returned to their allegiance the country was once more made over to the Maharaja on the condition that he made no change in the administration of his State without the special sanction of the Government. The immediate cause of the present outbreak is not stated, nor have there, so far as the Government has been made aware, been any signs of disaffection. The rebellion in 1868 was in favour of an alleged adopted son of the late Maharaja, who was then quite a boy, and has hardly been heard of since. Keunjhar has enjoyed since that period the reputation of being one of the best-administered States in Orissa, and the tribes, mixed as they are, have jogged along very peacefully together. Since 1872, when the total population was returned at 181,871, there has been no tribal classification of the people; but in that year 44,438 of the population were recorded as aboriginal tribes, principally Kols, Gonds, Saonts, and Savars; 49,294 semi-Hindooised aborigines—Pans, Bhuiyas, and Bathudis; 87,651 Hindoo castes, chiefly Khandaits, Brahmins, and Gaurs; and 487 Mahomedans. The Hindoo castes appear to have taken no part in either this disturbance or the previous one, the semi-Hindooised aborigines forming the belligerent element in both cases. The State itself is divided into two parts, Lower and Upper Keunjhar, both rather wild, and the latter consisting mainly of mountainous highlands which are almost inaccessible except to the hillmen themselves. On the summits of the highlands, however, are extensive tablelands, equally fitted for pasture or tillage. There are plenty of good roads in the lowlands, some of these leading to the principal village (named after the State itself) being well made and properly metalled. The State is bounded on the north by Singhbhum district, on the east by Morbhanj State (part of which it originally was), on the south by Cuttack district and Dhenkanal State, and on the west by the Dhenkanal, Pal Lahara, and Bonnai States. As the crow flies, Keunjhar is about 200 miles west-south-west of Calcutta.

SOMETHING LIKE A SNAKE STORY.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to a Bombay paper:—Some days ago I proceeded to Damka, a village of some importance, about fifteen miles from Surat, to spend some days with my relatives there. While one day loitering on the "khari" (beach) I saw at a distance a snake winding itself round the body of a full-grown goat. I proceeded a little nearer to the spot, but at that moment the goat fell down apparently quite dead. The snake now began uncoiling itself from the body of the goat and coming towards me, and as I had nothing in my hand to defend myself with, I took to my heels in another direction until I lost sight of the reptile, where, after spending about an hour, I retraced my steps homewards. My way lay through the place where the goat lay dead, and, on reaching the spot, to my utter amazement, I saw the very snake trying to swallow the goat. I was all the more surprised, as the snake was not much thicker than my hand, whereas the goat was a full-grown animal. The snake had already swallowed both the hind legs together, and was now gradually going upwards, but so slow seemed the progress that I went home to fetch my umbrella to screen my face from the burning rays. When I returned, about 9 A.M., I saw the snake lying lazily, having in fact made no progress at all in the interval with the body. It lay for more than twenty minutes in this sluggish condition, and I thought it was not swallowing the body, so I turned to go home. Just at that moment a slight movement on the part of the reptile arrested my attention, and at the same time the body, about two inches, slipped into the reptile's mouth. I now, seating myself on a stone, began to watch the proceeding. Bit by bit it began to rouse itself from its lethargy and swallow the body, and by about 12.30 it had finished the whole. It then again lazily coiled itself with its much-inflated body. At this time I told one of my men to bring a sharp knife, and went close to the reptile; but it did not take any notice of me. I took a minute survey of it, and then threw a stone at it, which aroused him considerably, though not sufficiently to be in any way dangerous. At length I despatched it with a big stone, and had its skin opened with the knife, when the body of the goat dropped down. All the big bones were crushed and the body was squeezed to such an extent that it looked like one long thinned mass. It seemed really a great wonder to me how the bones of such a large goat could have been broken by a snake which was in thickness not much bigger than the hand; and then how could it ever have devoured such a thick body? The skin of the snake measured 7 ft. 8½ in. long and 11½ in. in circumference. I have travelled over many parts of India, and have seen many such cases, but not one that can be compared to this, which, I think, is quite extraordinary.

The Homeward Mail.

MRS. GRIMWOOD.

THE appeal which it is announced that the PRINCESS OF WALES is making to the wives of military men to subscribe for a testimonial to MRS. GRIMWOOD is happily conceived, and will, we are sure, meet with a hearty response. The qualities which she showed when suddenly a sense of absolute security was changed to the reality of a most fearful danger; when she found her house transformed into a besieged garrison and its cellar into a hospital; when her husband disappeared in circumstances which left little hope for his life; and when it became necessary to make a strenuous effort to save the remaining handful of Europeans and the troops who protected them, were qualities which Englishmen are quick to recognise and keen to praise. The grant of the Red Cross, good in itself, has evidently not satisfied public sentiment. What the public feels is that MRS. GRIMWOOD behaved like a heroine and has been rewarded as a nurse. It would no doubt have been a very popular move had the statutes of the Order of the Indian Empire been altered to permit of the admission of this brave lady, who certainly has done more to deserve such an honour than many of the dames who figure in the list because they have happened to be the otherwise undistinguished wives of certain officials. LADY DUFFERIN, herself one of the noblest figures in the list, would not have grudged MRS. GRIMWOOD a place beside her. The PRINCESS OF WALES, another of the illustrious ladies of the Order, with that quick perception of public feeling which distinguishes both His Royal Highness and herself, has decided to make an effort to show MRS. GRIMWOOD how that class of her countrywomen peculiarly associated with British valour appreciate her devotion, her courage and her heroism. We cannot doubt that this appeal will be received with enthusiasm. As the facts have come out it has become more and more clear that MR. GRIMWOOD had no responsibility for the lamentable breakdown of British prestige in Manipore. The Indian Government seems to be taking a comparatively long time to think of what it ought to do for the benefit of MRS. GRIMWOOD. MAJOR GRANT has received his reward for Thobal, but it would only have been graceful at the same time to announce that the heroism of the one woman who had displayed similar qualities and helped to redeem a sad castastrophe from absolute humiliation were to be recognised by the grant of an exceptional pension. The Government of India need not have waited until it had decided whether Manipore is to be annexed to our Indian territories or to be maintained as a Native State under our protection. In either case it will be expected to provide that in future MRS. GRIMWOOD shall be adequately and even handsomely compensated for her irreparable loss and her distinguished services.

"IN obedience to the QUEEN'S commands, VISCOUNTESS CROSS has called on MRS. GRIMWOOD, to make inquiries on behalf of her Majesty as to the state of her health, &c." This is the official announcement. What the "&c." means we cannot conjecture.

AS soon as the QUEEN arrives at Windsor from Balmoral, MRS. GRIMWOOD will be introduced to her Majesty, and will receive from her hands the order of the Royal Red Cross. The London Gazette of June 12 contains the official announcement that the QUEEN has conferred this decoration on MRS. GRIMWOOD.

Vanity Fair says that MRS. GRIMWOOD'S presentation to the QUEEN is likely to be followed by the offer of a suite of apartments at Hampton Court or Kensington Palace. Such an honour was conferred upon the widow of SIR LOUIS CAVAGNARI.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES is starting a subscription for the benefit of MRS. GRIMWOOD among the wives of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the British Army, to show their appreciation of her gallantry, heroism, and devotion to the wounded under fire during the late disaster at Manipore. Subscriptions will be received by MESSRS. COUTTS.

WE have received a letter on the Burma-China Railway question from "OLD ARAKAN," which, as he requests us, we publish, having no interests or prejudices on one side or the other. Our only desire has been to furnish information which may assist the public judgment. As regards our present correspondent's complaint that we published a letter in which MR. HOLT HALLETT spoke of him in "discourteous and unwarrantable terms," we may point out to "OLD ARAKAN" that we can hardly undertake to regulate the terms in which our correspondents criticise each other, beyond taking care that they do not indulge in coarse and improper language or make libellous imputations. Moreover, MR. HALLETT takes full responsibility for his words by signing his name, and an editor can always give more latitude to such a correspondent than to one who writes under a nom de plume.

THE INDIA OFFICE AND ITS DECLARATIONS.

MR. O. S. STACK has sent us for publication another contribution to the ex post facto controversy. We believe that the London European Services Committee contemplate sending copies of this correspondence to every Member of Parliament who served on the Select Committee, calling attention to the points raised by Mr. Stack. Whether it is possible for those gentlemen to take any collective action in Parliament should they be convinced that in this or in other cases the Secretary of State is failing to act up to the declaration Sir John Gorst was instructed to make to the Committee is doubtful. The point is a curious one, and we do not remember that anything similar to it has ever occurred in Parliamentary experience. It would certainly be a strange spectacle were the Select Committee to ask the House to take note of an engagement made with it by a Government official, and to represent that it had not been fulfilled. Of course were any action of the kind to be taken the contention of the authorities at the India Office would be, as it is in the letters from Mr. Godley and Mr. Waterfield to Mr. Stack, that the facts of his case did not come within either the terms or the spirit of Sir John Gorst's dictum; and although readers of the correspondence may entertain an opinion that Mr. Stack has made out a clear case, it would not be fair to prejudge the question until the Secretary of State has had an opportunity of explaining more fully than is done in the meagre arguments of Under-Secretaries wherein Mr. Stack's contention fails. It is unfortunate that, in quoting Sir John Gorst's declaration, Mr. Waterfield should have been instructed to add to it qualifying words which Sir John Gorst never used, and on this point Mr. Stack has scored a slight advantage. It is more unfortunate that neither Mr. Godley nor Mr. Waterfield fairly meet the issue raised by Mr. Stack. Mr. Stack says that the Rule of 1855 promised him as the maximum pension "5,000 rupees or 500*l.*," in other words—as he contends—that he was told he would be paid a pension in sterling of 500*l.* The reply is that the Government of India has awarded him 5,000 rupees, which he can either draw in India, or receive at home, at the rate of 1*s.* 9*d.* to the rupee. The question is a nice one, and one on which there is room for wide difference of opinion. The best way of settling it would be by a legal decision, and perhaps the Secretary of State would facilitate a reference of the question to a legal tribunal, or to one of the judges, on a case stated.

Lord Dufferin's leave of absence from Rome will probably last for a month or two. After a short stay in town he will proceed to his residence at Clandeboy, in County Down, and will then visit Mr. Munro-Fergusson, M.P., in Scotland.

The Gazette of June 12 contains a notification that Sir W. Gordon-Cumming has been deprived of his commission in the Army.

The Queen, upon the recommendation of Viscount Cross, has appointed Mr. C. F. Farran judge of the High Court of Judicature, Bombay, in the place of Mr. Justice Scott, who recently accepted the position of judicial adviser to the Khedive's Government. Mr. Farran is a member of the Middle Temple, was called to the Bar in 1864, and has practised for some years in Bombay.

A curious little detail in connection with the pecuniary position of the Egyptian exiles in Ceylon has just been reported from that colony, says the London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald. When the exiles were first sent there they were allowed 300 rs. a month each by the Egyptian Government. Soon afterwards they found that this was not enough, and in reply to their representations on the subject a further sum of 500 rs. a month was voted for division amongst them in such proportions as the Governor of Ceylon should think fit. Arabi, being the poorest, received, with the assent of his fellow-exiles, 200 rs. of this, so that he got 500 rs. a month, while the others got only 375 rs. Quite lately the Egyptian Government, for some reason, sent orders to the bank in Ceylon, through which the money is paid, that in future all must share alike, so that henceforth Arabi will receive only 390 rs., and his companions' allowances will be increased by the difference, so that they also will amount to 390 rs.

In the Divorce Division on June 9, before Mr. Justice Jeune, the decree nisi granted in the case of Connemara v. Connemara was made absolute.

The question of the grievances of the purchase officers is likely to be raised in the House of Lords very shortly. This, the Standard says, will not preclude the intended discussion in the House of Commons, but it is at present uncertain when the Army Estimates will be reached. They will be taken after the Navy Estimates.

The Times of India comments on the transmigration of Allen's Indian Mail in the following kindly terms:—We note with some interest that henceforth Allen's Indian Mail will be incorporated in its more enterprising and more energetic rival, the Homeward Mail. Allen's Indian Mail has been in existence for nearly half a century, and we cannot see it disappear without regret. It has, however, been moribund for some time past, and the wonder was how it managed to drag on an existence so precarious and protracted. Nothing, at all events in these later years, becomes its career so well as its departure, and we are glad to quote the pathetic valedictory address of the retiring editor. The Homeward Mail, proceeds the note, is a model of what such a paper should be, and the subscribers to Allen's Indian Mail—if there are many left—are to be congratulated on a beneficial change.

HEALTH OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

THE Times of India says:—There is, we need hardly assure our readers, no work that comes within the province of the Indian journalist which he would more gladly evade than the duty of enforcing the lessons that spring from a consideration of the health returns of the army in relation to certain specific diseases. Notwithstanding our reluctance to infringe on this extremely delicate ground, the question is of such vital interest to the efficiency of the army that it is an imperative duty to be candid, and to inform the public mind of the havoc wrought in the ranks by the cabal of prurient fanatics, whose action in insisting on the withdrawal of the Contagious Diseases Act in this country is undermining the manhood of the army and turning its hospitals into lazarettos of loathsome disease. From time to time some local returns showing the rapid increase of disease, and the extraordinary disproportion between sickness produced by that cause alone and all other causes put together, have reached the ear and shocked the sentiment of the public. But however lurid the picture of these partial statements may be, they pale beside the conspectus of results presented for the whole army in the twenty-sixth annual report of the sanitary commissioner with the Government of India. Therein are gathered into columns of contrast, which there is no controverting, the accumulated results of that deplorable agitation, and the only comfort to be derived from their presentation is in the assurance that, with evidence so dazzling, it will be hereafter superfluous, in pointing out the value of the Contagious Diseases Act, to argue the question of expedience with persons of rational mind. There will be always doubtless a small residuum of the human race in whom the hysterical temperament exerts a dominating ascendancy; but it is the duty of public opinion to take care that the action of Parliament, especially with reference to the physical efficiency of our troops, shall not be governed by hysterics. In our miniature army it is of paramount interest to everyone of us to insist that the health of the soldier shall be kept up to the highest standard, yet what we are to think of a policy that literally half fills our hospitals with a disease that is largely preventable, and infiltrates with a latent venom the roots of the strongest constitution in its ranks? The leviathan armies of the Continent would not stand such a strain upon their enormous resources as the loss from inefficiency for this cause lays upon ours, and they take measures accordingly to reduce the dominion of infection to manageable size. The evil wrought in the European Army in this country is not merely disastrous. It is simply fatal to all idea of efficiency. What can be the value of an army, how can its forces be marshalled with confidence, and how terribly handicapped its commanders must be when it is seen that in a single year (1889) not far short of every second man had, as is indicated by the admission mark against his name in the register, suffered from this scourge! A battle that decimates an army is looked upon as a very terrible catastrophe, but no horror seems to be awakened for a source of disaster that strikes down every second or third man in the ranks, and places him for the time as really hors de combat as a bullet wound could make him. When men are admitted to hospital for the ordinary complaints that flesh is heir to, the loss in efficiency is accepted as the fortune of life, and nobody repines at the inevitable. What naturally exasperates the responsible departments of the army is to see it, as it were, cut in two by a disease which, under a preventive service, has been demonstrated to be modifiable in intensity and immensely reducible in extent. The medical authorities in incessant reports and blue-books, armed with the convincing eloquence of facts and figures, are never weary of pointing the lesson which the withdrawal of the Contagious Diseases Act cannot fail to bring home to the most superficial mind. It is probably too much to expect that any statistics should strike dumb the noisy band of misguided enthusiasts who haunt Exeter Hall, but Parliament at least ought to be awakened to a sense of its responsibilities on a question that is wound up with the nation's defence. We want a prompt and complete reversal of the policy which withdrew all protection from the soldier, and until common sense is made to overrule fanaticism, the press of the country will, we hope, stand by the Army till public opinion is properly roused to a sense of the monstrous harm inflicted, not merely upon individuals, but on the State; not merely upon the men, but upon the unfortunate women themselves by the abrogation of compulsory Lock hospitals and their attendant safeguards.

Trans-Frontier News.—A trans-frontier correspondent sends the Civil and Military Gazette news which, if authentic, shows that the important Kuki Khel section of the tribe are by no means in a complacent mood. He states that some time ago Colonel Warburton, political officer in the Khyber, displaced Muhammad Anin Khan as Malik of the Kuki Khels by Malik Akbar Khan, as he had several reasons to be displeased with the former. About a week ago all the Kuki Khel clans held a gathering at Kadan in the Khyber, and reversed Colonel Warburton's decision, agreeing to recognise Muhammad Amin Khan and no one else as their Malik, and to refuse to accept their pay from the British Government through anyone else. This, if true, does not promise well for the condition of affairs in the Khyber and the Afridi country generally.

BURMA AND CHINA RAILWAY CONNECTION.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

SIR,—My attention has just been called to an article in your issue of May 11 headed "A Burma-China Railway."

About eighteen months ago (your issue of Dec. 31, 1889) I addressed you on the subject, but the discourteous and unwarrantable terms of the rejoinder which you permitted Mr. Holt Hallett to produce in your columns the following week precluded my taking further part in the discussion.

As, however, your article now before me leads to the conclusion that you are not cognisant of what is actually going on in the direction indicated, I take leave, in the interest of the public, to make the following statement. I dismiss Mr. Hallett's proposals by observing that he seems to have turned a complete somersault from his route from Moulmein through Siam to what may be called his Moulmein-Rangoon-Shan line, and would quote the following from a letter by the late Colonel Sir Edward B. Sladen, showing the opinion of that high and qualified authority on the subject:—

"A death-blow has been dealt to the old Sprye route, so actively taken up and made their own by Messrs. Colquhoun and Hallett, not that it may not be very necessary in course of time to connect the lower provinces of Burma with any railway system which the Siamese Government, as advised by Sir Andrew Clarke, may project northwards; but as a rival route for reaching China from Burma, the old Sprye route has for the time being lost all claim to priority, and hardly deserves further notice or consideration."

In your present article you say: "Railway construction has up to now in every case proved remunerative beyond expectation, and even beyond all hopes." And you conclude by saying: "It remains with the Indian Government to show a reason why the railways now proposed by Mr. Holt Hallett, to the west of the Salween, should not be promptly undertaken."

The answer to this remark is very simple, and the reasons for the present action of Government are patent to all who look into the matter. They may be thus stated. The Government have already opened the railway from Rangoon to Mandalay, and its extension towards China must naturally follow. What, therefore, is the object for the immediate outlay for the connection between "Martaban with the Rangoon-Mandalay" line as it affects the great object of our connection with China and the development of the riches of its western states? The connection of Moulmein with Rangoon by the most feasible route may be very desirable and advantageous as a local and administrative line, but it has nothing earthly to do with the Burma-China line.

As I have said, the railway is now open from Rangoon to Mandalay. It is in length 386 miles. Its terminus at Mandalay must be the starting-point for China, and the Government, seeing this, have already surveyed the line from Mandalay to the Kûn-Lon ferry on the Salween, to reach which Mr. Hallett, or rather your article, suggests a "branch line," while the Government consider this is to be the "Grand Trunk line" to China. The report of the survey of this line has been published, and shows it to be very practicable, and not at an unreasonable cost. The fact that this report has been made by an engineer of experience and position, Mr. F. Bagley, of the P.W.D., deprives it of any risk of cavil or discussion. This survey is the outcome of an exploration sent by Government through the Shan States, of which a report was published some eighteen months ago by Mr. William Sherriff, of Rangoon, who, at the request of the Chief Commissioner, was deputed by the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce to accompany the expedition.

For your private information I hand herewith a "memorandum" on the route, and I cannot but think that a consultation with the map will show the wisdom of the Government in selecting this route for the connection between Burma and China, and that it will have the support of your valuable advocacy. Can it be otherwise? as Government must surely be given credit for selecting the route which will be most advantageous to the country and carry out the long-continued cry from the mercantile community for a "trade route to Western China."

By-and-bye it may be found there may be shorter and more advisable lines; but, looking at the past in railway experience, are these generally found at the outset?

The present route seems to present great advantages for the development of the Northern Shan States and for trade generally, and the Government should be urged to, and supported in, its speedy prosecution. Every season's delay is not only a loss of revenue to Government, but retarding the opening of new markets, which the men of Manchester and other manufacturing districts are so eagerly looking for. But how are these commercial gentlemen supporting the speedy execution of this work?

Asking your careful consideration of these remarks and a place for them in your columns, I am, sir, yours obediently,

CALCUTTA, May 25.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on May 21 made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 4 per cent.

The Bank's statement for the week ending May 19 shows the following changes in rupees:—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	1,02,44,188	Increase	13,16,951
Do. at Branches	1,33,25,473	Decrease	27,93,475
Other Deposits	6,38,94,871	Increase	34,67,619
Post Bills	2,80,963	Increase	75,110
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	1,88,29,320	Increase	4,89,345
Loans	89,78,741	Increase	6,02,936
Accounts of Credits	61,85,431	Increase	2,19,551
Mercantile Bills	2,59,87,335	Decrease	6,15,104
Cash at Head Office	3,07,77,241	Increase	32,69,515
Do. at Branches	2,03,10,460	Decrease	17,89,030

The analysis of the above figures shows a further decrease of nearly 33⅜ lacs in the Public Demand, made up as follows;—By an increase of over 34⅝ lacs in "Other Deposits" and ¾ of a lac in "Post Bills," coupled with a decrease of over 6⅛ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus an increase of over 6 lacs in "Loans" and 2½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits." The Treasury Balance at Head Office stands increased by over 13⅜ lacs, while there is a decrease of nearly 28 lacs at the Branches. The Bank's investments were increased by over 4⅞ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 32⅜ lacs in the cash at Head Office, while at the Branches it stands reduced by 17⅞ lacs, making the exact total 5,10,87,702 rs., which is equal to 56·4 per cent. of the liabilities, against a proportion 56·1 per cent. last week.

TEA.—Small weekly auctions have been held, 4,300 selling out of about 5,000 offering. On May 21 prices were slightly easier.

GUNNIES.—The market continues weak, with a downward tendency, and business has been on a small scale. Locally there is nothing to report beyond a few E's and C's for Burma. For Europe sales are reported of sugar bags and A twills forward, but orders now in the market are at lower rates.

HESSIANS are steady. Frisco and New York are quiet, but, further sales have been effected of cotton packs for Egypt and bran bags for the colonies.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—As the mail closes a day earlier, there is a shorter period than usual to report upon. The week has passed without incident, and though a fair amount of business has been put through, it has been confined to gold shares. In these fairly large lines have changed hands, particularly in Sonapets and Bengal Gold and Silvers, but there is a lack of buoyancy in the market, which does not promise well. Speculators appear to be content with the very trifling profit of 3 pies per share, depending on the large number dealt in to show decent returns. This, however, is fatal to the market, and does not give it a chance of moving beyond a limited range. Jute stocks, after being rushed up to their present figures, have quieted down again, and the market for these is decidedly easier. There are more sellers than buyers, and shares can be obtained at a lower price than they could a week ago. Prices can only improve on a brisk market, and the week has been far from lively. The demand for press shares has slacked off, and the business in this description of stock has been small and insignificant. Canal presses hold their own, and are a trifle stiffer. The others remain unaltered. Tea has been quite neglected, and has, after a short-lived spurt, dropped into the background. A fairly large amount has been laid out in investment, bonded warehouse and R. Scott Thompson's shares having changed hands on such orders. There is a large amount of capital wanting employment, but all good dividend-paying stocks are at such a high premium that investors hesitate before embarking in them to any great extent, on the ground that there is plenty of room for a fall, but not much chance of a still further rise, even under the most favourable conditions.

BANK OF BENGAL.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 4 per cent.

BOMBAY, May 28.

With holidays intervening and with the business week further curtailed by one day, owing to the S.-W. monsoon change, which makes the mail leave on Friday instead of Saturday, commercial advices are necessarily meagre by this opportunity. Wheat has continued to arrive in very large quantities, but the demand for this staple has not been active, and fresh business has been upon only a moderate scale, while seeds have been taken to a small extent in a quiet market. The inquiry for cotton has been languid, both from shippers and local spinners, though latterly there has been more doing in each direction, and prices have partially advanced a little. Since the banks reopened there has been a hardening tendency in exchange, and rates are now 1-32*d.* to 1-16*d.* higher than they stood. Government paper has advanced 1-16 per cent. in Fours. Freights are weak for near shipment, owing to an over-supply of tonnage in that position, but rates are firm for more distant loading. There has been less doing in imports, and prices are weaker in some cases, if not actually lower.

MONEY.—The withdrawal of the considerable sum of 31½ lacs from Private Deposits, which was the most prominent feature in the Presidency Bank's statement of affairs issued on May 27, is not indicative of any change in the abnormally easy position of money this season, having been doubtless due to the necessity of making provision for private financial requirements during the three business days on which the banks were closed for the late holidays, for the other items which go to mark the movement in the trade demand showed a material falling-off since the date of the previous return, say of nearly 6 lacs in Loans, and 4¾ lacs in Bills Discounted; the diminution in the cash balance having also been partly counterbalanced by a considerable accession to Government Deposits, leaving the net decrease at only some 6 lacs. The directors of the Bank of Bombay made no change in their rates at the board meeting, and the minimum remains at 4 per cent.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been a marked falling-off in the retail demand for staple grey goods for the up-country markets, buyers having almost completed their current orders. Rates are, however, generally unaltered, although a weaker tendency has been noticeable in some cases. Only a small business has transpired in bleached, turkey-red, printed, and dyed goods, prices of which have been barely sustained. There are a few buyers of local goods, and prices are tending in their favour. The clearances of imported goods from the bazaar during the week have been 3,200 packages, and of local goods about 1,200 bales.

YARNS.—A moderate business has been done in imported twist in a quiet market, and with prices quite unchanged. Sales of local spinnings at the China and Japan ports for the fortnight ended on last Monday were 7,500 bales, with exchange declined to 221½ rs. The falling-off in business, combined with an increase in supplies at the ports, has imparted considerable weakness to this market, and rates have given way a little. Spinners generally are declining the reduced offers which are being made to them; the market is quiet, but unchanged, only 500 bales having found buyers during the week.

METAL.—A small business has been passing in copper, and prices have declined 8 as. per cwt. in a quiet market. Yellow metal, on the other hand, has been firm, and a moderate business has been done at an advance of 8 as. per cwt. Iron has been steady at previous quotations, but with not much doing.

COAL.—There has been little inquiry for ready coal, and none for forward shipment, and the market has been weak and declining where it has been open.

Exports.—COTTON.—There has been something doing in the staple, notwithstanding the holidays, though at the close of last week and at the beginning of the present transactions were upon a very small scale. Prices, however, advanced on May 25 2 rs. to 3 rs. per candy for Dharwar, good Bhownugger, and Westerns, other descriptions being unchanged in value. On the 26th and thereafter a better inquiry was felt both from the mills and exporters, but only a moderate business was done, on the basis of previous rates and in a quiet market. The week's purchases by the mills sum up about 6,000 bales, made up principally of Jalgaum and other Oomra descriptions, Broach, and Bhownugger; while for export some 4 000 bales have been taken, consisting mainly of Bengals, Dharwar, Bhownugger, and Oomra kinds. The market closes steady, with prices generally the same as they were a week ago.

The arrivals of this season's crop of cotton during the week have been 44,000 bales, against 65 500 bales received in the week preceding, and 56,000 bales in the corresponding week last year; and the decrease in this season's total receipts compared with those for 1889-90 has now reached within 10,000 bales of a quarter of a million.

WHEAT.—Although this market also has been nominally closed for the holidays during all but two days, moderate purchases for export have been made from day to day on the basis of previous rates until May 27, when an advance of ½ a., all round, was established in prices, the feeling having been steady throughout. Receipts continue to be on a very large scale.

SEEDS have been a quiet market, demand from shippers having been very slack, and a small business having consequently been done. Linseed gave way in value ¼ a. per cwt. at the beginning of the week, and was quoted at 6-5-0 rs. to 6-8-0 rs. per cwt.; but all other descriptions have been unchanged.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to June 1; Madras, June 2; Bombay, June 4.

The Queen's Birthday was celebrated throughout India on May 30 in the customary manner.

The Birthday Levée at Simla the same night was very well attended. Two hundred and seventy European and ten native gentlemen passed before his Excellency, and ten new presentations were made.

His Excellency the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne, with Lady Evelyn and Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, and Dr. Fenn and Captain Herbert, A.D.C., were to leave Simla about the second week in June for a ten days' trip to Narkanda.

The Birthday Ball at Simla was a very brilliant affair.

Although rather early to foretell the Viceroy's movements during the cold weather, says the Times of India, still it is most probable that his Excellency and Lady Lansdowne will leave Simla in September for a short tour in the Central Provinces, and then proceed to Calcutta, after which Burma will probably be visited.

His Excellency the Governor of Bombay, accompanied by Colonel Rhodes, Military Secretary, Mr. Edgerley, Private Secretary, Captains Fowle and Cox, Aides-de-Camp, and Dr. Martin, left Mahableshwur and arrived at Ganeshkind on May 27. Her Excellency Lady Harris, in company of Miss Croft, would stay at Panchgani for about a fortnight.

The Czarevitch has arrived at Albassin, a place on the left bank of the Amoor, known to the Chinese as Yaksa.

The birth of a son and heir must be a source of the liveliest gratification to Sir Asman Jah, the Minister of the State of Hyderabad, and we may add our congratulations to those which he has received from England, and acknowledged with such cordiality.

Sirdar Mahomed Afzal Khan, the new British Agent for Cabul, had left Peshawur to take up his appointment. Colonel Attaullah Khan, whom he succeeds, will return about the beginning of July.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on June 21 :—The prospects of the monsoon are beginning to cause serious anxiety, and there seems every reason to fear that the gloomy anticipations of the Meteorological Department are likely to be verified. The monsoon winds, which usually blow up the Arabian Sea, are being drawn down to the Bay of Bengal by a current which is directed with unusual strength to rejoin the low-pressure area in Assam and Burma.

Rain has been abnormally deficient on the west coast from Bombay to Cochin, and the districts already somewhat famine-stricken are very insufficiently relieved by rain. The outlook there and throughout Bombay, Rajpootana, and North-Western India is far from satisfactory, and the rainy season crops threaten to fail.

There is no sign of the monsoon in Bengal, but owing to the heavy rain of last month its delay has not yet done harm.

During the last ten days, the correspondent adds, the heat has been almost unprecedented. Several deaths from heat apoplexy have occurred in Calcutta and the tramway company have had over 100 horses struck down by the sun, a large proportion of the cases ending fatally.

Just as we go to press a telegram announces that the monsoon burst over the Bombay Presidency this morning.

The Annual Cooper's Hill Dinner was held at Simla on June 1.

General Collett's report on the Manipore affair, so far as the military operations of March 24 and 25 are concerned, have reached Army headquarters. It is believed that it absolves the troops from all blame as regards their behaviour during the actual fighting.

The idea to give the frontier medal to Major Grant and his men with a clasp for Thobal, though no doubt original, says the Times of India, is not one, we believe, which will be found tenable by the authorities.

It is proposed to put up a memorial window in the Shillong Church to the memory of those Europeans who fell at Manipore on the fatal 24th of March.

The Times of India makes a startling statement regarding the Mahomedan pilgrim traffic between Bombay and Jeddah. It asserts that more than one-third of the pilgrims who leave Bombay never return. While disease, starvation, and violence during the land journey from Jeddah to Mecca doubtless account for the majority of the missing pilgrims, the Times of India believes that numbers die on board the steamers owing to overcrowding and defective sanitary arrangements, and it expresses the opinion that the pilgrim traffic demands the immediate attention of the Government.

The Agricultural Department, says the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, has issued a note discussing the apprehensions recently expressed in some quarters that the great increase in the export of wheat this year and the rise in prices would drain the country of the food required for the people, and would be likely to produce calamity if the exports were not prohibited. On a review of the whole case, the Government consider that the alarm is at least premature, as prices are no longer rising nor are exports increasing; that even if the exports continued to increase there would be no real cause for apprehension; that if an emergency should arise by the failure of the monsoons, still a proposal to interfere with trade would be improper and useless; and that depletion of the food supply should be remedied by importation.

Two members of the Leprosy Commission—Mr. Kanthak and Dr. Barclay—have carried to a successful conclusion an experiment which will possess the greatest interest for the scientific world. According to an Allahabad correspondent, they have succeeded in isolating the bacillus of leprosy and cultivating it in an artificial media, such as bouillon and gelatine. The next step was to see whether the artificially cultivated germ could be passed on to animals. A rabbit was chosen for experiment. Inoculation was performed, and after a lapse of several days the animal was killed, when an examination of the body showed the presence of distinct leprous nodules. This is the first time that the bacillus of leprosy has been successfully grown outside the human body, and the importance of the experiment is, of course, enhanced by the proof of its capability of subsequent transmission to animals. The experts will now have to settle how the discovery bears upon the theories for and against the contagiousness of the disease.

It will not escape observation, says the Englishman, that Sir John Gorst declines to promise that the rent of the Ruby Mines may not be remitted without Parliament being previously informed. This will, no doubt, encourage Sir Lepel Griffin to renew his demands, but it is unlikely that Government will ever agree to set aside the Company's agreement.

The directors of the Umballa Bank, Limited, state that a plaint has been filed in the High Court, Calcutta, against Mr. Shirley Tremearne, editor of Capital, for defamation, claiming heavy damages.

A disturbance took place on May 30 between detachments of the Lincolnshire Regiment and the Royal Irish Fusiliers at Kailana. One man of the Lincolnshires was killed, and six men are in hospital, badly injured.

A Madras telegram states that, owing to slight rain, the plentiful labour provided and the remissions granted by the Government, the position of Chingleput is much improved.

Disquieting news, a Madras telegram of May 29 says, comes from the Malabar District, where the prospects of the season are causing apprehension to the Collector and Divisional officers. Prices are reported to have risen, and scarcity of rice is felt in some parts owing to the difficulties of importation by canal. Famine works are ordered to be started immediately.

A later telegram to the Times states that the latest reports from Malabar are reassuring, but the rains have been insufficient on the east coast.

A Reuter telegram from Serajgunge, dated June 19, says:—Continuous earthquake shocks have been felt here since noon yesterday, and all the brick buildings in the town have been damaged.

A Calcutta telegram adds:—Sixty distinct shocks of earthquake occurred yesterday at Serajgunge and Domar, in the Bengal Presidency. Many buildings were slightly damaged.

Flights of locusts, the same despatch says, have appeared in Katiya, in the Behar district of Bengal, and have done great damage to the indigo and rice crops. This is the first appearance of the scourge in Bengal.

Simla was visited on May 30 by a plague of the same insects. The swarm took nearly an hour to pass over, and all trees and shrubs, with the exception of deodars and pines, suffered severely.

The East Coast line—that is to say, the line now under construction from Bezwada to Katak—has not been lucky with its staff, says the Times of India. One engineer, Mr. Montressor, has lost his life, and four others—Messrs. Moore, Large, Denne, and Grant—have gone on sick leave. Further, it is reported that Messrs. Wolly-Dod, Morse, and Gahan are down with fever.

We hear that the special Indian meeting in connection with the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography will probably be held in the Theatre of the London University on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 13. The pièce de résistance will be SIR WILLIAM MOORE'S paper on the progress of sanitation generally in India. SURGEON-MAJOR T. H. HENDLEY, C.S.I., Residency Surgeon of Jeypore, is to read a short paper on sanitation and preventive medicine in the Native States of Rajpootana; while MR. H. J. S. COTTON, B.C.S., is preparing a memorandum on the sanitary improvements effected in Calcutta during the last twenty-five years. The Honorary Indian Secretary, MR. S. DIGBY, informs us that any native gentlemen who may visit England for the Congress will be well looked after. Offers of hospitality have already reached him from different quarters. We understand that MISS FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE continues to evince great interest in the work of the Indian Committee. The Committee urgently appeal for subscriptions to meet the necessarily heavy expenditure.

We have much pleasure in announcing that the MAHARAJA OF BHOWNUGGUR, G.C.S.I., has, with his usual liberality, subscribed 100*l.* to the funds of the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography. His Highness has further shown the warm interest he takes in the Congress by nominating as the delegate of his State MR. M. M. BHOWNUGGREE, C.I.E., member of the Bhownuggur Judicial Council, who is now on a visit to this country, and by instructing the head of the Bhownuggur Medical Department, DR. BURJORJEE, to prepare a memorandum on sanitary progress in his Highness's dominions. We may be permitted to congratulate their Highnesses the GAEKWAR OF BARODA and the MAHARAJA of BHOWNUGGUR on the excellent example they have set to other enlightened princes in India. When the importance of the forthcoming gathering of sanitarians from all parts of the world comes to be realised more generally in India, we are sure that the rulers of all the principal native States will desire to share in the work.

At the meeting of the Service Members on June 18, the following resolution was adopted on the motion of Colonel Kenyon-Slaney, seconded by General Sir Walter Crossman:—

"The Service Members of the House of Commons, believing that grievances alleged by the Purchase Officers of the Army demand redress, request General Lord Chelmsford to bring their claims before the House of Lords, with a view that the Government be induced to grant an inquiry (which they, the Service Members, consider could be best carried out by a Royal Commission) into the working of the Royal Warrants issued since the abolition of Purchase, under which Warrants it is asserted that the position of the Purchase Officers has been injuriously affected, and the intentions of the Government, as expressed by Ministers in both Houses of Parliament, have not been realised."

Mr. Naoroji has been invited by the Secretary of State for India to become one of the representatives of India on the governing body on the Imperial Institute, an invitation which he has accepted.

Sir Edgar Boehm's statue of the late Lord Napier of Magdala has been erected in Waterloo Place, and steps are being taken by the Mansion House Committee for the formal unveiling at an early date.

Mr. T. A. Denny presided on June 18 at a meeting of the Mission to Lepers in India, held at Exeter Hall. The report, which was unanimously adopted, stated that the year had been a most encouraging one for the society. The special fund of 1,000*l.* suggested by the chairman at last year's meeting had been raised without the issue of an appeal. The ordinary income for the year was the largest yet received, being an increase of 436*l.* over that of 1889.

Three rubies, uncut, were sold by auction on June 18, of a size never before seen in England, or even in Europe. These were the property of the Burma Ruby Mines Company (Limited). The first, which weighed 1,185 carats, was irregular in form, and resembled quartz, save in colour, which was deep red. Biddings commenced at 200*l.*, and rapidly advanced to 400*l.*, at which it was sold. The second lot weighed 302 carats. This was yellowish red in colour, and sold for 65*l.* Lot 3 weighed 281 carats, was dull red in colour, and brought 32 guineas.

This paper may be seen on personal application to the Commercial Department of the Foreign Office, between the hours of eleven and five.

In commenting on the Manipore debate in the Commons, the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—The debate, if not brilliant, was substantially useful, because it helped to reveal some of the characteristic weak points of Indian administration—its dilatoriness, its disposition to interfere and punish where it would have done better to let things alone, its habit of leaving the India Office at home in ignorance of its doings. A good deal of uneasiness is at this moment felt by those who watch Indian affairs at the course of events on the North-west Frontier. Sir F. Roberts, who is not only an ardent but a restless and tenacious advocate of the "forward" policy in Afghanistan, is believed to have acquired a dangerously strong influence in the Government of India, and to be pushing out the long arms of British power among the wild tribes between Peshawur and Cabul, as Colonel Sandeman is doing in Beloochistan. It is a pity that time cannot be found in this overcrowded and ill-managed session to call attention to matters wherein the seeds of future danger may be concealed.

The Government of India has ordered the publication of a report by Mr. James, of the Civil Service (the traveller into Manchuria, who wrote the "Long White Mountain" a couple of years ago) on cotton frauds in India. It forms a small volume, and shows beyond doubt that these frauds are over a century old. In the latter half of the last century complaints on the subject in Bombay were numerous, and in 1829 the first law was passed. This was frequently amended down to 1880, when the Cotton Department was abolished, and in 1882 all legislation whatever was abolished, and in this department of trade laisser faire became the rule. Thereupon adulteration of the raw cotton revived, and soon the Home Chambers of Commerce, especially in Lancashire, began to complain, and to demand a renewal of the Cotton Frauds Acts, but this was resisted as premature from the official point of view. But as the fraudulent practices increased, and complaints became more pressing, the Bombay Government appointed Mr. James to make an inquiry into the matter, to consult those interested in the trade, and to make suggestions with regard to it. He thinks that no heroic measures are necessary, and that no important interference with the trade is desirable; but he advises that the districts in which Broach cotton is produced should be protected from the importation and mixing of bad seed, that the ginning of Dharwan-American along with native cotton should be prevented, and that there should be a small export duty to enable the Director of Agriculture to improve staples, import and distribute the best class of seed, and to carry out the provisions of the proposed law. Mercantile opinion, he finds, is opposed to the compulsory branding of cottons, especially to the marking of "mixtures," which the Lancashire Chambers specially urge. The Government has as yet come to no decision on the subject, and, says the Glasgow Herald, probably will not do so until a further expression of opinion on the subject is received from those at home who are concerned in the trade.

Not long since, says the correspondent of a provincial paper, I referred to an unpleasant incident connected with the visit of the Czarevitch to Ceylon, a high colonial railway official refusing the present sent to him by order of his Imperial Highness on the ground that it did not correspond with a list of presents previously published by a local newspaper. His correspondence with the Russian Vice-Consul on the subject was of a tolerably warm character, and appeared to involve charges against the latter. The Vice-Consul laid the matter before the Governor, who called on the railway official in question to apologise for the offensive tone of his letters and withdraw the imputations he made against the integrity of the Vice-Consul. He replied that he had no intention of being offensive or of making insulting charges, and thereupon the Governor wrote to the Russian Vice-Consul, sending the explanation and apology. The latter, however, was dissatisfied with this, and demanded that the letter of apology should be addressed to himself, and should be more complete in its terms. This, however, the Governor very politely refused to allow, and added that he thought the apology such as the Consul might accept. This the Consul ultimately did, and in concluding his letter he asked what he was to do with the scarf pin, the cause of all the difficulty, which still lay at his office. It is thought the Governor will require the railway official to accept it, and so bring the whole matter to an end. It has caused great excitement in Ceylon, where public opinion was rapidly ranging itself into opposition camps, so it was high time a stop was put to the dispute.

The Government and the Official Secrets Act.—The Madras Executive, says Indian Engineering, would do well to study the following excerpt from the Statesman and to digest it:—"Evidently, in the objects of the Official Secrets Act, there is a distinction, if not a difference. An official secret may be surreptitiously communicated to a public journal, when that journal is prepared to justify any measure of the Government, however unjustifiable. But a similar course taken with a journal that is likely to condemn the Government is liable to be treated as an offence under the Official Secrets Act."

Cavalry Regiments for Foreign Service.—One or two important alterations have been made in the roster of cavalry regiments for foreign service, chiefly in the case of the 9th Lancers, who will now stand for that service some three years earlier than they would have done, having regard to the date of their return from India. According to the amended roster, the 19th Hussars go to India this autumn in relief of the King's Dragoon Guards, being quartered at Bangalore. The 4th Dragoon Guards, about to arrive from Dublin at Aldershot, are for India (Bengal Presidency) in 1892, relieving the 7th Dragoon Guards. The 5th Dragoon Guards go to India in 1893 in place of the 3rd Dragoon Guards. The 20th Hussars stand for service in 1894, relieving the Bays. The 9th Lancers go out in 1895, taking the place of the 7th Hussars. The regiments standing next in order are the 4th, 3rd, 15th, and 10th Hussars. Those next for Ireland (after the 10th and 13th Hussars going over this year) are the 14th Hussars, Royal Dragoons, and 12th Lancers, in relief of the 3rd Hussars, Scots Greys, and 15th Hussars. But as the 9th Lancers now stand for foreign service in 1895, that regiment will probably come over to Aldershot about 1893. The cavalry moves of this season that are postponed in consequence of sickness among the horses are those of the Royal Dragoons to York, 10th Hussars to Dublin, and 4th Hussars to Aldershot and Colchester. The others are being carried out as originally ordered.

THE GIBRALTAR COAL HULKS QUESTION.

IN the House of Commons on June 11 MR. KING asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, whether the regulations which were in force for issuing licenses for coal hulks at Gibraltar, involving a trade of nearly 500,000 tons per annum, have recently been made more stringent by the addition of clauses making the licenses "revocable at any time at the absolute will and pleasure of the Governor, without assigning any reason whatever for such revocation," and that the Governor may refuse to renew a license without assigning any reason whatever.

Whether in licenses previously in force the words used were "the license is revocable at any time at the pleasure of the Governor."

Whether he is aware that, on representations from the local chamber of commerce, Governor Sir Arthur Hardinge wrote to the chamber, on Sept. 30, 1889, extending the term of licenses to twelve months, and adding that "such licenses should be continuous unless any breach of regulation call for non-renewal"; and that his Excellency also stated "that he much regrets that he is constrained to retain the clause as it now stands in case the power therein conferred should in any case of national emergency be of necessity put into action. Hulk owners may however rest fully assured that the Government, having the interests of the trade of Gibraltar fully at heart, would never put such powers in force unless circumstances fully justified such action. Long custom appears to have assured to hulk owners a prescriptive right to the berths they occupy, provided always due regard be paid to the Port Office rules and terms under which the licenses are issued.

Whether any, and what, circumstances have arisen to demand an alteration of the licenses, and a withdrawal of Sir Arthur Hardinge's assurance.

And, whether the Government will consider the effect on the coal trade, which produces a large proportion of the colony's revenue, of withdrawing the above assurance.

SIR J. FERGUSSON (for Baron H. de Worms): The regulation governing the issue of licenses for coal hulks at Gibraltar have not been altered; but the wording of the licenses has been altered in the manner indicated in the first two paragraphs of the question, in order to remove misconceptions which were found to exist as to the discretionary power of the Governor to revoke, or refuse to renew, licenses.

The Secretary of State has quite recently been informed that in September 1889 Sir Arthur Hardinge wrote to the Gibraltar Chamber of Commerce a letter containing the passages set out in the third paragraph. He is unable to concur in the terms of that letter so far as they can be understood to limit the discretionary power of the Governor in the matter of the revocation or renewal of hulk licenses, and to admit a prescriptive right.

The alteration of the form of license was occasioned by claims put forward in opposition to a refusal of the Governor to renew the licenses of certain hulks, the berths of which were required for the use of her Majesty's ships.

The Secretary of State does not anticipate that this alteration of form will have an injurious effect on the coal trade; and those who are interested in the trade may rest assured that the Governor will not exercise the discretion necessarily vested in him in an arbitrary manner, but will have full regard to the representations of those who hold licenses.

GUP.

FROM Mahableshwur the Times of India correspondent writes:—On the evening of Monday, May 25, there was a reception at "Bella Vista," Government House, in honour of his Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda, who will shortly proceed to Bangalore on a visit, and thence to Ootacamund. About one hundred and fifty persons were present, including forty-five native gentlemen, among the latter being H.H. the Thakore Saheb of Wadhwan, H.H. the Raja of Akalkote, H.H. the Chief of Mudhol, H.H. the Chief of Miraj, and H.H. Aga Khan. The function was a brilliant success, and the night very cold.

On Tuesday evening his Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda gave a garden party. It was a fine evening, and the pretty grounds at the Sassoon Tennis Grounds presented a bright and animated appearance. His Excellency the Governor's band was in attendance, and performed an excellent programme of music. Tennis and badminton was in full swing the whole afternoon. His Excellency Lord Harris and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief were present.

On Wednesday, the 27th, the return match at cricket between Lady Harris's Eleven and Mrs. Pinhey's Eleven came off on "The Glade"—the scene of the original contest—and was witnessed by a large gathering of spectators, who were afforded no end of amusement. The conditions and the constitution of the two "elevens" were the same as on the former occasion, the gentlemen having to use their left hands only. The special feature of this match was the excellent innings which both Lord and Lady Harris played, their brilliant performance provoking great applause. There were less "ducks" on exhibition this time, and the play all round was decidedly better and stronger than what was witnessed last week. His Excellency played a very straight bat, while Lady Harris was in splendid form, and hit off as freely as we have seen her do at practice. They each contributed the same number of runs—namely, 28, which enabled their side to win. There was only time for each side to play one innings. The fielding on both sides was particularly creditable. Lady Harris won the toss, and wisely elected to bat, sending in Colonel Rhodes and Mrs. Hensley to face the bowling of Major Von Donop and Captain O'Neill. The former being bowled for 2, Lord Harris went in to join Mrs. Hensley, who, after making a boundary hit for 3, and then two singles, was also bowled by Major Von Donop. Miss Moxon filled the vacancy, but she was quickly dismissed, for she returned a ball to Major Von Donop, which the latter accepted. When her Ladyship joined his Excellency at the wickets some fine cricket was witnessed, both players being in good form. The runs came rapidly, and several boundary hits were made in quick succession, which rather disorganised the field. The bowlers kept on steadily at their work, and after the score had been taken to 60, Major Von Donop succeeded in bowling Lady Harris, who was loudly cheered on resigning the bat. Miss G. Kirkham and Miss Croft followed in succession, the former being taken by Major Von Donop behind the wicket, and the latter returning a slow ball to Captain O'Neill. This appeared to have a bad effect upon Lord Harris, who, shortly after Miss Kirkham went out to partner him, was bowled by Captain O'Neill, after having made the same good score as that put up by her Ladyship. Mr. Edgerley was the next to enter. He made a few good hits, and knocked up seven runs, when he was bowled by Miss Morris, who had relieved Captain O'Neill at the far end. Captain Fowle made some strong strokes, but was bowled by Major Von Donop after making the same score as Mr. Edgerley. Captain Cox was bowled before he could do anything. Dr. Martin was the last to enter, but had no chance of making a score at all, because soon after he went in Miss Kirkham was bowled by Major Von Donop. The innings closed for 83.

Miss Morris and Major Von Donop were the first to enter on the other side, the bowlers being Colonel Rhodes and Captain Fowle. The Colonel's bowling on this occasion was quite as disastrous as on the last occasion, when his analysis showed an excellent record. Miss Morris having been bowled for 3 by Captain Fowle, Mrs. Drake joined the Major, but was unfortunately run out after making 5. Mrs. Pinhey was not less unfortunate, for she returned a ball to Captain Fowle, who readily accepted it. Miss Howard, who had made such a good score last week in the second innings, had made only a single run, when she was bowled by the Military Secretary, who would not give her much chance of knocking up a tall score. Miss MacDonald then joined Major Von Donop, who played a steady innings for 9, when he was bowled by Colonel Rhodes. Captain Minchin filled the vacancy, but the partnership between himself and Miss MacDonald was cut short by the latter being cleverly caught by Miss Kirkham. Miss Rosy Pottinger was the next to partner Captain Minchin, who, however, was given out l-b-w, before he could do anything. Mr. Candy joined Miss Rosy, and the two played well together, particularly the latter, who hit out strongly, for which she was applauded. Mr. Candy was taken behind the wicket by Lord Harris, and Captain O'Neill shared the same fate. Major Leach made three singles and was bowled, Mr. Gordon being the last wicket to enter. He made some capital hits, and had run up a score of 8, when Miss Rosy was bowled by Colonel Rhodes, her score being also 8. The total score made for the innings was 48. Her Excellency Lady Harris's Eleven thus won the match by 35 runs.

It is now and then interesting to read what the native papers have to say about our leading politicians at home. This is, for instance, what the Indian Spectator said a short time back about Mr. Gladstone:—"What a noble heart does Mr. Gladstone possess? His heart is more tender than most women's hearts. Mr. Gladstone is a man of deep faith in God. Every Sunday he goes to the village church and prays. In that church an old man of the sweeper class is employed in some work. Not seeing him in the church for a few Sundays, he asked of his wife, an old woman, about her husband. She said the old man was ill. Next day Mr. Gladstone went to the sweeper's house with a religious book, some medicine, and some suitable food. The sweeper was badly suffering from pains caused by the illness; Mr. Gladstone with great affection began to pass his hand over his body, reading apt passages from religious books. He cooled his heated heart and mind, and calmed him by feeding him with his own hand. As long as the sweeper was ill, Mr. Gladstone now and again went to see him. In our country an orthodox Brahman would consider himself polluted if even by chance he should cross the shadow of a shudra. When will our countrymen learn to visit even sweepers' houses when there is illness there, supply them with medicine and food, and, when necessary, tend them? Mr. Gladstone, who, we believe, is honoured by the British people throughout Great Britain, goes to a sweeper's house and tends him personally. He is, indeed, deeply imbued with the spirit of Jesus Christ."

In former years, in deference to the wishes of some of the members of the Bengal Club, we (the Asian) always preserved a discreet silence respecting the big Derby Sweep. Since, however, the Turf Club took it over the same reticence does not appear to be desired, and, as several of our contemporaries have already referred to the affair, we suppose we are at liberty to do the like. The total amount subscribed was just over two lacs, the exact figures being 2,02,620 rs. The 10 per cent. deducted for expenses and the Race Fund will thus give the C.T.C. about 20,000 rs. towards the expenses of the big meetings at Christmas. The first prize, 1,01,310 rs., has gone to Ticket No. 15,827, owned by the "Punjab Club Confederacy" (lucky dogs!), Lahore. The second prize, 40,524 rs., falls to Ticket No. 13,820, the property of the "Golden Rain Confederacy," Calcutta, and, as we believe, is one of many tickets purchased in common by 150 gentlemen belonging to the local trades. The money will be split up a good deal, and each member of the syndicate will get 260 rs. as his share. The third prize, 20,262 rs., is won by "M. A. L.," Dalhousie, Ticket No. 17,214. The drawers of the eight starters receive 2,532 rs. each, and the numbers are 9,768, "Chin Zoo," Calcutta; 6,806, "N and K," Rawul Pindi; 13,182, "A. M." (a well-known Calcutta boarding-house keeper); 467, "Sandalwood," Mercara; 8,007, "D. C. R.," Rungamuttee; 2,303, "Culkib," Mercara; 13,331, "Tin Baun," Newgong; and 6,184, "Invicta Confederacy," Calcutta.

The Punjab Club Confederacy, who had the good fortune to draw the favourite in the Calcutta Derby Sweep, hedged by telegraphing to England a thousand pounds against Common. They are said to have been offered 15,000 rs. for half of the ticket, but refused.

The Mysore Herald is responsible for the following:—On May 27 a a running feat took place at Mysore. A Hindoo started from Mysore with a letter to a merchant at Ganjam, Seringapatam, at six o'clock in the morning and returned with the merchant's reply at 8.30 A.M. Ganjam is a good eleven miles from Mysore, and this feat of running twenty-two miles in two and a half hours makes it nearly nine miles an hour. This is remarkable, as post runners are supposed to run between five and six miles an hour.

Gothard, and was witnessed by a large number of the friends of the bride and bridegroom, many of whom had specially come from Secunderabad and Bombay for the purpose.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The death of Colonel Sir Oliver St. John has already been notified by telegraph. An Allahabad correspondent says:—His death occurred at Quetta on May 27. He had been suffering from an attack of influenza, but had almost recovered from it, when pneumonia, the scourge of the district, supervened, and his condition rapidly became critical. Still, it was hoped on the 27th that he would pull through, but he became weaker towards nightfall, and died at eleven. Sir Oliver St. John had only arrived a little more than a fortnight before at Quetta, where he came to act for Sir Robert Sandeman, having left perhaps the pleasantest billet in India at Mysore for one that gave a better field to his active mind and keen interest in public affairs.

Colonel H. F. H. Baber, recently in command of the 28th Regiment M.I., died on May 24 at Gungaw, in Upper Burma. Colonel Baber obtained his first commission on June 9, 1860, and succeeded to the command of his regiment so recently as October of last year. He served in the Burmese Expedition of 1885-87, in the operations round Yemethen and Myingyan.

Captain Davis, of the Bengal Staff Corps, who has been lying in a critical state at the Colombo General Hospital for some time, died on May 10. The deceased, a Bombay paper says, arrived from Calcutta in a Clan steamer on his way to England about two months ago, but was so ill that he had to come ashore and go to the hospital, where he has been ever since, his decease being prematurely announced about a fortnight ago. The funeral, which was a military one, took place next morning. The band and pipers of the Highlanders were in attendance, while a party of one hundred men of the regiment (in command of Captain Ramsay, Lieutenants Walker-Leigh and Macnab) formed the firing party.

News has been received in Calcutta of the death of the Rev. John Henry Taylor, senior chaplain, Bengal Establishment. In April he left Calcutta for England on sick leave, as he was suffering from an unaccountable mental depression. At Colombo Mr. Taylor was attacked with high fever, which rapidly developed symptoms of hydrophobia, and three hours after the ship left the harbour he died. No one knew that he had ever been bitten by a rabid animal. The only conjecture of his friends is that he may have been bitten by a cat whose shoulder had been dislocated, and which he tried to set in March last. The attempt proved unsuccessful, and the cat had to be destroyed. There was no suspicion at the time that the animal was mad.

An up-country paper regrets to record the death at Coonoor of Mr. George Agustus Royal Dawson. The deceased was well-known on the hills for a considerable number of years, and as a taxidermist was one of the best in the Madras Presidency.

Rao Saheb Mahipatram Rupram, C.I.E., Principal, Training College, died at Allahabad on May 30 of cholera. The cause of social and religious reform loses a strong supporter in the deceased.

On May 28, writes a correspondent, there suddenly died at Mahableshwar the Rev. Dr. Bissell, of the American Marathi Mission, Ahmednagar. He was the oldest missionary in Western India, being sixty-eight and a half years old at the time of his death. Dr. Bissell arrived in India in 1851, was stationed for about ten years in Sirur, and since then has laboured at Ahmednagar. He was the secretary of the American Mission, and was widely known and respected as a very capable and faithful missionary.

The death has occurred at Plympton, Devon, of Major-General L. B. Hole, at the age of fifty-five. The late officer entered the Army in 1852, and was appointed major-general on retirement in 1886. He served in the Indian Mutiny, and received the medal with clasps.

The death is announced of Major-General E. M. Lawford, late Madras Army, aged 64. The late officer, who entered the Army in 1846, and was promoted major-general in 1886, took part in the Indian Mutiny campaign, receiving the medal and clasp.

The death is announced of General R. Woolley, Madras Staff Corps, aged seventy-three. He entered the Army in 1835, and was promoted to be General in 1889. He served in the Indian Mutiny, being granted the medal and clasp.

We have to announce the death, on June 16, at Clifton, of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Gustavus Hume, lieutenant of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms. Sir Gustavus Hume, late of the 21st Fusiliers, served throughout the Crimean War, was present at the battles of Alma (where he was wounded), Inkerman, siege and fall of Sebastopol, expedition to Kertch, and assault on the Redan. During the Indian Mutiny he was present at the siege and capture of Lucknow and in the campaign in Oude. Sir Gustavus entered the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms in December 1872. He was appointed Clerk of the Cheque and adjutant on Jan. 1, 1876, lieutenant on Nov. 20, 1878, and received from her Majesty the honour of knighthood in December 1880. He was a Knight of the Legion of Honour.

The late Lieutenant-Colonel James Reid, whose death occurred at St. Fillans on June 9, was one of the very few survivors of the Waterloo Campaign. He did not actually take part in the battle, his regiment, the 78th (now the Seaforth) Highlanders, which he had joined at the age of seventeen, eighteen months before, forming part of the reserve on that occasion. Colonel Reid, however, rode over the battle-field after the fight, in search of his brother, Captain Thomas Reid, who had received wounds while serving in the 33rd Regiment. After being placed on half-pay, and after a period of service with the 97th Regiment in Ceylon, Colonel Reid sold out, and having obtained a grant of land in Canada, sailed for that country in 1835. His residence in the Dominion lasted for nearly fifty years, during which time he was engaged as an officer of the Canadian Militia, in the suppression of the rebellion and of subsequent Fenian raids. Several years ago he returned to Scotland, where he had since remained. Colonel Reid was entering upon his ninety-seventh year.

The Colonial Office have lost a valuable servant by the death of Colonel Edward F. Cash, inspector-general of the Gold Coast Constabulary, which took place on June 12. Colonel Cash was invalided home, but died at sea, and was buried at Sierra Leone. The colonel was appointed to his post last September, having served as adjutant to the Ross-shire Volunteers ever since the battalion was raised.

Colonel Ashton.—The death is announced, in his sixty-second year, of Colonel Charles James Ashton, of Little Orm Hall, Church Eaton, Stafford, and of Newton House, Hyde. Colonel Ashton was the eldest son of Mr. John Ashton, of Newton House, who died in 1844. For a short time the deceased gentleman was a subaltern in the 2nd Staffordshire Militia, and afterwards became an officer in the 4th Cheshire Volunteers. He reached the rank of major in the 4th administrative battalion (the headquarters of which were at Stockport) in September 1869, and was gazetted lieutenant-colonel in March 1876.

The death is announced, at Clifton, of Admiral Thomas Fisher, a son of Captain Peter Fisher, R.N. Admiral Fisher entered the Navy in 1824, and obtained post rank in October 1847. He commanded her Majesty's ship Magicienne in the Baltic expedition of 1854, and in January 1855 he was selected by the late Sir Robert L. Baynes to serve as his flag-captain in the Retribution, for service in the second Baltic expedition. He was promoted to the rank of rear-admiral in 1865, and retired from the active list in March 1866, in consequence of injuries received in the service, which had resulted in a complete loss of eyesight, and for which he received a special pension. In 1877 he obtained the full rank of admiral, and he was shortly afterwards awarded a Greenwich Hospital pension for retired flag officers.

We have to record the death, on June 13, at the house of his mother, Mrs. Wynne-Finch, in Charles Street, Berkeley Square, of Captain Charles le Strange, R.N., Equerry to his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh. Captain le Strange, who was in his forty-fifth year, entered the Navy in December 1860, and has been associated with almost the whole of the Duke's naval career. He was appointed Extra-Equerry in 1880. He had suffered for some months from inflammation of the liver.

Sergeant-Major Peter White has just died at his residence, Glasgow. The deceased was a native of Prestonpans, and joined the 42nd Royal Highlanders in June 1843. Serving with his regiment in Malta and Bermuda, says the Glasgow Herald, he sailed with the service companies to the Crimea in 1854, and served throughout the war, when he was promoted to the rank of sergeant-major, and received the medal for distinguished conduct in the field. When the Indian Mutiny broke out Sergeant-Major White accompanied his regiment to India, and was present at Cawnpore, Lucknow, Fort Royal, Bareilly, and other engagements, for which he received medal and clasp. On the expiration of his twenty-one years' service in 1865, the officers of the regiment, to mark the esteem in which he was held, presented him with a gold watch. Sergeant-Major White did not leave the Service, but passed on to the recruiting staff at Glasgow, where he held the post of staff sergeant-major for upwards of twenty years.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue :—

CALCUTTA, June 15.—The native officers of Major Grant's small force, which behaved so gallantly at Thobal, have been admitted to the Second Class of the Order of British India, and all the non-commissioned officers and men to the Third Class of the Order of Merit, the latter also receiving a grant of six months' pay. This bestowal of the Order of Merit upon as many as eighty sepoys at one time is unprecedented.—Reuter.

MANIPORE, June 15.—The Court reassembled to-day to hear the defence of the Regent against the charges brought against him. The prisoner stated that he had never been really responsible for the government of the State, nor had he sought the dignity of Maharaja. He had been installed by his younger brother, the Senaputty. During the fighting between the British and the Maniporis his position as Regent had been a merely nominal one, for he had no power. He had tried to stop the firing, but his orders were not obeyed, and he remained a helpless spectator. Finding that he could do nothing he went to bed. When all was over he was unable to punish the murderers of the British officers, and it was under compulsion that he sent the false account of the events at Manipore to the Indian Government. In conclusion, the prisoner appealed to the Court to deal leniently with him.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, June 16.—The Senaputty has applied for permission to be heard by counsel before the Governor-General in Council against the confirmation of the sentence passed upon him.—Times Correspondent.

MANIPORE, June 17.—The Senaputty's advocate is making great efforts to obtain a reprieve for his client, and has twice telegraphed to the Viceroy on the subject. He has also retained the services of a Calcutta barrister, who advised that influence should be brought to bear upon the Government through the English press.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, June 18.—The trial of Prince Angao Sena was commenced yesterday. The evidence was for the most part a repetition of that in the earlier trials, but the following new facts were elicited:—The prisoner commanded the West Gate, and admitted Mr. Quinton; he also fought against Major Grant at Thobal. The Regent's head clerk stated that on March 22 all the Manipori troops were ready to turn out if any of the Royal family were arrested; also that it was the usual custom to dismiss the troops after receiving the Chief Commissioner, but that on that occasion they were kept under arms. The executioner deposed to seeing two priests performing religious rites over the heads and bodies of the victims in presence of an enormous crowd.

CALCUTTA, June 20.—The Regent's case was completed by the Court delivering judgment this morning, finding on the first count of waging war a verdict of guilty, and on the second count, of abetting murder, a verdict of not guilty. Sentence of death was pronounced, subject to the confirmation of the Indian Government.

June 21.—The despatches describing the field operations of the Manipore expedition, which were published yesterday, add little to what is already known. The Governor-General in Council, in reviewing them, cordially endorses the approval expressed by the Commander-in-Chief of the indomitable energy displayed by the troops in overcoming the difficulties and hardship of the advance without tents through a mountainous country, exposed as they were to much suffering from the intense heat and heavy rain. He adds that the association of Volunteers with Regular troops is a matter for special gratification, and records his appreciation of the services of several officers. The loss by cholera during the expedition was very heavy. The Silchar column had 44 cases, 13 fatal. At Manipore there were 105 cases and 50 deaths among native troops, 23 cases and 13 deaths among the followers; and three Europeans died. Seven sepoys died at Golaghat, making the total of deaths from that cause 86.

With the conviction of the Regent and the Senaputty, the centre of interest has been shifted from Manipore to Simla. The public are now anxiously awaiting the final order of the Government on these cases. The more rabid section of the native Press, which has been sedulously attempting throughout to distort every incident connected with Manipore to the discredit of the Indian Government and its officers, is now loudly impugning the impartiality of the Court and the fairness of the trials, but the great bulk of the people, native and European, have no sympathy with this cry and fully recognise the guilt of the prisoners as clearly proved. It will be a public misfortune if the Government allows any mistaken clemency to interfere with the sentence, at least in the case of the Senaputty.

CALCUTTA, June 22.—Prince Angao Sena has been found guilty of waging war against the Queen and of abetting murder, and has been sentenced to death. The Government has confirmed the conviction of Major Aiya Parel and Colonel Samu Singh on the charge of waging war against the Queen, but not on the charge of abetting murder.—Times Correspondent.

There is very little fresh news of importance in reference to Manipore by the present mail. We make the following short extracts :—

MANIPORE, May 28.—There is but little news to give from here. Since the capture of the Senaputty we have had no excitement of any kind. Mr. Davis, Deputy Commissioner of Kohima, is expected here to-morrow, when the trial of all the prisoners will commence, and it is to be hoped will not take long. The Manipore Field Force is now to be broken up, but the General and staff will not leave this for some time yet probably. Captain Dun leaves for Tammoo to-day. He is returning to India, via Burma, to inspect the Intelligence Office in that country. Major Travers, 2nd Goorkhas, also starts for India to-day, via Kohima, to rejoin his appointment on the Headquarters Staff.

MANIPORE, June 3.—The trial of Tekendrajet Koerang, the Senaputty, and prime mover in the rebellion, goes on. The man seems quite indifferent to the proceedings, though he gradually appears to be grasping his situation. The Tongal General and the Regent are confined in one house; the former appears to have resigned himself to his fate. The markets are as full as of old, and the people generally, though timid, are most contented, and most of them expect and would hail the annexation of the country. Cholera has almost disappeared. The detachment, 43rd Goorkhas, under Captain Cowley, move in from the Cholera Camp at Bishenpore to-morrow. The 44th Goorkhas are in camp at Sengmai.

ALLAHABAD, May 30.—General Collett is having a small bungalow built at Kondukol, in the hills near Manipore, on the site where Colonel Johnstone, when Resident, had a country house, with a view of its serving as a sanatorium for officers of the force. The lower slopes of the hills in the same neighbourhood are being talked of as a possible site for permanent barracks. The only disadvantage of the site is its being ten miles from the town. General Collett has been empowered to employ such military officers as he may think necessary in the minor administrative posts in Manipore. They are to be selected from regiments on the spot.

Lieutenant Casgrain is constructing a wire-rope suspension bridge over the Ticki River, five miles north of the city, on the Kohima Road. The span is 200 feet. It will be passable for laden mules. Manipori labour is being exclusively employed.

For obvious reasons, writes the Pioneer, we have no intention of embarking upon a controversy with Mr. J. G. Apcar, to whom it appears Mrs. Grimwood entrusted the task of preparing her Manipore narratives for publication. It is the more easy, however, to refrain, because we must confess to feeling very doubtful about what it is after all that Mr. Apcar wants to prove: but as far as we understand, the substance of his long letter in the Englishman, and of the abridgment of it which appeared in the Pioneer, is that any version of the Manipore doings which differs from Mrs. Grimwood's must to the extent of the difference be wrong. If this is the case, there is a paragraph in the very issue of the Englishman which contained Mr. Apcar's letter that requires his immediate attention. One of the most dramatic touches in the narrative was the description how Captain Butcher in the course of the retreat shot five of the enemy in succession over the prostrate form of Mrs. Grimwood, while he reserved his last two cartridges, one for her and one for himself, as a final alternative to capture. But Captain Butcher on this story coming to his knowledge has telegraphed a flat contradiction of it: and until Mr. Apcar's rhetoric can persuade this gentleman that he really acted as he was said to have done, though he cannot now recall it, Mr. Apcar's claim to possess the only infallible version of what happened at Manipore cannot be held established. That Mr. Grimwood was told by Mr. Gurdon on March 15 that the Senaputty was to be arrested, that he was consulted as to the manner of the arrest, but that he could suggest no plan, are facts capable of proof. Mr. Apcar denies them, and as the defender of Mr. Grimwood's memory warns others not to believe them. The natural result will be that when the real story has prevailed people will feel that Mr. Grimwood's reputation has somehow suffered. But who has blamed him? and how does his foreknowledge of the arrest put him in the wrong? Surely this is another case of "Save me from my friends."

SIR G. CHESNEY ON MANIPORE.

THE following letter is published in the Times:—

SIR,—The Government of India may with reason ask to be saved from their friends when they hear that their decision to deport the Senaputty from Manipore has been defended by Sir John Gorst on the ground that this was merely to act in accordance with their customary policy of cutting down the tall poppies, setting aside the men of ability and strong character in native States in favour of the mediocre or incapable. It is true that Sir J. Gorst went on to qualify the statement by adding that this was the policy of all Governments, in the West as well as in the East, but the implication as against the Indian Government retained all its force. Well might Sir William Harcourt comment on the mischievous effect to be apprehended from a statement of this sort going forth to the people of India in such authoritative form, not the less mischievous perhaps that it is entirely unsupported by the facts. The policy of the Government of India, in their dealings with the native States, has uniformly been the opposite of such machiavellian courses; it has always been their aim to secure the services of the ablest men that could be found for the government of those States. The difficulty has lain, not in the exhibition of any excess of ability or independence on the part of such persons, but to find men with a sufficient capacity for governing. In proof of this assertion I may cite the recent cases of Sir Salar Jung, Sir Madhava Rao, and Sir Dunkar Rao, as of ministers of Indian States whose success was due in large measure to the hearty recognition of their abilities, and the cordial support given them by the paramount authority. To substitute, however, a more valid answer to the question asked by Sir W. Harcourt, Why interfere with the Senaputty, a man well disposed to the British Government? the answer is, in the first place, that his sentiments towards that Government were not in question. The matter at issue was not one of danger to the peace of India in leaving him at Manipore, but whether this would be compatible with the maintenance of quiet within that little State. To those who object that this was a mere family quarrel which did not concern us, it may be pointed out that these family quarrels had been going on for the last seventy years. Ever since we came in contact with Manipore, its record has been a dismal succession of palace intrigues and revolutions, usually accompanied by brutal murders, of father by son, or brother by brother. The revolution of last September, when the Raja escaped unhurt to the British Residency, was, I believe, the only instance of one without bloodshed. Now that Manipore had come into immediate contact with British provinces, it was impossible to tolerate these excesses any longer. And the latest revolution offered no prospect of finality. The eldest brother having taken himself off, there still remained six or seven brothers behind, divided into factions always quarrelling with each other. It was not to be supposed that the Senaputty would long remain satisfied with a subordinate place; the turn of the Jobraj to go would come next, and he possibly would not get off so cheaply as his elder brother. Whether the ex-Raja were to be restored, or the Regent to be recognised as his successor, Mr. Quinton and the Government of India were agreed that neither arrangement had a reasonable chance of lasting, if the Senaputty were allowed to remain in the country, and that in either case he should be interned for a time in British India, to keep him out of mischief, and as a warning to the other brothers to behave themselves.

From the manner in which the Senaputty's name was referred to and received during the debate of yesterday—from which, by the way, it may be thought that even the Nana Sahib would find supporters nowadays—he would seem to be regarded in some quarters as a man whose ability and character had made him an object of apprehension to the Indian Government. His subsequent action has not justified such an opinion. Certainly he murdered the unarmed prisoners seized by treachery, but having announced his resolve never to be taken alive, he ran away as soon as the avenging columns approached Manipore, and finally was taken after a scuffle with a single captor. He appears to be simply a cruel and truculent ruffian unredeemed by personal courage.

With regard to the intended arrest of the Senaputty at durbar, without expressing an opinion as to the expediency of the course which Mr. Quinton proposed to adopt, I venture to maintain that it was perfectly in accord with propriety and good faith. As Sir Richard Temple observes, there are durbars and durbars; this proposed durbar was not to be one of mere ceremonial or for the exchange of friendly greetings; it was in effect the solemn Court of the paramount power, invested with as full judicial sanction as in that primitive country could be possessed by any tribunal, and the summons to attend it was not an invitation, but a command. A person so presenting himself, in the circumstances, would fully understand that he hereby became liable to the loss of his liberty. It seems certain from his behaviour that the Senaputty so understood the summons. The Chief Commissioner had to announce the decision of the Government of India upon the appeal for the reinstatement which had been made to it by the ex-Maharaja. In a primitive country like this, without a Gazette, or a Press, or any formal records, the only effective way of publicly announcing to the people as well as to the family of chiefs, this decision that the eldest brother was not to be restored and that the rule of the Regent as his successor would be confirmed, was in public durbar. Any less formal mode of communicating the decision would have been liable to be misunderstood and misinterpreted. A durbar being necessary for this purpose, it was obviously proper and appropriate to employ the occasion for announcing the supplementary decision that the Senaputty was to be removed to India for a time. The choice of action then lay between arresting him then and there, on the decision being proclaimed, or of bidding him withdraw and surrender himself afterwards. The former course was that best calculated to prevent bloodshed, as events have shown, but stress need not be laid on that; if it was dishonourable to arrest him at the durbar, the risk of his recusancy and resistance should have been run by not so arresting him; but I venture to think that the proceeding was no more open to reproach on that score than is the action of a magistrate who issues a summons to a person to appear before him, and then makes out a warrant for his committal to prison.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, G. CHESNEY.

SIR R. SANDEMAN ON THE DURBAR QUESTION.

THE following letter is published in the Times:—

SIR,—Referring to the leading article which appeared in the Times of June 17, on the subject of the debate which took place in the House of Commons on the subject of the Manipore disaster, and with special reference to the remarks regarding the holding of durbars, I venture to point out that possibly the meaning of the word "durbar" has not been correctly understood. The interpretation of the word durbar simply means Court, and there is no other term for a court of justice or other court that so correctly conveys this meaning to the native mind. For example, the Court-house at Quetta of the Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner is designated and known by all concerned, both European and native, as the Durbar-hall.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
R. G. SANDEMAN, Colonel.

Rock House, Ardmore, Youghal, county Cork, Ireland.

UNFAITHFUL OFFICIALS.

THE Mandalay Herald says:—It seems positive now that the decision of the Government of India in Mr. Duke's case has resulted in his removal from the public service. Everyone who followed the case anticipated this result. We need not go into the why and the wherefore Mr. Duke was dismissed from the public service; suffice to state that the termination of his official career, together with the conduct of several high officials in Burma, points a moral. The Heaven-born ones are supposed, like the wife of Cæsar, to be above suspicion, but they occasionally fall, and great is the fall thereof. Several of the fallen angels high in the Burma Commission belonged to the Uncovenanted Civil Service, but that is no reason why they should have fallen. There are many in the Uncovenanted Service equal in morality to the Heaven-born ones; but it proves that the Local Government had not exercised much penetration in selecting them for high positions of responsibility and trust. It is a pity also that men from the Uncovenanted ranks should fall, for it is a hard struggle for them to get into the positions usually filled up by the Heaven-born ones, and it will also give the British Government one more excuse to withhold the higher positions in the Indian Service from Uncovenanted-wallahs. The Heaven-born ones, or as they are sometimes called the Competition-wallahs, are not displeased when their less fortunate brethren of the Service fall to the ground. This is human nature; but it is nevertheless hard on the Uncovenanted ones, and it should be an incentive also to them to redeem their name and to show those who rejoice in a Celestial inception that they can be honorable and moral too. The Government, however, must assist the Uncovenanted Service to maintain a standard which will be second to none in the service of the State, and it can assist it only by selecting the best available material to place in responsible positions. Uncovenanted men have proved themselves on emergencies equal in every respect to those who form the ranks of the Covenanted Civil Service, and it is indeed regrettable to witness any falling off among them.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

AN Allahabad telegram of May 30 says.—

Yesterday afternoon the Hasanzais and Akazai jirgahs assembled in Durbar before General Elles, who communicated to them the decision of Government as to their future. General Elles's speech to them was to the effect that inasmuch as they had unconditionally surrendered and by signature of the agreement paper had accepted the terms offered by the Government, he was to tell them from the Government of India that the Government had no desire to occupy their lands permanently. If Hashim Ali were given up the whole force would be removed, if not a force would be maintained in the country until Government thought the tribes were strong enough to preserve order themselves, and prevent the return of Hashim Ali Khan. This force Government would be glad to withdraw as soon as possible, and in the meantime the force here now would be greatly reduced, the people of the country being left in undisturbed occupation of their lands and with liberty to pursue their peaceful avocations. Mr. Cunningham, Political Officer, interpreted this speech to the jirgahs, and they were then dismissed.

The gist of the agreement that has been signed between these tribes and our Government is that they give up Hashim Ali Khan to us as soon as they can catch him. Any way they are not to allow him to return to his Khanship. His lands and those of his immediate followers are confiscated. We are to have a road along the crest of the Black Mountain, and are free to march along the same, it being our recognised boundary. The British officers visiting the country are to be escorted by tribal representatives in order to allow the Akazais to reoccupy their villages.

The following will be the moves of the various regiments :—The Guides from Seri to Nemai on May 31 ; 4th Sikhs from Moira Khand and Seri to Nemai, June 1 ; No. 1 Mountain Battery from Seri to Abu Kotal on June 1 ; and 1st Goorkhas from Oghi to Seri on May 31. Headquarters.—37th Dogras leave Niliare on May 31 and arrive at Seri on June 1 ; No. 2 Derajat Battery leaves Darbanrai and arrives at Seri on June 1 ; 2-5th Goorkhas leave Darbanrai on June 1 and arrive at Seri on June 2 ; and 37th Dogras leave Penza and arrive at Seri on June.

All positions in front of Seri are being evacuted and are concentrating in the rear of it. On the 30th a shot was fired into a Goorkha picquet at Darbourai, slightly wounding a sepoy. It is supposed the shot was fired by one of Hashim Ali's gang. One of his party was arrested yesterday lurking in the Shah Nullah below Seri.

YUNNAN.

THE London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald writes :—I have just seen a copy of a most interesting and instructive paper on a portion of China of which little is known, and which is of increasing importance to this country. It is entitled "Yunnan ; its treasures and trade routes," and the author is General Mesny, who has lived for many years in the province, and who knows it as no living European does. It has not been published in this country, and probably will not be for some time to come ; I therefore send an abstract of the more important parts of it. The province has a larger area than Italy, but owing to twenty years of internal convulsions, which terminated in 1877, the population is not dense. It probably amounts to 15,000,000, two-thirds being composed of various aboriginal tribes, retaining their original habits, and avoiding as far as possible any intercourse with their Chinese masters. The whole province is mainly an elevated plateau 5,000 to 6,000 feet above the sea, and is intersected by deep valleys, which are frequently so unhealthy that no one can live in them, and down which flow the head waters of some of the greatest rivers in Asia. The natural resources are almost incredible in their wealth. Opium, hemp, flax, all grains and cereals, and sub-tropical fruits and vegetables abound. Oxen, sheep, horses, and other animals are reared ; tea, silk and fine wool are produced everywhere throughout the province, while the mineral wealth is inexhaustible. In the western part rubies, sapphires, garnets, topazes, amethysts, and jade are found in considerable quantities ; gold, silver, nickel, platinum, copper, tin, lead, iron, coal, and salt are also found in abundance, especially copper, the deposits of which have been worked for ages, and are now being worked in some places by means of modern machinery. Indeed the only attraction the province has had for the Chinese for centuries has been the mineral deposits. On the other hand, the roads are all wretched, and water communication, owing to the fall and force of the streams, very defective.

There are ten important commercial routes through the province. The capital is 2,700 miles from Pekin, and it usually takes 120 days to perform the journey, while the imperial couriers take sometimes only 30 days. The exports are mostly copper, iron, musk, and a peculiar kind of tea known as Pu-erkha, while cotton yarn and tobacco are the chief imports. But as mules are almost the only mode of transport, trade is naturally hampered by the tremendous cost of carriage.

As to the political situation in this province, which is specially important to us by reason of its proximity to Burma, General Mesny is very outspoken. The Chinese have done nothing to improve the native tribes ; after many centuries the relations between them are those of veiled warfare. The vast wealth of the province is practically undeveloped, and is likely to remain so unless something is done independent of the Chinese Government. "That distant province has been a constant drain on the resources of the empire for ages, and is likely to continue so in future. The only hope of relief from her present wretched condition that Yunnan may expect lies in the probability that a man of talent in the art of governing will some day appear in that region, to carve for himself a new and promising kingdom from that long ill-ruled fragment of ancient and vast empire." Meanwhile the British and French are knocking at the doors of Yunnan, and demanding an entrance to trade. The French approach from Tonquin, and have already established a trading mart within the province ; the British come from the Shan States in the south and the Irrawaddy in the south-west, so that, even without General Mesny's political deliverer, matters are likely to change vastly in Yunnan in the next twenty years.

THE RIOT AT WUHU.

A CORRESPONDENT of he North China Herald writes on May 14 :—

The news that there has been a riot at Wuhu in which the premises of the Catholic Mission have been burnt, and the foreign community been obliged to take refuge on the hulks, is very disquieting. It is difficult to know what is at the bottom of these intermittent outbreaks of turbulence. There was no sufficient cause for the outbreak at Chinkiang in which so many houses were burnt, and there was no apparent cause whatever for the recent outbreak at Yangchow, nor is it likely that the French priests gave any cause for the riot at Wuhu on Tuesday. The people of the Yangtze Valley have no grievance against foreigners generally or against missionaries, and the officials, as was seen at Yangchow, are generally honestly desirous to protect foreigners. Even officials who are personally inimical to foreigners and foreign teaching, would do their best to prevent an outbreak ; for it puts a black mark against any mandarin to have it recorded that he cannot keep the people in his jurisdiction in order. While the "literati and gentry," as they are called, are sometimes found fomenting riots against foreigners, they are as often found recognising the value of the work done by foreign missionaries in the healing of the sick, the teaching of the young, and the care of the orphaned and destitute ; but, on the other hand, the people would not rise against the foreigners and their institutions unless some one urged them on.

It is conjectured that the Secret Societies are at the bottom of these riots. It is well known that the Yangtze Valley is honeycombed with these societies, and that the officials are in constant dread of them ; dread which is increased by being somewhat undefined. What the exact objects of these societies are is uncertain ; it may be doubted whether they have any definite plan of overturning the present dynasty, or substituting any other for the present rule ; but it is certain that the officials are very much in dread of them, and that, whatever their ends, the disturbance of public order is one of their favourite means. While their aims, too, may be political, they are quite ready for a little robbery and looting as pastimes ; and there is loot to be got from an attack on a foreign establishment, and at the same time the officials are embroiled with their superiors and with foreigners. The rowdies, whether secret society men or not, are encouraged by the fact that no one has been properly punished for the Chinkiang riots. It is true that an indemnity was exacted from the Viceroy Tsêng Kuo-chuan, and full compensation was paid to the foreigners who lost property ; but the actual rioters escaped, to renew the riot on the next propitious occasion.

Wuhu is the centre of these secret society rowdies. Many of them are discharged braves who have been sent to colonise the land left vacant after the Taiping rebellion, and who have organised themselves into robber bands. They regularly plunder the river steamers and terrorise and blackmail the Chinese staff on board, so that their robberies of passengers especially pass unpunished. There is very little doubt that the burning of the Shanghai was an act of revenge on the part of these steamer thieves, and the officials do not care to provoke them by being too energetic in inquiring into robberies on foreign steamers. An outbreak of such importance as just occurred at Wuhu will, it is to be hoped, make the Chinese authorities there a little more active. They have the means to control these bandits if they care to use them, and a little healthy pressure at Pekin will teach them that they must use their power.

Meanwhile, with the foreign community at Wuhu flying for their lives to the hulks on the river, there is no British gunboat at Shanghai or anywhere on the Yangtze. Admiral Richards is not beginning very well. We have over and over again impressed on the Admiral of the station the necessity for gunboats on the river, because no one ever knows six hours beforehand when there is going to be trouble at a treaty port. The British residents at Wuhu may be at the present moment in peril of their lives ; they may be seeing their property burnt before their eyes, and there is no British man-of-war available to protect them out of the twenty-two or so vessels that make up the British squadron in these waters. It has become a crying scandal. No doubt the ports of Japan are far more amusing for the officers, and perhaps healthier for the men, than the Chinese ports ; but the primary object of sending the ships here is neither amusement nor health, and both officers and men would gladly be sent where they were of some use. There is a German gunboat at Hankow, which will no doubt be notified that its services will be appreciated at Wuhu, but then Hankow is a port at which there ought to be always a man-of-war. The French gun-vessel l'Inconstant left here yesterday for Wuhu, leaving Shanghai without a single man-of-war in harbour, though the Linnet is expected back ; but it is culpable neglect on the part of our naval authorities that, however threatening the danger, there is no British man-of-war on the river, and none here that can be sent up to the assistance of British subjects.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Punjab Frontier Force and the Miranzai Field Force.—The Punjab Frontier Force, writes the Civil and Military Gazette, complained of being overlooked when vacancies in the Miranzai Field Force were being filled up ; and it appears that they are being overlooked now too, when the Miranzai Field Force is returning to its peace footing. Privilege leave for officers of the P.F.F. was stopped on account of the affair on the frontier, and had not up to the 25th instant been reopened, although N.C.O.'s and men have been allowed to go on furlough all the while. There may be some good reason for this known only to headquarters, but the impression among the officers concerned is that the fact of the stoppage of privilege leave has been forgotten by those who originally gave the order. It is rather hard on married officers and others who had made all arrangements before the trouble began, and are still unable to go on leave, although the trouble is over. The stoppage of leave for the P. F. F. was intelligible enough, adds the Lahore paper, if the authorities were uncertain how far the Miranzai disturbance would spread: but it is strange, on this hypothesis, that the officer commanding at Peshawar and other officers both at Peshawar and Pindi should be able to get leave while officers at stations like Rajanpore or Dera Ghazi Khan, hundreds of miles from Miranzai, should be unable to get leave.

Bombay Battalions for Beloochistan.—It has been decided to localise two native battalions of Bombay in Beloochistan, and to change the constitution of these corps by substituting men recruited from the border tribes. The two regiments selected are the 24th and 26th, and the conversion of the former will be proceeded with immediately, with headquarters at Quetta. Both regiments will be recruited from Pathans and other tribes within the limits and on the borders of the Beloochistan Agency. The strength of each will be one commandant, two wing commanders, five wing officers, one medical officer, eight subedars, eight jemadars, forty havildars, forty naiks, sixteen drummers, and 800 sepoys. The British officers will be selected by the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army. The officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the present regiments will cease to be borne on the rolls thereof from June 30, and will all be transferred to the Pension Establishment. The new-formed regiments will be armed with Martini-Henry rifles, and band and pipers are sanctioned for each corps.

An Inspector-General of Volunteers.—The Pioneer now advocates the appointment of an inspector-general of Volunteers—a post we, Times of India, have for some time considered very necessary to the advancement of the Volunteering Movement, and on which subject we have frequently written. Our contemporary says that "an inspector-general of Volunteers would know exactly what the best regiments were capable of, what opportunities each corps had of improving itself, and how far it had taken advantage of those opportunities. Some Volunteer regiments, like those in Presidency towns, are able to get their men together for battalion drill once a week or oftener; while others, such as the Railway Corps, have their men so scattered that they can only get them together for a few days in the year at a camp of exercise, and even then as often as not only half the rank and file can be spared. So that some commanding officers never see all their men on parade together. An inspector-general of auxiliary forces—to use the strictly correct title—would be able to decide on a regiment's efficiency or otherwise by comparison with the other corps similarly situated, and would save them from being inspected one year by an officer with an abnormally high standard of efficiency and next year by one who thinks anything is good enough for Volunteers."

Military Disturbance at Kallana. — A disturbance has occurred between the Lincolnshire Regt. and the Irish Fusiliers at Kallana. It originated in a report made by one of the Lincolnshire men that there was beer in the canteen. Some fighting commenced on the closing of the canteen, which ended in an attack on the Lincolnshire's bungalows with stones and other missiles of sorts. A few men of the Fusiliers rushed into a room with bayonets. A corporal was stabbed in the arm, and a private in the left side. The latter died in about twenty minutes. A post-mortem examination showed that the stab was through the heart and lungs. The two corps were previously on friendly terms with each other. The injured men are doing well.

Already the value of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway for military purposes is likely to be demonstrated in connection with the rising in Orissa. A wing of the 17th Bengal Inf.—strength, four British and seven native officers, 488 men, and two machine-guns—proceeded by troop extra train on May 25 to Chakardarpore. Col. C. E. D. Branson, 17th Bengal Inf., having proceeded to Chakardarpore, Lieut.-Col. A. Fishe, 8th Bengal Inf., assumes command of the Presidency.

Major-Gen. Nairne comes to England on ninety-days' leave early in July, and Major-Gen. Tillard officiates for him as inspector-general of artillery.

Col. J. M. Madden, General List, Infantry, cantonment magistrate, Ahmedabad, has been allowed furlough for one year.

Lieut.-Col. C. M. Browne, General List, Bombay Inf., commandant, 12th Bombay Inf., has been granted leave for one year.

Brig.-Surg. R. Bowman, Indian Medical Service, Residency Surgeon, Turkish Arabia, has been allowed furlough to Europe for one year.

Lieut.-Col. and Col. Charles John Anderson, Staff Corps, has been admitted to the colonel's allowance, with effect from May 20, 1891.

Surg.-Major W. P. Carson, 1st Bombay Grenadiers, has been appointed to the medical charge of the Baroda Residency, in addition to his own duties.

With effect from Lieut.-Col. J. M. Hunter's deputation to foreign service, and subject to his reversion to British service on the termination of such deputation, the following appointments have been made:—Capt. M. T. Lyde to be Fourth Assistant Political Agent, Kattywar, continuing to act as at present. Capt. H. M. Abud to be Sixth Assistant Political Resident, Aden. Capt. S. M. Congreve-Schneider to be Adjutant of the Kolhapur Infantry Corps and ex officio Assistant to the Political Agent, Kolhapur, continuing to as at present.

Capt. C. De C. Hamilton, No. 8 Mountain Battery, Jutogh, proceeds to Natal and the Cape Colony to open out a new field for the purchase of mules for the mountain artillery and horses for the mounted branches of service in India.

Col. A. G. B. Ternan, of the 44th Goorkha Regt., Bengal Inf., is permitted to proceed to England on leave, on very urgent private affairs. Col. Ternan has just returned from Manipore, having been in command under General Graham of the Tammoo Column.

Lieut. W. MacL. Campbell, Royal Highlanders, has been confirmed as A. D. C. to the general officer commanding, Burma district.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to June 1.

The Statue of Lord Dufferin.—The pedestal for the statue of the late Viceroy, which has been executed for Calcutta to the order of the Dufferin Memorial Committee, has been placed in position at the head of the Red Road. It is formed of blocks of Scottish-grey granite, highly polished. The statue itself will not be put up until Lord Lansdowne's return to the city, when his Excellency will be asked to unveil it.

A Remarkable Case came before the Calcutta High Court on appeal on May 28. Six men, it appears, have been sentenced by the Sessions Judge of Bhagulpore for an alleged fatal assault on one Mussudin, who visited their village with the intention of buying a goat. There was a scare, however, among the villagers that a number of persons had come from up-country for the purpose of kidnapping children, whom they mesmerised by causing them to smell the root of a certain tree. For some reason the visitor appears to have been suspected of these practices, and he was so savagely attacked by the adult relatives of the threatened youngsters that his injuries proved immediately fatal.

Umbrellas for Calcutta.—In the course of last year there was an increase, as compared with 1889, of over a lac in the number of umbrellas passing the Calcutta Customs. The figures, however, were still below those of 1887 and 1888. It is complained that, although the demand was fairly large, the rapid fluctuations in exchange sent down prices in some instances below actual cost. The trade is still confined almost exclusively to the United Kingdom, the imports from other countries amounting in value to only 380 rs., as against a total of over seventeen lacs.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to June 2.

State Banquet at Ootacamund.—The State banquet on June 1 at Ootacamund, in honour of the Queen-Empress's birthday, was a grand affair. Covers for forty-three persons were laid. The Governor, the Commander-in-Chief, and all the principal officials were present.

Serious Disturbance in the Kistnathevi Petta.—Intelligence has been received of a serious outbreak at the Kistnathevi Petta, in the Vizagapatam District. The local police station has been looted and razed to the ground, three police constables being killed. The district officials and the Deputy Inspector-General of Police had gone to the scene of the disturbance, which, it is believed, was the result of ill feeling between the police and the neighbouring hill tribes.

Famine Relief Works.—The Madras Mail says:—Our special correspondent who has just been visiting the famine relief works in North Arcot writes:—"The payment of wages is not entirely satisfactory, and gives rise to some grumbling among the coolies. The men are supposed to be paid weekly, but the arrangements leave something to be desired in the way of punctuality, and this, as might be expected, gives rise to a certain amount of discontent. The payments should undoubtedly be tri-weekly or bi-weekly, and irregular payments should not, under any circumstances, be allowed." This is the same complaint that was heard for a time during the recent distress in the Ganjam district. Fortunately, however, the necessity of daily payments was so strongly argued by the Press and the local famine officials that Government was convinced and orders were issued accordingly. In this case, too, we trust that Government will reconsider its decision. It was founded upon a report of the superintending engineer, who was undoubtedly prejudiced in the matter, seeing that daily payments entail so much more work for the officers under him. If it is true that the famine relief staff is too small to be able to undertake the daily disbursement of wages, then the sooner the staff is strengthened the better. We venture to say that the prompt and honest disbursement of famine wages is without exception the most important duty connected with any system of famine relief.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to June 4.

The Age of Consent Act.—A largely attended meeting was held on May 31 in the open space to the north of the Victoria Gardens, Bombay, facing the premises of the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute, on the Parel Road, to adopt a petition for presentation to the British House of Commons against the Age of Consent Act. A marquee had been erected for the accommodation of those present, at one end of which was a raised platform whereon sat the chairman and some of the promoters of the movement. By far the larger proportion of those present were Hindoos, chiefly of the lower classes, the rest being Mahomedans.

The Bombay Hunt.—A meeting of the members and subscribers of the Bombay Hunt was held on May 27 at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, in Graham's Buildings, Fort Bombay, under the presidency of Mr. J. L. Symons, when about fifteen members were present. The report for the year 1890–91 was passed, and the accounts adopted. Mr. Buckland was appointed the new master of the hounds in place of Mr. Remington, the retiring master, whose services during the past fifteen seasons were suitably and gracefully acknowledged. A new committee of management, consisting of Messrs. J. L. Symons, A. A. Craigie, H. C. Burder, G. K. Remington, and N. L. Glazebrook, was appointed, and "directed to make necessary arrangements in connection with the purchase of a pack of hounds for the next season, and for kennelling them." Thanks were voted to Messrs. Ross, Schofield, and Steel for acting as honorary secretaries to the Hunt during the past season, and the proceedings closed.

The Rajabai Tower Tragedy.—The inquiry into the Rajabai Tower tragedy, which has created a great deal of interest in Bombay, terminated on May 27. The coroner's jury returned a verdict that Bachoobai died from injuries sustained through throwing herself from the tower in consequence of an attempted outrage upon her by some person or persons unknown to the jury, and that to this attempted outrage Maneckjee Aslajee was privy, under such circumstances that the act of such person or persons unknown, and of Maneckjee Aslajee, was culpable homicide not amounting to murder. With reference to the death of the other young woman, Perojbai, the verdict was that the girl was thrown from the tower by Maneckjee Aslajee in order to destroy evidence of his complicity in an outrage attempted on her by some person or persons unknown. [The substance of the verdict has already been telegraphed.]

A Proposed Railway to Matheran.—It is worth notice, says the Times of India, as a sign of the times, that capitalists seem to be turning their attention to the possibility of investing money profitably in India in the construction of light branch lines in connection with the standard gauge railways. On the Continent, these small railways have long since passed the experimental stage, and are everywhere acknowledged to be valuable adjuncts to the railway systems. In Italy, especially, there are many examples of such lines being worked with profitable results. That best known, probably, to Anglo-Indians is the small railway running from Naples to the foot of Vesuvius. Although the traffic is almost entirely confined to the conveyance of pleasure-seekers to and from the foot of the volcano, the profits ever since its construction have been of a most encouraging nature. A second venture of the same kind is the hill railway from the foot of Vesuvius to within a short distance of the summit. This, we believe, is worked and owned by the world-renowned firm of Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, also with good results financially, and certainly with good results as regards safety and comfort to those who use it. A proposal for a railway of a similar character to the last, to be constructed from the Narel Station of the G.I.P. Railway to the summit of the Matheran plateau, is now awaiting the sanction of the Government of Bombay. The applicant for the concession is the Hon. Mr. Nowrojee N. Wadia, well known in Bombay as one of the leaders of the cotton mill industry, and for his efforts in connection with the foundation of the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute.

A Big Order.—At Baroda, a sum of 18,00,000 rs. having been sanctioned by the durbar for new drainage works, a European engineer, on a salary of 1,000 rs. per mensem, has been engaged for the purpose of carrying out the work.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on June 21 :—

The garrison at Wuntho town, consisting of the headquarters and three companies of the 20th Madras Infantry, have suffered very severely from fever since the rains commenced. Recently only thirty-five men were fit for parade. The last report gives over 44 per cent. of the force in hospital. Reinforcements have been sent to Wuntho, and Brigadier-General Wolseley, C.B., accompanied by Brigadier-Surgeon Nortier, principal medical officer in Upper Burma, will leave Mandalay to visit Wuntho. The complete prostration of the force at Wuntho affords yet another proof how utterly unfit Madras regiments are for service in Upper Burma.

No news has yet been received of the rations for the garrison at the jade mines having been got across the Uru River. All the available elephants at Bhamo have been sent to assist in forwarding stores from Mogoung to the jade mines. The road from the mines, however, is very difficult for elephants during the present season. General Wolseley has named the post at the mines Fort O'Donnell, after the commandant of the Mogoung police battalion there. During the past three years Captain O'Donnell has rendered very valuable services on the northern frontier, and the efficiency of his battalion, numbering 1,800 men, reflects great credit on him.

The Chief Commissioner yesterday received a letter from the younger Wuntho Tsawbwa soliciting pardon. Sir A. Mackenzie has promised him safety, a suitable provision, the society of his family, and a residence in Lower Burma. The Tsawbwa is also informed that his son will be educated and provided for hereafter. When the younger Tsawbwa wrote he was near the amber mines. The elder Tsawbwa, who is a much more dangerous and important personage, is reported to be across the frontier in Chinese territory.

Sir A. Mackenzie leaves in a few days on a two-months' tour in Upper Burma. It is understood that the condition of the Bhamo district and the settlement of the frontier tribes there will engage his special attention.

No definite steps have yet been taken about the annexation, or, rather, the change in the administrative system of the Momeik State.

The methods adopted in assessing the income-tax in Rangoon have caused intense dissatisfaction among the native community.

A Fort White correspondent says :—Captain Rose and Mr. Sherman have just returned from a visit to the Syin villages of Sagylain and Daban, at the latter of which one day and at the former two nights were spent. Two of the other officers have accompanied them, and the natives were very pleased to welcome them, and showed every hospitality. This is the first time a night has been spent in a friendly way in any of these villages, and it is a great proof of the friendliness of the Chins towards us that we can now without hesitation trust ourselves in their houses for a night. Sagain was reached on the first day, and from there Daban was visited on the second. Both villages seem very prosperous and abundantly satisfied with British political control.

A VERY handsome little steam launch, built in England by Tagg and Son, of Hampton Court, for his Excellency the Minister of Hyderabad, arrived at that city on May 30 by rail from Bombay. The launch, which is named the Avesha, is of three tons register tonnage, and is, it is stated, intended for use on the Hussain Saugar. It will accommodate about half a dozen persons.

HYDERABAD.

THE Hyderabad paper says :—His Excellency the Minister gave a breakfast party at the Bashir Bagh on May 29, in honour of the birthday of the Queen-Empress of India. About forty-five guests in all were present, among whom were Nawab Vicar-ul-Umra and Nawab Fakr-ul-Mulk, and most of the Nizam's leading officials now at Hyderabad, including Nawabs Mohsin-ul-Mulk, Imad-ul-Mulk, Futteh Nawaz Jung, Akbar Jung, C.S.I., Imad Jung, &c. The whole of the Residency Staff, with the exception of Dr. Lawrie, who was prevented from attending, were also present in full uniform.

A FEW weeks since, says the Bombay Gazette of June 4, we described a scheme for the settlement of the Telingana portion of the Nizam's dominions which had been submitted to Sir Asman Jah by the Revenue Secretary, the Nawab Vikar-ul-Mulk. We learn that his Excellency has just sanctioned the scheme, and that the new rates, which are based upon the report of a strong committee which has gone carefully into the question, are already being issued. The Telingana settlement may fairly be regarded as the most important measure that has been introduced in Hyderabad during Sir Asman Jah's administration, and benefit to some millions of the Nizam's subjects may be expected to arise from it. The settlement, as we explained, will be for fifteen years—a sufficiently long term for a first settlement in a poor and backward country, the revenue value of which has been less perfectly ascertained than that of the Mahratwari portion of his Highness's territory, and which is capable of large development through the operations of the new Irrigation Board. The principle of the scheme is that of fair rates, subject to remission in exceptionally unfavourable years, the Government having decided that the people of the Telingana districts are not yet in a condition in which the Bombay system of fixed rates, leviable in good and in bad seasons alike, can be applied to them. The scheme has been conceived in a very liberal spirit, and the Minister, the Revenue Secretary, and Mr. Dunlop, the Settlement Commissioner, may be congratulated upon its having at length been put in operation.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

THE annual Cooper's Hill dinner was held at Simla on June 1, at the New Club. Sixteen persons attended, including representatives from Madras and Hyderabad. No telegraph engineer was present, but for the first time the gathering included one Forest Department student. The chair was occupied by the senior member, Mr. R. A. Way, Agent to the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway. As usual, loyal and complimentary toasts were drunk, and a most pleasant evening was spent. Several questions of interest to Cooper's Hill men were discussed, such as the necessity for getting the College colours more generally worn, and the advisability of fixing some anniversary for the general celebration every year.

The municipality of Cawnpore, who recently threw out the water and drainage scheme which had been officially prepared for them and substituted something very different of their own, have just been dealt with in a resolution in the provincial Gazette, and on the whole, says a Bombay paper, come off very easily. The greater part of the resolution is, in fact, a justification of Government policy in the eyes of the public at large, demonstrating how well able the different municipalities are to meet the small increase of expenditure from these works that the liberality of Government has left upon their shoulders. As for the Cawnpore Board, it is informed that the Government cannot possibly accept the alternative it proposes, which is described as "waiting to watch the effect of repairing a few sewers, recasting a few surface drains, and cleaning out a few wells." The duty of Government is to see that the public health is not sacrificed, and failing proof on the part of the Board that it is financially incapable of prosecuting the scheme, or the production of a better one, the Government at the close of the year will take the matter into its own hands.

The Punjab consists of about ninety-six millions of acres, of which about twenty-four and a half belong to Feudatory States, and six and a half of which no returns are given. Speaking in thousands of acres, 3,026 are forest, 12,233 are not available for cultivation. Of the remainder 19,407 were cropped during the year, the largest areas far being wheat 8,436, and other food grains 10,790; cotton, 978; miscellaneous crops, food 402, and non-food 647. One hundred and seventy-four are given to the cultivation of indigo, 50 to tobacco, 617 to oil-seeds, and 325 to sugarcane. Speaking again in thousands, the Punjab possesses 9,849 cows and bullocks, 216 horses and ponies, 492 mules and donkeys, 6,551 sheep and goats, 174 carts, 2,170 ploughs, and three boats.

Not only has the Punjab been blessed with a bumper wheat crop this spring, writes a local paper, but it has also had a splendid crop of rapeseed. Mr. Robertson says, in a note on the crop, that the later rains were even more favourable to this crop than to wheat, and that the outturn has increased enormously. In Shahpore the acreage under this crop rose in the year from 2,400 to 27,100, or by 1,029 per cent. In several districts the increase was over 200 per cent., and in Umballa it was 492 per cent. In all there were 298,000 acres under oil seeds, or 85 per cent. more than in the previous year. The total out-turn is estimated at 81,738 tons, or not far short of double that of last year, and the Director of Land Records and Agriculture predicts a large export, as the crop is heavy, prices are ruling high in Europe, and exchange is low.

Over a lac of suits were instituted or re-instituted in the Courts of the Central Provinces last year, the total amount of litigation showing an increase of about 2½ per cent. over that of 1889. The district officers' explanations of the increase or decrease in their several divisions are remarkably contradictory. One attributes a growth in litigation to good harvests and general prosperity, another to bad crops and widespread distress. The causes of decrease are variously assigned to "extension of industrial enterprise," "improved condition of the people," "slackness of trade," cholera, &c. There appears, says the Englishman, to be some ground for the Commissioner's opinion that these explanations are in great part little better than guesses.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE Times correspondent telegraphed on June 19 from Calcutta :—No further news has been received concerning the reported death of Mr. Lennard. The news reached the authorities at Gilghit that the Hunzas had killed an Englishman on the Pamir, and, as Mr. Lennard is believed to be there, his name got mentioned as likely to have been the victim. The Foreign Office cannot yet say whether the report is true.

News comes from Duedchalt, dated June 10, that Colonel Durand had intimated to the Hunza and Nagar chiefs that no invasion of their country was intended, but that any attempt on their part to raid into Cashmere territory would be met by force.

In a letter dated January, recently received, says the same correspondent, Mr. Lennard wrote to Colonel Durand, the Political Agent at Gilghit, that he intended to visit Tangdum on the Pamir in April. Simultaneously with the arrival of this letter Colonel Durand heard from Hunza that a European had been killed there, and he arrived at the conclusion that Mr. Lennard was the victim. No confirmation of the report has yet been received, and the Foreign Office is doing its best to discover the real facts.

Colonel Durand reports (Times telegram, June 22) that things seem to be settling down quietly in Gilghit, and that further troubles are not expected; he also states that two Englishmen are now said to be at Langar, and it is hoped that they are Mr. Lennard and Mr. Beach. The Government has received no confirmation of the report of the murder of an Englishman on the Pamir.

With regard to the above the following appears in the Indian papers received by this mail :—There has been a renewal of old quarrels in Nagar, and some malcontents threaten to oust the Cashmere garrisons from Chalt and Chaprote. Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, British Agent at Gilghit, has gone up to Chaprote.

The correspondent of the Standard telegraphed from Belgrade last night :—

A correspondent sends me the following disquieting intelligence, for the accuracy of which he vouches :—

"A Moscow merchant has recently been attempting to open a market for his goods—printed cottons and the like—in Afghanistan, and as far east as Peshawur, to which place he intends shortly despatching an agent. A few days ago this merchant received from a firm of native bankers in Peshawur a letter in English, enclosing a Russian rouble note, and requesting particulars as to the purchasing power in Russia of the note (certain articles of consumption being specified as standards), and the merchant's opinion of its probable value in India, 'as,' says the writer, 'we have a great many of them coming into our hands.'

"By what channel come these marks of Russian presence in Peshawur? Not, certainly, by the legitimate trade channel, for even the most enterprising of Moscow merchants has not yet succeeded in getting his goods farther than Cabul and Herat, where, however, considerable quantities of Russian manufactures have been placed by him. The merchant I allude to is Nikolai Nikolaivitch Konshin, who sent the first caravan to Merv guarded by an escort entirely formed of trained Intelligence Officers, serving in the ranks as private soldiers. For this signal piece of service, which ultimately gained for Russia the strategic point of Merv, M. Konshin received a patent of nobility, a precedent that others of his class will scarcely fail to take advantage of."

The above certainly seems to reveal a renewal of Russian intrigue on the Indian frontier, and we may doubt whether the recent large increase in the strength of the army of South Russia, including the filling up of cadres regiments, may not, after all, have been directed not so much against a Western neighbour as against the northern frontier of our most coveted possessions.

A telegram from Sauris to the Daily News, dated yesterday, states :—Katy Greenfield, a girl of fourteen, and a British subject, was at the beginning of May abducted by an Aziz Kurd, and afterwards brought to So-uj-bolak to the Mufti's house. The Turkish Kurds drew her thence forcibly and kept her at the Turkish Consulate. After an exchange of telegrams between Teheran, Stamboul, and London, Behjet Effendi, the Turkish Consul-General, and Mr. Paton, the Acting British Consul-General here, have been sent to So-uj-bolak, the former to place the girl in the hands of the local authorities, and the latter to inquire into the matter. Now a hundred armed Kurds surround the Consulate and threaten to shoot any one who attempts to see the girl. The affair is fast becoming serious.

A Reuter telegram from Tiflis (June 22) says :—Intelligence has been received here that an attack has been made near Saljan by a band of seventeen brigands upon a mail coach conveying two passengers. The robbers killed the travellers and wounded the postilion, and subsequently made for the neighbouring village, where they pillaged several houses. A squadron of Cossacks has been sent in pursuit of the brigands.

The Khan of Lalpura is in high favour with the Ameer. His sister died recently, and letters of condolence were at once sent by the Ameer and his son to the Khan, through the Governor of Jellalabad, who came with the Commander-in-Chief in person to Lalpura. Hakim Ahmed Jan is acting as Governor of Lalpura during the period of mourning; which presumably will delay the Khan's taking part in the hostilities against Umra Khan for the present.

Another attempt to bring the Waziris of Khost under the Ameer's rule appears to have failed. Owing to intertribal disputes Gul Khan, the recognised chief of the tribe, found his authority endangered, and conceived the idea of obtaining the Ameer's assistance. With this view he sent his son, Khaista Khan, to Cabul, to offer the Ameer his daughter in marriage. The Ameer accepted the offer, and gave the envoy valuable khillats, carpets, clothes, cash, &c., and sent him back to his country with a number of ponies as transport. The Waziris in the meanwhile had, however, discovered what was going on, and openly threw off the authority of Gul Khan, saying that they were independent, and did not wish to have any connection with the Ameer. Gul Khan, in fear of his life, escaped with his family to Khost, and presented himself to the Ameer's Governor of Khost. In the meantime his son arrived from Cabul, and on arrival was attacked and made prisoner by the Waziris, who plundered all the khillats. The pony-drivers were also arrested, but subsequently allowed to return to Cabul via Kurrum and Peshawur. The Governor of Khost has written to the Ameer for orders.

A great deal of sickness has prevailed among the Ameer's troops in Khost, which necessitated their removal to Chamkanni, in the Kurram Valley.

Three Afghan regiments have been sent from Cabul to Turkestan.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue :—

SHANGHAI, June 16 ("A correspondent" of the Times).—The Chinese Government has ordered the authorities at Foochow to arrest General Tcheng-Ki-Tong, and he is now in confinement at that place awaiting his trial for offences alleged to have been committed by him while in charge of the Chinese Legation in Paris.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21 (Dalziel Times Special).—Shanghai advices of May 15 say that at Wuhu, one of the better built of the Chinese cities, with a native population of 100,000 and only forty foreigners, trouble had long been brewing. The natives' anger was at first directed against the French missionaries, who had built a fine cathedral and orphanage in the English settlement. The cause of this hostility was the care which the fathers gave to deserted children, whose eyes the Chinese believed the priests used in making medicine. Secret society agents fomented the excitement among the country people, and threats were sent to the superior of the mission to return the children or the mission would be burned. News of this condition of affairs was sent to the Taotai, who did nothing to interfere, and on May 12 10,000 people collected and looted and fired the building. The few French priests who were inside had barely time to escape alive. Their clothes were torn off them in the struggle.

The foreign residents then held a council of war, and everybody was armed. There was no man-of-war at hand, and Mr. Colin Ford, the English Consul, telegraphed to Shanghai for a gunboat. The situation was getting momentarily worse. From the mission the mob moved on to the European residences, which they looted and burned. The Custom-house officers, who were unable to resist the mob, had the European ladies and children put aboard a hulk in the river, which was not attacked.

The mob then wrecked the British Consulate, which was looted but not fired. They tried to find the British Consul and his wife, whom they wanted to kill, but they escaped by the back door in Chinese clothes. It was afterwards reported that the Consul fell into the hands of the Chinese and was wounded, but this is not confirmed.

No man-of-war had arrived when the letter left. The British gunboat Linnet was at the mouth of the river, but had not gone to the aid of the imperilled Europeans. The greatest indignation was felt at the supineness of the naval authorities. The rioters were led by a gigantic fanatic. When the Custom-house was attacked the officers, under Mr. Parrie, defended it bravely. For two days and nights they were under arms and prevented the annihilation of the Europeans. At the risk of their lives they kept open the communication between the steamers and the shore. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the crowd threatened to burn the Custom-house and the rest of the settlement at 5, whereupon the Taotai ordered all peacefully-disposed citizens to go home, telling them that he would give the signal to fire on the mob at 5 o'clock. He hoisted the death-flag at the Yamên as a warning. In spite of this threat, 10,000 people paraded the streets and attacked the Customs officers, who charged the mob with bayonets, repulsing the onslaught. Many people in the crowd were wounded. The officers also fired several rounds of blank cartridge, but without effect. The rifles were on the point of being loaded with ball, when at 5 o'clock smoke was seen on the horizon out to sea. The crowd believed it was the French man-of-war Inconstant, which was expected.

The vessel, however, proved to be a Chinese corvette, with Fu Tai on board. Fu Tai had been acting as Governor of Nankin, and was returning home. Two gunboats convoyed the corvette. Mr. Ford immediately asked Fu Tai for assistance. The latter said he had not been aware of any riot, and at once signalled the gunboats to prepare for action. The three vessels then took up a position inside the hulks and prepared to bombard the town. The rabble were quieted at once, though they were at the time making preparation to attack the hulks. Fu Tai, after some correspondence with the shore authorities, landed 250 men near the Custom-house. About 6 o'clock the men-of-war hoisted the danger-signal and a blank cartridge was fired at the settlement. The natives scattered in all directions, and a heavy shower of rain coming on cleared the hills in the vicinity of the European colony. Shortly afterwards the harbour-master reported all quiet ashore. During the night occasional shots were fired to frighten the rioters.

On the following morning Feh Sing started for Shanghai with Mrs. Ford, the Rev. Mr. Knapp and his wife, the Rev. Mr. Molland and his wife and two children, Mrs. Russell and two children, Mr. Stewart, his wife and two children, and Mrs. and Master Harrow. The Russells lost most in the riot. The Catholic Cathedral was razed because the rioters wanted to exhume the bodies of two native children whom it was alleged the priests had murdered and burned. The trouble was not over, and it was feared that it would spread to points in the vicinity. The Europeans were hoping that the French and English war-ships would take steps to protect them.

SHANGHAI, June 22 (Standard).—The remonstrances which have been addressed by the representatives of Foreign Powers to the Court of Pekin have had, at any rate, the effect of inducing the Emperor to issue a Decree denouncing in energetic terms the outrages which have been perpetrated. The Edict declares that the attacks on foreigners have occasioned great anxiety to the Sovereign, it condemns equivocally those who are suspected to have had any part in bringing about the troubles, and peremptorily directs the officials to suppress the movement by all means in their power. Specific orders have been given for the prompt decapitation of any persons implicated in the recent riots and massacres.

The Hong Kong Unofficial members have succeeded in inducing the Secretary of State to hold over his assent to the new Official Salary scheme until the views of the Unofficials shall reach him. A correspondence is published in the Hong Kong papers between the Unofficials and the Government, in which they are able to elicit that the Secretary of State had telegraphed instructions on this point to the Governor before his departure. The following comments appear in the China Mail on this correspondence: — "A word of explanation is required in order to show the full significance of the reply of the Colonial Secretary's locum tenens. The Unofficial members on April 24 (then a united body) wrote the Governor the famous letter to which he took such strong exception. In that letter they informed him that they had wired the Secretary of State to the following effect:—'Unofficial Members Council dissatisfied with financial position and prospects; request postpone increase salaries, further consideration required; preparing Memorial. Governor declines forward telegram.' On the following day Governor Des Vœux also wired the Secretary of State. The substance of his telegram has not been revealed, but the object of the message doubtless was to counteract the effect of the cablegram sent by the Unofficials. Lord Knutsford does not reply direct to the Unofficials, that would involve a breach of the rules of procedure, his relations only being with the Governor of the Colony, but he gives effect to their wishes: for in spite of the Governor's (presumed) counteractive telegram, he orders the suspension of the instructions previously given in a despatch with regard to the increased salaries. Not only did the Secretary of State thus tacitly acknowledge the receipt of the telegram sent by the Unofficial members, but he acted on the advice given therein. Not a word was said by Governor Des Vœux previous to his departure about the action taken on the telegram of the Unofficials. The latter have to drag the information from the Government twenty days after the Secretary of State's telegram was received."

The Penang Gazette has a long description of the visit of the Resident Councillor of Penang, Mr. A. M. Skinner, to the Siamese States in the Western Malay Peninsula. Among the places called at was Kopah, which has never been visited before by any British officer. It lies on a shallow and inaccessible river. Tin-mining, though carried on at an enormous number of places, is handicapped heavily, and also has to pay 72,000 dols. as tribute. At Kopah there are said to be five hundred mines at least, most of them worked by the owner with a few coolies to help him. At Tongkah, Mr. Skinner stayed two days, and Mr. C. Dunlop, who is to construct the railway line across the Peninsula, met him both there and afterwards at Kedah. The tin-mining at Tongkah is going on with great energy. The visit disclosed many signs of progress under Siamese rule, and resulted in the gathering of valuable information. At Kedah all are full of the coming railway. Mr. C. Dunlop arrived on April 23 to settle about the survey of the route. The surveyor is already at work in Singora.

The Hon. E. E. Isemonger arrived in Malacca on May 23 to take up his duties as Acting Resident Councillor. The Hon. D. F. A. Hervey left on May 24 by the Ooryia. Before leaving he attended the Supreme Court, where he was presented with addresses from the Chinese community, the Chinese Club, the Macao Chinese, the Hindoos, the Malays, and the Penghulus of the settlement. All the chief inhabitants of Malacca were present, and the floor of the Court House was closely packed, and, in addition, several ladies graced the jury-box. All the addresses spoke of the satisfaction Mr. Hervey had given by the way in which he had guided the affairs of the settlement during the ten years he had been Resident Councillor, and expressed the hope that he would return after a pleasant voyage perfectly restored to health.

Railway Accidents in India. — There was an alarming increase during the first nine months of last year in the number of accidents on Indian railways. Recently-published returns show that, with a growth of less than 4 per cent. in the total train mileage, the excess of casualties over the average of the preceding two years amounted to nearly 12 per cent. The number of passenger-train collisions, for instance, rose from two to six, the burstings of engine-tubes from 57 to 92, the failures of machinery from 165 to 250, and so on. In one respect, however, and that the most important, the comparison is in favour of 1890. During the nine months eight passengers and railway servants were killed and 45 injured, as against 14 killed and 103 injured in the corresponding period of 1888 and 1889. It is obvious, however, says a Bombay paper, in face of the vast growth in the total number of accidents, that this falling off in the number of personal casualties cannot be attributed to increased efficiency in railway management.

DISTINGUISHED INDIANS AT CAMBRIDGE.

SIR ALFRED LYALL delivered the lecture at Cambridge on the Rede Foundation to a select audience in the Senate House on June 17. The subject was "Natural Religion in India."

At noon on June 16 there was a large and fashionable congregation in the Senate House at Cambridge to witness the ceremony of conferring honorary degrees and the inauguration of Lord Walsingham as High Steward. Some of those upon whom the honours were to be conferred were unable to be present, and the actual recipients of Honorary Degrees besides Lord Walsingham were Lord Dufferin, Sir Alfred Lyall, &c. In presenting the Marquess of Dufferin and Ava, the orator alluded to the high offices Lord Dufferin had held as Governor-General of Canada and as Viceroy of India, appointed to the former office when a Liberal Government was in power. In the language of his own reminiscence of Keats, he survived for some years the saturnine reign of Mr. Gladstone, "like Hyperion enthroned in the flaming west." In his progress through Canada as far as British Columbia, he had by a series of remarkable speeches kept alive in every part of the Dominion a feeling of ever-increasing loyalty to the Queen. As Viceroy of India, by deciding on the annexation of Burma, he added to the dominions of the Queen a territory three times the size of Great Britain; he had been equally distinguished as a diplomatist. The great grandson of Sheridan had been eloquent in many lands and in many languages; had spoken in Latin in Iceland, in Greek at Montreal, in Persian in India, and in French at a banquet given to the Comédie Française. Lastly he was much more than an eloquent orator, he was also a man of action whose whole career had been inspired by the purest spirit of patriotism.

Sir Alfred Lyall was introduced as formerly Home Secretary and Foreign Secretary in India, and Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, and as, at the present time, a member of the Indian Council. As an enlightened ruler in India, he had happily united in his own person the philosopher and the pro-consul.

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL.

THEY say we are not a musical nation! And yet once in every three years we are able to sustain a Musical Festival which, for completeness and effectiveness, is the wonder of the world. As we go to Beyreuth to hear Wagner so the German comes to England to hear Handel; for Handel, though not British-born, is peculiarly English, his style being clear, free, terse, and vigorous, and nowhere else can he be heard in his glory. The German thinks him rather common-place, and listens with wonder to the marvellous effects which we English in our love and sympathy with the mighty Master are able to produce out of his music.

Judging by the rehearsal at the Crystal Palace on Friday last the Handel Festival this year is likely to be better than ever. The orchestra numbers 502 instruments, and among the "strings," for the first time, there are eight lady performers. The total number of voices is 3,033, including 621 from the provinces, so that London is now almost entirely relied upon to furnish the musical battalions. Mr. Manns is again the conductor, and looked quite a noble figure on Friday with his long white hair leading with unflagging energy his immense army. Unlike his predecessor, the late Sir Michael Costa, Mr. Manns makes the first Friday performance a rehearsal in fact as well as in name. He shouts to his orchestra, makes them try back, and, regardless of the audience, insists upon perfection. But it was really a marvel to witness how little he had to correct, considering that nearly 4,000 performers were brought together at rehearsal for the first time. There is always a little want of precision and a lack of firmness of attack on rehearsal day, but this invariably disappears at the regular performances. We commend Mr. Manns for aiming at perfection in spite of the crowd of witnesses who had paid to hear the performance, and were, perhaps, a little annoyed at his carefulness.

The voices were very bright; some carping critics thought that the last festival would never be equalled in this respect, but Friday's trial convinced them that there was better material at hand on this than on any former occasion. This speaks well for London voices and for the care with which they have this year been selected. It would be unfair to criticise what was played and sung, for it was only a rehearsal. We may mention, however, that the trial began with the Hallelujah and Amen choruses from the "Messiah," and then what was new in the selection was attacked, followed by some of the great double and single choruses from "Israel in Egypt." The newly discovered "Gloria Patri," now printed for the first time, and written by Handel at Rome when a young man of twenty-three, created unqualified delight, and so did the "Giustino" overture, also quite new to most of the audience. The selected choruses from the "Messiah" and "Israel in Eygpt" were all splendidly sung, and the audience left the Crystal Palace with every expectation of a great treat at the regular performances during the ensuing week.

The Crystal Palace staff marshalled the tremendous crowd with their usual precision. There was no crushing anywhere, but all found their seats easily; and when it is remembered that not far short of 20,000 people had to be seated, this is no small praise to all concerned. When we see the performance we are apt to fancy how easy it all must be to manage; but we little know the mass of detail to be mastered before all this machinery works so satisfactorily.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Monday, June 22.

The Manipore Disaster.—The MARQUESS OF RIPON called attention to the disaster in Manipore, and moved for further papers. He condemned the policy of the Viceroy, and the projected arrest of the Senaputty at the Durbar, and expressed a hope that the Secretary of State would repudiate the acts of the Indian Government.

VISCOUNT CROSS repudiated any desire to add to the territories of India, except under absolute necessity; and in reference to the sentences on the Senaputty and the Jobraj, he said that any recommendations to mercy would be carefully considered. There was not a more absurd suggestion than to say that the Senaputty had been dismissed because he was a man of strong character. He would certainly discourage the summoning of a Durbar in order to effect an arrest; he would regret to see such a precedent established. He asked the House to give its support to the Viceroy.

The debate was continued by the DUKE OF ARGYLL, LORDS KIMBERLEY, NORTHBROOK, REAY, and DERBY, and the motion was agreed to.

Monday, June 15.

The Indian Staff Corps.—MR. GOURLEY asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he was aware that grave discontent existed among the officers of the Indian Staff Corps on account of the slowness of their promotion to the ranks of captain and major; and whether he was prepared to bring the matter to the notice of the Indian Government, with a view to effecting a reduction in the existing fixed periods of service—namely, eleven and twenty years, and thus assimilate the rate of promotion somewhat nearer to that governing for some years past the British Army, and which had averaged about eight and sixteen years.

SIR J. FERGUSSON (for Sir J. Gorst) said: The Secretary of State is not aware that there is any grave discontent, and, as at present advised, has no intention of taking the initiative in the matter.

Tuesday, June 16.

The Manipore Disaster.—SIR W. HARCOURT called attention to the disasters at Manipore, and moved for further correspondence. After a long debate the motion was agreed to.

Thursday, June 18.

The Punjab Opium Trade.—MR. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the following paragraph in the 25th Statement, exhibiting the moral and material progress and condition of India, pp. 78, 79:—"The principal change in the Punjab Excise system during the year was the enactment of new opium rules, under which the acreage fee was raised from half a rupee to two rupees per acre in order to check the production of small quantities of unexcised opium for home consumption. It is proposed also to close the Chundoo shops, where prepared opium is smoked upon the premises, as the existence of these houses tends to spread the vice of smoking opium, which is of recent origin in most parts of the Punjab"; whether the Government would draw the attention of the authorities in other parts of India to the desirability of closing the shops where prepared opium was smoked on the premises, as had already been proposed in the Punjab; whether he wou'd lay upon the table of the House the new opium rules of the Punjab; and whether he could state the extent of acreage in poppy cultivation in the Punjab during the last ten years.

SIR J. GORST: The passage in question is quoted from a paper presented to Parliament last year. The local government has reduced the opium-smoking licenses, and is considering further reductions. The attention of the Government of India will be invited to the hon. member's question. I shall be happy to show the hon. member the new opium rules, and he can then consider whether it is necessary to lay them on the table. I will also show the hon. member a ten years' statement of poppy cultivation.

Friday, June 19.

Consular Representation at Esbjerg.—MR. KING asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether information had been received that the British steam trawler Sir Albert Rollit was seized on the coast of Denmark, and captured by a Danish gunboat, and taken into the port of Esbjerg, and that this and another vessel, captured in the same way, were released at the instance of an Esbjerg gentleman connected with English trade; and whether, in view of such contingencies, and in view of the recent development and growing importance of the port of Esbjerg, it would be possible to appoint a Vice-Consul at that port.

SIR J. GORST, in the absence of Sir J. Fergusson, said:—Her Majesty's Minister has reported the occurrence. The British steam trawler in question, and at the same time a Danish steam trawler, were seized as described, and the Sir Albert Rollit, having been found guilty of a breach of the Danish fishing laws, was released on payment of a fine and the confiscation of one of her trawls. (Laughter.) The incident appears to have had no extraordinary features. There has not hitherto been any proposal to appoint a Consular officer at Esbjerg, but th e suggestion will be considered.

The Indian Engineering Colleges.—MR. KING asked the Under-Secretary of State for India, whether he would lay upon the table a return showing the capital cost of four Indian colleges at Roorki, Seepoor, Poona, and Madras, their annual expenditure and amount of their return in the shape of fees, and the number of annual Government appointments.

SIR JOHN GORST, in reply, stated that if the hon. member would move for the return it would be granted.

MR. KING gave notice that he would move for the papers on Thursday, June 25.

It having been stated that there is a regulation of the Indian Government under which no British manufactures required for Government works, such as the State railways, can be purchased except through Indian firms, Mr. J. P. Smith will to-day call Sir J. Gorst's attention to the subject, with a view to ascertaining whether such a regulation exists, and, if so, what are its terms, and on what grounds officers in charge of public works in India are hindered from purchasing goods direct from the manufacturers in this country without the necessity of paying commissions to intermediate agents in India.

The third ordinary meeting of the shareholders of the Indian and General Investment Trust was held on June 16 at Winchester House. Mr. H. S. King, M.P., presided, and in moving the adoption of the report said that, notwithstanding all the difficulties against which they had had to contend, they were enabled to meet the shareholders with the statement that the depreciation in their investments was sufficiently provided for by the reserve fund; and in this opinion their auditors, Messrs. Deloitte, Dever, Griffiths, and Co., acquiesced. For his own part he believed—and he thought the directors shared the same view—that their securities were worth their capital and something more. The policy of the directors had been to place more of the capital in India, where 6 per cent. was a gilt-edged security, whereas here such a rate almost necessarily implied some risk. At the present moment the investments held by them, with the loans, amounted to 423,000*l.* in round figures. Taking their debentures and preferred stock together, the amount was 319,859*l.*, and against this they held, if they added on their preferred shares in other companies, 304,209*l.* Practically, therefore, only their ordinary and deferred stock was interested in the ordinary and deferred shares of other companies. The whole of their capital had not been employed during the entire year, the mean average sum invested in the twelve months having been only 360,000*l.* Apart from the profit which they had made on sales, their receipts on revenue account for the year had been 21,647*l.*, so that they had employed their money to earn 6 per cent. net after paying all expenses—a result which he thought very satisfactory for the past twelve months. When they had the remainder of their debenture stock out—and this could not be long delayed—they would have a capital of 500,000*l.*, which, at 6 per cent., would produce 30,000*l.* This was equal to 8½ per cent. on their deferred stock, and 33 per cent. on the founders' shares. He did not, however, mean to say that they would pay these dividends at once, as the first thing they had to do was to consider the reserve fund. Last year they only had 102,000*l.* in Indian investments, whereas now they had 214,000*l.* These investments had turned out remarkably well, and showed a very satisfactory increase on their cost price. They had 55,000*l.* invested in companies in this country compared with 43,000*l.* last year; 75,000*l.* in North America, against 64,000*l.*; and 42,000*l.* in South America, against 31,000*l.*, their Argentine investments amounting to 22,000*l.* He was convinced that many of their Argentine securities would before long resume a very much higher average than they stood at now. They were able to recommend what he hoped would be regarded as a satisfactory dividend on the deferred stock—at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, making 6¼ per cent. for the year; and they had increased the reserve fund by 4,000*l.* Mr. Hankey, M.P., seconded the resolution, which was adopted.

Indian Trade with Afghanistan.—Sir James Fergusson, in reply to a correspondent, states that he has ascertained by inquiry at the India Office that the falling off of trade between India and Afghanistan, as well as through Afghanistan, in 1888-89 was succeeded by a considerable improvement in 1889-90. A report presented to Parliament last April places the imports into India at 193,480 rx. for 1888-89, and 346,214 rx. for 1889-90, while the exports from India for the two periods are respectively 526,798 rx. and 813,450 rx. The causes which have combined to prevent the growth of trade continue to operate with increased intensity. Russian competition is keener, while the Russian fiscal restrictions against the intrusion of English and Indian goods from the East are increasingly severe. The transit duties levied by the Ameer are practically prohibitive of trade from the Indian frontier beyond the zone of Cabul, and latterly the effect of these heavy dues has been increased by relatively light dues imposed from Russian territory into Afghanistan. The revival of trade with Cabul is attributed by the local authorities of the Punjab chiefly to the cessation of disturbances in the dominions of the Ameer, a circumstance which accounts for the larger trade done with Cabul in all the principal articles.

A Cyprus Exhibition.—It is proposed to hold an Exhibition of the Products of Ancient and Modern Cyprus (of the General and Executive Committees of which Mr. Stanley Leighton, M.P., and the Hon. Algernon Egerton are respectively chairmen) in April or May of 1892. The postponement of the Exhibition until 1892 is due to the desire of the Exhibition Committee to produce exhibits of exceptional interest, and the necessity for further time for organisation. Information may be obtained on written application to the Secretary, Mr. Claude Johnson, 140 Palace Chambers, Westminster, London, S.W.

LONDON: TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1891.

THE MANIPORE DEBATE.

WITH one notable exception the debate in the Commons on the Manipore question was rather a dull one. SIR W. VERNON HARCOURT made what is called a "statesmanlike" speech, which means that he took a commonplace view of the papers presented to Parliament. By accident, no doubt, he followed the line indicated in our analysis of the correspondence, but to his credit as a partisan it may be said that he did not push the case to extremes. The mere fact that, owing to some blunders on the part of the agents employed to carry the wishes of the Government of India into effect, a breakdown had occurred, gave the Opposition no legitimate ground for criticising the Home Government, who knew nothing of the difficulty before it was informed of the catastrophe. An attempt to fix the Indian Government with blame for not having consulted the Secretary of State before acting entirely broke down. The case was one with regard to which the Governor-General in Council had an absolute right to come to an independent decision. If India is to be governed at all it must be governed from Calcutta (or Simla), with the reservation of review and criticism by the Secretary of State in Council. Compared with other subjects of Indian administration the case was really of second or third rate importance, and, as SIR JOHN GORST remarked, not, we believe, with any intentional cynicism, would hardly have been heard of, had the removal of the Senaputty been accomplished without a catastrophe. We cannot understand why SIR JOHN GORST should be blamed for frankly stating a fact which lies on the surface. It was reaffirmed last night in the Lords' debate. Manipore is a small and remote State whose interests compared with those of the Indian Empire at large were of the smallest importance. No Governor General could have been expected to treat the difficulty which had arisen there otherwise than as an ordinary matter of administration. What SIR JOHN GORST desired to convey to the House, though he may not have been altogether happy in his manner of putting it, was simply what we have indicated. It is hardly fair to blame him for being so candid, or to search his language too closely for sarcastic meanings.

As we anticipated, the strongest point made against the Indian Government in both Houses was with regard to the delay in arriving at a conclusion, and its resolution to deport the Senaputty after the revolution carried out under his inspiration had been practically recognised. MR. QUINTON and MR. GRIMWOOD were evidently of opinion that it would be better to let sleeping dogs lie. The Senaputty was not an ideal statesman, but he was the ablest man in the State, an imperfectly civilised State, in whose rulers the Indian Government could not expect to find types of high moral character. MR. GRIMWOOD seems to have taken the measure of his man very intelligently, and to have thought that on the whole he would be the best ruler in the circumstances. This is practically what SIR JOHN GORST admitted, but he stated his case somewhat more sardonically than was consistent with a thoroughgoing defence of the action of LORD LANSDOWNE and his advisers. In fact his argument reads rather like a criticism than a defence. One passage in it has been severely censured. He said:—

> There are two ways of dealing with a man of this sort—one is to depose him from his State, and the other is to use him as an instrument for governing the State. It is quite evident that Mr. Grimwood desired to adopt the latter course. That was a very generous policy, and one which everybody is disposed to sympathise with, but it was a rather risky policy. It is a policy which depends on the Resident obtaining the ascendency of the Senaputty, and not on the Senaputty obtaining the ascendency of the Resident. Between the two powers there is a great difference, for one is temporary and the other is permanent. Mr. Grimwood would remain only a few years at the outside in Manipore, while the Senaputty would be there after Mr. Grimwood left, and might possibly obtain an ascendency over Mr. Grimwood's successor, if not over Mr. Grimwood himself. For that and other reasons Governments never have allowed or encouraged such a policy being adopted. They have always discouraged independent and original talent, and have always promoted mediocrity. This is not a new policy. It is as old as the days of Tarquinius Superbus. In my own time I have known numbers of cases of this kind.

He proceeded to cite the cases of the Maori King, of CETEWAYO and ARABI. The line of argument is excellent enough, but it was put too crudely, and we may add too cleverly, to make it effective for the purposes of apology. In the House SIR JOHN GORST'S hearers could not help giving his language a personal application, an application which we are convinced, after carefully considering the argument, was not in his mind. Many of his hearers at once applied the satire to SIR JOHN GORST'S relations to his chief at the India Office. This is absurd. The personal relations between the Under-Secretary and the Secretary of State are of the most cordial character, and no one who knows the two men can believe that SIR JOHN GORST intended, or suspected that his language would be applied to conditions existing at home. It is an amusing fact that his language has been taken to refer by turns to most of the Ministers who sit on the Front Bench. The Secretary of State last night however showed very clearly that he disapproved of SIR JOHN GORST'S levity. He said "the statement was so utterly opposed to common-sense that he could not imagine how it could have been made." The DUKE OF ARGYLL characterised it as "absurd." SIR JOHN GORST is suffering the penalty of being too clever. In effect his apology was pretty much the same as that of the Secretary of State for War and MR. CURZON. Manifestly the Home authorities think that it would have been better had the Indian Government acted on MR. GRIMWOOD'S advice; but at the same time they recognise that LORD LANSDOWNE and his advisers must have acted from pure and legitimate motives, and had no other object than to maintain the prestige of the paramount power. That being admitted how is it possible to censure them, because the effort to carry out their policy was defeated by disaster?

One of the most sensible speeches made in the Lords' discussion was, as might be expected, that of LORD DERBY. It sums up the case more judicially and more judiciously than SIR JOHN GORST had done, but practically expresses somewhat similar views. This passage is worth reproducing:—

> And if I might venture to express an opinion about a matter on which we know so little, I should have doubted whether it might not have been wiser to discard at once the ruler who had run away from his country, in a flight with very little cause, and so shown himself unfit for his position, and in that case you would have accepted unconditionally the ruler who had replaced him and his advisers. No doubt the new ruler would not have been a nominee of ours; he would not have owed his throne to us, but I do not think that makes very much difference in the long run. We all remember what happened in Afghanistan. We tried to put on the throne a certain Prince, Suja Shah, but he was displaced by the very man whom we had unsuccessfully tried to dethrone, and whom we were compelled to recognise in the end—Dost Mahomed. Dost Mahomed was an able man, and he reigned for many years, and we remained in perfect good understanding with him. I do not see why on a smaller scale the same results should not follow in the present case, and I will frankly own that I do not quite understand accepting the results of a revolution and then proceeding to imprison the people by whom it has been made. I do not, however, argue the point, because I should entirely discard my own judgment in a matter of this kind. It depends so much on details—on the character of the men, on the feelings of the people, on the circumstances of the country—that I do not believe that any one here, and I hardly except even the Secretary of State, is capable of pronouncing a sound judgment in the matter. It is essentially a question for the Government of India in India. We give our Viceroy immense powers. We surround him with able and experienced advisers, and it is not wise to take such decisions out of his hands. He is better placed to judge in such a matter, and, what is perhaps more important, he is not exposed to those disturbing and exciting influences which prevail at home. As a matter of fact, questions of this kind are properly left to him, and it must be remembered that, but for a military mishap which has caused all this disturbance, nothing would have been heard of the affair, and it would have passed absolutely unnoticed.

That is really the most that can be said.

SIR GEORGE CHESNEY is an able man, but his letter of June 17 to the Times, which we reprint, might just as well have been left unwritten. He is one of those responsible for the policy adopted by the Government of India in regard to Manipore. He admits that the matter at issue was "not one of danger to the peace of India in leaving the SENAPUTTY at Manipore, but whether this would be compatible with the maintenance of quiet within that little State." If that were all, we cannot help thinking that the Government of India might have risked it. If family quarrels have been going on there for seventy years without any appreciative injury to British interests, the Government ought to be able to show some special reason for interfering in the only revolution which, according to SIR G. CHESNEY, came off without bloodshed. The special reasons given by him are that Manipore had come into immediate contact with British Provinces, and that the latest revolution offered no prospect of finality. MR. GRIMWOOD'S report however was practically that it offered the only chance of finality—the SENAPUTTY being the strongest of the brothers, and having quite gratuitously forgone his own claims on behalf of the previous JOBRAJ, and the State having settled down quietly under the new arrangements. It would surely have been time enough to act when any new outbreak occurred, provided the only question with the Government of India was that of peace within Manipore. SIR GEORGE CHESNEY'S attempt to defend the intention to arrest the SENAPUTTY at the Durbar shows that he is imperfectly in touch with Home opinion. In this case, however, some Anglo-Indian newspapers are in accord with British feeling, and on the whole it seems useless to combat a judgment which has already been delivered.

FUNERAL OF MR. HAROLD R. KING.

ON June 17 the remains of the late MR. HAROLD R. KING, which had been brought home from Aden, where it will be remembered they were temporarily buried after his decease on board the P. and O. steamer Oriental, were finally interred in the quiet and picturesque graveyard at Chigwell, in Essex, beside the bodies of his father and brother. In the Manor House at Chigwell the deceased was born and brought up; a beautiful stained glass window in the pretty church bears testimony to the love and devotion with which the late MR. HENRY SAMUEL KING and his first wife were regarded by the children of that marriage, of whom HAROLD R. KING was one. It was fitting that the son who had died on a far-off sea, should be laid beside his father in the churchyard close to the old family home. A lovely June day smiled on the fresh green of trees and crops, and shimmered over the undulating landscape of this charming part of Essex as the carriages of the funeral cortege drove along the road that winds from Woodford to Chigwell, passing by the way the Manor House. Sad as the ceremony was, one could not help thinking that there was a certain appropriateness in the time and the season. One of the brightest and liveliest of men, it seemed right that our deceased friend, cut off in the summer of his life, should thus be laid to rest in the purest and sweetest brightness of the summer-land he loved so well. A large number of the relatives and friends of the deceased attended, testifying to the affection with which he was regarded by those who most intimately knew him, and tributes of wreaths and flowers covered the spot in which he was laid at rest. Among those who attended, besides MR. and MRS. HENRY S. KING, MR. and MRS. MURPHY, the MISSES KING, MR. COVENEY, MR. RICHARD KING and other relatives, were GENERAL DENNEHEY, SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD, COLONEL BECHER, MR. M. BHOWNAGGREE, C.I.E., and several Indian gentlemen, representative of the Masonic Lodge at Bombay to which the deceased belonged, MR. EDWARD JENKINS, MR. GODDARD, MR. A. SUART, MR. BENNETT, a number of gentlemen from the Cornhill and Pall Mall offices of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING & CO., and others. A large number of beautiful wreaths were laid upon the coffin from all the above, and from many friends who could not attend, and handsome floral tributes were sent by the Cornhill and Pall Mall staff.

A WARNING TO DISHONEST OFFICERS.

THE Chief Commissioner of Burma has found it necessary to take action with regard to officers who incur debts which they refuse to pay. A circular has been issued by the local Government, says a Rangoon paper, stating that the Chief Commissioner is constantly receiving complaints from India and elsewhere regarding gazetted officers who have failed to pay moneys alleged to be due by them, and ignore all applications for the discharge of their debts. The Government, the circular adds, does not tolerate indebtedness and insolvency on the part of clerks and other subordinates, and the Chief Commissioner will deal severely with any gazetted officer who brings the Government service into disrepute by refusing or neglecting to pay his just debts.

On this Capital remarks:—"This resolution is quite in keeping with the character for justice that Sir Alexander Mackenzie bears. We commend it to the attention of Sir Charles Elliott and Sir Frederick Roberts; indeed, the Supreme Government might read it with advantage. If the Government of India only let it be known that the evasion of just debts was an abomination in their sight, the service would be purified. O for a moment of Sir Charles Napier; it would be worth a cycle of the present stuff; that stern old warrior was not a travelling advertisement."

WE are very glad to see that the Secretary of State has with kindly promptitude acted on the suggestion that MRS. GRIMWOOD'S services would be most effectively recognised by a good pension. Extra pensions of 300*l.* a year are granted to her and to MRS. QUINTON. This is as it should be. Honours are all very well, but it is better to have something substantial wherewith to support them.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES early last week started a subscription for the benefit of MRS. GRIMWOOD among the wives of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the British Army, to show their appreciation of her gallantry, heroism, and devotion to the wounded under fire during the late disaster at Manipore. In consequence of numerous inquiries afterwards made at Marlborough House, the PRINCESS OF WALES has decided that all English women who are anxious to join her Royal Highness's Fund on behalf of MRS. GRIMWOOD shall be invited to subscribe. Subscriptions will be received by MESSRS. COUTTS AND CO.

"ATLAS" in the World says that he is able to confirm, on the best of authority, the statements which have been published as to the probability of MRS. GRIMWOOD receiving the Victoria Cross in addition to the Red Cross. He adds that in crossing the river MRS. GRIMWOOD injured the sinews of her foot, and is very lame in consequence; indeed, it is feared that she will always be a little so; and she has some slight bullet wounds in her arm. MRS. GRIMWOOD is only twenty-three, and had been married three years.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, June 1.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on May 28, reduced the rate of interest 1 per cent., making the official minimum 3 per cent.

Below are given the figures of the Bank's statement for the week ending May 26 :—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office ... Rs.	17,54,371	Decrease
Do. at Branches	2,19,696	Decrease
Other Deposits	41,81,317	Increase
Post Bills	1,05,669	Increase
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	1,94,388	Increase
Loans	5,20,245	Decrease
Accounts of Credits	3,52,025	Increase
Mercantile Bills	1,75,700	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	2,56,658	Increase
Do. at Branches	18,31,517	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a further decrease of nearly 46⅝ lacs, made up as follows :—By an increase of nearly 41⅞ lacs in "Other Deposits" and over one lac in "Post Bills," together with a decrease of nearly 5¼ lacs in "Loans" and 1¾ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus an increase of over 3¼ lacs in "Accounts of Credits." The treasury balance at head office stands reduced by over 17½ lacs, and at the branches by nearly 2-1/5 lacs. The Bank's investments were increased by nearly 2 lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 2½ lacs in the cash at head office and 18⅜ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 5,31,75,878 rs., equal to 57·2 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 56·4 per cent.

EXCHANGE.—On France for Commercial Bill at six months' sight, 1·82 frs., and 1·80½ frs. for three months' sight, while on Mauritius, Private Bills at sixty days' sight are quoted at 2½ per cent. discount. The rate for thirty days' sight Mercantile Bills on Hong Kong is 219 rs., and on Singapore 220 rs.; while on Bombay, Bank Telegraphic Transfer is quoted at par, and sixty days' sight Bank Drafts at 6 as. discount. Enfaced Rupee Paper has fluctuated very slightly; the 4 per cents. have only varied between 74*l.* 5*s.* and 74*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, while the 4½ per cent., after being quoted at 75*l.* 15*s.*, close steady at 76*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

TEA.—About 3,500 chests were sold on May 28. Owing chiefly to orders for the Colonies and for Central Asia, prices were very firm, occasionally showing a slight rise on suitable parcels.

JUTE.—A little business has been done for Europe in old crop at 21-8 to 22 rs. for good first marks, while the mills continue to buy common and medium qualities. As regards new crop, most balers are still unwilling to sell, in view of the unfavourable reports coming to hand from some districts, the complaint now being "too much rain."

GUNNIES.—A further decline in rates has resulted in a fair business.

HESSIANS are steady. 'Frisco has fixed a further line of wheat bags for the sailers, and small sales are reported of 8-40" cloth for New York, and bran bags for the Colonies.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—There has been nothing stirring in the share market except the transactions in gold shares. In these a considerable business has been done, but operations have been confined to Bengal gold and silvers, Pat Pats, and Sonapets. Jute stocks have been quite neglected, and are very quiet. There has been scarcely anything done in tea, but a single transaction having been reported. There is a good demand for investment stocks, which is likely to continue so long as money is as cheap as it is now. Business in these stocks, however, is to a great extent restricted, not only on account of their severity, but also on account of the high premiums to which they have been forced.

BANK OF BENGAL.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, June 4.

Since the resumption of business after the late holidays there has not been much activity in exports generally, though arrivals of wheat have continued to be upon a very large scale. Cotton, the receipts of which are 237,000 bales less than last season's, has been taken to a moderate extent by the local mills, exporters having been but small buyers on most days, while demand both for wheat and seeds has been comparatively slack, though the tone of both markets has been steady. Rates of exchange have not fluctuated more than 1-16*d.*; but latterly the movement has been slightly upward, and closing quotations are 1-16*d.* higher than they were. Government paper has advanced 3-16 per cent. in Fours. Freights have been weak and declining for ready and near shipment, and are now depressed at lower rates. With the close of the active business season, and the approach of the south-west monsoon, transactions in imports are becoming more restricted, and prices tend in buyers' favour.

MONEY.—Three days out of the period covered by the Presidency Bank's statement of affairs issued on June 1 having been kept as holidays by the financial establishments, there has naturally not been much movement in monetary matters. The increase of 12½ lacs in the bank's cash balance disclosed by the return, however, points to the still easier feeling in the market which may be expected to obtain when the busy export season, now near its close, shall be over. There had been a decrease both in loans and bills discounted aggregating, at 9½ lacs, nearly the same amount as in the week preceding; and though, on the other hand, there had been some diminution in private deposits, the falling off in the trade demand for money was over 5 lacs for the three days during which the bank was open. No change has been made in rates, and the minimum remains at 4 per cent.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Dealers in staple grey goods have been willing sellers at current rates, but up-country buyers have been operating very slowly, as they have mostly finished placing the retail orders left in their hands till the close of the business season. Wholesale demand in the bazaar is irregular and very small, and rates are ruling in buyers' favour in view of increasing stocks. Little has been done on bleached goods, and prices are becoming weaker; and the same remark applies to Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods of all descriptions. Local goods are very dull, and prices are moving downward. The off-take from the Bazaar for the week has been about 2,700 packages of imported goods and 1,400 bales of local.

YARNS.—A moderate business has transpired in imported twist on the basis of previous quotations, with a steady feeling in the market.

METALS.—A large business has been done in copper, and the market closes firm at an advance of 8 as. to 12 as. per cwt. Yellow metal has also been firm in tone, and prices are 8 as. per cwt. higher, but only a moderate business has transpired. Iron has also been taken to a moderate extent in a quiet market, and on the basis of previous rates.

COAL has been a very quiet market, and no fresh business has transpired, either ready or arrival.

Exports.—Cotton remained quiet in tone to the close of last week, with not much doing for account of the mills, and very little for export; but previous prices are generally maintained. The only noticeable feature has been a much better demand for export, leading to a larger business in that direction, and a corresponding falling off in local inquiry; but this only lasted for a day, and subsequently there was again hardly anything doing for export, and little for the mills. The purchases for local account during the week have aggregated about 7,500 bales, consisting chiefly of Julgaum and other Oomra growths, Bhownugger, Wadwan, and Virumgaum, Broach, Bengal, and Compta; while shippers are reported to have bought some 5,500 bales, principally of Dharwar, Oomra kinds, Bhownugger, and Bengals. The market closes quiet, with prices on the same level as they were a week ago.

The receipts of cotton of this season's crop during the week have been 71,000 bales, against 44,000 bales to hand in the week preceding, and 69,100 bales arrived in the corresponding week last year.

WHEAT advanced half an anna per cwt. in a firm market on last mail day; but only a moderate business was done for export, and the market continued in the same state to the end of the week without further change in rates. Since then the feeling has been generally steady, but with no greater demand from shippers, nor further change in prices. Arrivals have continued on a very large scale, being now out far short of 7¾ million cwts. since the beginning of the year, or an increase of some 4¼ million cwts. on last year's receipts for the same time.

SEEDS have also been taken to only a moderate extent for export, and the only description in which there has been any movement in price is linseed, which advanced half an anna per cwt. on May 29, to the same extent on the following day, and again on June 1 there was a further rise of half an anna, and quotations at the close are 6·6-6 rs. to 6·9·6 rs. per cwt. The increase in receipts of lins eed this year, as against last, is now over 1¾ million cwts., more or less increase being also shown in arrivals of rape, gingelly, and groundnuts in the same comparison.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ONLY GENUINE.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. — Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formulahas never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. — Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. —See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

GENERAL NEWS.

BY the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to June 9; Madras, June 10; Bombay, June 12.

Our papers were not delivered from the Post Office this morning until nearly midday.

Lady Lansdowne, Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, Surgeon-Major Fenn, and Lord Valletort started on June 10 for a ten-days' trip to Narkhanda. They were to sleep at Theog, arriving at Narkhanda on June 11. The Viceroy started after the Council on the 10th, accompanied by Mr. Herbert, A.-D.-C., and was to ride straight through to Narkhanda.

The party were to remain at Narkhanda till the 18th, the Viceroy returning to Simla in time for the Council on the 19th. Lady Lansdowne and her party were to return by easy stages, reaching Simla on June 20. Lord William Beresford was to leave Simla for Dehra Dun on June 12, and would be back on the 19th.

The Eton dinner given in the Viceregal Lodge was attended by the following old Etonians:—His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, Sir James Lyall, Sir Frederick Roberts, Colonel H. F. Grant, Colonel Lord William Beresford, Captain W. F. Montresor, Captain H. R. Wigram, Lieutenant W. T. Furse, Mr. F. Roberts, Lieutenant H. A. Pakenham, Mr. W. G. Young, and Lieutenant H. R. Davies.

Sir James Dormer, Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, has recognised the services of Major Grant, V.C., of Thobal, by offering him the appointment of aide-de-camp on his personal staff, an offer which the young field officer has accepted.

Sir Harry Prendergast has taken over charge of the office of British Resident at Mysore.

A handsome memorial trophy is shortly to be presented to Mr. H. S. King, C.I.E., M.P., by the Uncovenanted Services of India as a token of their gratitude for his able advocacy of their cause. The retired and furlough officials at home are also arranging to present a handsome testimonial. The ceremony will take place on Saturday, July 11, at Mr. King's house, 25 Cornwall Gardens.

Mr. Joseph Parker, of the Civil Service, has been appointed Director-General of the Store Department, India Office, in the place of Mr. A. Abercrombie Jopp, who, being incapacitated from further work, has retired on pension. Mr. Parker has for some time past filled the office of Assistant Director-General, and his promotion has given great satisfaction in the department, as it gives a step all round. The pay of the director-generalship is 1,200*l.* per annum.

At the request of the Russian Ambassador at the British Court, the Secretary of State has asked the Government of India to afford all facilities to Professor Tichomiroff, who is about to visit certain parts of India, Ceylon, and China, with a view to studying the administration of botanical gardens and cinchona plantations, and to M. Gondatti, who is about to study tea and silkworm cultivation in India, Ceylon, and China. The Madras Government has accordingly issued the necessary orders to the Board of Revenue, the Government Botanist, and the Director of the Government Cinchona Plantations.

The Kanwar Harnam Singh, C.I.E. (of Kapurthala, Punjab), and the Kanwarani (his wife) have arrived in London. The Kanwar and Kanwarani are both Christians, and both went in the procession to Westminster Abbey at the jubilee in 1887, as representing the Royal House of Kapurthala. The Kanwar (Prince) is younger son of a late Raja of Kapurthala and uncle of the present one. They have come over to England to see their sons, who are being educated in England.

The Nizam's Government, a telegram from Bombay states, have subscribed 100*l.* towards the expenses of the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography to be held in London.

Singareni coal is now being largely used by the G.I.P. Railway, the Nizam's State Railway, the Southern Mahratta, the South Indian Railway, and the Madras Railway. It is spoken of as being of good quality, and is 50 per cent. cheaper than English coal.

An account of the Manipore murders, published by an Anglo-native contemporary, states that the executioner struck Mr. Quinton twice on the neck, but both blows were ill-aimed and inflicted terrible wounds. The Chief Commissioner then pointed to his throat, and it was cut with one sweeping stroke, the head being afterwards severed from the body.

The Military Department of the Government of India is to be strengthened forthwith by the appointment of another assistant secretary on a salary of 500 rs. staff, in addition to the pay of his rank. A paid attaché, however, is not to be allowed.

The Government has begun to grant leave to the troops remaining in the Miranzai and Black Mountain country, a Reuter telegram says.

The War Office have for some time past had under consideration the question of raising a regiment in India to be stationed at Hong Kong. The strength proposed is 1,013 of all ranks, with officers selected from the Indian Staff Corps. The Government of India have sent home all the necessary information regarding recruiting, terms of enlistment, pay, allowances, and the like. The regiment will probably be composed of Punjabi Mahomedans, and orders may be expected shortly regarding its formation.

The Annual Rifle Meeting opened at Simla on June 5 in somewhat cloudy weather. There are 146 competitors, and the prizes amount to about 2,800 rs.

In connection with the delimitation work on the Siam-Kiangtung border, the southern limits of which had to be defined, Mr. Archer, the Times of India says, is busy with his report at Bangkok, while Mr. Kennedy, of the Survey Department, is working up his map material at Bangalore. Captain Fulton, who commanded the small escort with the party, is expected at Simla shortly from Rangoon. The work done shows how far the Siamese authority extends northward. The party visited Kuenghung on the Mekong river, whence Mr. Scott, Dr. Gray, and Mr. Kennedy returned westwards to Fort Stedman, while Mr. Archer and Captain Fulton went down stream in country boats to Bangkok.

The Khojak Tunnel is so far completed that it will be possible to pass through a broad-gauge train should the occasion arise.

A Bombay telegram of yesterday's date says:—Heavy and continuous rain has been falling in the surrounding districts since Saturday, and it is expected that the fall will be general. During the week ending June 27 the rainfall was 4·9 inches, and since June 1 it has been 5·24 inches.

It is rumoured that affairs in the Rampore State are in a very unsettled condition, so much so, indeed, that events may necessitate the despatch of British troops to preserve order.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, with 200 Cashmere troops and two mountain guns, is now at Chalt. His presence there will probably suffice to make the Nagar people think twice about fighting.

The returns for the export trade of India during the month of April show some remarkable variations on last year's figures. Over 35,000 tons more wheat left the country, the increase in value being some 37 lacs of rupees. This, however, was far more than counterbalanced by an enormous falling-off in the export of raw cotton, the shipments of which fell from 1,221,000 cwts. to 855,000 cwts., the difference in value being about 1,57,00,000 rs. With variations in other commodities, the total value of the exports thus fell by slightly over one crore.

THE UNIVERSITY MISSIONS.

A meeting in support of the Cambridge University Mission to Delhi was held on June 22 at the Church House, Westminster, Mr. G. Cubitt, M.P., in the chair. The Bishop of Durham declared that the English Church ought to be brought face to face with strange peoples in the fulness of its organisation; and in India it seemed to be exceptionally necessary that the gospel should be presented as a social force, which offered something of a higher type of brotherhood to welcome those who embraced it. He spoke of the good work that was being done by the society in Delhi, which showed there was that in Christianity which could bind Englishmen and Hindoos together in true fellowship of life. There was a perceptible improvement in the moral tone of the people of Delhi, springing from the efforts of Christian teachers. The hope of India, however, really lay in their influence on Indian homes, and until that was done the work in the colleges and schools there must be transient. The Bishop of Calcutta moved, "That the work of the Cambridge Mission at Delhi is deserving of the support of all Cambridge men. Professor Kirkpatrick seconded the motion, and it was carried.

On June 25 the annual meeting of the Oxford Mission to Calcutta was held at the Grosvenor Hall, Buckingham Palace Road. The Rev. Dr. E. S. Talbot presided, and was supported by the Bishop of Calcutta, Archdeacon Atlay, Archdeacon Maples, of Massasi, Canon H. S. Holland, Mr. J. G. Talbot, M.P., Sir Walter Phillimore, and others. The Bishop of Calcutta, in giving an interesting account of the progress of the work, said that the new mission house in Calcutta was approaching completion; and their first bequest, that of Canon Liddon of 250*l*., would be devoted to the lecture hall, which would be called after Dr. Liddon's name. The Mission was endeavouring to solve the great problem of how far the brotherhood system could be used in mission work; but to do that, when their new central mission house was completed, they must have four, if not six, more men. Other addresses followed.

Sir Arthur Gordon, the late Governor of Ceylon, has, it is said, been seriously ill with influenza and complications, at his house, near Ascot, but that he is in a fair way to recovery.

Lady Reay on June 24 presented the scholarships, prizes, and certificates won during the past year by the students at the London School of Medicine for Women, Handel Street, Brunswick Square.

A marriage is arranged between Colonel John G. Watts, Indian Staff Corps (Bombay), and Gertrude, daughter of the late Surgeon John Macdowall Hay, Bengal Medical Department, and granddaughter of the late Mr. James Thomason, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, India.

The marriage of Captain B. W. Cracroft, Indian Staff Corps, with Miss Madeleine Williams, took place on June 25 at Christchurch, Lancaster Gate, W., before a large and fashionable assembly. The service, which was fully choral, was conducted by the vicar, the Rev. C. Ridgway, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ker-Gray, incumbent of St. George's, Albemarle Street. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Captain Dering Williams, Royal Berkshire Regiment, was attended by four bridesmaids and a page. After the ceremony a reception was held at 73 Lancaster Gate by Mrs. Gwyther, the bride's mother. Among those invited were General Cracroft, Captain and Mrs. Dowdeswell, Captain Coventry Williams, 13th Hussars, General and Mrs. Prendergast, the Misses Kennedy, Sir George Balfour, M.P., General, Mrs., and Miss Beresford, Sir Anthony and Lady Weldon, Mrs. and Miss Weldon, Colonel Gourley, M.P., Colonel and the Misses Stewart, Baronne de Pallandt, Colonel Swinton, Lady and Miss Grant, General and Miss Falls, Mr. Winch, Q.C., and Mrs. Winch, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie-Moore, the Hon. Mrs. Pellew, Mr. and Mrs. Sholto-Douglas, Lady Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Huntly-Gordon, Count de Raymond, Colonel M'Causland, Colonel Becher, Major and Captain Hilliard, Mrs. Irwin-Browne, &c. The happy pair left during the afternoon for Wedhampton, Wiltshire, the residence of the bride's mother.

A marriage is arranged, and is about to take place, between Captain William Stewart, 10th Bengal Lancers, eldest son of Colonel Stewart, C.I.E. (Royal, late Bengal Artillery), of Ardvorlich, Perthshire, N.B., and Lily McLaren, youngest daughter of A. C. M'Laren, Esq., of 60 Harley Street, Cavendish Square.

The Council of the Society of Arts have awarded their Silver Medal to the following readers of papers in the Indian Section during the session 1890-91:—To B. H. Baden-Powell, C.I.E., for his paper on "The Indian Village Communities, with Special Reference to Modern Investigation." To Thomas Wardle, for his paper on "The Use of Tussur in European Textile Manufactures." To Charles L. Tupper, B.A., for his paper on "The Study of Indian History."

At the Annual General Meeting of the Society, held on June 17, Sir George Birdwood referred to the efficient manner in which the work of the Indian Section was carried on by the new secretary of the section, Mr. S. Digby.

Lord Salisbury's "black man" does not seem to have improved his electioneering prospects by getting elected to the Council of the Imperial Institute, says the Daily Chronicle. The secretary of the Central Finsbury Liberal and Radical Association protests vigorously against Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji for persisting in thrusting himself forward as the selected Liberal candidate for the constituency. The final vote of selection was never given to the mild Hindoo or Parsee, and the Finsbury Radicals aver that though he may be able to beat other Tory members in other places, he has not the ghost of a chance in Central Finsbury. It seems that the different Gladstonian caucuses wanted to submit Mr. Naoroji's claim to arbitration, and on this point the Central Finsbury Liberal and Radical Council and the Central Finsbury Liberal and Radical Union were agreed. Mr. Naoroji refused arbitration, and it is now perfectly certain that if he goes to the poll all he will do will be to prevent the Liberal candidate, who is the local nominee, from winning.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on June 28:—

The following figures, which, I believe, have not been published before, show the rapid progress made in the development of the scheme enabling Native States to take part in imperial defence, which was inaugurated by Lord Dufferin little more than two years ago. Cashmere now possesses an imperial service contingent of two squadrons of cavalry, five regiments of infantry, and a mountain battery, while a sixth regiment of infantry is to be raised shortly. The Punjab States contribute eight and a-half squadrons of cavalry, five regiments of infantry, and two companies of sappers. The Rajpoot States have raised sixteen squadrons of cavalry, two regiments of infantry, one camel corps, and one transport corps. Gwalior contributes eight squadrons of cavalry, and a transport corps, Rampore two squadrons of cavalry, and Mysore four squadrons of cavalry.

Digitized by Google

All these troops are fit for service in every respect, and are recruited entirely from the natives of the respective States. The total number of the force is nearly 16,000, exclusive of the four squadrons of cavalry which are now being organised in the Kattiwar States. Lieutenant-Colonel Melliss, assisted by thirteen British officers, has organised all these contingents, and the greatest credit is due to him and his staff for the very successful manner in which they have been raised.

The abnormal delay in the setting in of the rains is the subject which has attracted most attention in India during the past fortnight. A Bombay telegram early last week announced that the monsoon burst there on Monday evening, but later despatches say that the weather has cleared again, and it is doubtful whether Monday's rain was not due merely to a local storm. According to news from Madras, the rainfall there so far has been very light and insufficient. From Upper India come complaints of the excessive heat and of the absence of all the appearances which usually usher in the rainy season.

Up to yesterday a similar state of things prevailed in Bengal, and it began to look as if this year would rival 1888, when the monsoon did not break till June 29, the latest date ever recorded. Last night, however, a thunderstorm with heavy rain passed over Calcutta, and, although the rain has now ceased, the conditions look more favourable. Natives as well as Europeans describe the weather of the last seventeen days as the most trying they have ever known. Many deaths have occurred from sunstroke, and heat-apoplexy. Burma and Assam have had plentiful rain. In Bengal, although the fall thus far has been greatly below the average, there is no cause for apprehension as yet; but, as regards most of the other provinces, the long drought cannot fail to give rise to anxiety.

The new docks at Kidderpore, near Calcutta, were used for the first time on Friday, when the Government steamer Mayo was floated in to be overhauled. Little now remains to be done to make the docks available for trading ships and steamers.

"From Governor, Madras, June 26.

"South-west monsoon rains have not yet set in properly in interior, and are very light. Even on Malabar coast rainfall below the average in all districts, except Ganjam and Tinnevelly. Unless there is an improvement during the next fortnight outlook may become serious. Condition in North Arcot and Chinglepoot unchanged. Eight thousand seven hundred and thirty-four employed on special works in former district, 7,088 in latter. Number on gratuitous relief in North Arcot, 1,493; in Chinglepoot, 215. Slight rise in price of dry grains and rice."

GUP.

Reis and Rayyet, under the remarkable title of "Dancing Pashas in Diabolic Dissipation; or, British Gods and Goddesses playing at Fallen Angels," says:—The British rulers—civil and military—of Southern India having, on plea of being able to work better in the cool atmosphere of the hills than in warm Madras and the Coromandel Coast generally, retired to Ootacamund, are making the most of their summer retreat. They are dining and drinking and dancing and singing their hours away in a round of enjoyment, and possibly laying in stores of work for the courts of the plains below. Meanwhile, between frisky matrons and hoary-headed sinners, between bold grass-widows and reckless official "mashers," between military adroitness and civil impudence, they are amusing themselves with a merry abandonment which has quite filled the rest of European society in India with unconcealable envy. They lately held a saturnalia of pleasure in the shape of a masquerade under the auspices of Sir James Dormer. The highest authorities have declared that the office of this exalted knight is an anachronism and an anomaly, and only the other day it was definitely proposed to abolish the Command-in-Chief of the Madras Presidency. The wide-awake incumbent has accordingly demonstrated the uses of the post. If geography and history alike have thrown the Madras command into the shade, genius may still discover a function for it by adapting it to circumstances. If there be no need for it, it may still shine as an ornament. If the warrior's occupation's gone, he may still dance and lead to dance and be bedanced. What wonder! It has always proved more serviceable to some persons in uniform that they attended more to their posture-master than their drill. Well, something is better than nothing. Your Madras heroes are not to be condemned outright. If their occasions for showing fight have become small by degrees until they have totally disappeared, their opportunities for dissipation have multiplied by leaps and bounds. Indeed, since the waning political interest of the Southern Presidency, this has been the case of the whole albocracy of the South, civil as well as military. They are all trying their best to divert their becalmed and colourless existence and to make themselves agreeable in the sight of men and gods, specially the latter of the Northern Olympus, who claim to have discovered the secret of combining work with play. In their endeavour to establish their raison d'être, the Madras officocracy have gone beyond the highest latitude of the Himalayas. From dancing these h owling Pashas have come to very devilling. There is a saying attributed to the Prophet of Islam that where a man and a woman are together in a convenient situation, the presence of a third person may be taken for granted, whether you see him or not, that person being no other than the enemy of God and man. Without any claims to prophetic inspiration, prudent men of the world have said that the descent from the polka to Pandemonium is easy as that down Avernus. And the Madras magnates seem to have found this out on the slopes of the Nilgiris. Dancing in propria persona as honest Britons and Christians had evidently lost its zest for them. Accordingly, in search of a sensation, they went down from low to a lower deep until they found themselves dancing in the valley of the Devil and calling their brethren and sisters to join in the unique function, as who should say,

Black spirits and white,
Red spirits and grey;
Mingle, mingle, mingle,
You that mingle may.

The Bishop of Madras is said to have remonstrated with the distinguished constellation of angels and other people whose terpsichorean revels so shocked a section of Ooty society. Lord Wenlock, writes an Indian paper, is deeply penitent, and says he will never offend again; and General Dormer has consented to do penance by enlisting in the local army of tract distributors. The young ladies intend to display their contrition by starting soup kitchens when they get home.

The Birthday Ball at Ooty was more seemly. It came off on June 1, and was, says the Madras Times, a complete success. It was a very brilliant affair in every sense of the word. After very heavy rain on Sunday, and again at midday yesterday, the evening turned out to be a clear and starlit one, and by 9.15 P.M. carriages without number were seen wending their way up the well-known road to Government House. A large official dinner was held before the ball, to which all the heads of departments were invited by Lord Wenlock. Ladies were not included, and Lady Wenlock did not appear until the "after dinner" guests were assembling in the large ante-room. Lord Wenlock and the gentlemen from the dining-room then came out, and at the same time Lady Wenlock came in and greeted her guests. The band played "God Save the Queen" as an opening to the ball, and the evening's amusement commenced. The state quadrille was an exceedingly grand sight. Lord Wenlock wore a handsome diplomatic uniform, and looked a fit representative of our beloved Queen-Empress, while Lady Wenlock looked exceedingly beautiful in a white satin gown so rich in texture that it almost stood alone. It was made with a long train, and the front was of deep lace finished off by jewelled embroidery. Many of the other ladies present wore almost equally handsome dresses. One of black velvet and cream broché satin, made with a trimming of the two colours, in pretty little balls, looked most remarkable, and another of myrtle green velvet, with a brocaded silk of a lighter shade, looked very well on a fair young matron.

All Simla, says the Times of India gossip, attended the other day at the first wedding of the season, when Captain Vowel, of the West Yorks, was married to Miss Mary Mitchell, sister-in-law of Mr. A. M. Ker, the popular manager of the Alliance Bank. The ceremony went off most successfully, the bride looked charming, and the bridegroom was self-possessed. There was an absence of tears among the young lady spectators. The church was prettily decorated with ferns and white roses, and the pretty frocks worn on the occasion were much admired. The speechifying, too, at "Kelvin Grove," whither the guests repaired after the Archdeacon had tied the knot, was much above the average. And speaking of weddings in the hills, recalls to mind that appropriate passage from one of the words of our cleverest Indian novel writers. "It has always struck me," runs the paragraph, "that the bridegroom (at Simla) looks rather out of place at a wedding, being, so to speak, an awkward, though perhaps a necessary, ingredient in the affair, but nowhere does he appear more so than at a wedding in the Himalayas. The bride must, of course, return in her Sedan (this was before the introduction of the rickshaw, you know). For, to say nothing of the sun, the dust would utterly spoil her dress were she to walk, so the bridegroom must perforce either walk or ride at her side, and most men would prefer the latter alternative, since it is not everyone who can keep up gracefully with the pace of four shuffling Sedan bearers in the pink of condition. But even then, ride he ever so well, the general effect is a good deal marred by the need which arrives every minute either to push on in front or to drop behind at the numerous points where the narrow road affords room for the sedan only to pass, and on such occasions he hardly looks as if he belonged to the bride or the bride to him." As the rickshaw rattles down the hill where the horse has to walk, and as it crawls up a slope when the horse wishes to canter, the happy pair do not gain much by its substitution for the sedan. The "True Reformer," from which the above quotation is taken, certainly contains the truest description of Simla which has ever appeared in print, and is well worth perusal by those who have not yet had it in their hands.

The Ranikhet Week opened on June 1, writes the Pioneer correspondent from Naini Tal, with a double tennis match, Naini Tal being represented by Messrs. Hamilton and Westmorland and Ranikhet by Dr. Clements and Mr. Seagrave. The best of five sets was to decide the contest, which ended in a victory for Naini Tal by three sets to one. Naini Tal won the first, third and fourth set, the games being 6 to 2 and 6 to 1. In the game won by Ranikhet the set was 6 to 1. There was splendid play on both sides, Mr. Seagrave doing some excellent serves and sharp cuts for Ranikhet, but it was clear from the onset that the home team was too much for the visitors. There was a large attendance.

The cricket match against Ranikhet commenced on June 2, and shortly after lunch the visitors were all out for 113. For Ranikhet Captain Ormerod and Dr. Clements played a good game, the former having put together a steady 30 when he was unfortunately run out. The scores were: O'Meagher 6, Clements 26, Raikes 4, Knox and Seagrave 8 each, Johnstone, Wyndham and Sandeson 3 each, Cockburn 10, Andrews 0, extras 12. Naini Tal went in, but owing to the heavy rain the game had to be stopped for the day, their score being up to the present time 33 for 3 wickets down. It has been pouring since four o'clock.

The match was continued and ended on June 2. The home team in its first innings got together 198, play all round being sharp and good for Naini Tal. Bandmaster Phillips made the top score of 42, and there were very few who did not get double figures. The scores were:—Dr. Ward, 14; Mr. Dunne, 19; Captain Gordon, 33; Mr. Hamilton, 30; Mr. Whymper, 19; Mr. Pike, 22; Mr. Commeline, 12; Mr. Westmorland, Mr. Hilliard, and Captain Rud, 3, 2, and 1 respectively; extras, 1. Ranikhet was unfortunate in its second innings, the only two who made any stand being Mr. Seagrave, 35, not out, and Mr. Sanderson, 21. Captain Cockburn got 14, and Mr. O'Meagher 10, and, with other small scores, they ran up a total of 107. This left the home team only 23 runs to make to win. Mr. Dunne and Mr. Phillips got these in no time. Thus Naini Tal won by 10 wickets and 3 runs. There was a grand lunch for all on the cricket ground, at which several guests, ladies and gentlemen, were present.

Our amateurs were rewarded with a house full to overflowing, and the repeated rounds of applause more than testified to the excellence of the entertainment. With such a powerful cast, containing the well-known names of Mrs. Fortescue Porter, Miss Porter, Mesdames Keys and Beckwith, and Messrs. Dallas, Orr, Westmorland, and Ford Mellowes nothing but success could be expected, and one and all were unanimous in pronouncing the entertainment a decided success.

A Belgaum correspondent of the Pioneer states that within the last few days the present collector and district magistrate of Belgaum, Mr. F. Charles, C.S., shot no fewer than five tigers in the jungle about the village of Parla, in the Belgaum collectorate. Among the tigers slain there was a huge tigress who had become the terror of the inhabitants of a great many small villages around Parla.

An Austrian infantry lieutenant, Alexander Varges, who has (as a Calcutta paper announces) started to ride from Bombay to Calcutta, left here (says the Bombay correspondent of the Pioneer) on May 25 in the early morning, riding an Arab and attended only by a Goanese boy on a country tat. He consulted no one but a fellow-passenger by the Austrian Lloyd's steamer, who arrived here with him on May 21. He is unacquainted with the country, with English, or with Hindoostani. His first idea was to purchase a pack-bullock, but this turning skittish he left it and his baggage behind. He has only the horse he is now riding, and is not believed to have the means to purchase others. He started straight for Nagpore, intending to follow the new railway line from there. The man is about thirty years old, and is unprovided with an outfit, except a change of linen. It is not believed here that he seriously intends to pursue the whole journey, and is generally expected to return in a few days.

A Calcutta native paper is responsible for the following:—Some few years ago, among the letters received by the ex-Ameer of Cabul at Mussoorie, was one addressed to "His Majesty King of Afghanistan," which ran nearly as follows:—"Your Majesty, I am a little German boy, and am making a collection of stamps. I wish very much to procure some stamps of your Majesty's kingdom, and shall be very much obliged if your Majesty would send me some." The letter was made over to the political officer in charge of the Ameer, who good-naturedly answered the latter, enclosing a small collection of Cabul stamps. In due course came a reply from "the little German boy"—"Kind English Officer, the stamps, which you have so kindly sent me have arrived, and are valued by me in my collection. I showed them and your letter to a distinguished German officer, who is now staying at my father's house, and he is so pleased with the kindness of an English officer to a little German boy that I asked him to give me his photograph to send to you, which he has done, and hope you will accept it." The letter contained a photograph, with the autograph, "Von Moltke, Field Marshal." "The little German boy" turned out to be the son of a well-known manufacturer, who had been most liberal in providing benevolent institutions for workmen in Germany, and who was the Field Marshal's host during the manœuvres in the neighbourhood of his property.

The Simla News says:—À propos of Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, an amusing story is told of his first efforts in the vernacular. His first appointment was Assistant Commissioner, Delhi. In this capacity he was holding court once when a man was brought up and charged with the theft of a bhaince (buffalo). Feeling the loss of dignity which would entail the slightest display of his ignorance of the word, Sir Dennis scratched his head, and, as if he knew all about it, ordered in a loud voice that the stolen property be produced. Holding court as he was, in an upper room, the dismay of the court inspector can well be imagined. He meekly submitted that the property was downstairs. "Fetch it up, then!" was the obstinate response of the magistrate. After a long interval in came the inspector, tugging at the rope which dragged a big black buffalo. Sir Dennis laughed good-naturedly and told the inspector that was "sufficient." He only then knew what bhaince represented.

There would appear to be every probability that before the advent of our next hot season, says a local paper, Calcutta will be able to show its citizens an experimental installation of compressed air power, similar to that which is now so extensively used in Paris, in Birmingham, and other towns of Europe. Its primary and principal use in this country will be for the working of punkahs both in large offices and in private houses, and as a means of cooling rooms and liquids both readily and cheaply. In Paris it is largely used for regulating clocks, for supplying power to sewing-machines, printing-presses, lathes, electric lighting, and, indeed, in every direction where small powers are needed, and where steam engines would be either inconvenient, or too costly. Another direction in which it will be of great use in Calcutta will be that, by the use of a simple form of "injector," our water-supply could be sent up to the top of our highest houses and cooled at the same time. We understand that Mr. Lee, the chairman of the Corporation, is taking much interest in this matter, and should the experiment prove successful we shall owe him a debt of gratitude which could not be adequately repaid. The abolition of the punkah-wallah in Calcutta would be an important public service.

The Railway Times published in Bangalore has opened a matrimonial section in its issue of June 1, and ten advertisements, purporting to be genuine, are inserted therein. Five are from Brahmin women, three of whom are widows. One is from a Naidu youth, one from an Eurasian, one from a European lady, and another from a native Christian woman. Now that a railway organ has taken this up, matrimony should go on at railway speed.

More "English as 'tis writ." A native correspondent who wishes, for reasons of his own, to record in print his opinion of his Deputy Commissioner, writes to say that the official in question is "a very excellent, wise, painstaking, troublesome gentleman," who "takes trouble for the Government profit and for the ease of the subject." The Deputy Commissioner is a worker of miracles, too, "for he has made —— City as a best nosegay," which "is, indeed, very wiseness of above officer," for "such arrangements never before no Deputy Commissioner has done so."

PERSONAL.

THE Simla News writes:—News from Hyderabad speaks of Sir J. W. Edgar as a probable successor to Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick when he goes, while it is thought by some that Mr. Cunningham, our present Under Secretary, is not an unlikely man to expect, although his age goes against him. It must be remembered, however, he carries a very old head on those young shoulders.

Colonel Reynolds, the new agent to the Governor-General at Baroda, arrived by the down mail on the morning of June 3. In honour of his arrival a salute of thirteen guns was fired by the Light Field Battery of Artillery on the 4th Regiment parade-ground. By his express desire, all other customary honours were dispensed with on the occasion.

Lieutenant Baldwin, adjutant of the 14th Madras Infantry, stationed at Bellary, has met with a serious accident while schooling a pony at the hurdles near the race-course. The pony became restive and unmanageable, and bolted, throwing its rider heavily to the ground. Mr. Baldwin was unconscious for many hours, suffering great pain. The nature of the internal injuries was unknown.

Mr. J. Grose, M.A., Second Member of the Madras Board of Revenue, was to return from privilege leave on June 19, when Mr. McWatters would revert to the Madras Collectorate. But a local paper learns that Mr. McWatters will probably be deputed on the special work of inspecting the Northern Districts to report on the working of the Income Tax Act in those districts. This duty will continue for some months, and he will return to Madras in time to act for the Hon. Mr. Bliss, C.I.E., who will have to proceed to Calcutta.

It had been rumoured that Colonel J. M. MacNeile, R.E., would vacate his appointment in August next, proceeding on furlough with a view to retiring in September next year. We (Indian Engineering) now learn that Colonel MacNeile has made up his mind not to take leave, but it is not quite certain yet whether he will remain on as Secretary to the Government of Bengal and Chief Engineer of Irrigation, or be translated to an appointment under the Government of India.

In recognition of the munificent charities and good works rendered to the Roman Catholic Church by Mr. L. Reilly, of Hill Grove Estate, Coonoor, his lordship, Dr. Bardou, the Bishop of Coimbatore, recommended Mr. Reilly to his Holiness the Pope for the Knighthood of the distinguished Order of St. Gregory. The Papal brief arrived in the latter part of May, and Bishop Bardou lost no time in repairing to Grey's Hotel, Coonoor, and in the presence of a number of the clergy and friends presented Mr. Reilly with the Pope's brief. On the arrival of the insignia of the order from Rome the solemn investiture would take place.

Captain H. B. Vaughan, of the 7th Bengal Infantry, is expected back in India very shortly, having completed his examination of the routes through the Kavir or Salt Desert, which bulks so largely on the map of Persia. He has made a plane-table survey of such of the wilderness as he passed through, and, says the Pioneer, a howling wilderness it is save for one oasis, for the rivers which flow into it lose themselves in the sand or end in swamps. For a few months Captain Vaughan, who is working in the Indian Intelligence Branch, was accompanied by Captain Burton, of the 17th Bengal Cavalry, who was spending part of his leave in Persia, but the latter officer proceeded to England in the spring. The World links their names together as those of explorers whose discoveries are "extremely important from a strategic as well as from a purely geographical point of view," an exaggerated statement to begin with, and one not altogether fair to Captain Vaughan.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

By the recent death of Major-General Hamilton Forbes, of the Bengal Staff Corps, a good soldier has passed away; a man, however, of so modest and retiring a disposition that little was known of him except by those with whom he was brought in contact. Sent out to Bengal as a cavalry cadet, he took Army rank as cornet on Oct. 3, 1844. He served through the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the battles of Moodkee (where he had his horse killed under him), Ferozeshah, and Sobraon. He was appointed to the 1st Regiment Bengal Light Cavalry (Regulars) on Feb. 22, 1846. With it he served through the Punjab campaign of 1848-49. In 1857 he succeeded Captain Henry Daly in the command of the 1st Oude Cavalry at Secrora; and, had Sir Henry Lawrence lived, his services in bringing in his handful of men to Lucknow would have been better known. He served throughout the defence of the Residency at Lucknow, and was present at the battle of Cawnpore. He was brigadier-major of the cavalry brigade at the siege and capture at Lucknow, 1858. He retired with numerous medals and distinctions in 1880.

The death is announced of Major-General E. M. Lawford, late Madras Army, aged sixty-four. The deceased took part in the Indian Mutiny campaign, receiving the medal and clasp.

The death is announced of Lieutenant-Colonel S. P. Browne, late 11th Hussars and Royal Berkshire Regiment, aged ninety-two years. The deceased was present at the Battle of Waterloo.

Brigade-Surgeon W. S. Whylock, surgeon-major on the Retired List, died at Folkestone on June 12. He was a son of the late Major-General J. Whylock; joined the Army Medical Department, Dec. 25, 1852; became surgeon Jan. 14, 1862; surgeon-major Nov. 6, 1872; and retired Jan. 3, 1881. He served with the 75th Foot in the Indian Mutiny, including the siege of Delhi and battle of Budlee-ke-Serai, where he killed two of the enemy, one in close combat, saving thereby the life of a European soldier (medal with clasp); was sanitary and senior medical officer of the Derbund Field Force in the Hazara Campaign of 1868. Served in the Afghan War of 1878-80, was senior medical officer in Brigadier-General Biddulph's advance on Quetta, and was present at the surrender of Candahar; was P.M.O. with Lieutenant-General Hughes in the advance on Ghuzrie, and afterwards to Major-General Hill's division; was present in the engagement at Ahmed Kheyl, and some minor affairs (medal with clasp).

Captain Thomas Taylor.—The death is announced of this much-respected citizen of Bangalore, from cancer on his right cheek, on the night of May 31, at his residence in Residency Road. The deceased was ailing since November last, and, despite medical skill, succumbed to the disease at the good old age of seventy-two years and two months.

Mr. N. R. Pogson, C.I.E., the Government astronomer at the Madras Observatory, died at Madras on June 22. He was in his sixty-third year, and had held the post of Government astronomer since 1861. He made several important contributions to astronomic literature, especially reports of results obtained from observations at the Madras Observatory. He was also the discoverer of eight minor planets and twenty new variable stars, and he added considerably to the general stock of information regarding the fixed stars.

Mr. Guy L'Estrange Mathias, of the Indian Marine, who has been ailing for some little time past, died rather suddenly on June 8 at his residence in Poona, the immediate cause of death being congestion of the lungs. He was only twenty-eight years and eleven months of age, and had been thirteen years in the Indian Marine, during the last seven of which he was attached to the Marine Survey Department. He served in the Egyptian Campaign (medal and the Khedive's Star), and also took part in the Burma Expedition, for his services in which he was awarded a medal besides being mentioned in despatches. He was very popular with his brother officers. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place the same evening at five o'clock in the New Cemetery. The firing-party, consisting of one hundred rank and file, was supplied by the Worcestershire Regiment, whose band also attended.

Though there can be very few or none of his contemporaries now in India, says the Statesman, still many must know by repute the name of John Beckwith, at one time president of the Calcutta Tent Club, when that sporting coterie was in the zenith of its fame. It is now our painful duty to announce the death of this grand old sportsman at the patriarchal age of eighty-seven. Once seen, John Beckwith was a man to be remembered, for built in Herculean mould (he stood 6 feet 5 inches in his socks), he was as erect as a dart, and his silver hair thick as a youth's, and his white beard made him a prominent figure before both in society and in the Oriental Club, of which he was a member. As an instance of his popularity, when, owing to circumstances, he had to sell his horses, the Calcutta Tent Club bought his celebrated horse Prince, which they presented to their president. A man of singular resource, it is recorded how on one occasion he saved the life of Tom Pitts, who hunted the Calcutta Hounds, and was also a good man after hog.

THE MANIPORE DISASTER.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the correspondents of the Times:—

CALCUTTA, June 24.—The Regent of Manipore and the Senaputty have petitioned the Government against their sentences.

MANIPORE, June 24.—The sentences of death passed upon Major Aiya Parel and Colonel Samu Singh have been commuted to transportation for life.

CALCUTTA, June 26.—General Collett will probably leave Manipore next month, as, owing to the general disarmament, his presence is no longer required there.

CALCUTTA, June 28.—The Indian Government, as might have been expected, has refused to hear counsel on behalf of the Regent of Manipore and the Senaputty, but has expressed its readiness to consider any memorials the prisoners may submit, so it will probably be some time before the final orders are announced. Meanwhile the Bengalee lawyer who conducted the defence is publishing sensational telegrams addressed to Lord Ripon, and a certain section of the native Press is showing daily increasing license and scurrility in commenting on the Manipore trials. It is to be hoped that the Government will expedite its decision. The Special Court appointed for the trial of the Princes, having completed its task, has now been dissolved, and the Political Officer has taken up the trial of the executioner and of the sentries who were placed over the British officers; that done, he will proceed to inquire into the circumstances of the murder of Mr. Melville. The sentence of death passed on Colonel Samu Singh and on Major Aiya Parel has been commuted to one of imprisonment during the pleasure of the Government. The announcement of special pensions for Mrs. Quinton and Mrs. Grimwood has been received with general approval, although it is not clear why Mrs. Melville was omitted, seeing that her husband, like the other officers, lost his life in the discharge of his duty.

THE TRIAL OF THE SENAPUTTY.—EVIDENCE FOR THE PROSECUTION.

A telegram from Manipore to the Times of India, dated June 3, says:—

The trial of the Jobraj was continued this morning. The evidence of Jattra Sing was taken. This man worked in the Raja's godowns. On March 24 he heard firing all day, and in the evening he went to the Durbar Hall. He saw Mr. Quinton's party leave and also the Jobraj. He saw the sahibs hemmed in by the Maniporis and retiring towards the Durbar Hall. Witness was on the steps with the three officers and broke open the door, admitting the sahibs into the house. Witness saw the Jobraj drive away the crowd. Afterwards a wounded officer was brought up, and asked for water, which was given to him. Witness attended to his wounds. After the Jobraj left, some sentries came. One sentry, named Usurba, told witness the order had been given to kill the sahibs, and that the Tongal General had given the order. Witness went to ask the Jobraj concerning this, and he (the Jobraj, made no reply. Witness repeated what he had heard. The Jobraj said "Let us consult the Tongal General." Witness went with the Jobraj and found the Tongal General. The Jobraj asked "What is this you have said?" The Tongal General replied, "I see no means of becoming friends with the Sircar, therefore let us kill these people." The Jobraj gave no reply. Witness went away, and heard nothing more that night. The next morning he heard that the sahibs had been killed. Cross-examined by the prisoner the witness replied that he did not hear the Jobraj say that the sahibs were not to be killed. Witness stated that about a thousand sepoys were in the palace, which was unusual. The men must have been brought in to fight.

The next witness was Usurba, who slept in the guard-house near the Durbar Hall on the night of March 23. He heard firing the next day, which continued until night, when the firing ceased. Witness then heard that some sahibs had gone to the Durbar Hall. The Jobraj went to the Durbar Hall, and after half an hour returned alone. Witness then heard a great noise from the direction of the Durbar Hall on the south, and cries of "kill, kill," lasting about twenty-five minutes. After the noise was over, Angao Ningthao General ordered the sentries from the guard-house to be placed over the sahibs in the Durbar Hall, so that no harm might be done them. Witness remained at the guard-house. After the sentries had left, the Tongal General called and witness went to him. The Tongal General said, "Shut the sahibs' mouths." Witness understood that he meant that the sahibs should be killed, and asked the Tongal General whether the order was the Jobraj's or not, saying he could not carry it out without a distinct order from the Jobraj. The Tongal General said, "Go to the Jobraj." Witness went, and, meeting Jatra Singh, told him that the Tongal General had ordered the sahibs' mouths to be closed. The Jobraj was making embrasures on the ramparts, and asked "Did the Tongal General give the order, saying, 'Don't do such things, I am coming?'" Witness went back and reported the Jobraj's reply to the Tongal General, who said: "The Jobraj is a fool; we can never make it up with the sahibs. What is the use of saying such a thing as this?" Witness went to the durbar room and sat under a tree. After ten minutes the Jobraj passed by. Then a man came and told witness that the Tongal General had ordered the sahibs to be given to the executioner. This man came from the same direction as that in which the Jobraj had gone. Witness continued:—Two executioners then arrived, one with a dao in his hand. The sentries then opened the door and brought out the sahibs, and took them to the gate near the dragons. A lantern was also brought, by the light of which witness saw a sahib lying dead under the Durbar room steps. The sentries opened the Dragon Gate, and made over the sahibs to the people outside. Witness heard the rattling of chains, which might have been from the fetters or from the sentries' swords.

The Maharaja's blacksmith, who was next examined, stated he heard firing on the morning of March 24 from his own house. Witness went into the citadel at five o'clock on the same evening, and was then called to put fetters on three British sepoys. Afterwards, about 9.30, he went to the Durbar house, where the sentry said the order had come for putting fetters on the sahibs, of whom there were four, besides one sepoy, probably a bugler. Witness fixed the fetters on the sahibs. Witness was told this was done by order of the Durbar.

The next witness examined was the executioner, who stated he was called on March 24, and brought his dao. When he went to the Durbar room the sentries said one executioner was not enough. A man went to call others. Afterwards the sentries said there was too much delay, and brought out the sahibs. The sentries and witness went out with the sahibs to a place in front of the dragons, where there were plenty of men, but there was no noise. The sahibs were given one by one to witness by the sentries, who brought them from the Durbar Hall. Witness cut off the heads of four sahibs and one bugler. Their feet were fettered; but their hands were not tied. The sahibs were put with their faces towards the west. The witness stood on the left side. When the execution was over witness buried the heads himself. The bodies were taken out at once by ten men and buried in the Naga village. There was no firing going on at the time of the execution. The Residency was burning. The feet of all were cut off in order to take off the fetters, but the feet of the sahib who died near the Durbar hall were not cut off. His head was cut off. Witness got no reward for the execution. Witness is a slave of the Maharaja, who is the only person who keeps executioners. Witness heard that the execution took place by order of the Jobraj. The man who called witness said so. Witness did not see the Jobraj present at the execution. The man who called witness belongs to the court of the Jobraj.

On June 4 a sepoy of the Manipore Army stated that he was in the guardhouse when the sahibs came in. He saw the Jobraj go to the Durbar and return. Immediately after this there was great shouting in the road way. Afterwards sentries were posted in the Durbar house. Witness was inside. After half an hour witness heard from a sentry outside the door that an order had come to kill the sahibs. After another half an hour witness received orders to hand over the prisoners to the executioner. Witness took the prisoners to the Dragon Gate and handed them over, one by one, to the executioner. The sahib who was wounded was evidently Lieutenant Simpson. He was given out first, then the others, and finally the bugler. After the execution witness returned to the guard house, where he saw the Jobraj and the Tongal General talking. Under cross-examination witness stated he was told that an order for the execution had come from the Tongal General.

The next witness was the sirdar of executioners, and he confirmed the previous evidence. He did not know by whose order the executions took place, but was told that the Tongal General gave orders. He generally gave orders when executions were necessary.

The next witness was Subedar Kulendro Singh, of the Surma Valley Military Police, who arrested the Jobraj. Witness gave his evidence regarding the distances of the various places from the dragons to the gate, which was thirty-eight yards. The gate to the Durbar Hall to the guard-house was forty-three yards. Regarding the arrest witness stated that he heard the Jobraj was hiding in the village. He had a short struggle with him, and brought him in. The Jobraj wrestled with witness, and seized him by the throat. The Jobraj was accompanied by his stepmother and her father. Witness had one sepoy with him.

The next witness was Kenkoca, who was ordered to place sentries [illegible] Witness went also. When returning the Tongal General said to him:—"The Jobraj before this told you to give the sahibs over to the executioners, why have you not done it?" Witness went back to the Durbar Hall, and told the other native officers of the order. The executioners were then present. Afterwards the sentries brought out the sahibs, and took them away. They afterwards returned. Witness further stated that when the Tongal General gave him the order witness saw the Jobraj close by in the same room, but apparently asleep. Firing was going on at the time the sahibs were given over to the executioners. Witness knew nothing about the loot of the Residency and the treasury, nor from whom the order emanated. This witness was the last for the prosecution.

The charges were then read to the Jobraj, who pleaded not guilty. The charges were as follows:—The Court hereby charge you, Tekendrajitsing, alias Jobraj, alias Senaputty, of Manipore. First Count.—That you, on or about March 24, 1891, at Manipore, waged war against the Queen-Empress, and thereby committed an offence punishable with death or transportation for life. Second Count.—That you, on or about March 24, 1891, at Manipore, abetted the offence of murder—namely, the murder of Mr. Quinton, the Chief Commissioner of Assam; Colonel Skene, 42nd Goorkhas; Lieutenant Simpson, 43rd Goorkhas; and Mr. Cossins, assistant secretary to the Chief Commissioner; and thereby committed an offence punishable with death or transportation for life. The offences are within the cognisance of this Court, and directs you [here names follow] to be tried on the said charges.

The trial was continued on June 5. An additional witness for the prosecution, Captain Butcher, 42nd Goorkhas, on being sworn stated as follows:—On the night of March 23 I received orders to arrest the Jubraj. On the following morning I was to proceed 200 yards beyond the west gate, cross the wall there, and make my way to the Jobraj's palace and arrest him. I was not to fire unless the Maniporis fired on me. I left Camp adjoining the Residency at five o'clock on the morning of March 24, and reached the Jobraj's palace at six o'clock. When we arrived opposite the north-west bastion of the inner enclosure we were fired on. Then the fire commenced from the Jobraj's. We returned the fire, and after some fighting occupied the Jobraj's palace, but the Jobraj was not there. There was no firing before I was fired on by the Maniporis from the inner bastion. My party lost eight men wounded. I saw several men in the Jobraj's palace who had been killed by us. I saw no women or children in the enclosure during the day. Had any been killed I should probably have seen them or heard of it from the men. The big guns were fired on us from the Regent's citadel, which knocked the Jobraj's temple about. The Maniporis also pulled a part of the temple down. My party did not damage the temple beyond what was necessary for the defence. On cross-examination by prisoner's representative witness stated that the Jobraj went out and met the Chief Commissioner at the Bridge, also the Tongal General. There were no sepoys placed on watch near the palace on the night of the 23rd. Witness believes that a letter was written by the Chief Commissioner to the Regent. He also knows that Mr. Grimwood and Lieutenant Simpson went out to interview with some one on the 23rd. Witness heard the Jobraj was ill. It was half-past eight when the Chief Commissioner and party went out. The Durbar and the Residency were evacuated about two o'clock. After the troops left, the Residency was burst and plundered. Witness did not see the Jobraj fighting that day. This ended the prosecution.

The defence, a telegram of June 5 says, begins to-morrow. The Jobraj is now preparing a statement to be laid before the Court with the aid of Janoki Nath Bysack, a Bengali who is rather notorious in Kohima-Manipore, who has been retained by the Jobraj to assist in the defence. His fee is 1,000 rs., which Janoki means to obtain in advance.

The Pioneer says:—Among the papers on Manipore which have been published is an extraordinary letter from Baboo Russick Lal, head clerk in the Manipore Agency, in which the Baboo gives support to the story that women and children were massacred at the Palace by our troops. The rumour, of course, was altogether false, but this letter seems to have had some influence in keeping it alive, and the Government of India have had to send repeated contradictions home. The Baboo now states that he wrote the letter under compulsion of the Senaputty (Tekendrajit), and no one can doubt that either compulsion or instigation prompted it. The letter is very contradictory, speaking at the outset, for instance, of the 'independence of Manipore and at the close referring to the State as a feudatory.

On the question of the independence of Manipore, important evidence, the Pioneer remarks, is forthcoming in an old despatch from the Court of Directors of the East India Company to the Governor-General, dated May 5, 1852. It contained the following paragraphs:—"You have made a very material alteration in your relations with Manipore. Influenced by a desire to put an end to the frequent attempts by exiled members of the Raja's family to effect a change of government, you have authorised the Political Agent to make a public avowal of the determination of the British Government to uphold the present Raja and to resist and punish any parties attempting hereafter to dispossess him. The position which you have thus assumed of pledging protection to the Raja imposes on you as a necessary consequence the obligation, not only of attempting to guide him by your advice, but, if needful, of protecting his subjects against oppression on his part. Otherwise our guarantee of his rule may be the cause of inflicting on them a continuance of reckless tyranny. The obligation thus incurred may be found embarrasing, but it must nevertheless be fulfilled; and while needless interference is of course to be avoided, we shall expect, as the price of protection afforded to him, that the Raja will submit to our maintaining a sufficient check over the general conduct of the administration, so as to prevent it from being oppressive to the people and discreditable to the Government which gives it support."

The Statesman of June 6 says:—The constitution of the court for the trial of the Senapatty of Manipore, whether or not it is likely to meet the practical ends of justice, is scarcely of a kind to inspire either the prisoner himself, or the princes and people of India, with confidence in the impartiality of the proceedings. Against the moral qualifications of the officers composing the tribunal we have nothing whatever to say; and we have no doubt that they will one and all bring to their task a determination to do even justice according to their lights. As to their want of legal knowledge, the law in such cases is so much what the Government chooses to make it that that, perhaps, is not a defect of very serious importance. On the other hand, a judicial habit of mind and skill in analysing and appraising evidence are absolutely indispensable qualifications for the trial of such a case, in which the difficulty of obtaining untainted testimony must be exceptionally great, and the witnesses will generally be under a strong temptation to make things easy for the prosecution. To the Oriental mind it will seem preposterous to believe that an unbiassed verdict can be expected in such a case from a court wholly composed of men who are not merely servants of the State, but are immediately subordinate to the Executive Government. The Bengalee gives utterance to some remarks on this head which, though we cannot endorse them in their entirety, contain a great deal which most Englishmen must feel to be just, and which, at any rate, may be accepted as representing faithfully what will be the general feeling on the subject among the native community. "It would have been a graceful thing," says our contemporary, "for the Government, and perhaps on the whole it would have been wiser, too, to have appointed a mixed commission consisting of British officers and some of the native princes who were appointed councillors of the Empire on the occasion of the Imperial Assemblage. . . . We are quite sure that all impartial men, to whatever race or nationality they may belong, will join us in the appeal to the Government that he should be tried by an independent commission in which his peers will be represented. If the evidence against him is overwhelming, as we believe it is, there ought to be the less hesitation on the part of the Government in empannelling such a tribunal. Let it not go forth that a native prince was tried in a hole-and-corner fashion by British officers, and that his accusers were also his judges." If a mixed tribunal of the kind proposed by the writer would, for any reason, have been inconvenient, or otherwise objectionable, the Government would have shown more regard for appearances, to say nothing of actual justice, had it added some high judicial officer of recognised ability, if possible a judge of one of the High Courts, to the commission, and, at the same time, if it had taken steps to have the prisoner properly defended. It was stated, some time ago, that a military officer was to be told off for the latter purpose, though nothing is said on the subject in the most recent telegrams. But the Senaputty himself would probably regard such a proceeding rather as putting the final nail into his coffin, than as increasing his chance of acquittal. The least the Government could do, if it really felt it to be its duty to provide for the man's defence, would be to allow him to choose his own advocate.

EUROPEAN SERVICES' TESTIMONIAL TO MR. H. S. KING, C.I.E., M.P.

UNDER instructions from the Testimonial Committee, Messrs. Hamilton and Co., the Calcutta jewellers, are getting ready an elaborate piece of plate, which will be presented, as soon as it is ready, to Mr. H. S. King, C.I.E., M.P., for the services which he has so unstintingly rendered to the Uncovenanted Service of India. The presentation service will take the form of a candelabra, which will stand 3 feet high, measuring 18 inches at the base and 23 inches across the branches. The base will be of square formation, having four tigers couchant at the four corners. From the base will rise a column, the pedestal of which will also be square; and upon the latter, with their backs to the column, which at this point will assume a round form, will be grouped four allegorical figures representing the Presidencies of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras, and Burma. From the capitol of the columns will spring eight branches of candle, and the whole will be surmounted by a figure of Britannia with her shield and trident. The details of the work throughout are entirely Indian, Western decoration having been most carefully eschewed be the designer. The front dishes will follow the same general outline as regards the base, but, of course, very little of the column will be used.

Mr. Jobbins, Superintendent of the School of Art, Calcutta, is the designer of the work. The most common fault in Indian design is to elaborate detail at the expense of form and proportion. An illustration of this is to be found in much of the Swamy work of Southern India, and in the over-wrought specimens of silver work which emanate from the West Coast, and which are so frequently imitated in Bengal.

There are many designs of this nature, which might be pleasing to some on account of their embodying what is erroneously called indigenous art, the popular notion of such being generally involved in the palm-trees, tigers, Hindoo deities, and meaningless and elaborate scrolls which are prepared to catch the eye and the superfluous cash of the wandering "Globetrotter," and which, as a rule, are as far removed from real classic Indian art as is an original painting by Rubens from the German oleograph of to-day.

From the commencement of the design, Messrs. Hamilton and Co. have been consulting Mr. Jobbins, and no mechanical impossibilities have been introduced. The work will be entirely hand-chased in Messrs. Hamilton and Co.'s own Indian workshops, and not a single die will be used in its production. It will be absolutely original and unique in all its details. The metal used will be sterling silver, and the makers hope to turn out a piece of work that will not fail to please those who have studied the beauty of Eastern decorations.—Englishman.

THE ACCEPTANCE OF PRESENTS BY GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

The following circular has been issued by Government :—

No. 2,323.—POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

Bombay Castle, April 10, 1891.

CIRCULAR.

The Governor in Council has been recently considering whether any addition to the standing orders regarding the acceptance of presents by public servants is required. A summary of the law and rules laid down on the subject was published in Government Resolution No. 2,271, General Department, dated July 25, 1876, circulated with Political Department circular No. 5,555, dated Sept. 4, 1890. In the rules then published an exception is made in favour of "the receipt of a few flowers or fruits, and articles of inappreciable value, although even such trifling presents should be discouraged," and a Political Officer of high standing has recently suggested that this exception should be further limited to fruits or flowers locally grown and a prohibition against the regular daily receipt of even such fruits inserted. On the whole, however, the Governor in Council is not disposed to alter the rule, but to recall attention to it and to the spirit which underlies it. The spirit of the orders of Government is to discourage the receipt of all presents, and only to permit the receipt of occasional offerings of fruit or flowers where such offerings cannot be rejected without causing offence. At the same time the Governor in Council thinks that the time has come when every ruler of a Native State might be furnished with a copy of the orders of Government, and this resolution may be given accordingly. A copy should also be furnished to every officer in Political Department of this Government.

2. The occasion may be suitably taken to call attention to other standing orders of a similar character.

Government circular No. 3,336, dated May 31, 1873, repeated in circular No. 5,713, dated Sept. 7, 1887, ordered Political Officers to pay without fail for all supplies and transports furnished to them by native States. Where an officer must depend on the assistance of the durbar for his supplies he must request the durbar to appoint dealers from whom the articles required can be procured for proper payment. It is to be understood that grass or fodder or free supplies for the table of officers staying in State bungalows for however short a time are absolutely and expressly prohibited. In any case where a Political Officer visits the capital of a native State in the course of his tour he is bound to supply himself with all that he requires. In the case of rapid journeys occasionally undertaken for special service, while the officer's own transport is obviously insufficient and no hired transport can be obtained, the durbar may occasionally lend a carriage. An absolute prohibition to use such means, where no other means are procurable, might cause injury to the Public Service; but in future Government desire that just as in the case of the sale of horses to a durbar, the fact should be specially reported to them. The use of any durbar carriage will thus be restricted to the rarest occasions, and o the narrowest limits; and officers will under no circumstances be allowed to live in State bungalows at the cost of the durbar for their supplies.

The furnishing of residences at the cost of durbars was prohibited by Government Resolution No. 729, dated Feb. 10, 1876. By circular No. 5,977, dated Sept. 16, 1887, the subordinates of political agents are forbidden to receive free quarters, and all orders that apply to political officers are now declared to have equal application to their subordinates. It is clear that in Native States, where dharmasallas or other places for the convenience of the Agency servants are not available, permission when on tour to occupy other quarters need not be refused. What is required is to secure as far as possible the independence of British officers and their subordinates, and therefore every political agent must be personally held responsible that the spirit of these orders is duly observed. Government are confident that the rulers of Native States will not regard the enforcement of these orders as any act of discourtesy, but rather will consider it an act of necessary courtesy to Government to assist it in the execution of its declared policy, which is mainly devised in the interests of the Native States themselves.

Secretary to Government.

A BRAHMIN PASSENGER IN THE P. & O.

THE following extracts from a letter by a Brahmin passenger in the P. & O. s.s. Pekin, which recently arrived in Bombay, should be read with interest by his fellow-Brahmins throughout India. We (Times of India) have cut the letter down a little, but have not otherwise ventured to meddle with the way in which Mr. P. C. Roy has written it :—

"I have no hesitation in testifying to and recording the kind treatment that I and my two Hindoo servants—one a high-caste Brahmin and the other a writer (Gujjir)—and two Mahomedan friends have experienced from the hands of Captain P. Harris, the commander, and the other officers of the s.s. Pekin.

"The necessity of recording these few lines arises out of and will be found from the fact that I am a high-caste Brahmin (Coolin), undertook a journey to England and the Continent for some object, that I was under the impression that it was excessively difficult, nay, rather almost impossible, for a Brahmin of my class to preserve his caste and religion while on board the steamer. I was, therefore, very anxious about the arrangement to be made by the officers of the P. & O. Company, as I was determined to keep my caste really and in the true sense of the word, and not merely nominally as some suppose to imagine. Consequently this affords sufficient plea for the record of my opinion which I do with greatest pleasure, especially for the purpose that it may undeceive most of my countrymen and induce them to take a trip to Europe, to know what is worth knowing in a country and amongst the people hardly possible for me to describe, without the slightest risk or danger of caste, creed, or religion.

"The commander of the ship (s.s. Pekin), Captain P. Harris, is an excellent, good-hearted gentleman. He gave us a very accommodating place for our kitchen stove and cooking purpose—a canvas screen hung at the front kept the place quite secluded, the captain allowed no one to interfere with or come near our kitchen (chowka). The chief officer (Mr. Cowie) was very kind and friendly to us, and had always permitted my servant to draw water from the tank. Mr. Anderson, my old friend on s.s. Massilia, and about whose kindness I have already recorded my opinion in my former letter to Mr. Kendall at the company's head office at Leadenhall Street, London, had made it his care to see us comfortable. He paid every attention he possibly could to our demands; he gave a standing order to his subordinates to supply my servants with all kinds of raw vegetables, milk, rice (chau-ul), flour, fruits, &c., that is, all that we required for our purpose; while Mr. Harpour, the second saloon steward, had always displayed his friendly, courteous, and kind behaviour towards us, and especially accommodating in his manner and dealing. There is not the least doubt that all these gentlemen interested themselves, nay, made it a point, to see that nothing is left amiss to complete and perfect the arrangement whereby a high-caste Hindoo, or an orthodox Mahomedan, may keep his caste and religion while on board the steamer and under their charge and control.

"In conclusion, I cannot refrain myself from adding that Dr. Morris, the medical officer in charge of the s.s. Pekin, is a very good-natured and kind-hearted young gentleman that I ever came across on board a steamer. . . . . All these only reflect credit on the selection and good arrangement of the P. and O. Company, and any high-caste Brahmin, or any orthodox Mahomedan gentleman, travelling by the P. and O. steamer would, I hope, expect to find equally good and kind treatment from the hands of the officers of other steamers of the company if they are as good and kind as those I have already alluded.

"(Signed) P. C. ROY,

"s.s. Pekin, May 31."

COLONEL BIDDULPH.

COLONEL J. BIDDULPH, Bengal Staff Corps. who has just been appointed to the important post of Governor-General's Agent in Beloochistan, in succession to the late Sir Oliver St. John, is an officer of considerable experience, having joined the Bengal Cavalry in 1858, and received the Mutiny medal for his military services in that year. He was aide-de-camp to the Viceroy from May 1872 to February 1877, and it was during his tenure of this post that he was attached in 1873 to Sir Douglas Forsyth's diplomatic and commercial mission to the Atalikh Ghazi, or ruler of the Kashgar. In the spring of the following year (says the Times) Captain Biddulph (as he then was) crossed the Pamir, and visited Sirikol and Wakhan, besides reconnoitring the passes across the Hindoo Koosh, from the valley of the Oxus into the basin of the Indus. He devoted special attention to the Baroghil Pass, which was known at the time, from native research, to be an easy pass, in comparison to others over the main range of the Hindoo Koosh mountains. The result of Captain Biddulph's investigations was fully to confirm these reports (which it may be observed have since received further corroboration by Mr. and Mrs. Littledale's easy transit of the same pass last year), and to induce the Government of India to take steps for strengthening their political and military position on this part of the frontier. In 1876 Major Biddulph (as he had by that time become) was sent on a secret mission to Gilgit, Yasin, and the secluded and more northerly State of Hunza, for the purpose of reporting on the political feeling of the mountain tribes, and this led to his being appointed in the following year as Political Resident at Gilgit. In 1878 he visited the important State of Chittral, with the intention of prolonging his journey into the adjoining region of Kafiristan and on towards Cabul, but the outbreak of the Afghan War prevented the fulfilment of the latter part of this project. During his residence at Gilgit, Major Biddulph collected a great deal of historical, ethnological, and scientific data, which he published in 1880 under the title of "Tribes of the Hindoo Koosh," a valuable work for the amount of detailed information it contains respecting a region proximate to the Russian possessions in Central Asia. Colonel Biddulph is not new to Beloochistan, having served there as Acting-Agent to the Governor-General from May to November 1882, and there is every guarantee, therefore, that his varied political experience will find important scope at Quetta, where the forthcoming opening of the Khojak tunnel will doubtless bring up the question of the prolongation of the railway on to Afghan territory and towards Candahar, and where other important questions, such as the development of Western Beloochistan towards the Persian frontier, must soon call for settlement.

OPENING OF THE AHMEDABAD WATERWORKS.

HIS Excellency the Governor of Bombay, accompanied by Mr. Edgerley, Private Secretary, and Captain Cox, A.D.C., visited Ahmedabad on June 11 for the purpose of performing the opening ceremony of the new Waterworks. The mail train, to which the Governor's saloon was attached, arrived at 9.20. His Excellency on alighting was received by the Commissioner, Northern Division, and a large number of other European and native officials, a guard of honour of native infantry with regimental band also being in attendance. On leaving the station his Excellency drove to the Commissioner's bungalow at Shahibag, where he spent the day. At 6 o'clock in the evening His Excellency proceeded to Dudheshwur to open the Waterworks. Mr. Runchorelal Cholalal, President of the Municipality, read an address to His Excellency, in which he described the new works and asked the Governor to formally declare the same open.

His Excellency in responding referred in feeling terms to the lamented death of Rao Sahib Mahipatram Rupram and to the loss Ahmedabad in particular, and the Bombay Presidency in general, had sustained by the sad occurrence. Having dwelt at some length on the history of the new works, he congratulated the city on its enterprise, and expressed a hope that now that the outworks of a superstitious confidence in impure water had been attacked, as instanced in the fact that Ahmedabad on the extreme north, Bombay on the west, Hubli on the extreme south, and Dhoolia on the east were all perfecting their supplies, it might be hoped that all parts of the Presidency would take heart of grace and do what was undoubtedly the intention of that great statesman who pursued the policy of local self-government. They should busy themselves with, namely, the improvement of sanitary surroundings of their fellow-citizens, and an important point to be borne in mind in connection with these schemes was, whilst undoubtedly a debt was created in hard cash, the ratepayers who paid the interest on the loan became owners of a property in return for their outlay—a property, too, which had a marketable value, for there could be little doubt that such property as waterworks would be taken over by a company, if ever such a policy was necessary. In speaking of the present position of local self-government, his Excellency recognised that Municipal Boards had to contend with serious difficulties, such as failures of the Act itself and the inherent dislike of ratepayers to novel modes of ratepaying. He assured them of the anxiety of the Government to assist in their legislative capacity, and encouraged them to pursue a beneficent policy, regardless of agitation and obstruction, for in the improved health of their fellow-citizens they would reap a reward which would repay them a hundredfold all the labour and trouble they might be put to.

When this function was concluded, his Excellency drove to the railway station and left by the mail train for Poona.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Kathiawar and the Imperial Service Corps.—We (Bombay Gazette) referred some months since to a project which had been formed for associating the leading States in Kathiawar with the Imperial Service Corps. The project may now be considered an accomplished fact. The three States joining in the enterprise, the object of which is to form bodies of cavalry fit for Imperial service, are Bhownugger, Junagadh, and Nowanugger, the first named contributing 300 men, and the two others 150 men each. It is intended to newly equip and arm the three forces, using them in normal times for outpost, escort, and cognate duty in their respective States, and it is expected that in smartness, efficiency, and mounting, they will be a credit to their respective States and a real help to Government in time of emergency. The command of each force rests normally with the individual States themselves, who it may be supposed will be anxious to acquit themselves worthily of the full responsibility for their discipline and organisation which the scheme as adopted leaves to them. An excellent and popular cavalry officer, Captain Forbes, of the Poona Horse, selected, it is evident, for his tact and courtesy, has been appointed to inspect the forces and advise the various States in regard to them. These are the functions which have from the first been assigned by the Government of India to the British officers appointed in connection with the Imperial service scheme. Lord Dufferin laid down the principle very emphatically when he first expounded the scheme, and Lord Lansdowne has reaffirmed it. Although there is a tendency amongst some of the native States to look upon appointments of this kind as likely to diminish their authority within their own territory, the British Government—as may be gathered from Lord Dufferin's own utterances on the subject—has from the first been anxious to afford no ground for any such feeling. Lord Dufferin in a memorable speech at Patiala, expressly defined the function of the British officers detailed for this service, not to be that of commanders, but of "advisers and inspectors," and stated that they would have their headquarters in British territory, so that they might visit the several States in turn. In accordance with this principle, Capt. Forbes will be stationed at Rajkot, where a house is to be built for him at the joint expense of the States associated in the enterprise. The scheme, in addition to giving the States participating in it an opportunity of loyally assisting the paramount power, will open a career to Rajputs and others of good birth, who, by tradition and instinct, are fitted for military service, and for whom it is of the first importance that some honourable occupation should be provided. It is to be hoped, therefore, that nothing will arise to interfere with its smooth and successful working.

Presentation of a Good Conduct and Long Service Medal.—On June 3, at Agra, Quartermaster-Sergeant Howes, of the Leinster Regiment, was presented with a medal for long service and good conduct. The medal was presented by General Newton at a parade of the 1st Battalion of the regiment, and before pinning it to the breast of the recipient, the General remarked that while this distinguished reward was sometimes given to those who, so far as the defaulter sheets went, had fulfilled the conditions under which it is granted, but whose general conduct and bearing did not set that good example that the medal was specially intended to reward, Sergeant Howes had fulfilled faithfully all the conditions by his good conduct and example during his eighteen years' service. The good conduct medal, he said, was harder earned than the Afghan or Burma medals, for it meant eighteen years' victory over oneself.

The Black Mountain Expedition.—A telegram from Seri, dated June 2, says:—The evacuation of the Akazai country was completed on Monday. General Hammond and staff and No. 2 Derajat Battery and 37th Dogras arrived at Seri yesterday, and the 2-5th Goorkhas to-day. About three o'clock on the morning of the 31st two men fired into camp at Darbanrai, and slightly wounded a sentry of the 2-5th Goorkhas. It is not known yet to what tribe the snipers belong. An informer said they were Chooglazais, but this is doubtful. The Mada Khel jirgah has just come in. No orders about the breaking-up of the force have yet been received.

The Miranzai Expedition.—A Hangu telegram of June 7 says:—Orders were received yesterday by General Lockhart for the break-up of the force. The movement of troops commences to-day. The 5th Goorkhas should arrive here this evening, and the 3rd Sikhs and 1st Punjab Infantry to-morrow. General Lockhart, with the headquarter staff, is expected here this evening on his way to Kohat. Col. Sym, commanding the 1st column, leaves Sangar to-day. The troops will be railed from Kushalgarh.

The following troops have been ordered to remain in the Black Mountain :—No. 9 British Mountain Battery, No. 4 Sappers, 23rd Welsh Fusiliers, 28th Punjab Infantry, 1st batt. 1st Goorkhas, and the 4th Sikhs.

The Government have sanctioned an increase from 5 rs. to 25 rs. of the bonus granted under the Indian Native Reserve regulations to each man going direct from the colours to the Reserve, as compensation for articles of kit left in store with his regiment for future use.

At a court-martial held on board the Victor Emanuel at Hong Kong on May 22, Lieut. P. G. Hodges, of H.M.S. Hyacinth, was charged with being drunk at sea. The charge was admitted, and the sentence of the Court was dismissal from the Service.

A notification in the Gazette of India announces the bestowal of the Order of Merit upon Armourer-Havildar Peter Durand, 33rd Regt. (3rd Burma Batt.) of Madras Inf., for conspicuous gallantry at Fort Stedman, Burma, on Feb. 11, 1891, in that, while unarmed himself, he closed with the murderer of Major Nixon, the commandant of the regiment, and eventually arrested the man, who was armed with a rifle and bayonet.

Under article 799 (c) of the Army Regulations, India, Volume I., rewards for a degree of honour in Urdu, Hindi, and Bengali were given only to officers whose period of actual service in India did not exceed fifteen years; and for Arabic, Persian, and Sanskrit to those whose service did not exceed twenty years. These restrictions have now, with the approval of the Secretary of State, been removed, and in future officers will be granted the authorised rewards for passing the tests in the languages specified, without reference to the period of their actual residence in India. The change has been notified in an Army circular, and the regulations will be amended accordingly.

Major F. Stevenson, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, has been appointed Assistant Adjutant-General, vice Lieut.-Col. T. H. Lloyd, whose leave of appointment has expired.

Major Ramsden, Madras Staff Corps, has been selected as Assistant Secretary in the Military Department. He was originally in the 67th Foot and 11th Madras Native Infantry. He has served in Afghanistan, and in the Soudan and Burma, thus having seen a lot of service. For his services in the latter campaign he received the brevet of Major.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to June 9.

New Secretariat Building, Calcutta.—The Government of India new Secretariat Offices in Calcutta are making rapid strides towards completion, the only retarding factor being the Secretary of State, under the operation of whose orders some of the material has to be obtained by indents executed by the Director-General of Stores, Whitehall, London. Requisitions made twelve months ago have not been attended to as yet, Indian Engineering says; whereas, if local firms (equal to or virtually English) had been resorted to, there would have been no stoppage, and completion would have been an accomplished fact long ere this.

The First Case under the Age of Consent Act has resulted, in the Calcutta High Court, in a conviction for murder and a sentence of transportation for life. The case was that which has figured for some time in the Anglo-Indian press under the title of "Another Harimaitee Case." The descriptive epithet, says the Times of India, is formed out of the name of Hari Mohan Maiti, the husband of Fulmoni Dassi, the child-wife who was so shockingly done to death last year, and "Harimaitism" has now fairly passed into the language as definitive of this peculiarly horrible form of crime. The present case was a very brutal one. One Enayat Sheik, aged about twenty, had a child-wife barely ten years old. Till the end of January last, the child had always lived with its mother, but at that time, at Enayat's request, she was sent to live with him and his sister. One night early in March he induced his sister to pass the night at a neighbour's house, and in the morning the body of the poor child wife, shockingly mauled, was found hanging by a rope from a beam in the roof of the hut. The ghoul of a husband at first swore that the poor child had taken her own life, but afterwards admitted that he had injured her so terribly that he determined to hang her up by the rope, that the neighbours might believe she had committed suicide. A curious feature in the earlier stages of the case was the verdict of the coroner's jury, who said that there was no doubt the child was hanged, or that death was due to strangulation by hanging, but they were of opinion that the husband was "so inflamed by passion as to be unable to understand that death would probably result from the hanging," while he "probably thought that she was dead already"—as indeed she might well have been. The medical evidence showed, however, that the poor child was alive when she was hung up, and that she had struggled violently afterwards. The case came before the Sessions Judge of Moorshedabad, who, disagreeing with the verdict of the jury, that Enayat had no intention of causing death and was therefore not guilty of murder, referred the case to the High Court. The issues framed before this tribunal were—(1) Is it satisfactorily proved that the deceased was alive when she was suspended by the accused; and (2) supposing she was alive at the time, is there sufficient ground for finding that the accused knew of the fact, or is it possible he really thought she was already dead? Both these points were decided against the accused, and he was found guilty of murder—"one of the most brutal and cowardly murders that can be conceived," said the Chief Judge. In deference, however, to the opinion of some members of the Court, that, "having regard to the mental condition of the prisoner at the time of the murder, it is possible that he may not have realised what he was doing," the Court believed that they were at liberty without failing in their duty to pass a less sentence than one of death. Enayat, who, in our opinion, richly deserved the capital penalty if murderer ever did, was accordingly sentenced to transportation for life.

The Benares Riots.—The trial of the men accused of being concerned in the Bhadaini Temple riots at Benares was concluded on June 6. Differing, as is usual in such cases, from the majority of the assessors, the judge found all the prisoners guilty of all the charges of rioting. As to the charges of dacoity and arson, the judge also considered the finding of the jury contrary to the evidence, but in this case he had been content to submit the case to the High Court. The trial lasted seventeen days.

The Direct Trade of Calcutta with Germany.—One of the most striking features in the Calcutta Customs returns for last year is the increase in the direct trade with Germany. The total value of exports and imports in 1886 amounted to little over 64 lacs; in 1888 it had risen to over a crore, and in 1890 to two crores and 64 lacs. The imports rose from 17 lacs in 1889 to 40 lacs in 1890, and the exports during the same period from 140 lacs to 228 lacs, an increase of 132 and 60 per cent. respectively. With the exception of beer among the imports and indigo among the exports, the increase has been general in all branches of trade, and everything points to a continuation of the upward movement. The trade with France meanwhile shows a steady and ominous decline. The figures for 1890 are the lowest recorded for many years, the decrease as compared with the previous year exceeding 8 lacs, or about 6 per cent. The exports of Indian produce dropped from 121 to 116 lacs, indigo alone declining by 6 lacs.

In the Calcutta High Court on June 6 a plaint was admitted in the case of Drew v. Drew, the husband seeking a divorce on the grounds of his wife's misconduct with one Hopper.

Steps are being taken to form an Imperial Library for the use of all the Government departments when in Calcutta. The library is to be placed in the Home Office, and promises to be of a valuable character. Many rare and important works which are now scattered about in the libraries of the various Secretariats and smaller offices are being collected as a nucleus of the projected library.

MADRAS.

OUR advices from Madras are to June 10.

Education of Native Christians in Madras.—A report on public instruction in the Madras Presidency for 1889 contains the following passage :—"I have frequently drawn attention to the educational progress of the native Christian community. In the Language Branch (B.A.), while the number of Brahmins examined decreased by 8 per cent., the number of native Christians increased by 40 per cent. There can be no question, if this community pursues with steadiness the present policy of its teachers, that, with the immense advantages it possesses in the way of educational institutions, in the course of a generation it will have secured a preponderating position in all the great professions."

Tea and Coffee Cultivation in Madras.—The Madras Times, referring to the statistics in connection with the cultivation of tea and coffee in Madras recently published, says :—The statistics as regards tea may be said to be most satisfactory, for they show that there is steady advance being made in this industry throughout the Presidency, which, if continued, will enable Southern India to hold its own with Ceylon and Northern India. The present drop in prices may retard it a little, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that there are large markets still to be opened, which will permit of an ample margin of profit for the producer. As regards coffee, the figures conclusively prove that this industry is very far from moribund, so far as this Presidency is concerned, and that planters continue yearly to open out new land.

Inter-Dining among Hindoos.—A remarkable step was taken by the agent of Sringeri Mutt here lately, says the Mysore correspondent of a Madras paper. Mr. Subramanya Shastry, the agent, belongs to the very cream of orthodoxy, and yet he had the courage to initiate a reform. On the occasion of his daughter's marriage he invited all the three sects of Brahmans for a dinner, and the guests partook of his hospitality seated side by side. In Mysore such inter-dining, though common, was confined only to the English-educated classes.

The Condition of North Arcot.—The recent rainfall in the affected tracts in North Arcot will not, apparently, do much to improve the situation, unless it is soon followed by more rain. The Madras Mail's special correspondent, reporting on the condition of affairs in the district, states that "all the children fed at the famine kitchens bear traces of emaciation. Though nowhere are food and grain prices at prescribed scarcity rates, yet they are very near these, and but for the relief works the present rates would be famine rates to thousands. The relief works also tend to repress crime consequent on the distress. The same correspondent reports a case of actual death from starvation, and remarks that when one looks round upon the country it seems wonderful that such deaths, despite relief works and kitchens, are not more frequent. Go where you will there are dry tanks, parched nullahs, empty wells, water-courses devoid of the slightest drop of moisture, burnt-up paddy fields, and an entire absence of pasture land. It is a wonder how cattle live." He concludes :—"Despite everything, the standard of living has been lowered generally all over the district, and the truest wisdom at the present moment consists in taking a very gloomy view of the near future."

The Madras Government has directed that the following places shall be held to be hill stations for the purposes of Section 3, Chapter I., of the Civil Service Regulations—namely, Ootacamund, Coonoor, Kotagiri, Wellington, Kodaikanal, Yercaud, Ramandrug, and Peermad.

The Secunderabad Club has granted many privileges to the fair sex. A correspondent writes:—"Les petits dîners are becoming quite fashionable at the club. The dear fair sex, I notice, are putting in the thin edge of the wedge by being allowed to dine in the corner of the club verandah, and seem to enjoy themselves immensely."

BOMBAY.

Our advices from Bombay are to June 12.

The Rajabai Tower Mystery.—A Government resolution is published intimating that the Public Prosecutor has been directed to lodge an information against Maneckjee Aslajee in the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate and to conduct the case there, with the assistance of the Advocate-General in any points of law that may arise. All the evidence, says the Times of India, connected with the Rajabai Tower Mystery was, we believe, laid before Mr. Basil Lang, the Advocate-General, for a formal opinion as to whether an information could be legally laid on the evidence as it stood.

Assault on English Officers.—The Patel, Accountant, and Moollah of the village of Dehu have been convicted by the City Magistrate, Poona, of having assaulted Captain Thomas and Lieutenants Westmacott and Hannyngton, of the Worcestershire Regiment, on May 2, while the latter were fishing in the river. The Patel was sentenced to fifteen days' simple imprisonment; the Accountant to pay a fine of 200 rs., in default two months' simple imprisonment; and the Moollah to two months' rigorous imprisonment. The magistrate, in passing sentence, remarked that the frequency of assaults by villagers upon European officers and soldiers necessitated his dealing severely with the accused in the present case.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

The Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on June 28:—

The Government of India has sanctioned a further estimate of 4 lacs for the completion of the metalled road from the Irrawaddy to the ruby mines, making a total expenditure on this road of 12 lacs.

Permanent barracks for British soldiers are being erected at Bernardmyo, a hill station north-east of Mandalay.

No news has yet been received of supplies having reached the garrison at the jade mines. The elephants recently sent from Bhamo to carry rations to the jade mines have not yet reached Mogoung. There has been very heavy rain in the Mogoung district.

On the occasion of the departure of Dr. Sinclair, Inspector-General of Prisons and Hospitals, for Europe on a two years' furlough, the local Press, endorsing the opinion of the local Government, bears testimony to the valuable work done by him and to the efficient condition of his department. During the past five years, owing to the enormous increase in the number of prisoners and the establishment of prisons in Upper Burma, Dr. Sinclair's work has been unusually arduous. One satisfactory feature in the administration of prisons in Burma by Dr. Sinclair is the decrease in the number of prison punishments, especially in the cases of flogging.

The Chief Commissioner has applied to the Government of India for sanction to the creation of an irrigation circle in Upper Burma, with a staff of one superintending, six executive, and ten assistant engineers, twelve upper subordinates, and sixteen lower subordinates. It is proposed to carry out extensive projects in the Shwebo, Kyaukese, Nimbu, and Mandalay districts, and to spend ten to twelve lacs per annum on irrigation works for some years to come. In no part of the Empire, says the Pioneer, is irrigation so largely and quickly remunerative as in Upper Burma. Sir Alexander Mackenzie has also asked for the ordinary public works of the province for an establishment of one chief, four superintending and seventy-two executive and assistant engineers and ninety-six upper subordinates, involving an increase of eleven executive and assistant engineers and twelve upper subordinates over the existing establishment. The total expenditure on works in Burma will now compare favourably with that in even the largest and richest province in India. The revised budget grants of 1890-91 show a total of 74 lacs; the grants for 1891-92 aggregate nearly 85 lacs.

Mr. Hoyne Fox, A.R.I.B.A., is now engaged in designing the new Dufferin Hospital and the Government House, Rangoon. The latter building is estimated at three lacs, while funds are being collected for the former. We (Indian Engineering) believe that in point of architectural design the Government House will be an ornament to the city and worthy as a habitation for the ruler of Burma. We may remark that Mr. Hoyne Fox has reason to be proud of his last effort—to wit, the new public offices—and no doubt ere long we will see his name connected with all buildings in this city with any pretensions to architecture.

HYDERABAD.

This part of the Deccan seems to be making fair progress towards the furtherance of the Masonic Craft, writes a Chudderghaut correspondent. Secunderabad itself, the military cantonment, can well boast of three lodges, and Chudderghaut has one. There appears to be no doubt that good-will and order prevail, for, on the night of Friday last, at a masonic banquet, this has been fully exemplified. The Worshipful Master, the very first Mahomedan-elect who was installed in that degree of Lodge No. 1,444 E.C., some time in March last, felt it binding on the part of the fraternity to recognise the ruler of these vast domains, and therefore at a banquet on the night of Friday last, after the usual constitutional toasts (viz., of H.M. the Queen-Empress of India and the Craft, and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales the Grand Master of Freemasonry in the world), that of H.H. the Nizam was proposed, and, to say the least, was most loyally and cheerfully pledged by the brethren of the mystic tie, thus, while fully recognising the great Architect in creating and building up the true life in man, was duly acknowledged. Considering the population of this city and the fact of a number of his Highness' noblemen and officers residing therein, who are members of the ancient Order, it is most desirable that another lodge should be soon established in the city itself.

The Deccan Times of June 4, in an article of strong political colour, alleges neglect of the young Salar Jung. Captain Beauclerk, his guardian, has assured the Minister that, on the contrary, the reports of both Dr. Lawrie, the Residency Surgeon, and of the child's regular attendant, Dr. Gay, are most satisfactory as to his general health and growth. The boy is living with his mother at Sooroonagar in one of the garden houses belonging to the family in the environs of the city. Some few zenana asperities remain to be smoothed over, which, on the reassembling of the committee, will be easily accomplished, as the difficulties are now known and understood.

The Nawab Mushtak Hossain still continues in indifferent health, and is now in Bombay. The doctors advise complete rest, but for a man of the Nawab's energy and love for work this advice is for him difficult to follow.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

Irrigation Works in the North-West Provinces and Oude show a slight surplus of revenue over working expenses and interest charges during the year 1889-90. It is noteworthy that the net revenue on productive and protective works in these provinces since 1830 shows a balance of some 69 lacs over the interest charges. This is equivalent to about 8·5 per cent. of the total capital outlay.

The city of Indore would have suffered from a serious water-famine, writes an Indore correspondent, had not his Highness Maharaja Holkar anticipated it while passing the Shirpore Waterworks three weeks ago. Orders were immediately given for effecting a communication with a large tank situated in the vicinity, and the result has been that, after a temporary scarcity for four or five days the town has received a copious supply, about five feet deep by a mile-and-a-half square, which it is believed will last for more than a couple of months, even if there be no rain. The advantages of the timely help thus received cannot be overrated in a dry and sultry place like Indore, and the Maharaja has been receiving the blessings of his ryots.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

The following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

Shanghai, June 25 (Standard).—The Imperial Decree which enjoined on the local officials the duty of taking energetic measures to repress the anti-foreign movement, has as yet produced no sensible effect. Outrages are still committed by the mob, and, to aggravate the difficulty of the situation, the soldiers who are at the disposal of the authorities show symptoms of disaffection, and cannot be relied upon to act against the rioters.

Under these circumstances, the Chinese Government—in spite of the goodwill of many of the local magistrates—being unable to make good its pledge of protection, the Foreign Powers whose citizens are exposed to danger have to take measures for guaranteeing their safety. Already upwards of twenty warships are in the waters of the Yangtse Kiang.

Rangoon, June 23 (Times).—Considerable anxiety is felt in Bangkok as to the anticipated action of France, owing to the claims put forward by her to Siamese territory.

The Bangkok Times, which may be regarded as an official organ, suggests that France contemplates the complete annexation of Siam. It strongly repudiates the idea that any feeling prevails in Siam in favour of the French population, and it warns Siam against the machinations of M. Sancasony the new Governor-General of Indo-China.

Paris, June 23 (Times).—An event, likely to be of great importance, if one may follow the opinion of a correspondent of the Débats, writing from Hanoi, in Indo-China, was the opening last Sunday of the first section of a new railroad in Tonquin from Phuland Thuong to Lang Son. The line passes through the region of Hu Lung Long, which was abandoned by its inhabitants on account of the pirates, but is becoming prosperous again, with villages coming up on every hand, and the new line is likely to add greatly to its awakening resources. The first locomotive on the line is called the "Carnot."

The following is a copy, verbatim et literatim, of the translation by a Japanese of the first news sent to Tokio of the attack on the Czarevitch:—

"The his highness Russian Prince has got wound at Otsu.

"I imform you the very serious happend case at once. Just now His highness Russian Prince leaves this place (Otsu) and passing the Otsu-machi, one policeman who had been send to the road for protection from police station he hold his sward and cut his highness Prince, and morderer has been coughted and the wound about 3 inches an side face, but his highness prince's spirit is very good and his fallowers did tite up with peace of cloth and brought back him to Kencho and he is at medical attendance at present, the morderer's name is Tsuda Sanjo and belongs to Mariyama police station at Shiga Ken and he says that sinply he lost his mind and he did done so, another police man cut him with a sward and arrested him.

"This is wired by Shigaken Governer to the Minister of Home department at 2,30 10th May 1891 at Otsu."

Writing on the Wuhu riots the North China Herald says:—It was stated some time ago that the death of the Viceroy Tseng was to be the signal for a succession of outbreaks at the river ports. The plotters were willing, in consideration of his popularity with all ranks and classes of Chinese, the magic of his name, and his services to the country, to be quiet during his lifetime; and he was there at Nanking, the very centre of the disaffection which exists all over North China, and especially in the Yangtze Valley. The Chinese army and the troops at Nanking especially, are, we are told, full of sedition, and the secret societies number many officials and more expectant officials on their rolls, some being in high and responsible positions. It has been noticed, of course, that the mob at Wuhu were led by well-dressed men provided with flags, who took no part in the actual destruction of property, but confined themselves to directing the attack. These are not the men who believe that the French Fathers make medicine of children's eyes, or that Chinese Catholic nuns can make children deaf and dumb by patting their heads, though it suits them very well to make use of these stories to excite the "ignorant persons" of whom the Viceroy talks in his telegram to the German Acting Consul-General here. The "mob" are the tools of these men; they are led by the rowdies and thieves and discharged soldiers whom the secret society men have always at hand; but two-thirds or more of the rabble are mere sight-seers, brought to the scene by curiosity, and naturally ready to annex whatever they can when they see the plundering beginning.

The commotion is said (according to the China Mail) to be not so much the outcome of hatred to foreigners as of a desire to embroil the authorities in foreign complications, so as to obtain a chance of raising a rebellion.

A question which may possibly cause some friction between the local Government and the Chinese Customs authorities has arisen in Hong Kong. A junk, it is alleged, was forcibly seized in British waters by a Chinese cruiser. Her crew was imprisoned, and the cargo and vessel were sold by auction on behalf of the Imperial Customs.

Mr. P. S. Hamel, Consul-General for the Netherlands at Amoy and Swatow, accompanied by Mr. J. Rhein, Secretary of the Legation, says the Hong Kong Telegraph, paid an official visit to the Viceroy of the Two Kwangs at Canton on the 15th inst. His Excellency was not desirous of seeing Mr. Hamel, but that gentleman, whose independent example might with advantage be imitated by our British consular officers, was neither to be brow-beaten or neglected. He insisted on his right to an interview, and, of course, Li Hanchang had to give way.

We cut this from the Pekin Gazette:—

"Pan Wei, the Governor of Kueichou, asks for some token of Imperial favour to be bestowed on the memory of some 9,939 women of the Kaichou district who during the years 1859-72 preferred death to dishonour and died in their country's cause. He would suggest that an honorary portal be put up to commemorate their noble action. —Granted."

Before Mr. Consul-General and Mrs. Alabaster left Canton, a meeting of the British community there was held, at which it was decided to present them with a piece of plate, and an address, of which the following is a copy:—

SIR AND MADAM,—On this the occasion of your departure from Canton we beg to express our appreciation of the loss we sustain.

To you, Sir, it is not our thanks alone that we know to be due, but the thanks of all communities in China, for the services of a lifetime conscientiously given in the cause of progress. Our privilege, however, it is to have the opportunity of offering this expression of our sentiments.

Your varied services are matters of history, and require no record here.

To you, Madam, we are indebted for innumerable acts of kindness and untiring hospitality, which will make your residence among us ever a bright period to remember.

To both we now most heartily wish a pleasant voyage and all happiness in the future, whether at home or abroad, and, in token of our sincere regard, beg your acceptance of the accompanying plate.

We remain, Sir and Madam, yours very faithfully.

The community of Shanghai, says the N. C. Herald, would have been glad if Mr. Alabaster could have paid the port one other visit before he left China, and allowed his friends an opportunity of expressing their feelings towards himself and his wife, and their appreciation of his unequalled services to his country during his long residence in China.

RAILWAYS IN SIAM.

Indian Engineering says:—A great deal of misconception exists as to what has been done, and is being done, in respect to railways in the Kingdom of Siam. In the first place, not a single mile of line has been laid as yet, and the operations of the expensive "Directorate of State Railways" in that country are simply confined to paper work—trading on the brains of others. This directorate is exclusively foreign in its constitution, being composed of a host of Germans, Danes, and other importations from Northern Europe, without the slightest knowledge of South-Eastern Asia, and less of the particular requirements of that part of it situated in the heart of the peninsula between India and China.

This anomaly is due to the mere accident of the great "Krupp" having been requisitioned to formulate a scheme of defences for both the kingdom and its capital; and when the novelty of that fad ceased, Bangkok was practically in possession of the foreign element intended to work it. The outcome has been that the "Royal Railway Department of Siam" was formed with a German director and a Danish secretary; and the whole staff has been recruited from the same, or like sources.

So far, this gigantic organisation has confined its work to Bangkok—or, rather, the precincts of the railway "office" in that city. Its time is usefully occupied and salary of the officials earned by converting the designs and specifications for railway lines and rolling-stocks of Northern Europe to suit the conditions of tropical Asia! And it is even doing something more—modifying the surveys and plans of English engineers without having seen the country or having any data for these wholesale changes.

But it is here necessary to explain that some years back, Sir Andrew Clark, R.E., undertook to prepare a railway scheme for the development of the internal resources of Siam. Under this agreement, Mr. Galwey (an ex-Indian engineer) and other British engineers explored and traversed the country, selected routes, and surveyed and drew up projects in a manner creditable alike to their good name, previous experience, and professional repute.

It is these projects that the foreign Railway Directorate in Siam are now manipulating—mutilating! In one instance, we believe, the formation level has been reduced several feet right through, without any reference to the country, water-marks, or drainage areas. Such factors are, perhaps, unknown considerations in some parts of the frigid zone; and an initial saving on paper will convince the Royal Ruler of Siam of the efficiency of his foreign engineers and of their comparative superiority over British!

In the meanwhile, the Bangkok Times does a thriving business. "English" is the official language of the country. The reports and specifications of the foreign engineers must be in that language. Hence the conductors of our contemporary in Siam have the pleasure of reading these effusions, the trouble of correcting them and the profit of printing them.

We have therefore to warn the British public to accept anything that appears in the Bangkok Times with caution. It is unquestionably inspired by influences which it cannot well avoid and are only referred to here because of their connection with the profession.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A TELEGRAM from Tauris to the Daily News, dated June 22, states:—Katy Greenfield, a girl of fourteen, and a British subject, was at the beginning of May abducted by an Aziz Kurd, and afterwards brought to So-uj-bolak to the Mufti's house. The Turkish Kurds drew her thence forcibly and kept her at the Turkish Consulate. After an exchange of telegrams between Teheran, Stamboul, and London, Behjet Effendi, the Turkish Consul-General, and Mr. Paton, the Acting British Consul-General here, have been sent to So-uj-bolak, the former to place the girl in the hands of the local authorities, and the latter to inquire into the matter. Now a hundred armed Kurds surround the Consulate and threaten to shoot any one who attempts to see the girl. The affair is fast becoming serious.

Another despatch from Tauris, dated June 24, adds:—The number of Kurdish rioters is increasing at So-uj-bolak, and they refuse to deliver up the girl, Katy Greenfield, whom they hold captive there. From Urumiah troops have been ordered to So-uj-bolak, and guards have been stationed to protect the British Consulate.

The Tauris correspondent of the Daily News again telegraphs:—The Governor-General of Azerbaijan has been ordered by a royal despatch to obtain the liberation of Katy Greenfield at all costs. It is rumoured that the Kurds have declared that if force is used they will only deliver up the young girl's dead body.

The rioters on Friday attacked the Turkish Consulate at So-uj-Bolak with the intention of murdering Consul Thomas for advising the restoration of the abducted girl Katy Greenfield. The Turkish Consul, Behjet Effendi, in trying to save Mr. Thomas's life, himself ran the danger of being killed. Both have since taken refuge in the Government House. Mr. Paton has remained unmolested. Prince Nosrat Dowleh has been ordered to So-uj-Bolak with troops from this place.

A Reuter telegram from St. Petersburg says that the Emir of Bokhara has for some time past cherished the intention of paying a visit to Russia, but the plan has now been abandoned, as the Russian Government has advised him not to leave his country, pointing out to him that advantage might be taken of his absence by the partisans of the exiled Prince Kafti Tura to bring about a revolution in favour of the Prince.

The Novoe Vremya publishes a sensational article headed "English Secret Mission," in which it endeavours to revive Captain Grombtchefsky's old plaints and theories about Captain Younghusband's expedition to Kashgar, which very hospitably entertained Captain Grombtchefsky when he was there in 1890. Captain Younghusband and other Englishmen there, it says, are negotiating for an Anglo-Chinese seizure of the Pamir and so forth. The Novoe Vremya and Captain Grombtchefsky will not succeed, the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says, in frightening serious people with their new Central Asian bogey.

A Times telegram from Calcutta (June 23) states:—The Foreign Office has received a telegram from Colonel Durand stating that Mr. Lennard and Mr. Beach have arrived safely at Yasni, and are expected shortly at Gilghit. The story of the murder of Mr. Lennard on the Pamir appears to have arisen from the discovery of a flask and portions of a kit, doubtless belonging to previous travellers. It now seems clear that Mr. Lennard and Mr. Beach, after wintering at Yarkand, marched in the early spring towards the Tagdumbash plateau on the Pamir in search of the ovis poli, and that they proceeded next to Langar, and then to Sarhad, whence they probably ascended the Baroghil Pass to Chittral. Now that they have reached Yasin safely, no further anxiety need be felt about them.

According to intelligence received in Vienna from Teheran, a movement has been set on foot in Persia aiming at the introduction of Liberal reforms. The Shah has received an anonymous petition, in which he is called upon to carry out without delay the following programme:—First, the establishment of an efficient control over the finances of the country, so as to ensure the employment of the public money for public purposes and the economic improvement of the kingdom; secondly, the suppression of polygamy, which, as the petitioners set forth, is the real cause of Persian depopulation: thirdly, the promulgation of a law guaranteeing absolute freedom to all creeds; and, fourthly, the creation of a representative system giving the people its due share in the management of public affairs. The Shah, it is reported, is far from being favourably inclined to such innovations, which would deprive him of a great deal of his power, and the police of Teheran have made about forty arrests in connection with this petition, especially among the members of the Babiste party, a politico-religious sect, which seems to be gaining ground in the country. The Persian Government hopes to be able to stifle the movement, which might eventually become a danger to the present régime.

The feud between the rival chiefs of the Kuki Khel Afridis in the Khyber has resulted, according to frontier correspondents, in fighting with artillery of sorts, which had been manufactured for them by men trained at Roorkee. The quarrel was accentuated, it appears, by the murder of the nephew of one Malik Muhammad Amin Khan by the emissaries of the other, Akbar Khan—who is, it is said, now recognised as Malik by our politicals—in revenge for the murder of his own nephew years ago, in the bazaar of Jamrud, by a servant of Muhammad Amin Khan.

Conflicting accounts come across the frontier of the fighting between Umra Khan of Jandol and the combined forces of Safder Khan of Nawagi and Muhammad Sharif, ex-Khan of Dir. It appears, however, that the Salarzais of Bajaur, who had hitherto, from hostility towards the Khan of Nawagi, supported Umra Khan, were bribed to change sides by the late Khan of Dir, and with their treacherous assistance Umra Khan was worsted, losing three horses and about forty firearms, about eighty men being killed and wounded in the struggle. Umra Khan's troops were driven from Shukratahi, which the victors at once proceeded to fortify. Further fighting was expected.

We, Civil and Military Gazette, have already noticed the commencement of hostilities between Umra Khan of Jandol and the Khan of Nawagi's confederacy in the capture of Shukratahi by the latter. About seven days ago, we now learn, an attempt was made by Umra Khan in person to recover it, but he failed. In the fighting about forty casualties are said to have occurred. Since the above was written news reaches us of an unexpected success for Umra Khan, which, if true, will go far to equalise matters, if it does not drag the Mehter of Chitral at once into the combination against him. It appears that Muhammad Ashraf Khan, a brother of the ex-Khan of Dir and a son of the ex-Khan, had, with a force from Kohistan, managed to get possession of Shiringal, a Dir territory which belonged to Umra Khan, by treachery; but the latter hearing of it at once sent men under his brother Muhammad Shah Khan to retake the place. Whereupon the inhabitants again changed sides, through fear, and not only surrendered to Muhammad Shah Khan, but seized and gave up the Khan of Dir's brother and son, who have been carried off as prisoners to Bajaur. This news requires confirmation, perhaps, as it comes from Umra Khan's men; but it is not unlikely to be true, as the men of Dir have always during recent hostilities distinguished themselves by their treacherous readiness to transfer their allegiance from one side to the other. As, however, the ex-Khan of Dir's son, who is said to have been captured, is the grandson on his mother's side of the Mehter of Chitral, this might widen the circle of hostilities.

We have before noted the reverse sustained by Umra Khan of Jandol in the commencement of hostilities with the Khan of Nawagi. It appears that the party of his men who were attacked and defeated were making a reconnaissance on the 25th ult. in the vicinity of their position, which was being fortified close to the Nawagi border. They lost fifteen killed. Umra Khan, on receipt of the news, ordered his men not to be cast down by the inauspicious commencement, but to remain on the defensive. Fearing treachery on the part of Mian Gul from Swat, Umra Khan has also sent reinforcements to Ramora, and is filling the ditch round that place with water. He has also been obliged to send more men to Dir, because Sher Muhammad, a brother of the late Khan, is raising the Kohistani Gujars of Talpatrak against him. Meanwhile, the Khan of Nawagi is disposing his available forces in separate columns to assume the offensive, the columns being under the command of refugees from Dir. The late Khan of Dir is also expecting assistance from Chitral. Altogether Umra Khan's prospects are gloomy, but they have often appeared so before.

Another attempt to bring the Wazirs of Khost under the Ameer's rule appears to have failed. Owing to intertribal disputes, reports the Lahore paper, Gul Khan, the recognised chief of the tribe, found his authority endangered, and conceived the idea of obtaining the Ameer's assistance. With this view he sent his son, Khaista Khan, to Cabul to offer the Ameer his daughter in marriage. The Ameer accepted the offer, and gave the envoy valuable khillats, carpets, clothes, cash, &c., and sent him back to his country, with a number of ponies as transport. The Waziris in the meanwhile had, however, discovered what was going on, and openly threw off the authority of Gul Khan, saying that they were independent, and did not wish to have any connection with the Ameer. Gul Khan, in fear of his life, escaped with his family to Khost and presented himself to the Ameer's Governor of Khost. In the meantime his son arrived from Cabul, and on arrival was attacked and made prisoner by the Waziris, who plundered all the khillats. The pony drivers were also arrested, but subsequently allowed to return to Cabul via Kurrum and Peshawur. The Governor of Khost has written to the Ameer for orders.

The quarrel between the Ameer and his Qazilbash (Shia) subjects in Cabul appear to increase in bitterness. The latest report on the subject (which comes, however, from Jellalabad, and not from Cabul) is, says the Lahore paper, to the effect that Mullah Yusuf Ali, the chief and high priest of the Shias of Cabul, has been arrested on a charge of insulting the memory of the Prophet's companions by writing up their names dishonourably in his house. The Shias, it may be as well to state, only revere the memory of one of Muhammad's four companions, Ali. The Sunnis recognise all four under the name of the "Chargar." To insult the remaining three is, therefore, a typical Shia method of offending Sunni susceptibilities, and the accusation of having done so is an equally typical Sunni method of excusing persecution of the Shias. Which it is in the present case we will not pretend to say, but there is little doubt that the relations between the Ameer and his Shia subjects are just now strained. It is expected that Mullah Yusuf Ali, whose family are said to have been expelled from Cabul, will be put to death.

The Civil and Military Gazette states that Dr. Gray, the Ameer's doctor, was under orders, when our last news left Cabul, to start for Peshawur within a week. The latter portion of the period of his service in Afghanistan is said to have been marked by some unpleasantness, inasmuch as his devotion to the fine arts was not at all appreciated, as might have been expected in a semi-barbarous Oriental country like Afghanistan, where it is held to inculcate idolatry among the faithful. He will, however, no doubt receive presents and a gracious farewell on departure, as is the Ameer's politic custom towards his European employés.

Sir George Chesney's Speech at Simla.—The Bombay Gazette says:—The United Service Gazette takes us to task for our recent criticism of Sir George Chesney's farewell speech at Simla. "It is much to be regretted," our contemporary says, "that the Bombay Gazette, in its issue of the 25th ult., should, as we think very unfairly, attribute to Sir George Chesney the advancement of a claim, 'that the Army alone amongst the great spending departments should have a free hand in its expenditure uncontrolled by any consideration as to the claims of the other departments or by any thought for the well-being of the Empire.' Still more is it to be regretted that this paper should make Sir George's speech the text upon which to hang a diatribe against an increase of military expenditure in India." There is something unfair in attributing unfairness to us in this connection. Sir George Chesney's not too courteous designation of Sir David Barbour as the "Bogie man" fully bore the construction which we put upon it. His complaint that "financial considerations and the Bogie man insensibly get the upper hand" when an increase in military expenditure is recommended, can have no other meaning than that. If the observations, which borrow colour from one of the comic operas of the day, were meant merely for the amusement of Sir George Chesney's hosts we have nothing to say against them. But if subjected to any serious interpretation they plainly imply resentment at the subjection of military expenditure to the financial considerations by which all other proposals for public expenditure have to be tested. Our London correspondent assures us that in official circles the alarmist tone at home of Sir George Chesney's observations was deprecated even by those who to some extent agree that India is "very far from being in that state of military preparedness which alone can save her from future disaster," as our military contemporary would say.

Mr. Holt-Hallett, who "knows the ropes," says the Bombay Gazette of June 12, has taken advantage of the short Parliamentary recess to deliver his soul once more on his favourite topic. A recent issue of the Times contained a letter which, though not strikingly novel, occupied no less than a column and a half. Mr. Holt-Hallett in his superior manner lectures Lord Lansdowne, sneers at Viscount Cross, and serves up once more the familiar quotation from the English factory inspectors, Mr. Meade-King and Mr. Jones, who were sent out to India to put things right. A "slur upon the English name and a disgrace to the nation," is how Mr. Holt-Hallett—a Public Works pensioner, we believe, of the Indian Government—describes the measure recently passed by the Supreme Legislative Council at the instance of the Viceroy in Council. Mr. Holt-Hallett concludes his calm and judicious epistle as follows:—"It is to be hoped that the electorate will take this burning question up, and determine that due protection from overwork shall be granted to the working-classes in India, who, having no votes, can bring no pressure to bear on the Government, and are left powerless, to be mercilessly sweated by the moneyed classes in that country." The allusion to votes and bringing pressure to bear upon the Government is rather unfortunate from the pen of one who is an honorary member of a Lancashire Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Holt-Hallett's friends complain of the way he is treated by the Anglo-Indian Press. But how can they expect a controversialist who uses such extravagant language to be taken seriously?

Inspection of Factories.—A resolution of the Government of Bengal on the Report of the Inspection of Factories in the Province in 1890 has been published. During the year under review, 114 factories came under the operation of the Indian Factories Act. Of these, 4 were in the Patna, 2 in the Bhagulpore, 3 in the Rajshahiye, and 24 in the Dacca divisions. Forty-one were in the 24-Pergunnahs (Presidency division), 7 in the town of Calcutta, 32 in the Burdwan divison and 1 in the district of Orissa. Owing to the joint magistrate of 24-Pergunnahs not having time to inspect all the factories twice a year, the desirability of appointing a special inspector for the neighbourhood of Calcutta has been suggested to the Government of India. The reports further show that the provisions of the Act were attended to in almost every instance for the prevention of accidents from machinery. Notwithstanding these precautions, however, so many as 326 accidents were caused by carelessness, and 8 of them proved fatal. The Lieutenant-Governor notices with pleasure that the condition of factories generally and their management is reported to be highly satisfactory.

BURMA AND CHINA RAILWAY CONNECTION.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

SIR,—After two years and a half's silence your anonymous correspondent "Old Arakan," in your issue of the 15th inst., has thought fit to reopen his batteries upon me. He seems to be annoyed at my having exposed his delusion as to crow lines of railway and his general ignorance of subjects upon which he was posing as an authority. I only knew him as the author of a pamphlet and certain letters in your columns condemning the project for the connection of India with Burma and Burma with China, which had been proposed by Mr. Colquhoun and myself, and urging the construction of two palpably impracticable rival lines of railway, one for the connection of Bhamo with the capital of the Chinese province of Yunnan, and the other for connecting Akyab with Mandalay. I had no more acquaintance of his personality than I have with the inhabitants of another planet. Omelets cannot be made without breaking eggs. Having endeavoured to break my eggs to make his omelets, he should not consider it "unwarrantable and discourteous" on my part to prove that his eggs are addled and unfit to make omelets.

The spiteful letter from the late Sir Edward Sladen, from which "Old Arakan" gleefully quotes, is disingenious in the extreme. If the line from Bangkok to Kiang Hsen, formerly proposed by me and since surveyed by Sir Andrew Clarke's syndicate for the King of Siam, is constructed, and it is found to "be very necessary in course of time to connect the lower provinces of Burma" with the Siamese railway system—our proposed Burma-Siam-China Railway would be complete with the exception of the section passing up the valley of the Mekong to Ssumao. Where then is the death-blow that has been given to that railway. To call it the "Old Sprye route" is to show crass ignorance with the subject. The Sprye route, as is well known, kept clear of both Siam and the Siamese Shan States.

A railway from Mandalay to the Kun-Lon ferry, although it will not enable us to compete with the French for the trade of Southern China, would attract local trade and throw a large amount of traffic upon the existing Rangoon and Mandalay Railway, and would serve as a feeder-line to the Burma-China Railway proposed by me in my address to the Blackburn Chamber of Commerce. In the same address I pointed out that in Mr. Bagley's report he expresses his opinion upon the financial prospects of the Kun-Lon ferry railway as follows:—"There can be little doubt the railway suggested will pay its expenses within a few years, and in time return a handsome dividend." Such prospects are not good enough for the public unless the line is guaranteed for a certain number of years. "Commercial gentlemen" do not like to risk their money in a concern where they have not only to see no dividend on their capital for "a few years" but for those "few years" have to be out of pocket for the working expenses of the railway. If "Old Arakan" can induce the India Government to construct the Kun-Lon ferry railway or guarantee interest to a company who will undertake it, I wish him success, because I am as much in favour of the construction of the line as he can be; but the good effects which it would have upon opening up the country, and the extension of trade, would be small in comparison to what would accrue from the construction of the Burma-China Railway and its branches.—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

1 Chilworth Street, W., June 16. HOLT S. HALLETT.

THE FOREIGN MARITIME TRADE OF INDIA.

LAST year's accounts of the foreign maritime trade of India show that exports have fallen off by 321 lacs but the imports have increased by 247 lacs, while the aggregate value of outward transactions still exceeds that of inward shipments by roughly 40 per cent. In some classes of imports there is a decrease, mainly under machinery and mill work, 37 lacs, while in metals, although 41 lacs less worth of copper has been brought into the country, heavier takings in iron, steel, zinc, and spelter reduce the net shortage in this group to 6 lacs. The 71 total consignments of kerosine and other mineral oils are less than in the preceding year, America having been losing ground, while Russia is gaining it; but, on the other hand, there has been a somewhat remarkable enhancement in the supplies of cocoanut oil, viz, 10 lacs, or double the figures for last year. The cotton export figures show a fall of 216 lacs, and the value of jute less by 104 lacs. The exports of wheat are rather in excess of last year, 25 lacs, and of rice considerably so, 276 lacs. There has been a steady growth in the export of Indian manufactured twist and yarn and piece-goods, in the former case 76 lacs, and in the latter 13 lacs. Indigo shows a decrease in value of some 80 lacs, and opium of 85 lacs. The value of tea was also less by nearly 6 lacs. There was an increase in raw hides and skins, and of some 17,000 tons of bones. The United States took 4,000 tons more saltpetre, and the United Kingdom 4,000 less. Button lac and shellac shipped show an increase of 7 and 22 lacs respectively.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AND THE 19TH HUSSARS.

THE Princess of Wales visited Aldershot on June 26 to inspect the 19th Regiment of Hussars, which bears her name. She was accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Princesses Victoria and Maud. The royal party left Waterloo Station by a special train under the charge of Mr. Verrinder, at 11.35, and travelled by the South-Western line to Farnborough, which was reached at half-past twelve. Here they were met by a troop of the 19th Hussars, under the command of Lieutenant Levita, who escorted them to the Plain. Sir Evelyn Wood, commander of the Aldershot Division, and Sir Baker Russell, commander of the Cavalry Brigade, with their aides-de-camp, also met the royal visitors. The Prince of Wales, who wore the uniform of a general in the British Army, rode a charger. The Princess and her daughters entered an open carriage drawn by four horses, and, escorted by the two commanders and their aides-de-camp, were driven to the camp. The scene of the inspection was the Birthday parade-ground west of Danger Hill, which is about four miles from Farnborough Station. Since 1889 this ground has been re-named Laffan's Plain, after a general of that name. The 19th Hussars paraded before the East Cavalry Barracks at half-past eleven, with a strength of nineteen officers and 400 men, whose appearance was very fine. Colonel J. D. P. French, the commanding officer, was present, and so were Colonel Hanford-Flood, the second in command; Adjutant H. De Pledge, and all the officers belonging to the regiment. Now that the regiment is under orders for India in September, it was considered appropriate that the Princess should inspect the men before they left Aldershot.

The Royal Standard was hoisted at the saluting point at a quarter to one. The regiment at that time was drawn up in four squadrons fronting the flag, the band on the right, and when the royal party came in sight the National Anthem was played. There was a large crowd at this moment about the saluting point. Colonel French, after the salute, rode up to the Princess and saluted, and then the regiment walked past, the band playing the Danish national air. The regiment rode by in squadrons, then in sections at a trot; afterwards they trotted past by squadrons, galloped past by squadrons, and finally executed a series of movements of a very effective character, advancing in review order and going through sword exercise and pursuing practice. Then the regiment was formed into three sides of a square, and the Prince of Wales, accompanied by the general officers, rode up and delivered a short speech.

The Prince said: "Colonel French, I desire to thank you and your officers, in the name of the Princess, as well as in my own name, for the beautiful sight which we have seen to-day. The Princess desires me to say that she is proud of the regiment being called the Princess's Own. Now that the regiment is shortly to embark for India, we feel confident that it will maintain the high reputation already won, and we both wish you God speed and good luck."

The royal party then left the Plain and drove through the camp. They were subsequently entertained at luncheon by Colonel French and the officers of the regiment in their mess room at the East Cavalry Barracks, which was beautifully decorated with flowers, and on the table were placed many silver trophies belonging to the regiment. Lady Russell, Mrs. French, and other ladies were present. The royal train left Aldershot for Waterloo at 3.40, and reached London at 4.20.

Adulteration of East India Cotton.—At the meeting of the Council of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce on June 24, the committee of the East India and China Trade Section presented a report on the subject of the adulteration of East India cotton. In the course of the discussion it was stated that during the last year or two this adulteration had gone on to such an extent that the importation of East India cotton into Liverpool had been practically stopped, and shipowners, merchants, and others had been adversely affected.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

Truth says:—The Manipore affair has thrown into the shade the latest expedition to the Black Mountain. Inquiry, however, will, I think, show that this episode thoroughly deserves the attention of the critics of Indian administration. So far as I can learn, whenever our Anglo-Indian warriors feel a little bored, or whenever the flow of decorations and honours is getting slack, an expedition to the Black Mountain is organised. In October last two brigades were despatched on this service. The Black Mountaineers did not allow themselves to be drawn. They fired a few shots at long range, but kept out of reach. The two brigades then marched to the top of the mountain, and, having looked about them—and having, I dare say, taken a few photographs—they marched home again. What rewards and honours followed upon this arduous operation I do not know. It served, however, one purpose. The British flag had been insulted. The prestige of the Indian Government was at stake—much as it was when the Senaputty kicked one of his brothers off the throne and put another in his place. The pretext was consequently furnished for another expedition at the first convenient opportunity in order to chastise the Black Mountaineers. As soon as the winter was over this expedition marched out, 7,000 strong. In due course the enemy appeared, it is said to the number of nearly 1,300. The expeditionary force then halted until a reserve brigade was mobilised and moved up, when the conjoint forces numbered 12,000 men. The commander then telegraphed to Simla for instructions as to whether he should attack the enemy or occupy a place called Baio, supposed to be the objective of the expedition. This desperate project was, however, vetoed, and without much more delay the whole army marched back again. Such was the last Black Mountain expedition—the fourth or fifth of the series. The spot where the last-mentioned episode took place—that is to say, where the British general lay entrenched looking at the enemy, before turning tail, has been christened by Tommy Atkins "Fort Funk." It is a very good name. I do not think so badly of our warriors to suppose that the object of their "funk" was the 1,500 hill-men in front. I think that what was "funked" was the public opinion of England, and the probable exposure of the Black Mountain humbug, if anything occurred which would direct an inconvenient amount of attention to the place. For a humbug it evidently is. A correspondent, writing a few weeks ago, says that the leading heroes concerned "are now awaiting their K.C.B.'s." That is what the Black Mountain apparently exists for—a sort of Tom Tiddler's ground, where the Anglo-Indian warrior picks up, not only gold and silver, but a handle to his name. I take it, therefore, that for the present these gentry do not want to annex the Black Mountain or to smash the Black Mountaineers. That would be killing the goose which lays the golden eggs. Hence the right-about-face at "Fort Funk." Sooner or later, however, a collision is bound to occur. Sooner or later the hill tribes will be provoked by the spectacle of British armies marching up the hill and marching down again, into making a desperate attack on the invader. The end of that will, of course, be that they will be swallowed up, and the frontier of the Indian Empire moved another notch forward, possibly after the preliminary annihilation of a British column, caught napping. In the meantime, though there was money available to send a couple of brigades to the Black Mountain last autumn, and 12,000 men this spring, merely for the purpose of marching them back again and getting the commanding officers gazetted, when an English Radical talks of interfering with the opium trade, he is informed that India is on the verge of bankruptcy, and is denounced as the worst enemy of the unfortunate Indian taxpayer.

POST-OFFICES IN TURKEY.

THE renewed efforts of the Porte to induce foreign Powers to abandon the privilege they have so carefully and so necessarily guarded of conducting their own post-offices, will, of course, be met with an emphatic non possumus. Very likely the freedom of criticism employed by the European newspapers introduced into Turkey through the protected offices is unpleasant to the SULTAN, but it cannot be expected that the governments of Western States would consent to deprive their subjects resident in Turkey of all opportunity of obtaining intelligence and forming a judgment on the political history of the time. Probably Russia would be glad to second the Porte in this demand, as it would practically enable her to exclude from the country all hostile observation or unfettered comment on her own policy in the East of Europe and in Asia; but even the amiability of the French Government could hardly stretch the point so far as to agree that an embargo should be laid on the supply of journalistic information which is essential to every intelligent Frenchman. What, according to the Times correspondent at Constantinople, is demanded by the Porte is a right to stop the entrance of all letters or newspapers containing, or suspected of containing, any objectionable expressions of opinion. Under the management of Turkish officials, subsidised as they would be by intriguing diplomats, it is clear that no intelligence of the slightest political bearing would ever be allowed to pass the barrier. No doubt papers would be smuggled through, as they are in Russia, despite the vigilance of the authorities. More important however than the circulation of journals among European residents and visitors is the sacredness of private correspondence. This could never be relied on in the hands of Turkish officials. The British Government at all events may be expected to meet the demand with a prompt refusal.

HOLKAR AND HIS TRADUCERS.

MR. SEYMOUR KEAY has discovered another mare's nest in India—this time in Holkar's dominions. It is manifest to anyone who watches the Press, particularly the more obscure Native papers, that someone is making a dead set at Holkar, about whom a number of malicious reports have been disseminated. One method of annoying the Prince is to send out from this country for circulation in Indore fly-sheets containing libellous attacks, purporting to be extracts from leading English newspapers. One lies before us, with no printer's name attached, but printed on paper bearing a London watermark. It pretends to give an extract from the "London Standard of the 31st January last," which begins—"The information transmitted by our Indian correspondent coincides in the main with that published in the Morning Post of the 28th ult. . . . The state of affairs existing in Indore at the present time is (caeteris paribus)—sic—unsatisfactory, &c." The supposititious extract proceeds to refer in a style which is entirely foreign to the decorous columns of the Standard, to the "Nero-like Holkar"—his "unmerciful and cold-blooded oppression"—to "unmerited treatment of his own uncle (Sir Kashi Rao Holkar, K.C.S.I.) and the Ranees of Indore"—"by this monster in human shape." It refers to Sir Lepel Griffin's and Mr. Henvey's administration as "nothing short of a public scandal." Of course the Standard never published such an article.

Possibly the key to the circulation of these wretched concoctions may be found in one of the paragraphs we have quoted; Mr. Seymour Keay's motives for intervening on behalf of a scoundrel of a particularly odious type are less evident. Had the Standard ever published anything like the above, its editor would very soon have learned that the treatment of Sir Kashi Rao Holkar, K.C.S.I., and the Ranees of Indore, to which allusion is made, was not only not "unmerited," but had the approval—if it were not due to the initiative—of the Indian Government. Obviously this disgraceful fly-sheet forms part of an organised system of attack on the Maharaja.

Mr. Seymour Keay on June 19 asked the Under-Secretary of State for India—"Whether his attention had been called to the case of Bulwunt Rao, formerly an official of the Indore State, for whose arrest a warrant was recently obtained from the Residency magistrate at Indore at the instance of the Maharaja Holkar, the ruler of Indore, or one of his officials, on a charge of having written a letter in a local newspaper commenting on certain proceedings of the Maharaja, the said Bulwunt Rao living at the time at Ujain, a town in the Gwalior State, in which the warrant could not be legally executed; the warrant was nevertheless entrusted to a body of police in the service of the ruler of Indore, who seized and barbarously murdered Bulwunt Rao on the 19th ult. in the streets of Ujain; and whether he can inform the House what steps the Government of India are taking in the matter."

Mr. Seymour Keay thus makes a flagrant imputation on the Maharaja of Indore, in the House of Commons, and, we may ask, on whose authority? Next to the baseness of inventing a calumny, there is the levity of accepting and transmitting calumnies on imperfect evidence. Mr. Seymour Keay's delicate humanitarian sympathies lay him peculiarly open to credulity when the "Nero-like" conduct of Indian Princes, or the flagitious connivance therein of British officials are brought to his notice. A little straightforward inquiry, however, ought to have satisfied Mr. Seymour Keay that he was taking up the case of a great rascal. The facts, we believe, are these. Until lately a scandalous newspaper has been circulated from Mhow, in Central India, entitled the Eastern Herald, publishing every week grossly defamatory letters attacking English officials and Native Chiefs, and no doubt profiting thereby in a way known to those familiar with the methods of conducting the viler Native journals. Early last April this paper was prosecuted for defamation The case was tried before the Sessions judge (British Court) at Indore, and one Mohindrinath Chatterjee, the editor and proprietor, was sentenced to imprisonment for nine months and a fine of 1,500 rs., and another person, writer of two defamatory letters, received thirteen months imprisonment, besides being fined 650 rs. Soon after, Mr. Dhurundher, Chief Justice to the Maharaja, prosecuted Chatterjee, then in gaol, and his accomplices, for defamation contained in a letter signed by "A Lover of Truth," and published in the Eastern Herald. The case was settled by the agreement of the accused to publish ample apologies in certain prominent Anglo-Indian journals, to cease the issue of the Eastern Herald, and to give up the name of the "Lover of Truth," who turned out to be Bulwunt Rao Wumun, the criminal detractor who seems to have attracted the sympathies of Mr. Seymour Keay, M.P. This man succeeded in evading the police and took refuge in the city of Oojain in Sciudiah territory. The Durbar police handed him over to the British police at the railway station of that place. It appears that he died next day, but no further particulars are known at present, and the case is being investigated by British authorities under orders from the Agent for Central India. Mr. Keay's notion that Holkar had an interest in making away with the man is gratuitous. He was one of a disreputable gang which it was the Maharaja's interest to unmask, not alone for his own sake, but for that of every reputable person in Indore. If Holkar concerned himself at all about the man's arrest it would be to enjoin that he should be kept in safety, for he could have given valuable information as to those who were behind him and inspiring his infamous attacks. When he died, however, the man was in the custody of the British police. Mr. Seymour Keay has been misled. When he has discovered the truth it would be only graceful were he to admit it.

As for Sir Kashi Rao Holkar, the facts are well known in India. About two years ago a man, Rajaram, a lieutenant of the notorious dacoit, Tantia Bhil, was captured by Holkar's police. During his trial evidence was adduced that Sir Kashi Rao was the protector of Tantia

Bhil. Sir Kashi Rao was at the time Izadar or Governor of the province in which that malefactor invariably took refuge when pursued by the British police. The Maharaja laid the evidence thus given before Mr. Henvey the Resident, who advised him to expel Sir Kashi Rao from the territory of Indore. The responsibility for his exile therefore does not rest wholly with Holkar, and the exile does not seem to be a person entitled to any sympathy from the British public. It seems rather odd to us that a person expelled from a Native State on such grounds should be permitted to retain an honour presumably reserved for honourable men, and if the attacks on the Maharaja can be traced to his inspiration, the Government ought to grant him an asylum in British territories only on condition that he ceases from disturbing the Indore State.

THE MANIPORE PENSIONS.

WE have received the following from the India Office :—

"The Secretary of State for India in Council, on the recommendation of the Government of India, has awarded to Mrs. Quinton, widow of the late Chief Commissioner of Assam, a special pension of 300*l.* a year for life.

"He has also granted to the mother of the late Mr. Quinton a pension of 100*l.* a year for life, of which 50*l.* will be continued to her two daughters, if they should survive her.

"To Mrs. Grimwood, whose husband ranked under the Regulations with a major in the Army, a pension of 140*l.* a year for life has been assigned, that being the amount which would be granted to the widow of a major if killed in action. Mrs. Grimwood has also received a special grant of 1,000*l.* in consideration of the exceptional services rendered by her during the recent fighting in Manipore.

"The pension awarded to the widow of Mr. Quinton is in addition to that which she will receive, as a matter of course, from the Bengal Civil Fund; and the pension and gratuity awarded to Mrs. Grimwood are in addition to her pension from the same fund, and to the compensation which will be allotted to her for property destroyed at Manipore."

IT is to be hoped that the Government of India, which has fairly recognised the claims of MRS. QUINTON and MRS. GRIMWOOD to generous treatment, will not overlook those of MRS. MELVILLE. MR. MELVILLE did not belong to the higher Service, in which is so often exemplified the accuracy of the aphorism that to him that hath shall be given; but he became a victim under the same conditions as those which moved the Government to act in the cases of MESSRS. QUINTON and GRIMWOOD. He died under peculiarly horrible circumstances, and it would be invidious to refuse to the widow of a man in a lower Service that which is admitted to be just in the case of the widows of Civilians.

THE acutely sensitive MR. CREMER is anxious that those interesting specimens of humanity whom he styles "the JOBRAJ and the SENAPUTTY" should not be punished until the Home Government has "reviewed fully all the circumstances of the case." True they have both been proved on evidence taken on the spot by a competent judicial staff, to have waged war against the QUEEN, and the SENAPUTTY is convicted of abetting the murder of her representatives and officers. One might almost fancy that in the eyes of MR. CREMER and his Radical friends the Regent and the SENAPUTTY were martyrs, and the British gentlemen who were assassinated criminals deserving of their fate. But if as he seems to imply the Government of India is not fit to decide on the evidence taken by its own officials, and the Home Government is to assume the entire responsibility of settling the question, we may well ask—Why have a Government in India at all? As we have said before, if this kind of thing goes on, and is encouraged by the want of backbone shown at the India Office, no man who respects himself will accept the post of Governor-General.

The subject of the essay for the next Le Bas Prize at Cambridge is to be "A Comparison between English Administration in India and that of other Empires Founded on Conquest." The winner of the prize receives about 100*l.*

The following were among the presentations made to the Prince of Wales at the Levée on Saturday :—

Captain A. W. Brooke, 17th Bengal Infantry, on return from active service.

Mr. J. H. Spring-Branson, on appointment as Advocate-General, Madras.

Colonel Swinton John Browne, on being made a C.B., Indian Staff Corps.

Lieutenant-General Sir George Chesney, K.C.B.

Mr. George Cole, assistant superintendent of police, North-West Provinces and Oude.

Jagdish Sankar Misra.

Cheruvary Krishnan.

Syed Mahdi Hasan.

Lieutenant-Colonel G. H. More-Molyneux, Indian Staff Corps, on appointment as Military Attaché at St. Petersburg.

Major-General Thomas Rose Nimmo, C.B., Indian Staff Corps, on being made a C.B.

Major Frederick Babington Peile, on appointment to the command of the 2nd (P.W.O.) Bombay Grenadiers.

Mr. F. B. Peacock, C.S.I., late Bengal Civil Service.

Colonel D. H. Robertson, 9th Bengal Lancers.

Sir Frank Forbes Adam, C.I.E., of Messrs. Graham and Co., Sackville Street, Manchester; Mr. J. A. Bryce (brother of Mr. Bryce, M.P.); Mr. George G. Arbuthnot, and Sir Alexander Wilson have, upon the nomination of the Secretary of State for India, been appointed to represent the Bombay, Rangoon, Madras, and Calcutta Chambers of Commerce on the Governing Board of the Imperial Institute. The gentlemen chosen to act on behalf of the Government of India are Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, C.M.G., director of the Kew Gardens; General James T. Walker, R.E., C.B., late Surveyor-General of India; and Mr. John W. P. Muir Mackenzie, Under-Secretary to the Indian Government Revenue and Agricultural Department.

By the resignation of Sir George Campbell, says the Glasgow Herald correspondent, the important post of Inspector-General of the Ceylon Police becomes vacant. It is worth 1,500*l.* per annum, with a residence, and travelling expenses. Sir George Campbell was originally a lieutenant in the Bombay Army, and after the Mutiny reorganised the police force in various Indian districts. In 1867, the Ceylon police being in an unsatisfactory condition, he was nominated by the Indian Government to proceed to Ceylon to introduce the needful reforms. He did this so well that the Colonial Office appointed him to the permanent charge of the force. His place will probably be filled by some officer having experience of native police, and if no one in the colonial service is qualified for it, a selection will be made in India. The office is, of course, one which entitles the holder to a pension. It is believed that Major Knolleys, superintendent of the police and prisons in Jamaica, is the most likely candidate for the vacancy. He is one of the many officers who has entered the Colonial service from the personal staff of a Governor, for he was aide-de-camp to Sir Arthur Gordon in Mauritius, Fiji, and New Zealand.

We learn from Constantinople, says the Manchester Guardian, that M. Halphen, of Paris, has applied to the Porte for a concession for a railway from Dedeagatch to Salonica. A concession for a railway with one terminus at Youmourtalik, on the Gulf of Ayaz, and the other on the Persian frontier has also been applied for by M. Letallo, as representative of the French firm of Fives-Lille.

The colonelcy of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, vacant by the death of General Sir William Wylie, has been conferred upon General R. W. M. Fraser. This officer served in the 6th Foot from 1833 to 1856, including war service in India and South Africa. In 1856 he sold out, but in 1857 he raised within a month upwards of 1,000 men as a second battalion of the 6th Foot, and was given the lieutenant-colonelcy, and so re-entered the Army, in which he afterwards remained.

Capt. Noble Jenkins, of the Border Regt., has accepted retirement on retired pay, with a view to his serving in the Militia. His retirement creates no vacancy, as he has been holding the adjutancy of the 2nd batt. for some months past. Capt. Jenkins has retired from the army to join the firm of his deceased father, Messrs. D. J. Jenkins and Co., of Whittington Avenue.

The appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the justice and expediency of the demands put forward by the National Indian Congress will be moved by Mr. S. Smith when he can find an opportunity of bringing the matter forward. The hon. member's view is that the Commission should consist partly of representative Indians and partly of Europeans unconnected with the Indian Services, and should sit in India during the winter for the purpose of taking evidence.

We understand that the Lord Strathnairn Memorial Fund Committee, which includes the Duke of Grafton, Sir Martin Dillon, Sir Seymour Blayne, Sir Owen Burne, General Ravenhill, General Goodenough, General Moore, and Sir Henry Isaacs, have decided on a site for an equestrian statue, which has been entrusted to Mr. Onslow Ford, A.R.A. The site selected is at the junction of the High Road, Knightsbridge, and Brompton Road. The only other position seriously considered was Whitehall, but the objections to that are manifest, the fatal one no doubt being the obstruction to traffic a statue in that crowded thoroughfare would cause; and it should not be forgotten that, great as Lord Strathnairn's services undoubtedly were as Chargé d'Affaires at the Porte in 1855-56—services which won the eulogy of Mr. Kinglake—and again during the Indian Mutiny, yet he can hardly be said to have been a Wellington.

INDIA, &c., IN PARLIAMENT.

Tuesday, June 23.

Lotteries in India.—SIR G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary for India what was the result of the reference to India promised by him, regarding the practice of drawing lotteries in India with many large prizes on the result of races, and the extensive system of public gambling resulting from the practice of carrying on such transactions nominally by clubs and associations, but really open to the public.

SIR J. GORST said the result of the reference was that it did not appear that any infringement of the law had taken place except in Burma, and steps had been there taken to prevent the law being disregarded in future.

The Black Mountain and Miranzai Expeditions.—SIR G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, now that the Black Mountain and Miranzai military expeditions had been brought to a conclusion, her Majesty's Government would lay upon the table papers showing the circumstances under and the orders by which they were undertaken.

SIR J. GORST : Yes; her Majesty's Government will shortly lay papers on the table.

Articles for Government Works, India.—MR. J. P. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether there was a regulation of the Indian Government under which all British manufactures required for Government works, such as the State railways, required to be purchased through Indian firms only ; and, if so, what were the terms of that regulation, and on what grounds officers in charge of public works in India were hindered from purchasing goods direct from the manufacturers in this country, without the necessity of paying commissions to intermediate agents in India.

SIR J. GORST : Articles required for Government works, such as the State railways, if manufactured in the United Kingdom, must not be purchased from Indian firms, but obtained by indent from the Stores Department of the India Office. Supplies of materials, tools, and plant made of iron and steel, if manufactured locally, may be obtained from India.

The Manipore Trials.—MR. CREMER asked the Secretary for India if he could state whether the Government of India had arrived at any decision in regard to the sentences recently pronounced upon the Jobraj and the Senaputty; and whether, as the Government had requested further information from the Government of India concerning the occurrences at Manipore, her Majesty's Government would urge the Government of India to spare the lives of the Jobraj and the Senaputty until complete information was received, and her Majesty's Government were in a position to review fully all the circumstances of the case.

SIR J. GORST said the answer to the first paragraph of the question was in the negative. Sufficient time had not yet elapsed for the evidence in the case to have reached the Government of India, and besides this the Government of India had given three weeks to the Senaputty for the presentation of a petition. In reply to the second paragraph, the Secretary of State did not see any necessity for sending further instructions, or for fettering in any way the discretion of the Government of India, in the proper exercise of which he had full confidence.

MR. CREMER : May I ask the Under-Secretary if the sentences which have been pronounced on the Jobraj and the Senaputty are likely, under any circumstances, to come under the consideration of her Majesty's Government ; and whether her Majesty's Government are likely to exercise any controlling power or influence over the Viceroy of India in regard to this particular matter?

SIR J. GORST : I am sure the hon. gentleman will see that I cannot be expected to say what is likely to happen. I can only say what has happened. The evidence is now on its way to the Viceroy, and he has given the Senaputty three weeks in which to present a petition. The Government of India has full competence to deal with the matter, and the Secretary of State has full confidence that they will be able to carry out their duties.

The English Ladies at Manipore.—MR. SCHWANN asked whether it was true that extra pensions of 300*l.* a year each had been granted to Mrs. Grimwood and Mrs. Quinton ; whether these pensions would be furnished out of Indian or Imperial funds ; and, if the former, on what grounds such a charge would be laid upon the Indian Exchequer.

SIR J. GORST : The hypothesis on which the hon. gentleman has based his question is inaccurate.

Borneo.—MR. NORRIS asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether the Raja of Sarawak had taken forcible possession of a great portion of the territories of the Sultan of Brunei, in Borneo ; if peaceable and undisputed possession of this territory had been guaranteed to the Sultan by her Majesty's Government ; and, having regard to the fact that her Majesty's Consul, who was specially instructed to examine into all the circumstances, had advised the Sultan to surrender half his lands to the Raja if the Raja gave up possession of the remainder, and that the Sultan had refused to entertain such an offer, what steps her Majesty's Government proposed to take to carry out their treaty obligations with him.

SIR J. FERGUSSON : As was stated in reply to a question from the hon. member on June 17 of last year, the Raja of Sarawak has occupied the Limbang district, which was nominally under the sovereignty of the Sultan of Brunei, though his authority over it does not appear to have been recognised by the inhabitants for some years. The relations between her Majesty's Government and the Sultan of Brunei are regulated by the terms of the Agreement which was laid before Parliament in 1888. A report from her Majesty's Consul has recently been received, and it is now under consideration. The rights of the Sultan will be borne in mind in any settlement.

Abduction of an English Girl by Kurds.—SIR J. FERGUSSON, in answer to Mr. Picton, admitted it was true that an English girl had been abducted in Persia by Kurds, and steps had been taken to obtain her release.

Thursday, June 25.

Madras.—MR. HENNIKER HEATON asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Secretary of State for India would print and lay upon the table of the House the valuable reports of the Governor of the Madras Presidency on the progress, resources, and capabilities of that portion of her Majesty's dominions.

SIR J. GORST : The reports in question have been published at the Madras Government Press, and can be procured through the ordinary channels. It is, therefore, hardly necessary to republish them in the form of a return.

Distress in the Madras Presidency.—In answer to Mr. S. Smith, SIR J. GORST said : The Secretary of State has not received the particular report cited, nor can he identify the name of the place given in the question. Perhaps Ponneri is meant, which is the relief centre for one of the poorest parts of the Chingleput district. Owing to uncertainties of season, parts of Chingleput are decidedly poor. The fortnightly telegrams received from Madras show that constant effort is made to relieve distress in Chingleput, where over 7,000 people were receiving Government relief a fortnight ago. The Chingleput district is served by two railways from Madras ; food can easily be taken thither. We must look to the progress of the country, the growth of other industries, and emigration to Burma for the gradual amelioration of the condition of the people in Chingleput.

Opium.—MR. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was the case that, while at Thana, a few miles out of Bombay, there were only two persons reported as holding the Government license to sell opium, these two licenses carried with them the power to open branch establishments, and these two licensees had in all no fewer than twenty-eight servants, who were keeping opium dens all over the district ; and whether any mention was made in the Government returns of these sub-agents and other similar cases throughout India.

SIR J. GORST : The Secretary of State has seen in a London newspaper a statement to the effect suggested in the question. But he thinks the statement erroneous. The latest Bombay return shows twenty-two licensed opium shops in the Thana district, instead of two as stated in the question. There is nothing in the reports or papers received from Bombay, or from any other province, to show that licensed opium vendors are permitted to establish branch shops at places for which they hold no license.

In answer to Mr. H. J. Wilson, SIR J. GORST said : The total number of places licensed for the sale of opium in Burma is thirty-six ; in other parts of India 8,798. License-holders are required to sell a specified quantity in Bombay, but so far as the Secretary of State is aware not in any other province. The average minimum sale specified for the seventeen districts of Bombay is 9,482 lbs. per district. The average actual sale is somewhat less. If the hon. member will move for a return of the forms of license the Secretary of State will procure them from India.

Church of England at Hong Kong.—MR. ESSLEMONT asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the Colonial Office had received a petition to her Majesty from certain residents of Hong Kong reciting that a despatch from the Colonial Office of July 12, 1881, announced that the system of grants for ecclesiastical purposes in the colony would be gradually discontinued as vacancies occurred, and praying that such decision might be reconsidered, and that "the Church of England as here established may continue in the enjoyment of the moderate endowment which has hitherto been provided by the State ;" whether he was aware that this action had caused dissatisfaction among other European residents, as well as among the Chinese, who contributed the principal part of the colonial revenue ; and whether the Government would give an assurance that the policy of the Colonial Office in this matter would be adhered to.

BARON H. DE WORMS.—The petition referred to has been received and considered, and the Colonial Government has been informed that the decision announced in 1881 cannot be departed from.

Friday, June 26.

Pillage of the "Flodden" by Chinese.—SIR J. FERGUSSON, in answer the Lord H. Bentinck, said the case had formed the subject of instructions to her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, and has been the subject of repeated representations to the Chinese Government. Those representations have not, however, hitherto resulted in any grant of compensation. The Chinese Government have not admitted their liability to make compensation, and have refused to levy a fine on the district. But they undertook to repeat the directions already given for the discovery of the wreckers and the stolen property. These fresh directions have, unfortunately, had no effect, and in view of the fact that the vessel was deserted by the officers and crew, and left entirely derelict, her Majesty's Minister does not feel that the case can be strongly pressed. Her Majesty's Government cannot but acquiesce in that opinion, which is in consonance with the conclusion originally come to by them in the case after consideration with the law officers of the Crown.

Mrs. Quinton and Mrs. Grimwood.—SIR J. GORST, in reply to Mr. Schwann, said: Both Mrs. Quinton and Mrs. Grimwood are entitled to pensions of 330*l.* per annum from the Bengal Civil Fund, to which their respective husbands contributed during their lifetime. In addition to this, a special pension has also been given to Mrs. Quinton of 300*l.* per annum and to Mrs. Grimwood of 140*l.* These pensions, except so far as they come out of the contributions of Mr. Quinton and Mr. Grimwood, are paid out of the Indian Exchequer, because Mr. Quinton and Mr. Grimwood were officers in the service of the Government of India.

The Manipore Sentences.—SIR J. GORST, replying to Mr. Schwann, said the Secretary of State was advised that the Viceroy did not exercise, in the case of the sentences of death passed on the two Manipore Princes, an appellate function such as appertained to the High Court. The Government of India, as the paramount power, had appointed a tribunal for the trial of the Manipore Princes, and they reserved to themselves the power to deal with the sentences passed by such a tribunal according as they might consider advisable after perusal of the papers in the case. Under these circumstances it would be unusual for the Viceroy to hear counsel on the case.

The Abduction of an English Girl.—SIR J. FERGUSSON, in reply to Mr. Buchanan, said he only knew by telegraph that an English girl had been carried off by Persian Kurds, who took her into Turkish territory. By the assistance of Turkish officials she was brought back to a Persian town, and the British Acting Consul went out under safe conduct from the Persian Government to endeavour to rescue her, or, at all events, to find out her condition. The last news was that she was in the Turkish Consulate at Sonjboulak, and that there was considerable excitement among the Turkish population, who prevented the British Consul having access to her; but the Persian Government were doing their best to restore order and to procure proper access for the Consul.

Monday, June 29.

Bombay Presidency Magistrate.—MR. D. CRAWFORD asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Bombay Government had asked the Secretary of State to sanction the appointment of Mr. W. C. Webb, barrister-at-law, as third Presidency magistrate at Bombay; whether Mr. Webb fulfilled the conditions laid down by the orders of the Secretary of State and the rules of the Government of India—namely, that such appointments should be treated as "very special cases"; that the barrister so appointed should be a person of exceptional merit and distinguished ability in the exercise of his profession for at least ten years; and should possess a thorough knowledge of the vernacular language of the province; whether he was aware that although the Secretary of State had laid it down that the judicial branch of the provincial service should be essentially a native service, if Mr. Webb was appointed the Presidency magistrates would be exclusively European; whether there was no competent and qualified native barrister, advocate, or pleader at the High Court now available for the appointment; whether a protest against Mr. Webb's appointment had been received from the Bombay Presidency Association; and whether the Secretary of State was aware that the Native public and Press were strongly opposed to Mr. Webb's appointment.

SIR J. GORST replied in the affirmative to the first question. The subject of the Presidency magistrates was under the consideration of the Indian Government, and he hoped the hon. member would postpone asking information on the other points until a decision had been arrived at.

MR. D. CRAWFORD asked whether the right hon. gentleman would object to give an assurance that the appointment would not be confirmed until there had been an opportunity of discussing it in the House.

SIR J. GORST said he had no authority to give any such assurance, but if a question was put on the paper he would ask the opinion of the Secretary of State.

Crown Colonies and Seamen.—Admiral Field, M.P., has given notice in the House of Commons to ask the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether, seeing that the Legislative Council of Hong Kong have recently passed an ordinance placing restrictions on the working of ships' cargoes in that harbour on Sundays, as prevail in England and the self-governing colonies, on representations made by the Secretary of State last year, and seeing that, by Parliamentary return, C. 6,348, session 1891, it appears that unnecessary and avoidable Sunday labour in working cargoes and coaling ships is still carried on in Singapore and thirteen of the smaller Crown Colonies, the Secretary of State will endeavour to bring about a similar change on behalf of the seamen of this country in the aforesaid colonies to that so recently adopted at Hong Kong, so that seamen may enjoy their Sunday rest in port in common with other of her Majesty's subjects.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

THE Englishman says:—John Stuart Mill, in his work on "Representative Government," speaks of "the general holocaust which the traditions of Indian Government seemed fated to undergo since they have been placed at the mercy of public ignorance and the presumptuous vanity of political men." The questions asked in the House of Commons regarding India afford us weekly illustrations of the presumptuous vanity of political men, and it seems that the time is fast drawing nigh when the policy of the Government of India will be placed at the mercy of public ignorance. There is no danger to the stability of the Indian Empire so grave as the petty interference of England in the administration of the empire. The influence of English opinion on great public questions involving matters of principle is no doubt beneficial, and widens the narrow views of a necessarily despotic and bureaucratic Government. But the direct action of the House of Commons on the policy and administration of a Government like that of India must, by weakening the prestige of the Government in the eyes of the natives, be fatal to the stability of the Empire. During the past twenty years her Majesty's Viceroy and his colleagues have had their dignity diminished, and their powers considerably curtailed, by the constant interference by the Secretary of State for India on questions great and small. This has been a grave evil. But the danger of the future is far greater and more serious. The constant interference by a Secretary of State in all questions, great or small, at the bidding of vain and ignorant politicians must poison the life blood of the administration and paralyse it. Already we see signs of the India Office being absolutely stultified by dread of the House of Commons. The question now to be decided is not whether a policy is right or wrong, but whether it will lead to a discussion in Parliament.

The interference of the House of Commons in the administration of India is no new evil. A century ago India was the battlefield on which the fate of Cabinets was decided. In 1782 the Commons resolved that Hastings had "in sundry instances acted in a manner repugnant to the honour and policy of this nation, and thereby brought great calamities in India." The destruction of Hastings was merely a desperate political struggle. He was the victim of two opposite parties fighting for place. The Whig followers of Fox rejected Parliamentary reform, and they desired to win the good graces of their adherents by the East India Bill, which would transfer the patronage of India to themselves. But the King and people refused, however, to hand over the rule of India to the most unscrupulous coalition known in English history. Pitt's India Bill was brought in merely to take the wind out of the sail of his political opponents, and he sacrificed Hastings to his powerful accusers in order not to damage his own ascendency in the House of Commons. The long trial of Hastings wearied people of Indian affairs. Before it was concluded France and not India had been an object of concern. The fall of the Bastille stirred the mind of Burke to a greater extent than the woes of the Carnatic. During the long struggle with Napoleon politicians at home had no leisure to give to Indian affairs. Unhampered by the opposition of partisan politicians at home, Wellesley was able by daring and courage to complete the policy which the genius of Hastings had planned. After the defeat of Napoleon came the long struggle for reform, and Reform Bills, not Indian affairs, were the battle-field for parliamentary leaders. The Mutiny once more aroused in the minds of the English public an interest in India, and led to its transfer from the company to the Crown. The extent, however, of the disaster, the massacre of men, women, and children, the splendid courage shown at Lucknow and Delhi, impressed the mind of the public not only with the grave responsibility attendant on the government of our Indian Empire, but with the fact that the administration of the land should be left to those who had made the empire, and who had saved it at the supreme hour of danger. It was this feeling which led to the appointment of Lord Lawrence as Viceroy. India had been transferred to the Crown, but if it were to be preserved to the Crown, it must be governed by those who knew the people and the land. An honourable tradition grew up in the House of Commons that though Parliament was ultimately responsible for the good government of India, Indian questions should be outside the sphere of party politics.

This honourable tradition, we fear, like a great many other honourable traditions, is about to perish. Democracy is sadly in want of a good cry. The English elector has grown heartily sick of the Irish question. The eight-hour question is one on which the masses are divided. The Conservatives are willing to grapple with the labour problem, and they are about to grant the boon of free education. Under these circumstances, it would not be surprising if India were once again made the battlefield for English political parties. The attempt to throw responsibility on the Home Government for the Manipore disaster is a sign of the time. There is the painful and discreditable exhibition of an ex-Viceroy who has had experience of the terrible anxieties that surround the most responsible offices in the empire, attempting to make political capital out of the incident, and hampering the action of his successor at a time of grave responsibility and trouble. A Radical daily paper calls for the impeachment of the Viceroy, but Sir William Harcourt is a poor substitute for Burke. John Stuart Mill was gifted with the faculty of the seer when he predicted that Indian affairs would be at the mercy of the presumptuous vanity of political men. Burke was endowed with learning, with courage, with genius, with consistency of purpose. All these qualities are wanting in Sir William Harcourt, and it makes one shudder that an incident involving the prestige of England and the honour of Englishmen should be made a subject of party debate by the Falstaff of the House. Once more the vicissitudes of party strife have concentrated public attention upon the affairs of India, and upon the conduct of its English administrators. But in the place of Burke, Sheridan, and Fox we have Vernon Harcourt and Labouchere. Sir Alfred Lyall writes: "No more remarkable illustration, indeed, can be given of the change in style and habits of thought that has taken place during the last hundred years, than the fact that Burke's extravagant invectives, which he exploded like charges of dynamite against his enemies, should have been thought fair weapons of war against an absent Governor, should not have greatly offended against the standard of moderation, impartiality, and accuracy prevailing in England." It is to be devoutly hoped that the forthcoming debate on Manipore will prove that Sir Alfred Lyall is correct with regard to the changes in style and habits of thought that have taken place during the past century.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

THE Government of India have recently issued orders regarding the reorganisation and recruitment of the Accounts Department, by the light of suggestions made by the Finance Committee and the Public Service Commission. It is now ruled that in order to afford encouragement to the best officers belonging to the enrolled list, one of the five Accountant-Generalships may be given to an officer on that list other than an Indian Civil Servant, as a reward of conspicuous merit, if there is, when a vacancy occurs, such an officer competent to fill the appointment efficiently. There are thirty-six charges, to fill which officers of the enrolled list actually present on duty are required, and in order to provide for these the total strength of the list is raised from forty-two to forty-five officers by the addition of one appointment in Classes 1, 5, and 6. The rates of pay attached to the appointments on the enrolled list will no longer be progressive. The rates in the six classes will be 1,500, 1,250, 1,000, 800, 600, 400 rs. respectively. The new scale will not be applied to any officers serving in the Department on Jan. 1, 1891.

It is pleasant, says the Pioneer, to notice the testimony borne by the chairman of the Indo-European Telegraph Company to the efficiency of the work done by the servants of the Government of India on the overland line. He went so far as to say at the recent annual meeting that the service had been such as to give the greatest possible encouragement to the development of traffic, because the working of the lines of the Indian Government and over their wires on the Indo-European system, as well as over the company's wires, had been most excellent. Distinguished services, he added, had been rendered to Indian communications by the complete efficiency of the lines from end to end of the two systems. This praise is well deserved, and will be peculiarly acceptable to the officers for whom it is intended. Mr. B. Ffinch, Director of the Persian Gulf Section, and Colonel Wells, Director of the Persian Section, have mainly contributed to securing the success of the system between Kurrachee and Teheran; while in this country the men of the Indian Department should not be forgotten, as they have been responsible for working the lines from Kurrachee to Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, June 8.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on June 14, made no alteration in the rate of interest; the official minimum remaining unchanged at 3 per cent.

The Bank's statement for the week ending June 2 shows the following changes in figures:—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office ... Rs.	13,30,648	Decrease
Do. at Branches	7,28,345	Increase
Other Deposits	40,24,456	Increase
Post Bills	8,681	Decrease
ASSETS,
Bank's Investments	4,46,802	Increase
Loans	4,64,132	Decrease
Accounts of Credits	6,02,400	Increase
Mercantile Bills	6,47,270	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	11,90,722	Increase
Do. at Branches	20,96,328	Increase

Analysing the above figures, it will be seen that the ordinary trade demand for money on the Bank had further decreased by nearly 45¼ lacs, made up as follows:—By an increase of about 40¼ lacs in "Other Deposits," together with a decrease of over about 4⅝ lacs in "Loans" and nearly 6½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of nearly one-eighth of a lac in "Post Bills," coupled with an increase of over 6 lacs in "Accounts of Credit." The Treasury balance at head office stands reduced by over 13¼ lacs, while at the branches it is augmented by over 7¼ lacs. The Bank's investments were increased by nearly 3½ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase in the cash at head office of over 11⅞ lacs, and at the branches of about 21 lacs, making the exact total 5,64,62,928 rs., equal to 58·6 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank.

EXCHANGE.—On France for Commercial Bills at six months' sight is 1.82½ frs. and 1.81 frs. for three months' sight, while on Mauritius, Private Bills at sixty days' sight are quoted at 2½ per cent. discount. The rate for thirty days' sight Mercantile Bills on Hong Kong is 220 rs., and on Singapore 223 rs.; while on Bombay, Bank Telegraphic Transfer is quoted at par, and sixty days' sight Bank Drafts at ⅜ per cent. discount. Enfaced Rupee Paper has advanced steadily in sympathy with the rise in bar silver.

TEA.—The sales for the week consisted of 4,400 packages, which were taken by the trade at last week's rates, with an occasional slight rise. Arrivals continue small and sales the same.

JUTE.—The market has presented very little of interest; some small sales of old crop are reported at 22 rs. for good 1st native marks, and 17-12 rs. to 18 rs. for S.C.C. quality. Supplies of loose jute in the Bazaar are very small, and prices firm. No fresh transactions have transpired in new crop, Bales being mostly unwilling sellers.

GUNNIES.—There has been a fair business, chiefly for export, and the tone of the market is steadier.

HESSIANS remain steady, Frisco and New York both buying their specialities to a small extent.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—No business of importance has passed in the Share Market during the week under review. Most of the transactions have again been in gold shares, and fairly large numbers of Bengal gold and silver, Patpats and Sonapets have changed hands. Jute Mills shares have been quiet throughout, but prices are firmly maintained. It is anticipated that most, if not all, the mills will show exceptionally good results for the current half-year, and the probabilities are higher prices before long. There is little likelihood of their dropping. Indeed, Fort Glosters have already recovered to 92—93 rs., and the general tone is decidedly healthy. In miscellaneous shares the usual small list of transactions has to be recorded. New Beerbhoom Coals have been in good demand, and have registered a consider able advance. Bengal Paper Mills are steady at 112—113 rs. Landing and Shippings have been done at 96 rs. Bonded Warehouse are in gre at favour for investment, and have been taken up at 470 rs., and a higher price could possibly be obtained. Bengal Telephones have been asked for, and transactions have been reported at 45 rs. A little has been done in tea, but nothing of any consequence.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans ..... 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, June 11.

With the advent of the S.-W. monsoon business in all directions is shrinking into a smaller compass. Cotton has attracted but little attention either from exporters or local consumers, and only small transactions, on about the basis of previous price, have been reported. Purchases of wheat and seeds have been upon only a moderate scale from day to day; but very large supplies of the former continue to come to market. The course of exchange has varied a little in sympathy with advices regarding silver, rates closing 1-16*d.* higher for Bank Bills, but on the same level for Private Paper, compared with last quotations. Government Paper has advanced ⅛ per cent. in Fours. Freights have been weak, with relets at lower rates pressing on the market; but the feeling is rather steadier. Business in imports is contracting as usual, pending the first continuous rainfall; and prices generally have a downward tendency in view of increasing stocks.

MONEY.—A decrease of 2¼ lacs in the Presidency Bank's Cash Balance during the period covered by the Statement of Affairs issued on June 8, did not, of itself, convey an idea of the trade movement of money in relation to the Bank, and, by inference, in the open market; and the figures given in the return showed that, but for considerable Government withdrawals, the balance would have been materially the other way, and would, in fact, have shown a good deal larger increase than was disclosed by the previous return. The money temporarily withdrawn for the late holidays had been finding its way back to the coffers of the Bank; and accordingly an increase of 26¼ lacs was shown in Private Deposits; and though there had been an accession of some 8 lacs to Loans, Bills Discounted had again decreased somewhat, the net falling-off in trade requirements having been represented by 19¾ lacs. The demand for money from that quarter may now be expected to become still more sluggish. The Bank's minimum rate remains at 4 per cent.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Mofussil buyers of staple grey goods having mostly supplied their requirements to the end of the fair season have returned to the districts, and the few who are left have been operating very sparingly. Rates generally are now tending in buyers' favour, and stocks are beginning to show a sensible increase. In bleached goods only a small business has been passing at drooping rates, and the same may be said of Turkey red, printed, dyed, and local goods. The week's off-take from the bazaar of imported goods is put down at 2,800 packages, that of local goods at 1,200 bales.

YARNS.—Only a small business has been passing in imported twist, the market for which has been quiet at previous quotations. Sales of local spinnings for the fortnight ending on June 8 at Hong Kong were 3,700 bales, which, when added to the sales at Shanghai and at Japan ports, have aggregated 8 000 bales. This business being looked upon as very discouraging, China buyers have entirely absented themselves from the market; and the business for the week, say 500 bales only, has been mostly made up of purchases for Calcutta and other Indian markets. The market closes quiet.

METALS.—A large business has been done in copper, and prices have advanced 8 as. per cwt. in a firm market. Yellow metal has been taken to only a moderate extent, on the basis of previous rates, and in a steady market. Iron has been quiet, and only a small business has transpired; but prices are unchanged, all round.

COAL has been a quiet, not to say a dull market. About 2,000 tons of Dalton's Welsh Hartley, shortly due, have found buyers at 12 rs. per ton; and 1,000 tons of South Yorkshire have been sold at 13½ rs. per ton.

Exports—COTTON.—With the near approach of the rains business in this staple has become still more restricted, and the purchases from day to day have been upon only a small scale, exporters having, as usual, been less in the market than local spinners. Dealers lowered their pretensions to the extent of 1 re. to 2 rs. per candy at the beginning of the week; but, with this exception, previous prices have been generally maintained. The purchases made by the mills have aggregated some 4,000 bales, consisting principally of Julgaum and other Oomra kinds, Bhownugger, and other varieties of Dhollera and Compta; while exporters have taken about 1,000 bales less, made up chiefly of Bengals, Dharwar, and Bhownugger. The market closes dull, with prices 2 rs. and 4 rs. lower than those ruling a week ago.

The receipts of cotton of this season's crop during the week have been 47,300 bales, compared with 71,000 bales arrived in the week preceding, and 52,600 bales in the corresponding week last year, and the falling off in arrivals since the opening of the season now stands at 244,300 bales compared with 1889-90.

WHEAT remained steady in tone to the close of last week, with only a small business passing; but on June 8 there was a rather better demand from exporters in presence of a reduction of half an anna per cwt. in prices. Thereafter only a small or moderate business was done, but a firmer feeling afterwards set in, and prices were put up 1 a. per cwt.

SEEDS have also been steady in tone, but only a moderate business has been passing from day to day. The only movement in prices has been in the case of linseed, which has advanced half an anna per cwt. on several days.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.
